[5] F. v. Dalberg op. cit. p. 95 f. 'Die Araber behaupten, der Engel Gabriel habe ihn vom Himmel zur Erbauung der Ka'abah gebracht... Der Sage nach soll er anfänglich weiss und schimmernd gewesen seyn (vielleicht weil er als ein glühender Stein herab fiel), nachher aber wäre er der Thränen willen, die er für die Sünden der Menschen vergoss, ganz schwarz geworden, und habe seinen ersten Glanz verlohren.' So R. F. Burton Narrative of a Pilgrimage to Meccah and Medinah[3] London—Belfast 1879 p. 493 n. 3 'Moslems agree that it was originally white, and became black by reason of men's sins. It appeared to me a common aërolite covered with a thick slaggy coating, glossy and pitch-like, worn and polished. Dr Wilson of Bombay showed me a specimen in his possession, which externally appeared to be a black slag, with the inside of a bright and sparkling greyish-white, the result of admixture of nickel with the iron. This might possibly, as the learned Orientalist then suggested, account for the mythic change of color, its appearance on earth after a thunderstorm, and its being originally a material part of the heavens. Kutb el-Din expressly declares that, when the Karamitah restored it after twenty-two years to the Meccans, men kissed it and rubbed it upon their brows; and remarked that the blackness was only superficial, the inside being white.'

[6] F. Münter op. cit. p. 282 n. 48 'Wenigstens sagt die Morgenländische Fabel: eum esse cum pretiosis Paradisi lapidibus cum Adamo in terram demissum; ac postea—fügt sie hinzu—diluvii tempore rursus in coelum sublatum. Sim. Assemanni Saggio sull origine, culto, litteratura e costumi degli Arabi avanti Maometto. Padoua 1788. p. 21.'

[7] F. Lenormant Lettres assyriologiques et épigraphiques sur l'histoire & les Antiquités de l'Asie antérieure Paris 1872 ii. 126 n. 1 cites an unpublished passage of Niket. Chon. θησαυρὸς ὀρθοδοξίας from cod. Gr. Flor. xxiv, plut. ix, fol. 259 r° ἀναθεματίζω καὶ αὐτὸν τὸν εἰς τὸ Μέκε οἶκον τῆς προσευχῆς, ἐν ᾧ φασι κεῖσθαι μέσῳ λίθον μέγαν ἐκτύπωμα τῆς Ἀφροδίτης ἔχοντα, τιμᾶσθαι δὲ τοῦτον ὡς ἐπάνωθεν αὐτοῦ τῇ Ἄγαρ ὁμιλήσαντος τοῦ Ἀβραάμ, ἢ ὡς αὐτῷ τὴν κάμηλον προσδήσαντος ὅτε τὸν Ἰσαὰκ ἔμελλε θύειν· τοὺς δὲ εἰς προσευχὴν ἐκεῖ ἀπιόντας μὲν μίαν (leg. μίαν μὲν) αὐτῶν χεῖρα πρὸς τὸν λίθον ἐκτείνειν, τῇ δὲ ἑτέρᾳ τὸ οὖς κατέχειν τὸ ἴδιον, καὶ οὕτω κυκλοτερῶς ἑαυτοὺς περιφέρειν ἕως ἂν πέσωσι σκοτοδινιάσαντες and further ἀναθεματίζω τοὺς προσκυνοῦντας τῷ πρωϊνῷ ἄστρῳ ἤγουν τῷ ἑωσφόρῳ καὶ τῇ Ἀφροδίτῃ ἣν κατὰ τὴν τῶν Ἀρράβων γλῶσσαν Χαβὰρ ὀνομάζουσι, τουτέστι μεγάλην.

With this second anathema cp. supra p. 915 n. 2 and Const. Porphyrogen. de 1210 A.D.[1] but based on the earlier evidence of Euthymios Zigabenos (c. 1100 A.D.)[2]. From this it appears that the stone was marked with the shape of Aphrodite, presumably a ktetis[3], and associated traditionally with the union of Hagar and Abraham. It was long since surmised by Falconnet[4] that the allusion must be to a natural stone simulating the womb. Such stones were known to early naturalists as 'hystérolithes[5],' 'Hysterolithen[6].'

Sir Richard Burton, who made his famous pilgrimage to Mecca in 1853, has described and illustrated the Ka'bah as decked in its annual attire, a covering of brilliant black with a golden band administr. imp. 14 (iii. 92 Bekker) προσεύχονται δὲ (sc. οἱ Σαρακηνοί) καὶ εἰς τὸ τῆς Ἀφροδίτης ἄστρον, ὃ καλοῦσι Κουβάρ, καὶ ἀναφωνοῦσιν ἐν τῇ προσευχῇ αὐτῶν οὕτως "Αλλᾶ οὐὰ Κουβάρ,' ὅ ἐστιν ὁ Θεὸς καὶ Ἀφροδίτη. τὸν γὰρ Θεὸν Ἀλλᾶ προσονομάζουσι, τὸ δὲ οὐὰ ἀντὶ τοῦ καὶ συνδέσμου τιθέασι, καὶ τὸ Κουβὰρ καλοῦσι τὸ ἄστρον, καὶ λέγουσιν οὕτως "Αλλᾶ οὐὰ Κουβάρ'—an exact statement variously distorted by Euthym. Zigaben. πανοπλία δογματική 28. 1 (cxxx. 1333 A Migne), Kedren. hist. comp. 425 B—C (i. 744 Bekker), Glykas ann. 4. 277 D (p. 515 Bekker).

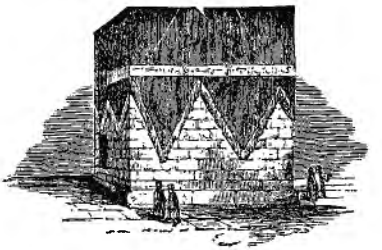

Fig. 771.

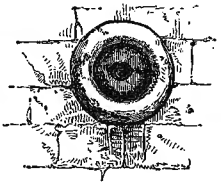

Fig. 772.

[1] K. Krumbacher Geschichte der byzantinischen Litteratur[2] München 1897 p. 92.

[2] Id. ib. p. 82 ff. F. Münter op. cit. p. 282 n. 48 already quotes Zigabenos from F. Sylburg Saracenica sive Mohamethica Heidelbergae 1595 p. 85.

[3] The expression ἐκτύπωμα τῆς Ἀφροδίτης used by Zigabenos and Niketas is well illustrated by Lenormant op. cit. p. 127 f. from Plout. de fluv. 12. 2 (Sagaris) γενναῖαι δ' ἐν αὐτῷ λίθοι αὐτόγλυφοι καλούμενοι· εὑρίσκεται γὰρ τετυπωμένην ἔχων τὴν Μητέρα τῶν θεῶν. τοῦτον τὸν λίθον ἐὰν εὕρῃ τις, σπανίως εὑρισκόμενον, τῶν ὑποτεμνομένων οὐ ξενίζεται, ἀλλ' εὐψύχως φέρει τῆς παρὰ φύσιν πράξεως τὴν ὄψιν· καθὼς ἱστορεῖ Ἀρετάζης ἐν τοῖς Φρυγιακοῖς (Aretades of Knidos frag. 2 (Frag. hist. Gr. iv. 316 Müller)). Anna Komn. Alexias 10. 284 D (ii. 30 f. Schopen) ἔνθεν τοι καὶ τὴν Ἀστάρτην αὐτοὶ καὶ τὴν Ἀσταρὼθ προσκυνοῦσι καὶ σέβονται καὶ τοῦ ἄστρου τὸν τύπον περὶ πλείονος τίθενται καὶ τὴν χρυσῆν παρ' ἐκείνοις Χοβάρ is more vague. But there can be little doubt that the τύπος in question was a ktetis.

[4] Falconnet 'Dissertation sur les Bætyles' in the Mémoires de littérature tirez des registres de l'académie royale des inscriptions et belles lettres Paris 1729 vi. 528 compares 'la Pierre de la Mere des Dieux' with 'ces Pierres figurées, que les Naturalistes appellent Hysterolithes.' The Oxford English Dictionary Oxford 1933 v. 516 s.v. 'Hysterolite' says: 'internal casts of a fossil shell (Orthis Striatula) were so called by old authors.'

[5] F. Lenormant op. cit. ii. 128.

[6] R. Eisler in Philologus 1909 lxviii. 135.

bearing inscriptions (fig. 771)[1]. He adds a sketch of the Black Stone, which is now built into the south-east corner of the Ka'bah near the door and forms part of the sharp external angle at a height of four feet nine inches above the ground (fig. 772). He endorses the words of Burckhardt, who says[2]:

'It is an irregular oval, about seven inches in diameter, with an undulating surface, composed of about a dozen smaller stones of different sizes and shapes, well joined together with a small quantity of cement, and perfectly well smoothed: it looks as if the whole had been broken into many pieces by a violent blow, and then united again[3].... It appeared to me like a lava, containing several small particles of a whitish and of a yellowish substance. Its

a b

Fig. 773.

color is now a deep reddish-brown, approaching to black. It is surrounded on all sides by a border composed of a substance which I took to be a close cement of pitch and gravel of a similar, but not quite the same, brownish color. This border serves to support its detached pieces; it is two or three inches in breadth, and rises a little above the surface of the stone[4]. Both the border and [1] R. F. Burton Narrative of a Pilgrimage to Meccah and Medinah[3] London—Belfast 1879 p. 436 ff. with p. 437 plan of Ka'ba, p. 439 view of Ka'ba (=my fig. 771).

[2] Ib.[3] p. 494 f. quoting J. L. Burckhardt, with sundry notes of his own by way of corrections or additions. My fig. 772 reproduces the sketch of the Black Stone given by Burton on p. 494.

[3] On the injuries suffered by the stone at various times see D. S. Margoliouth in J. Hastings Encyclopædia of Religion and Ethics Edinburgh 1915 viii. 513[a–b].

[4] Fig. 773, a and b, are reduced (scale ⅔) from the half-size section and elevation of the Black Stone and its border given by Sir William Muir The Life of Mahomet from original sources[3] London 1894 p. 27. Muir says: 'This stone, which is semi-circular, measures some six inches in height and eight in breadth; it is of a reddish-black colour, and notwithstanding the polish imparted by myriads of kisses, bears to the present day in its undulating surface marks of a volcanic origin.' But see L. Beck Die Geschichte des Eisens in technischer und kulturgeschichtlicher Beziehung Braunschweig 1884 i. 18:

the stone itself are encircled by a silver band, broader below than above, and on the two sides, with a considerable swelling below, as if a part of the stone were hidden under it[1]. The lower part of the border is studded with silver nails.'

The silver setting of the Black Stone is of interest, for it forms a point of comparison with the Black Stone of Kybele which was likewise set in silver[2].

(f) The stone sideritēs or oreitēs.

If the meteoric stone was sometimes regarded as a mother, marked with a ktetis[3], and draped in a veil[4], it was also on occasion viewed as a babe, carried in the arms, and wrapped in swaddling bands. An example of the latter treatment is afforded by the stone known indifferently as sideritēs the 'iron-stone' or oreitēs the 'mountain-stone.'

Of this Pliny[5], our earliest authority, has little to say. He is aware of its twofold name, but adds merely that the stone is globular in appearance and unaffected by fire.

Much more may be learnt from Damigeron[6] the Mage, who wrote a lapidary attributed to s. ii A.D. Some fragments of the original Greek have come down to us[7], but the whole text is available only in a Latin version[8] of s. v fathered upon an Arabian king Euax[9], who in a prefatory letter greets the emperor Tiberius. This prose work was rewritten in Latin hexameters by Marbode,

'Es ist dies das älteste aufbewahrte Meteorit, da sich das angebliche Meteoreisen von Pompeji durch die Untersuchung von Gustav Rose als künstliches Eisen erwiesen hat.'

[1] Burton op. cit.[3] p. 494 n. 3 observes: 'Ibn Jubayr declares the depth of the stone unknown, but that most people believe it to extend two cubits into the wall. In his day it was three "Shibr" (the large span from the thumb to the little finger tip) broad, and one span long, with knobs, and a joining of four pieces, which the Karamitah had broken. The stone was set in a silver band.'

[2] Supra p. 897.

[3] Supra pp. 898, 906, 916 n. 1, 918.

[4] Supra pp. 898, 906, 916 n. 1, 918.

[5] Plin. nat. hist. 37. 176 oritis globosa specie a quibusdam et sideritis vocatur, ignes non sentiens.

[6] On Damigeron see M. Wellmann in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. iv. 2055 f., O. Rossbach ib. vii. 1113 f., Joan Evans Magical Jewels of the Middle Ages and the Renaissance particularly in England Oxford 1922 p. 20 ff., W. Christ Geschichte der griechischen Litteratur[6] München 1924 ii. 2. 983, 1072.

[7] V. Rose in Hermes 1875 ix. 471—491, F. de Mély Les Lapidaires de l'antiquité et du moyen âge Paris 1898 ii. 1 pp. xiii, 125—133, Joan Evans op. cit. p. 20.

[8] Printed at the end of E. Abel Orphei Lithica Berolini 1881 p. 161 ff. and, from two earlier MSS., in Joan Evans op. cit. Append. A p. 195 ff. Where the texts differ I follow that of Miss Evans.

[9] M. Wellmann in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. vi. 849 f.

bishop of Rennes, between 1067 and 1081, and in that form became the most popular lapidary of the middle ages. More than a hundred manuscripts of it are extant, not to mention versions in six or seven languages[1].

The Latin Damigeron[2] distinguishes three varieties of oretes or sideritis. The first is deep black and round[3]. It is good for bites. If pounded and rubbed in with rose unguent, it quickly cures wounds made by wild animals. If tied on to the sufferer, it makes his sinews unite[4]. Whoever takes it with him will foil any attack by wild beasts. Hence it is worn by the Magi when they cross the desert. The second sort is green with whitish spots. If genuine, it will not be consumed by the fiercest fire[5]. It is invaluable as a protection against all dangers and alarms. The third kind looks like an iron plate smooth on one side but studded with sharp nails on the other[6]. Great are its virtues. Kings bind it upon their concubines to prevent them from losing their good looks, or from producing imperfect offspring, or from failing to conceive at all. Indeed, so powerful is its effect on childbirth that, placed on a pregnant woman, it will at once bring on her delivery[7].

The 'Orphic' Lithiká, a work assigned on stylistic and other grounds to the latter part of the fourth century[8], expatiates in a tasteless way on the virtues of the stone as recorded by Damigeron[9], but prefixes a passage[10] of much mythical and magical interest drawn from some unknown source—hardly Damigeron, certainly not Orpheus[11].

Helenos—we read—advised the Greeks to fetch Philoktetes from Lemnos to Troy, and the arrival of Philoktetes meant the [1] For a detailed and documented account see Joan Evans op. cit. p. 33 ff.

[2] Damig. de lapid. 16 Abel, 39 Evans.

[3] Cp. Plin. loc. cit. (supra p. 920 n. 5).

[4] Cp. Orph. lith. 364 f. (infra p. 922 n. 1).

[5] Cp. Plin. loc. cit. (supra p. 920 n. 5).

[6] Cp. Orph. lith. 363 ὑποτρηχύν (infra p. 922 n. 1).

[7] The text of the last two sentences is defective and stands in need of emendation (see Abel ad loc.). But the general sense is clear from a passage in the prose epitome of Orph. lith. p. 147, 2 f. Abel καὶ στείραις δὲ γυναιξὶ περιδεσμούμενον εὐτοκίαν φασὶ παρέχειν.

[8] See E. Abel's 'praefatio' pp. 1—4.

[9] Orph. lith. 390—473.

[10] Ib. 357—389.

[11] In spite of Tzetz. posthom. 571 ff. καὶ τότε μὲν "Ελενος, θεόφοιτος μάντις ἀμώμων, | ...ἐκ σιδηρίταο, κατ' 'Ορφέα, μαντιπόλοιο, | λίθου ἀνδρολόγοιο, μαθὼν ὅσα τεύχετο Τροίῃ, | εἶπε Φιλοκτήταο βίην κομίσαι ἀπὸ Λήμνου, κ.τ.λ. and chil. 6. 614 ff. ἡ σιδηρῖτις λίθος τις τυγχάνει, κατ' 'Ορφέα, | ἣν ἀεννάοις ταῖς πηγαῖς εἰ λούοι τις, ὡς γράφει, | καὶ οἷς ἑτέροις δέ φησιν ἀνερωτήσας ταύτην, | ὥσπερ παιδὸς νεογιλοῦ ταύτης φωνὴν ἀκούσοι, | μαντευομένης ἀληθῶς περὶ πραγμάτων πάντων. | εἶτα δὲ ἀποψύχεται, καθάπερ τεθνηκυῖα. | ἐκ ταύτης καὶ ὁ "Ελενος πόρθησιν Τροίας ἔφη.

death of Paris. But how came Helenos to give such fateful advice? It was because Phoibos Apollon had bestowed upon him—

> A voiceful stone, the unerring siderites,
> Which some the live oreites please to call,
> Round, somewhat rough, strong, black of hue, and dense,
> While over and about it every way
> Stretch sinews like to wrinkles drawn upon it[1].

For ten days Helenos observed rules of ceremonial purity touching bed and bath and food. Meantime he washed the wise stone[2] in flowing water, and tended it like a babe with clean garments. He offered sacrifices to it as if it were a god, and brought breath into it by the use of potent spells[3]. He lit lights in his hall, and dandled the godfearing stone[4] in his arms as a mother might dandle her infant. Anyone who does the same will at last hear the stone utter a cry like that of a new-born babe whimpering for milk. It will then and there answer truly any questions that you may choose to ask it. After which, if you lift it and look closely at it, you can see it die down in wondrous fashion[5]. It was through hearkening to this prophetic stone[6] that Helenos told the sons of Atreus how his fatherland might be taken.

Helenos the seer was, like his sister Helene, a genuine figure of Trojan mythology. And Troy was dominated by the mountain-range of Ide, where iron was first discovered by the Idaean Daktyloi[7]—Kelmis, Damnameneus, and Akmon—servants of the mountain-mother[8]. It was, therefore, natural that the 'iron-stone' or 'mountain-stone' described by Damigeron should sooner or later be connected with Helenos. Moreover, it is often maintained that the earliest iron to be worked was meteoric iron[9]. That is doubt-

[1] Orph. lith. 360 ff. τῷ γὰρ Ἀπόλλων Φοῖβος ἔχειν λίθον αὐδήεντα | δῶκε σιδηρίτην νημερτέα· τὸν ῥα βροτοῖσιν | ἥνδανεν ἄλλοισιν καλέειν ἔμψυχον ὀρείτην, | γυρόν, ὑποτρηχύν, στιβαρόν, μελανόχροα, πυκνόν· | ἀμφὶ δέ μιν κύκλῳ περί τ' ἀμφί τε πάντοθεν ἶνες | ἐμφερέες ῥυτίδεσσιν ἐπιγράβδην τανύονται.

[2] Ib. 369 πέτρον ἐχέφρονα.

[3] Ib. 371 f. καὶ θεὸν ὡς λιπαρῇσιν ἀρεσσάμενος θυσίῃσι, | λᾶαν ὑπερμενέεσσιν ἀοιδαῖς ἔμπνουν ἔρδεν.

[4] Ib. 374 θεουδέα πέτρον.

[5] Ib. 387 θεσπεσίως γὰρ ἀποψύχοντα νοήσεις.

[6] Ib. 389 φοιβήτορι λᾶι.

[7] Supra ii. 949 n. 5.

[8] Phoronis frag. 2 Kinkel ap. schol. Ap. Rhod. 1. 1129 ἔνθα γόητες | Ἰδαῖοι Φρύγες ἄνδρες ὀρέστεροι οἰκί' ἔναιον, | Κέλμις Δαμναμενεύς τε μέγας καὶ ὑπέρβιος Ἄκμων, | εὐπάλαμοι θεράποντες ὀρείης Ἀδρηστείης, | οἳ πρῶτοι τέχνην πολυμήτιος Ἡφαίστοιο | εὗρον ἐν οὐρείῃσι νάπαις, ἰδέντα σίδηρον, | ἐκ πῦρ τ' ἤνεγκαν καὶ ἀριπρεπὲς ἔργον ἔδειξαν.

[9] F. X. M. Zippe Geschichte der Metalle Wien 1857 p. 110 f. ('Eine Masse dieser Art war es ohne Zweifel, an welcher der erste Schmied das Eisen kennen lernte'), H. Blümner Technologie und Terminologie der Gewerbe und Künste Leipzig 1887 iv. 207 f. ('Man nimmt nun vielfach an, und es ist das ja auch sehr leicht möglich, dass die Schmiedearbeit ihre ersten Versuche—selbstverständlich nicht zu einem bestimmten ful[1]: it would be safer to say that sundry simple or unsophisticated communities are known to have used meteoric iron for making their tools and weapons[2]. We cannot, then, decide offhand whether the stone called siderites or oreites came from a telluric outcrop brought to light by an accidental conflagration[3], or whether it was Zeitpunkt oder an einem bestimmten Ort—an dem freilich nur in sehr geringer Menge, aber überall auf der Oberfläche der Erde zerstreut sich findenden Meteoreisen gemacht habe'), J. L. Myres Who were the Greeks? Univ. of California Press 1930 pp. 433 ('Much confusion might have been saved if it had been more clearly recognized that, as meteoric iron may fall from time to time on any part of our planet, occasional discovery and use of this "metal of heaven" (as the Egyptians believed it to be) cannot be excluded at any period and in any region'), 591 n. 118, id. in E. Eyre European Civilization its Origin and Development Oxford 1935 i. 135 ('In Egypt where iron is occasionally found worked, from Predynastic times to the Nineteenth Dynasty, it was always ba-n-pet, "the metal of heaven," even when eventually imported and well known. Probably most Sumerian iron was of similar origin; and it must be remembered that the actual rarity of meteorites does not represent their frequency before men learnt their value and picked them up'), 165, A. Neuburger The Technical Arts and Sciences of the Ancients trans. H. L. Brose London 1930 p. 20 ('the most ancient iron implements were probably meteorites...a meteoric stone manipulated by hand constitutes a good hammer. Moreover, it can be sharpened on a stone, and so forth').

[1] L. Beck Die Geschichte des Eisens in technischer und kulturgeschichtlicher Beziehung Braunschweig 1884 i. 18, 30 ('Da nun die Schmiedbarkeit des meteorischen Eisens erwiesen ist, könnte es nahe liegen, die kontroverse Frage, von der wir ausgingen, ob nämlich die Menschen der Urzeit zuerst das Meteoreisen aufgesucht und verarbeitet hätten, zu bejahen. Es hat auch diese Annahme bei oberflächlicher Betrachtung etwas Verführerisches. Je mehr man aber auf die Sache eingeht, je mehr muss man zu der Überzeugung kommen, dass diese Theorie falsch ist'), 33 ('Die Thatsache, dass aus dem unbekannten Himmelsraume zuweilen Massen metallischen Eisens auf die Erde herabfallen, war schon in sehr früher Zeit bekannt; doch bildete die Auffindung solcher Massen nicht den Ausgangspunkt der Eisenindustrie, vielmehr wurden sie erst als Eisen erkannt, nachdem die Ausschmelzung der Eisenerze bereits bekannt war'), L. de Launay in Daremberg—Saglio Dict. Ant. ii. 1076 ('En ce qui concerne précisément les métaux natifs, on a voulu faire jouer aux météorites un rôle, à notre avis, très exagéré, en supposant que le premier fer avait pu en être extrait. D'abord, les météorites sont fort rares: ce qu'on pourrait, à la rigueur, expliquer par le soin avec lequel les anciens les auraient recueillies; mais, surtout, celles d'une certaine taille seraient très difficiles à façonner; car le fer natif nickélifère qui constitue celles, dites holosidères, dont on aurait pu être tenté de faire des outils, ne fond qu'à une haute température et ne peut être découpé qu'avec de l'acier. Quant aux météorites plus ou moins pierreuses (syssidères et sporadosidères), il n'y avait pas plus de raison pour en extraire le fer que de toute autre roche à silicates ferrugineux'), W. Ridgeway The Early Age of Greece Cambridge 1901 i. 598 ff.

[2] E. B. Tylor Researches into the Early History of Mankind and the Development of Civilization[3] London 1878 p. 205 (Indians of Rio de la Plata, Esquimaux), J. Déchelette Manuel d'archéologie préhistorique Paris 1913 ii. 2. 543 n. 1 ('Plusieurs auteurs ont exprimé l'hypothèse que l'industrie sidérurgique aurait pu débuter par l'utilisation du fer météorique. On allègue que dans la langue des Egyptiens le mot ba-en-pet (fer du ciel) s'oppose au mot ba-en-ta (fer de la terre) et que les Mexicains de la vallée du Toluka utilisent le fer météorique pour la fabrication d'instruments'), Schrader Reallex.[2] i. 240[b] (Egyptian bi-n-pet, Coptic benipe, 'd. h. Himmelsmetall = Meteoreisen').

[3] Supra ii. 949 n. 5, cp. Lucr. 5. 1241 ff., Aristot. mir. ausc. 87.

indeed a meteorite like others already found in the service of Kybele. It may be that the varieties distinguished by Damigeron include both the telluric and the meteoric sort. Certainly the epithets chosen in the Lithiká—somewhat rough, black, dense, covered with sinews like wrinkles—would be easy to parallel from actual meteorites of the kind called siderites[1].

(g) Ákmon.

The name Ákmon in this Idaean context raises a point of interest. In a familiar passage of the Iliad[2] Zeus awakes on the summit of Ide and, angered at Hera's deception[3], threatens her with the lash. He goes on to taunt her with past punishment[4]:

> Dost thou not mind how thou wast hung aloft,
> While to thy feet I fastened anvils twain
> And bound thy hands too with a golden bond
> That none might break? In the aithér and the clouds
> Thou hangedst helpless, ay and all the gods
> In long Olympos were exceeding wroth,
> Yet could not take thy part or loose thy chain.

W. Leaf[5] observes that the word rendered 'anvils' (ákmonas) 'originally meant large stones, especially meteoric stones, commonly known as thunderbolts.' And Eustathios[6] informs us that some texts here added a couple of lines:

> Till I unfettered thee and cast the clogs
> Down on Troy-land—for future folk to see.

This sounds like a piece of local lore. Two conspicuous blocks in the Trojan plain were pointed out as being the very 'anvils' dropped by Zeus. Moreover, since the term used of them (mýdros) means properly 'a glowing mass of metal[7],' Leaf[8] is justified in concluding that 'such blocks can only have been meteoric masses.'

[1] See O. C. Farrington Meteorites Chicago 1915 pp. 78 ff. ('Crust of meteorites'), 85 ff. ('Veins of meteorites'). L. Beck op. cit. p. 19 states that the earliest exact description of meteoric iron is in Plin. nat. hist. 2. 147 item ferro in Lucanis (sc. pluisse) anno ante quam M. Crassus a Parthis interemptus est (53 B.C.) omnesque cum eo Lucani milites, quorum magnus numerus in exercitu erat. effigies quo pluit ferri spongiarum similis fuit.

[2] Il. 15. 4 ff. [3] Supra i. 154, ii. 950 n. 0, 1020, iii. 35, 180.

[4] Il. 15. 18 ff. [5] W. Leaf A Companion to the Iliad London 1892 p. 256.

[6] Eustath. in Il. p. 1003, 13 ff. εἰς δὲ τὸν τόπον τοῦτον προσγράφουσί τινες καὶ τούτους τοὺς στίχους· 'πρίν γ' ὅτε δή σ' ἀπέλυσα ποδῶν, μύδρους δ' ἐνὶ Τροίῃ | κάββαλον, ὄφρα πέλοιτο καὶ ἐσσομένοισι πυθέσθαι.' καὶ δείκνυνταί, φασιν, ὑπὸ τῶν περιηγητῶν οἱ τοιοῦτοι μύδροι, οὓς ἀνωτέρω ἄκμονας εἶπεν.

[7] Prellwitz Etym. Wörterb. d. Gr. Spr.[2] p. 302, Boisacq Dict. étym. de la Langue Gr. p. 648. Cp. Hesych. σμύδρος· διάπυρος σίδηρος.

[8] W. Leaf op. cit. p. 256.

F. Münter[1] thought it not impossible that the meteorites in question might yet be identified.

But the philologists have more to tell us. R. Roth[2] of Tübingen in 1853 first drew attention to a group of related words, which may be amplified as follows[3]:

Greek ákmon		sky[4]	thunderbolt (?)[5]	pestle[6]	anvil
Sanskrit áśman-	stone	sky (?)[7]	stone missile, thunderbolt	hammer-stone	anvil
Avestan asman-	stone	sky	stone missile, thunderbolt
Old Persian asman-		sky
New Persian āsmān		sky
Sogdian 'sm'n		sky

Roth rightly inferred that there must have been a time when men of Indo-Europaean speech thought the sky to be made of stone[8], [1] F. Münter Antiquarische Abhandlungen Kopenhagen 1816 p. 275 n. o.

[2] R. Roth 'Akmon, der vater des Uranos' in the Zeitschrift für vergleichende Sprachforschung 1853 ii. 44—46.

[3] In arranging this table I have been helped by my friend Professor H. W. Bailey, whose own researches in the subject will shortly be published.

[4] Hesych. s.v. ἄκμων· ...οὐρανός.

[5] Hes. theog. 722 ff. ἐννέα γὰρ νύκτας τε καὶ ἤματα χάλκεος ἄκμων | οὐρανόθεν κατιὼν δεκάτῃ κ' (so Thiersch for δ' codd.) ἐς γαῖαν ἵκοιτο· | ἐννέα δ' αὖ νύκτας τε καὶ ἤματα χάλκεος ἄκμων | ἐκ γαίης κατιὼν δεκάτῃ κ' (so Thiersch for δ' codd.) ἐς Τάρταρον ἵκοι. The passage belongs to the 'emblemata vetustissima,' which F. Jacoby in his ed. p. 87 attributes to rhapsodes of s. vii—vi[1]. Cp. F. Schwenn Die Theogonie des Hesiodos Heidelberg 1934 p. 17 n. 2. H. Stuart Jones in the new Liddell and Scott p. 51 says 'ἄκμων...orig. prob. meteoric stone, thunderbolt,' and illustrates that meaning by quoting χάλκεος ἄκμων οὐρανόθεν κατιών from this Hesiodic passage. An Iapygian parallel has been considered supra ii. 30 f.

[6] Hesych. ἄκμονα· ἀλετρίβανον. Κύπριοι. Cp. the neolithic pounder discussed supra p. 898 ff.

[7] H. Grassmann Wörterbuch zum Rig-Veda Leipzig 1873 p. 139 recognises the following senses: 'áçman (1) Fels...; (2) der Stein als Werkzeug zum Schlagen, Hammer, Hammer und Ambos und andere, ursprünglich aus Stein gemachte Werkzeuge des Schmiedes; (3) der Donnerkeil; (4) der bunte Edelstein...; (5) der Himmel, der als steinernes Gewölbe gedacht ist.' Sir M. Monier-Williams A Sanskrit-English Dictionary[2] Oxford 1899 p. 114 says: 'Áśman a stone, rock...any instrument made of stone (as a hammer &c.)...thunderbolt...the firmament.'

[8] Cp. the Chinese identification of the heavens with jade (A. E. Crawley in J. Hastings Encyclopædia of Religion and Ethics Edinburgh 1915 viii. 591[b]), the Mohammedan belief in seven heavens made of emerald, white silver, large white pearls, ruby, red gold, jacinth, and shining light (G. F. Kunz The Curious Lore of Precious Stones Philadelphia & London 1913 p. 349), the Jewish belief in 'a paved work of sapphire stone' (Ex. 24. 10, cp. Ezek. 1. 26), and the like. See also supra i. 357 n. 4.

an inference now accepted by all philologists[1]. Further it may be contended that the weapon of the sky-god—whether the thunderbolt of Zeus, the vajra of Indra, or the hammer of Thōr[2]—was at first just a fragment of the stony vault broken off and hurled downwards. As such it would be essentially akin to a meteorite.

When the Stone Age passed into the Bronze Age, and the Bronze Age into the Iron Age, the thunderbolt—originally a stone missile[3]— a b

Fig. 774.

[1] E.g. G. Curtius Grundzüge der griechischen Etymologie[4] Leipzig 1873 p. 131, H. Reichelt 'Der steinerne Himmel' in the Indogermanische Forschungen 1913 xxxii. 23—57 (criticised by Gruppe Myth. Lit. 1921 p. 39), Schrader Reallex.[2] i. 499[b] f.

[2] Schrader Reallex.[2] i. 433[a–b]. Supra ii. 64 n. 0 with fig. 26, 547 n. 0, 620.

[3] The double axe of bronze, so frequent in Cretan cult (supra ii. 513 ff.), was preceded by the double axe in stone. The Tyszkiewicz axe-head with a Sumerian inscription (supra ii. 510 with fig. 389, E. Unger in Ebert Reallex. ii. 449 pl. 213, a—c) is strictly an axe-hammer rather than a double axe. But the British Museum possesses (no. 54429) a small votive double axe in brown flint, acquired at Luxor and certainly of pre-dynastic date (H. R. Hall in S. Casson Essays in Aegean Archaeology Presented to Sir Arthur Evans in honour of his 75th birthday Oxford 1927 p. 42 pl. 5 (=my fig. 774, a and b.

took on metallic forms[1]. But to the last a memory of the old thunderstone lingered in the by-ways of Greek mythology and odd corners of Greek folklore. The sky-dynasty comprised three successive sovereigns—Ouranos, Kronos, Zeus[2]. Of these, Ouranos was reckoned as the son of Akmon[3], if not as Akmon himself[4]. Kronos too was equated with Akmon[5]. And Zeus himself (as we shall see in the next two sections) exhibits certain features of both cult and myth strongly reminiscent of the same tradition.

(h) The stone of Kronos.

The stone siderites or oreites, wrapped in swaddling bands and treated as a babe[6], recalls the stone swallowed by Kronos as a substitute for the infant Zeus. If the one myth was connected with Kybele and Mount Ide in the Troad, the other concerned Rhea and the mountains of Crete.

Scale ½). See also J. Schlemm Wörterbuch zur Vorgeschichte Berlin 1908 p. 105 f. figs. a, b.

[1] Supra ii. 764 ff. [2] Supra p. 739 f.

[3] Hes. frag. fals. 6 Rzach ap. schol. Palat. in Simiae alas Amor. 1 p. 266 Diehl Ἀκμονίδαν δέ φησι τὸν οὐρανόν. Ἡσίοδος· Γαῖα μὲν Ἄκμονα ἔτικτεν, ἀπὸ δ' Ἄκμονος ὁ Οὐρανός. T. Bergk Poetae lyrici Graeci[4] Lipsiae 1882 iii. 68 f. acutely conjectured that this hexameter Γαῖα μὲν Ἄκμον' ἔτικτ', ἀπὸ δ' Ἄκμονος Οὐρανὸς <ἔσκεν (add. Natalis Comes?)> was taken from the Titanomachia (cp. Cramer anecd. Oxon. i. 75, 11 ff. οἱ δὲ ἄκμονα τὸν αἰθέρα· Αἰθέρος δ' υἱὸς Οὐρανός, ὡς ὁ Τιτανομαχίαν γράψας (frag. 1 Kinkel)), a Cyclic poem ascribed by some to Eumelos or Arktinos (Athen. 277 D) and by others very possibly to Hesiod.

Antim. Theb. frag. 44 Wyss ap. Plout. quaestt. Rom. 42 λέχρις δὲ δρεπάνῳ τέμνων ἄπο μήδεα πατρός | Οὐρανοῦ Ἀκμονίδεω λάσιος Κρόνος ἀντιτέτυκτο ('was represented as a pendant figure' on some work of art: see B. Wyss ad loc.).

Kallim. frag. 147 Schneider ap. et mag. p. 49, 47 ff. Ἄκμων σημαίνει τὸν τε σίδηρον ἐφ' οὗ οἱ χαλκεῖς τύπτουσι, καὶ τοῦ Οὐρανοῦ τὸν πατέρα· οὕτως γὰρ αὐτὸν γενεαλογοῦσι. Καλλίμαχος· τῷ περὶ δινήεντ' Ἀκμονίδην ἔβαλεν (so Schneider for τῷ περὶ δινήεντι ἀκμονίδην ἔβαλεν. Bentley had proposed τῷ περιδίνησεν' ἀκμονίδην ἔβαλεν).

Cornut. theol. 1 p. 1, 1 ff. Lang ὁ οὐρανός...τινὲς δὲ τῶν ποιητῶν Ἄκμονος ἔφασαν αὐτὸν υἱὸν εἶναι, κ.τ.λ.

Hesych. s.v. Ἀκμονίδης· ὁ Χάρων. καὶ ὁ Οὐρανός. Ἄκμονος γὰρ παῖς = Bekker anecd. i. 367, 12 f. M. Schmidt ad loc. notes: 'Possis ὡς Χάρων sc. Lampsacenus; editum tamen tuetur Bekk. 367, 12.' Charon with his hammer (supra ii. 627 n. 3, 641 fig. 557) might be dubbed 'Son of Anvil' (cp. T. Bergk op. cit.[4] iii. 69).

[4] Alkm. frag. 111 Bergk[4], 103 Edmonds ap. Eustath. in Il. p. 1154, 24 ff. Ἄκμων δὲ ὅτι καὶ ὁ τοῦ Οὐρανοῦ, ὡς ἐρρέθη, λέγεται πατὴρ...καὶ ὅτι Ἀκμονίδαι οἱ Οὐρανίδαι, δηλοῦσιν οἱ παλαιοί. ὡς δὲ Ἄκμονος ὁ Οὐρανὸς ὁ Ἀλκμάν, φασιν, ἱστορεῖ. But in view of Eudok. viol. 29 ὡς δὲ Ἄκμων ὁ Οὐρανός, ὁ Ἀλκμὰν ἱστορεῖ and, indeed, of Eustath. in Il. p. 1150, 59 ὁ τοῦ Κρόνου πατὴρ Ἄκμων ἐκαλεῖτο κ.τ.λ. it seems certain that Alkman used Ἄκμων as the equivalent of Οὐρανός.

[5] Hesych. ἄκμων· ἀπαθής (Kallim. h. Artem. 146 with O. Schneider ad loc.). Κρόνος. οὐρανός. ἢ σίδηρον, ἐφ' ᾧ ὁ χαλκεὺς χαλκεύει. ἔστι δὲ καὶ γένος ἀετοῦ.

[6] Supra p. 920 ff.

Hesiod[1], our primary source, tells the tale in the following form:

'And Rhea, wedded to Kronos, bare splendid children—Hestia and Demeter and Hera of the golden sandals and strong Hades, who dwells beneath the ground with pitiless heart, and loud-sounding Ennosigaios[2] and Zeus the magician[3], father of gods and men, by whose thunder the wide ground itself is shaken.

And these great Kronos would swallow, as each came forth from the holy womb of his mother to her knees, with intent that none of Ouranos' proud children save himself should have kingly honour among the immortals. [For he learned from Gaia and starry[4] Ouranos that it was fated for him, mighty as he was, to be overcome by his own son, through the designs of great Zeus. Wherefore he kept no blind vigil, but ever on the watch would swallow his own children; and grief unforgettable had hold of Rhea.] But when she was about to bear Zeus, father of gods and men, then straightway she besought her dear parents (Gaia, to wit, and starry Ouranos) to devise some counsel with her, that she might in secret bear her dear child and might require the vengeance of her own father[5] (for the children[6], whom great Kronos of the crooked blade[7] was wont to swallow). And they verily heard and hearkened to their dear daughter, and told her all that was fated to happen touching Kronos the king and his stout-hearted son[8]—[So they sent her to Lyktos[9], to the fat land of Crete, when she was about to bear the youngest of her children, Zeus the great[10]. Him huge Gaia received from her to nourish and to rear in wide Crete.] [[Thither she[11] came, carrying him through the swift black night, to Lyktos first; and taking [1] Hes. theog. 453—506 (cp. Apollod. 1. 1. 5—1. 2. 1). I have given a rendering of the text as it stands in the critical edition of F. Jacoby (Berolini 1930). Sentences enclosed in square brackets are his 'emblemata vetustissima' (supra p. 925 n. 5), double square brackets being used for patches upon patches. Sentences in curved brackets are 'serioris aevi emblemata, interpolationes.' The letters $^{a-a,\ b-b}$ indicate 'singulorum versuum duplex recensio,' $^{p-p}$ a line condemned by F. A. Paley. See further the shrewd observations of F. Schwenn Die Theogonie des Hesiodos Heidelberg 1934 pp. 127—130.

[2] Supra p. 7. [3] Supra p. 743. [4] Supra i. 8, ii. 1023.

[5] Literally 'might get paid the Erinyes of her own father' (sc. Ouranos), whom Kronos had mutilated (supra ii. 447 n. 8). Cp. Il. 21. 412 οὔτω κεν τῆς μητρὸς Ἐρινύας ἐξαποτίνοις.

[6] Reading παίδων with the manuscripts. But the reason assigned for Ouranos' vengeance is not the true reason, and the line is rightly regarded as an interpolation. A. Rzach adopts G. F. Schoemann's cj. παίδων θ' (sc. Ἐρινῦς).

[7] Supra ii. 549, 845. C. Picard in the Rev. Ét. Gr. 1926 xxxix. 194 n. 1 objects to my interpretation of ἀγκυλομήτης that the ending -της implies an agent, and cites in support of the orthodox view the epic word ποικιλομήτης. But nouns in -της are by no means always nomina agentis (see e.g. K. Brugmann Griechische Grammatik[4] München 1913 p. 236 f.), and ποικιλομήτης, which occurs once in the Iliad (11. 482, with variants ποικιλομῆτιν, ποικιλόμητιν), six times in the Odyssey, and always of Odysseus, may be a later formation based on a misunderstanding of ἀγκυλομήτης. I should say the same of all the post-Homeric compounds of -μήτης listed by E. Fraenkel Geschichte der griechischen Nomina agentis auf -τήρ, -τωρ, -της (-τ-) Strassburg 1910 i. 45.

[8] Jacoby says: 'post 476 lacunam indicavi, cum ἐγγυάλιξεν 485 ne retentis quidem interpolationibus habeat quo referatur.'

[9] Supra ii. 925 n. 1. Later, Lyttos (supra i. 652 ff., ii. 723 n. 0, 934 n. 0, 948 n. 0 (4)).

[10] Cp. supra ii. 344 f., 350.

[11] Rhea. The change of subject makes it clear that at this point we pass from a primary to a secondary patch.

him in her arms she hid him [a]in a sheer cave beneath the coverts of earth divine[a], [b]on Mount Aigaion[1] thickly clad with woods[b].]] But to him she handed a great stone wrapped in swaddling bands, [p]even to the son of Ouranos, ruling in might, the former king of the gods[p]. That he then took in his hands and bestowed in his own belly, poor wretch, nor marked in his mind how that in place of the stone his own son was left behind, unvanquished and unvexed, who was soon like to overcome him by might and main and drive him forth from honour, himself to rule over the immortals.

[And quickly[2] thereafter waxed the strength and splendid limbs of the prince; and as the year came round again, [a]beguiled by Gaia's prudent promptings[a], great Kronos of the crooked blade brought up again his offspring, [b]vanquished by the arts and might of his own son[b]. And he vomited first the stone that he swallowed last[3]. This Zeus set up in the wide-wayed earth at goodly Pytho beneath the glens of Parnassos, to be a sign thenceforward and a marvel to mortal men.

And he freed from their baleful bonds the brothers of his father, sons of Ouranos whom his father in the flightiness of his thoughts had bound. Grateful they were to him and mindful of his benefits, for they gave him thunder and the burning bolt and lightning, which ere that huge Gaia had hidden. Trusting in these he rules over mortals and immortals.]

The swallowing of the stone by Kronos was variously located. Some said that it happened on Mount Thaumasion in Arkadia[4]; others, on a rocky summit called Petrachos at Chaironeia in Boiotia[5].

Be that as it may, the myth was accepted on the authority of Hesiod and made a lasting impression on the writers and artists of the ancient world.

The fifth century minimised the horrors. A red-figured kratér with columnar handles, painted by one of the Attic 'Manieristen'[6] c. 460—450 B.C., found in Sicily and now in the Louvre[7], has for obverse design (fig. 775, a)[8] a noble figure of king Kronos[9], originally

[1] Supra ii. 925 n. 1.

[2] Praeternatural rapidity of growth is characteristic of gods (supra i. 647, 695) and heroes and even of divine trees (supra p. 760).

[3] Of his previous digestive feats we hear only that he swallowed a horse, or at least a foal, in place of Poseidon (supra i. 181 n. 0). But a different account is given in Myth. Vat. 3. 15. 10 (infra p. 936 n. 5).

[4] Supra i. 154 n. 10.

[5] Supra i. 154, ii. 901 n. 1.

[6] J. D. Beazley Attic red-figured Vases in American Museums Cambridge Mass. 1918 p. 118 ff., id. Attische Vasenmaler des rotfigurigen Stils Tübingen 1925 p. 250 no. 39.

[7] Pottier Cat. Vases du Louvre iii. 1092 no. G 366, id. Vases antiques du Louvre 3me Série Paris 1922 p. 236 no. G 366, id. in the Corp. vases ant. Louvre iii 1. d pl. 28, 5 (obverse), 6 (reverse), 7 (detail) with text p. 18 nos. 5—7.

[8] J. de Witte 'Cronos et Rhéa' in the Gaz. Arch. 1875 1. 30—33 pl. 9 (=my fig. 775, a), M. Mayer in Roscher Lex. Myth. ii. 1551 ff. fig. 3, M. Pohlenz in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. xi. 2017.

[9] Cp. the fifth-century head of Kronos on a silver coin of Himera (supra ii. 558 fig. 436).

a

b

Fig. 775.

white-haired[1], who sceptre in hand and swathed in an ample himátion stands ready to receive from Rhea the well wrapped and carefully held substitute for the infant Zeus[2]. Rhea, like an epic queen, is accompanied by a couple of handmaids[3], who, to judge from the obvious alarm of the first and the simulated stance of the second, are both quite aware of the plot. The reverse (fig. 775, b)[4] shows the sequel. Kronos in the same pose as before, only with staff instead of sceptre, has received the stone. And Rhea, her mission accomplished, turns herself about, partly to conceal her satisfaction, partly to give a message to the sympathetic Nike, who hurries from the presence of Kronos. Zeus, as Hesiod said, 'was soon like to overcome him by might and main[5].'

Again, a red-figured pelike of c. 460—450 B.C., said to have come from Rhodes and now at New York, represents the famous ruse as conceived by 'the Nausikaa Painter'(?) (fig. 776)[6]. On the left stands Rhea, one foot supported[7] on a rock (was she not a mountain-mother?) while she holds out the stone, convincingly dressed and capped like a long-clothes baby, towards the expectant Kronos. He stands on the right, raising one hand in amazement and holding his sceptre in the other. Clearly this scene[8] is but

[1] See E. Pottier Vases antiques du Louvre 3me Série Paris 1922 p. 236 no. G 366.

[2] A. Rapp in Roscher Lex. Myth. iv. 95 is over-sceptical when he says: 'Verfehlt ist auch der Versuch in den Vasenbildern Gazette archéol. 1 pl. 9 und 3 pl. 18 die Übergabe des Steins durch Rhea an Kronos zu erkennen; was de Witte für den Stein hält, ist eine eigentümliche Verhüllung der Arme (vgl. übrigens Petersen, Arch. Ztg. 37 S. 12).'

[3] οὐκ ἀπὸ ἅμα τῷ γε καὶ ἀμφίπολοι δύ' ἕποντο (Il. 3. 143, Od. 1. 331, 18. 207, and similar passages). J. de Witte loc. cit. suggested that the two attendants of Rhea were the nymphs Adrasteia and Ide, to whom along with the Kouretes she entrusted the infant Zeus (Apollod. 1. 1. 6).

[4] E. de Chanot 'Cronos, Rhéa et Nicé' in the Gaz. Arch. 1877 iii. 116 pl. 18 (=my fig. 775, b). M. Mayer in Roscher Lex. Myth. ii. 1552 f. attempts to cast doubt on the authenticity of this reverse design. But quite unjustifiably, as E. Pottier op. cit. p. 236 points out ('des doutes non justifiés et non vérifiés, car il n'avait pas examiné l'original').

[5] Supra p. 929.

[6] J. D. Beazley Attic red-figured Vases in American Museums Cambridge Mass. 1918 p. 122 (either by the Nausikaa Painter or by an associate), id. Attische Vasenmaler des rotfigurigen Stils Tübingen 1925 p. 254 no. 3 ('Folgende Vasen sind den Werken des Oinanthemalers einerseits, andererseits denen des Nausikaamalers eng verwandt und weisen vielleicht auf die Identität der beiden Maler. Nausikaamaler=später Oinanthemaler?'), id. Greek Vases in Poland Oxford 1928 p. 44 n. 1 (such vases 'can hardly be kept apart from those of the Oinanthe Painter'), G. M. A. Richter Red-figured Athenian Vases in the Metropolitan Museum of Art Yale Univ. Press 1936 i. 100 f. no. 72 pls. 75 (=my fig. 776) and 173 (photograph of whole vase) ('by Nausikaa Painter(?)').

[7] An early example of 'the supported foot,' on which see supra p. 706 f. and P. Jacobsthal Die Melischen Reliefs Berlin—Wilmersdorf 1931 pp. 190—192 ('Das Motiv des hochauftretenden Fusses in frühklassischer Malerei').

[8] The scene on the reverse side of the New York pelike is not mythological at all, but a slight elaboration of two figures on the contemporary Paris kratér.

Later Greek art was almost equally reticent. Pausanias[1] says:

'The Plataeans have a temple of Hera worth seeing for its size and its sculptural decoration. As you enter there is Rhea bringing to Kronos the stone wrapped in swaddling bands as if it were the child that she had borne. This Hera they call Teleía[2]. It is an upright figure of large size. Both are made in Pentelic marble, wrought by Praxiteles.'

Fig. 776.

The precise character and arrangement of these sculptures is matter for conjecture. To me it seems probable that the statue of social. A woman talks with a youth, who leans on his staff and gesticulates. Between them stands a chair. On the wall hangs a bag.

[1] Paus. 9. 2. 7 Πλαταιεῦσι δὲ ναός ἐστιν Ἥρας, θέας ἄξιος μεγέθει τε καὶ ἐς τῶν ἀγαλμάτων τὸν κόσμον. ἐσελθοῦσι μὲν Ῥέα τὸν πέτρον κατειλημένον σπαργάνοις, οἷα δὴ τὸν παῖδα ὃν ἔτεκε, Κρόνῳ κομίζουσά ἐστι· τὴν δὲ Ἥραν Τελείαν καλοῦσι, πεποίηται δὲ ὀρθὸν μεγέθει ἄγαλμα μέγα· λίθου δὲ ἀμφότερα τοῦ Πεντελησίου, Πραξιτέλους δέ ἐστιν ἔργα.

[2] Cp. supra i. 20, ii. 893 n. 2, 1150.

Hera Teleía[1] stood on a square plinth decorated in relief with the figures of Kronos and Rhea, both statue and plinth being, rightly or wrongly, ascribed to Praxiteles[2]. Obvious parallels are afforded by Pheidias' statue of Athena Parthénos on its sculptured plinth[3], and Praxiteles' statues of Leto and her children on 'the Mantinean base[4].' If so, it is likely enough that a Romanised copy of the Praxitelean relief survives in a beautiful composition on the ara Capitolina (fig. 778)[5]. Kronos, a kingly figure[6], enthroned on the right, rests one hand on the veil that covers his head[7] and extends the other to receive the stone from Rhea, who, veiled likewise, advances with dignity from the left. H. Stuart Jones[8] observes:

[1] For numismatic evidence see Imhoof-Blumer and P. Gardner Num. Comm. Paus. i. 111, J. de Foville 'Les statues de Héra à Platées d'après les monnaies' in the Rev. Num. iv Série 1906 x. 253—261 figs. 1—3.

[2] Furtwängler Masterpieces of Gk. Sculpt. p. 102 argues that, since the temple of Hera at Plataiai was built in the year 427/426 B.C. (Thouk. 3. 68), its sculptures must be assigned to 'the elder Praxiteles,' whose floruit he would date c. 445—425. The same opinion is expressed by several modern critics, e.g. Collignon Hist. de la Sculpt. gr. ii. 179 n. 0, G. M. A. Richter The Sculpture and Sculptors of the Greeks Yale Univ. Press 1929 p. 241.

But the existence of this 'elder Praxiteles,' postulated by W. Klein in the Arch.-ep. Mitth. 1880 iv. 1—25, is still highly problematic: see e.g. U. Koehler 'Praxiteles der ältere' in the Ath. Mitth. 1884 ix. 78—82, P. Perdrizet 'Note généalogique sur la famille de Praxitèle' in the Rev. Ét. Gr. 1898 xi. 82—95, C. Picard La sculpture antique Paris 1926 ii. 77 ('le pseudo-Praxitèle l'Ancien').

[3] Supra ii pl. xlv.

[4] Paus. 8. 9. 1, with the remarks of G. M. A. Richter op. cit. p. 198 f. figs. 679—681. Supra p. 660 figs. 471, 472.

[5] In addition to the bibliography given supra i. 43 n. 1 see now Stuart Jones Cat. Sculpt. Mus. Capit. Rome p. 276 f. Salone no. 3 a (2) pl. 66 (=my fig. 778).

[6] Not uninfluenced by the type of Zeus as conceived by Alexander the Great (supra ii. 760 f. figs. 704—707).

[7] On the veiled Kronos see M. Mayer in Roscher Lex. Myth. ii. 1558—1563 figs. 9—16, 18, M. Pohlenz in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. xi. 2015—2017. To the examples cited by them may be added a malachite cameo (cp. supra p. 538 n. 0) of Graeco-Roman date in my possession (fig. 777: scale $\frac{3}{2}$). The engraver has, quaintly enough, tried to represent 'hunc maestum, senem, canum, caput glauco amictu coopertum habentem, filiorum suorum voratorem' (Myth. Vat. 3. 1. 1) by using the darkest part of the stone for the sinister face, a lighter green for the hair and beard, and a white streak for the top of the veil.

Fig. 777.

The significance of Kronos' veil is far from clear. A. Jeremias Der Schleier von Sumer bis heute (Der Alte Orient xxxi Heft 1/2) Leipzig 1931 pp. 1—70 omits Kronos altogether. M. Pohlenz loc. cit. p. 2017, after dismissing earlier views, suggests 'alte Kultelemente wie bei der Harpe.' A. H. Krappe in his Balor With the Evil Eye Columbia University 1927 p. 23 ff. and in his courageous survey Mythologie universelle Paris 1930 p. 250 conjectures that the Greek Kronos and the Italian Saturn had, like the Irish Balor, a third eye in the back of the head, which being an evil eye 'had to be covered up lest it should strike innocent people with its destructive glance.'

[8] Stuart Jones op. cit. p. 277.

'The group is evidently composed for a relief. Its gentleness, and the absence alike of the barbarous and the ludicrous, may well indicate the Attic art of the fourth century as the source of the composition.'

Fig. 778.

Very different is the impression produced by a tomb-painting (fig. 779)[1] which came to light in 1865 on the road from Ostia to

[1] C. L. Visconti in the Ann. d. Inst. 1866 xxxviii. 312—319 (not earlier than c. 200 A.D., perhaps even later; but probably copied by an indifferent artist from a good exemplar), Mon. d. Inst. viii pl. 28, 3 (part of which = my fig. 779), M. Mayer in Roscher Lex. Myth. ii. 1569 ff. fig. 18 (but see A. Rapp ib. iv. 95), B. Nogara Le nozze Aldobrandine i paesaggi con scene dell' Odissea e le altre pitture murali antiche conservate nella

Laurentum. Kronos and Rhea, both veiled, are sitting side by side. Rhea, in blue chitón and red himátion, presses her hands nervously together. Kronos, completely draped in a large yellow himátion, bends forward to seize a naked boy, who flings up his arm in a gesture of frantic supplication. But the ogre, with grim face and horrible wide mouth, has him by hair and hand and leg. His fate is apparently sealed; for the old and terror-stricken paidagogós, who, clad in a yellowish chitón and a blue himátion, appears, stick in hand, from the background, will obviously arrive too late. But just in the nick of time a handmaid[1], in reddish chitón and yellow himátion, rushes forward to present Kronos with the stony substitute. There can, I think, be little doubt that this sensational picture—very possibly with some symbolic meaning[2]—presents the subject of Kronos' teknophagía, which we know to have been the theme of a late Greek pantomime[3].

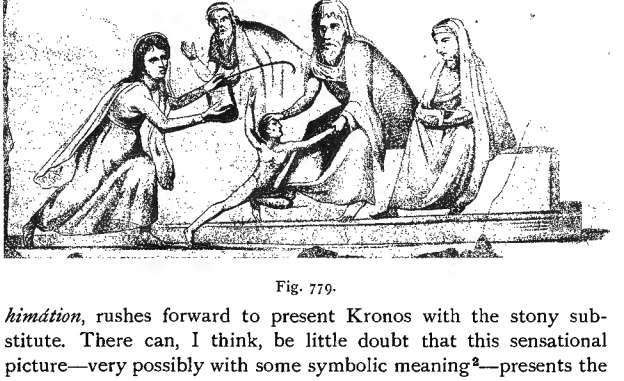

Fig. 779.

biblioteca Vaticana e nei musei pontifici Milano 1907 p. 63 f. fig. 2, pl. 45, A, Reinach Rép. Peint. Gr. Rom. p. 6 no. 4.

[1] I cannot agree with Visconti, who loc. cit. took the paidagogós and the handmaid to be Ouranos and Gaia! Nor yet with M. Mayer, who loc. cit. thought that the artist had combined two moments in the myth—Kronos about to rend and devour one of his sons in propria persona, and Kronos about to receive another of his sons in effigie. Least of all can I accept the verdict of A. Rapp, who loc. cit. includes this wall-painting in a list of monuments 'Ohne Wahrscheinlichkeit...auf Rhea gedeutet.'

[2] The infant devoured to all seeming and yet escaping from death would make an appropriate decoration for a tomb. Cp. the subjects of sarcophagi noted supra ii. 417, 478, iii. 135.

[3] Loukian. de salt. 80 οἱ δὲ εὔρυθμα μέν, τὰ πράγματα δὲ μετάχρονα ἢ πρόχρονα, οἷον ἐγώ ποτε ἰδὼν μέμνημαι. τὰς γὰρ Διὸς γονὰς ὀρχούμενός τις καὶ τὴν τοῦ Κρόνου τεκνοφαγίαν παρωρχεῖτο καὶ τὰς Θυέστου συμφορὰς τῷ ὁμοίῳ παρηγμένος· κ.τ.λ.

The myth as a whole is a complex involving two originally distinct elements. On the one hand, there is the folk-tale motif of the Unnatural Parent who eats his Children[1]. On the other hand, the acceptance of a swathed stone as a substitute for Zeus suggests the ritual of litholatry and in particular recalls the draped meteorites worshipped in sundry Levantine cults[2]. The stone swallowed by Kronos is described by late writers as bearing more than one significant name. It was dískos, perhaps with a solar connotation[3]. It was baítylos because of its wrappings[4]. It was abaddir[5], a Semitic term meaning 'mighty father[6].'

[1] Stith Thompson Motif-Index of Folk-Literature (FF Communications No. 108) Helsinki 1934 iii. 207 G 72 'Unnatural parents eat children.' See also J. A. MacCulloch in J. Hastings Encyclopædia of Religion and Ethics Edinburgh 1910 iii. 208^{b}—209^{a}, Frazer Golden Bough^{3}: The Dying God p. 192.

Pohlenz in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. xi. 1992 is reminded of Rotkäppchen (J. Bolte—G. Polívka Anmerkungen zu den Kinder- u. Hausmärchen der Brüder Grimm Leipzig 1913 i. 234 ff. No. 26), in which the little girl rescued from the belly of the wolf fetches great stones and fills him up with these. See also A. H. Krappe Mythologie universelle Paris 1930 p. 281.

[2] Supra pp. 888, 898, 906, 916 n. 1, 918, 922. [3] Supra i. 299.

[4] Herodian. περὶ καθολικῆς προσῳδίας 6 (i. 163, 17 f. Lentz) βαιτύλος ὁ λίθος ὃν ὁ Κρόνος κατέπιεν, Theognost. can. 330 (Cramer anecd. Oxon. ii. 61, 21) βετύλος ὁ λίθος ὃν ὁ Κρόνος κατέπιεν, Hesych. βαίτυλος· οὕτως ἐκαλεῖτο ὁ δοθεὶς λίθος τῷ Κρόνῳ ἀντὶ Διός, Bekker anecd. i. 224, 10 f. βαίτυλος· λίθος. οὕτως ἐκαλεῖτο ὁ δοθεὶς τῷ Κρόνῳ ἀντὶ τοῦ Διός, παρὰ τὸ τύλον ὄντα κεκρύφθαι, et. Gud. p. 102, 47 βαίτυλος· ὁ ἐσπαργανωμένος λίθος, et. mag. p. 192, 56 ff. βαίτυλος δὲ ἐκλήθη καὶ ὁ λίθος ὃν ἀντὶ Διὸς ὁ Κρόνος κατέπιεν· εἴρηται δὲ ὅτι ἡ Ῥέα βαίτῃ αἰγὸς σπαργανώσασα τῷ Κρόνῳ δέδωκε (leg. ἔδωκε)· βαίτη δὲ σημαίνει τὴν διφθέραν, Apostol. 9. 24 καὶ βαίτυλον ἂν κατέπιες· ἐπὶ τῶν ἄγαν λιμβῶν. βαίτυλος δέ ἐστιν ὁ ἐσπαργανωμένος λίθος, ὃν Κρόνος κατέπιεν ἀντὶ τοῦ Διός. G. F. Moore in the Am. Journ. Arch. 1903 vii. 202 says: 'A comparison of these passages plainly shows that they are all ultimately derived from one source.'

[5] Priscian. inst. 2. 6 (i. 47, 9 Hertz) 'abaddir' vel 'abaddier,' 5. 18 (i. 153, 19 Hertz) 'abaddir,' 6. 45 (i. 234, 16 f. Hertz) 'abaddir' quoque ('abaddier,' ὁ βαίτυλος), declinatum non legi, 7. 32 (i. 313, 24 ff. Hertz) quidam addunt 'hic abaddir,' ὁ βαίτυλος, 'huius abaddiris,' lapis, quem pro Iove devoravit Saturnus, sed in usu hoc non inveni, Myth. Vat. 1. 104 sed tunc quum natus esset Juppiter, ut partum ejus celaret mater, misit Saturno gemmam in similitudinem pueri celsam, quam ABIDIR vocant, cujus natura semper movetur. quam accipiens pater dentibus collisit et consumsit, 3. 15, 10 primo ergo tradidit ei Neptunum, quem in mare submersit, et factus est deus marinus. secundo dedit ei Plutonem, quem in foveam suffocavit, et factus est deus inferorum. tandem nato Jove mirae pulchritudinis, ipsius miserta misit Saturno lapidem nomine abidir, quem pulveratum devoravit. deinde egestus et formatus est in speciem humanam et vivificatus, cp. G. Goetz Corpus glossariorum Latinorum Lipsiae 1888—1901 iii. 8, 52 βαιτυλος abaldir, 83, 6 beutylos abaddir, 289, 53 βετυλος auiaddir (with corr. abbadir), v. 589, 4 Abadir lapis, 632, 1 Abaddir lapis, 615, 37 Abadir est lapis quem deuorauit saturnus pro ioue filio suo, vi. 1. 1 abderites id est Saturnus, 125 Baetulum (bellium cod.) lapis que<m> ferunt comedisse Saturnum pro filio suo Ioue (= v. 563, 3), Orig. Pap. cited in the Thes. Ling. Lat. i. 43, 27 ff. abaddir deus dicitur, quo nomine lapis vocatur, quem devoravit Saturnus pro Iove. dicitur quoque abaddir vel Abdira vel Abderites, quem Graeci badelion vocant.

We gather from Augustine that the term was used of certain deities by the Punic

These two elements, the folk-tale motif of the child-devourer and the ritual usage of a baitylos, were perhaps first fused in ancient Crete. For, on the one hand, the Kouretes had of old sacrificed children to Kronos[1] and saved the infant Zeus by deceiving his father[2], while, on the other hand, pillar-cults were admittedly rife[3] and even natural stones might on occasion be treated as divinities[4].

Further, in view of the relations between 'Minoan' Crete and Pytho[5], it is not surprising to find that what purported to be the actual stone swallowed by Kronos was still to be seen at Delphoi in the second century of our era.

population of north Africa (Aug. epist. 1. 17. 2 miror quod nominum absurditate commoto in mentem non venerit habere tuos et in sacerdotibus eucaddires (v.l. eucaddares) et in numinibus abaddires). This is confirmed by an actual inscription found in Mauretania at Manliana (Miliana) on the slopes of the Lesser Atlas (Corp. inscr. Lat. viii Suppl. 3 no. 21481 = Dessau Inscr. Lat. sel. no. 4478 Abaddiri · sa|ncto · culto|res iuniores | suis sumtis · | aram constitu., | pro[v.] · · · · · · ·).

[6] S. Bochart Geographia sacra, seu Phaleg et Canaan[4] Lugduni Batavorum 1707 lib. ii cap. 2 p. 708 'Abaddir אב אדיר Hebraicè est pater magnificus....Sed fallor aut Abdir vel Abaddir, cum pro lapide sumitur, corruptum ex Phœnicio אבן דיר eben dir vel aban dir lapis sphæricus. Talis enim Bætyli forma,' F. Münter Antiquarische Abhandlungen Kopenhagen 1816 (supra p. 892 n. 1) p. 266 'Abdir oder Abaddir...eine Benennung, deren Ursprung ungewiss ist, da sie sich entweder von אבן אדיר, der göttliche Stein, herleiten lässt, oder nach einer andern, wenn gleich weniger wahrscheinlichen Meinung, von אב אדיר, der göttliche Vater; oder auch, dem Bochart zufolge, von אבן דיר, der runde Stein, um die oft rundliche Form der Steine zu bezeichnen, worauf die Alten aufmerksam waren,' F. v. Dalberg Ueber Meteor-Cultus der Alten (supra p. 892 n. 1) Heidelberg 1811 p. 73 'Abadir, der grosse mächtige Herrscher,—Pater magnus,' W. Gesenius Scripturae linguaeque Phoeniciae monumenta quotquot supersunt Lipsiae 1837 p. 384 'Vix dubitandum, quin sit אב אדיר pater (deus) potens, cf. אָב de diis gentilium Jer. 2. 27, et אֱלֹהִים אַדִּירִים 1 Sam. 4, 8..., non אבן דיר lapis sphaericus, quod magis placet Bocharto...: nihil enim frigidius, quam lapidem, eumque talem in quo numen latere credebatur, lapidem appellare,' G. F. Moore in the Am. Journ. Arch. 1903 vii. 204 'The natural interpretation of the name is "mighty or noble father"; the epithet addir is repeatedly applied in the Old Testament to God, and occurs in other Phoenician compound names; cf. Baliddir in a Numidian inscription (Ephem. Epigraph. VII, no. 792).' There can, then, be little doubt that R. Thurneysen was wrong when in the great German Thes. Ling. Lat. i. 16 f. he wrote: 'vocabulum peregrinum inc. orig. incipit fortasse a nomine semitico, quod hebraice sonat אֶבֶן "lapis."'

[1] Supra ii. 548 f.

[2] Supra i. 647 n. 8.

[3] Sir A. J. Evans 'Mycenaean Tree and Pillar Cult and its Mediterranean Relations' in the Journ. Hell. Stud. 1901 xxi. 99—204, supra ii. 528 ff.

[4] Sir A. J. Evans The Palace of Minos at Knossos London 1928 ii. 1. 342 'the late Shrine found in the Little Palace at Knossos with its grotesque fetishes consisting of natural concretions,' 346 fig. 198, ib. ii. 2. 520, J. D. S. Pendlebury A Handbook to the Palace of Minos at Knossos London 1935 p. 52 'on the stone balustrade were placed the "fetish" figures of natural stone, the objects of adoration of the period of reoccupation (L.M. III.).'

[5] Supra ii. 189 n. 8. See also L. Lerat 'Trouvailles mycéniennes à Delphes' in the Bull. Corr. Hell. 1935 lix. 329—375 figs. 1—24, pls. 19—24.

'As you leave the tomb of Neoptolemos,' says Pausanias[1], 'and pass on up the hill you come to a stone of no great size. On this they pour olive oil every day, and as each festival comes round they put upon it wool of the unspun sort. There is also a belief with regard to it that this stone was given to Kronos instead of the child and that Kronos spewed it out again.'

The stone oiled and clad in wool was certainly a baitylos and possibly, as Sir James Frazer[2] and others[3] have conjectured, an aerolite. What it looked like we know from a silver simpulum with gilded details, found in 1633 at Wettingen near Basel[4], which is decorated with the seven deities presiding over the days of the week[5] (fig. 780). Kronos, the god of Saturday, stands beside a pillar topped by an oval stone: this can be none other than his Delphic monument.

Fig. 780.

[1] Paus. 10. 24. 6 ἐπαναβάντι δὲ ἀπὸ τοῦ μνήματος (sc. Νεοπτολέμου τοῦ Ἀχιλλέως) λίθος ἐστὶν οὐ μέγας· τούτου καὶ ἔλαιον ὀσημέραι καταχέουσι καὶ κατὰ ἑορτὴν ἑκάστην ἔριa ἐπιτιθέασι τὰ ἀργά· ἔστι δὲ καὶ δόξα ἐς αὐτὸν, δοθῆναι Κρόνῳ τὸν λίθον ἀντὶ τοῦ παιδός, καὶ ὡς αὖθις ἤμεσεν αὐτὸν ὁ Κρόνος.

[2] Frazer Pausanias v. 355 ('Perhaps the sacred stone at Delphi may have been meteoric).'

[3] E.g. F. Münter Antiquarische Abhandlungen Kopenhagen 1816 p. 277, Gruppe Gr. Myth. Rel. pp. 773, 775, K. Tümpel in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. ii. 2781 ('die Aërolithennatur genügt zur Erklärung des griechischen Mythos').

[4] M. Merian M[artini] Z[elleri] Topographia Helvetiæ, Rhætiæ, et Valesiæ Franckfurt am Mayn 1654 p. 58 with fig. 6, F. Keller in the Mittheilungen der antiquarischen Gesellschaft in Zürich 1864 xv. 133 ff. pls. 13 and 14, 1, J. de Witte in the Gaz. Arch. 1879 v. 1 f. pl. 1 (part of which = my fig. 780), M. Mayer in Roscher Lex. Myth. ii. 1522 and 1568 f. with fig. 17, W. H. Roscher ib. iii. 2539 fig. 2, Reinach Rép. Reliefs iii. 525 no. 1.

[5] Supra i. 753, ii. 69 f. fig. 28, iii. 209 f. with figs. 128 and 129.

(i) Zeus Kappótas.

Pausanias[1] in his account of south-western Lakonike says:

'About three furlongs from Gythion is an unwrought stone. The story goes that Orestes sat upon it and was thereby stayed from his madness; wherefore the stone was named Zeus Kappótas in the Doric tongue.'

Attempts to determine the exact site of this famous stone have led to some divergence of opinion. On the one hand, E. S. Forster[2] in an article dealing with Laconian topography writes as follows:

'Near the modern Gymnasium, at the side of the Sparta road, is an abrupt face of reddish stone some ten metres high, cut into the side of the hill of Kumaro and now called Πελεκητό. At a point about four metres above the level of the neighbouring road is the rock-cut inscription Μοῖρα Διὸς Τερασττίω[3]. It was cut by hammering with a round-pointed instrument, which made dot-like incisions.

The distance from this spot to the centre of the ancient site agrees well with the "about three stades" of Pausanias, and it may, I think, be regarded as certain that this inscription marks the site of the sanctuary of Zeus Kappotas. Τεράστιος must then be regarded as the official title of the god, Καππώτας as a local popular epithet. The spot as figured by Le Bas—Waddington [(fig. 781)[4]] shows a rocky platform at the foot of the cliff, which perhaps was the "unwrought stone" mentioned by Pausanias.'

On the other hand, W. Kolbe[5], writing six years later in his Inscriptiones Laconiae, reverts to the view put forward by W. M. Leake[6], that the stone called Zeus Kappótas was to be seen in antiquity some two hundred yards further south at the point where the rock still shows an archaic inscription in small letters difficult to decipher and interpret, but possibly prescribing penalties for any who should shift or damage the sacred object[7].

[1] Paus. 3. 22. 1 Γυθίου δὲ τρεῖς μάλιστα ἀπέχει σταδίους ἀργὸς λίθος· Ὀρέστην λέγουσι καθεσθέντα ἐπ' αὐτοῦ παύσασθαι τῆς μανίας· διὰ τοῦτο ὁ λίθος ὠνομάσθη Ζεὺς Καππώτας κατὰ γλῶσσαν τὴν Δωρίδα.

[2] E. S. Forster in the Ann. Brit. Sch. Ath. 1906—1907 xiii. 222 f.

[3] [Supra ii. 31 n. 7.]

[4] Lebas—Reinach Voyage Arch. p. 32 pl. Itin. 25 (=my fig. 781). R. Weil in the Ath. Mitth. 1876 i. 151 ff. compares this 'Felsanlage' with that of Zeus Hypsistos at Athens (supra ii. 876 n. 1 no. (1)).

[5] W. Kolbe in Inscr. Gr. Arc. Lac. Mess. i. 217.

[6] W. M. Leake Travels in the Morea London 1830 i. 248.

[7] R. Weil in the Ath. Mitth. 1876 i. 154 f., Roehl Inscr. Gr. ant. no. 72, Roberts Gk. Epigr. i. 261 no. 260, A. N. Skias in the Ἐφ. Ἀρχ. 1892 pp. 185—191 no. 1, R. Meister in Collitz—Bechtel Gr. Dial.-Inschr. iii. 2. 60 ff. no. 4564, Michel Recueil d'Inscr. gr. no. 693, J. v. Prott and L. Ziehen Leges Graecorum sacrae ii no. 55, Inscr. Gr. Arc. Lac. Mess. i no. 1155 μεδέν̣α̣ | ἀποστρυθῆσται· | αἰ δέ κα ἀποστρυ[θ]ῆται, ἀ̣ρ̣α̣τ̣ᾶ̣ι̣ | ἓ̣ λο δόλος· | ·ραι δὲ λύπε | νόμος, | ἀ̣ποστάτο. The interpretation depends on the meaning assigned to the unknown verb ἀποστρυθῆσται. H. Stuart Jones in the new Liddell and Scott has 'ἀποστρυθάομαι, perh.=disturb, move, dub. in IG 5 (1). 1155. 2

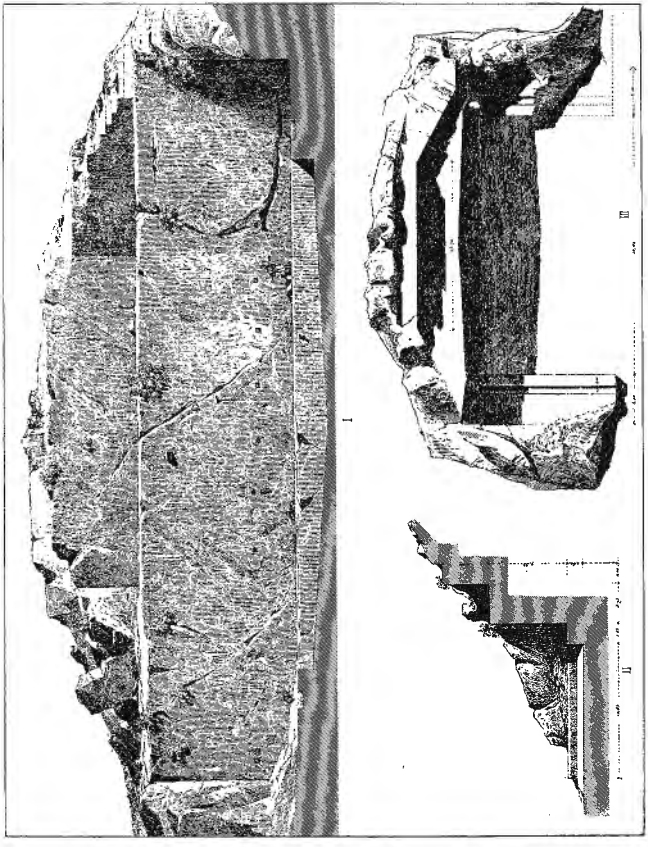

Fig. 781.

Neither of these explanations is quite satisfactory. The first assumes that Zeus Kappótas was the popular name of the god officially called Zeus Terástios. But it is not easy to find a strict parallel to such double nomenclature. Besides, Pausanias' phrase 'an unwrought stone' (argòs líthos) suggests something isolated and smaller than 'a rocky platform at the foot of the cliff.' The second explanation is even more precarious. We are invited to think that a verb of unknown meaning in an inscription which does not mention Zeus at all perhaps referred to misdemeanants guilty of knocking bits off his sacred rock. I should sooner conclude that the relic in question was a comparatively small stone long since buried or lost.

The belief that 'Orestes sat upon it and was thereby stayed from his madness' recalls other curative stones[1], and implies a possible[2], but not very probable[3], derivation of Kappótas from katapaúein, 'to stay.' Equally unconvincing is M. Mayer's[4] con-

(Gythium).' A. N. Skias loc. cit. suspected that ἀποστρυθῆσται meant λιθοτομεῖν or the like. L. Ziehen loc. cit. agrees that this gives the required notion. And W. Kolbe loc. cit. concludes: 'Neque vero de latomia cogitandum est, immo ne quis lapidem aërium laedat, interdicitur. Hunc ergo in modum titulum verterim: "ne quis decutiat; si quis decusserit, poenam dabit (sive ipse) sive servus."'

[1] See E. Maass 'Heilige Steine' in the Rhein. Mus. 1929 lxxviii. 8 ff. and K. Latte in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. iii A. 2299. For the connexion of such stones with Orestes cp. Paus. 2. 31. 4 and 8. 34. 2.

Zeus himself, when enamoured of Hera, would repair to the Leucadian rock and sit there till he felt better (Ptol. Hephaist. ap. Phot. bibl. p. 153 a 19 ff. Bekker ζητούσης δὲ τὴν αἰτίαν εἰπεῖν λέγεται τὸν Ἀπόλλωνα, ὡς μάντις ὢν ἐγνώκει διότι ὁ Ζεὺς ἀεὶ ἐρῶν Ἥρας ἐρχόμενος ἐπὶ τῇ πέτρᾳ ἐκαθέζετο καὶ ἀνεπαύετο τοῦ ἔρωτος. καὶ πολλοὶ δὲ ἄλλοι καὶ πολλαὶ ἔρωτι κάμνουσαι ἀπηλλάγησαν τοῦ ἔρωτος, ἐπεὶ τῆς πέτρας καθήλαντο): on which consult Frazer Lect. Hist. Kingship p. 73.

Even portable stones might be possessed of great curative and preservative virtue, whether they were of natural origin like the oreites (supra p. 921), or artefacts such as neolithic celts (supra ii. 506 ff.). An interesting modern survival of the latter variety is recorded by T. F. G. Dexter The Sacred Stone New Knowledge Press, Treberran, Perranporth (1929) p. 37 § 76: 'Captain William Thomas, of Perranporth, tells me that he knew an old Cornish woman named Fanny Francis who had a remarkable cure for a bad leg—to rub it in "essence of thunder." This precious liquid was obtained by boiling a "thunderbolt" (apparently a neolithic implement) in a saucepan for twenty minutes. The owner of the "thunderbolt" was a miner at Pool who "lent it out" at 3d. a time! The Captain adds: "I knew the woman well and have heard her prescribe."' tention that Kappótas means 'the Swallower.' For though in the Hesiodic myth Zeus swallowed Metis[1] and in the Orphic theogony Zeus swallowed Phanes and all that in him was[2], yet where a stone is in question we should inevitably think of Rhea's ruse and desiderate either Kronos the Swallower or Zeus the Swallowed. There is more to be said for S. Wide's[3] suggestion that Kappótas involves the root pet- pōt-, which appears in the verb pōt-á-omai, 'I fly.' Only, we must not translate 'the Down-flier[4]' or imagine that the reference is to a winged thunderbolt. There is little or no evidence to show that Greek thunderbolts were winged before the fifth century[6], and this cult savours of a much hoarier antiquity. Rather, it should be borne in mind that the same root pet- pōt- had another meaning, 'to fall' as well as 'to fly[6].' H. Usener[7] and F. Solmsen[8]—a strong combination—between them went far towards proving that Zeus Kappótas really meant Zeus 'the Fallen,' and that his stone was in all likelihood a meteoric block.

[2] H. Hitzig and H. Blümner ad loc.: "wie Πωσινίκος für Πανσινίκος, A.M. II 442. III 162.' [U. Köhler in the Ath. Mitth. 1878 iii. 163 published a base from Gythion, which in a list of names includes (line 12 f.) Πωσινίκου τοῦ Ἀριστοκλέ|ους κ.τ.λ. The name should be accented Πωσίνικος.]

[3] The Dorians said παύσασθαι, not πώσασθαι, to judge from Theokr. 15. 87 παύσασθ', ὦ δύστανοι, κ.τ.λ.

[4] M. Mayer in Roscher Lex. Myth. ii. 1540 f.: Καππώτας for Καππότας (καταπίνω). The same etymology is propounded by Gruppe Gr. Myth. Rel. pp. 778 (wrongly numbered 787) n. 7, 1106 n. 0.

If so, it must be conceded that among the peasants of Gythion we are face to face with extremely archaic beliefs. Zeus is the Sky[9]. The Sky is made of stone[10]. A bit of it breaks off and falls[11]. That is Zeus 'the Fallen.' On this showing, our third volume ends where our first volume began, with the primary and yet age-long conception of the animate Sky.

[1] Supra p. 743 f. [2] Supra ii. 1027, iii. 745.

[3] S. Wide Lakonische Kulte Leipzig 1893 p. 21: 'In der Weise erkläre ich den Zeus Kappotas: er ist der vom Himmel gefallene ἀργὸς λίθος (καππώτας=κατα-πώτ-ας aus der Wurzel πετ- πωτ-, vgl. πωτ-ά-ομαι). Man denkt dabei gewöhnlich an Meteorsteine; aber es liegt viel näher anzunehmen, dass nach den Volksvorstellungen diese Steine von dem Blitz herabgeschleudert wären, wie bei den Germanen die Donnerkeile.'

Cp. Farnell Cults of Gk. States i. 46, H. Hitzig and H. Blümner ad loc., Adler in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. x. 1918, K. Latte ib. iii A. 2299.

[4] E. Maass in the Rhein. Mus. 1929 lxxviii. 7 f.: Καππώτας='Herniedergeflogen.'

[5] Supra ii. 777, 780 f.

[6] Prellwitz Etym. Wörterb. d. Gr. Spr.[2] pp. 364 f., 370, Boisacq Dict. étym. de la Langue Gr. pp. 776, 787, Walde—Pokorny Vergl. Wörterb. d. indogerm. Spr. ii. 19 ff. ('pet-...'' auf etwas los- oder niederstürzen, fliegen, fallen'').

[7] H. Usener in the Rhein. Mus. 1905 lx. 12 'Vielmehr gehört πωτ- zu Wurzel πετ- (Aor. dor. ἔπετον=ἔπεσον) wie πωτᾶσθαι zu πέτεσθαι, vgl. στρέφειν στροφή στρωφᾶσθαι. Es ergibt sich also mit Καππώτας "dem herabgefallenen" ein Synonymon zu Καταιβάτης, und mit Ζεὺς Καππώτας eine neue Parallele zu Ζεὺς Κεραυνός. Der Stein, der diesen Namen trug, konnte nur ein Meteorstein sein, der als leibhaftiger Donnerkeil verehrt wurde.'

[8] F. Solmsen in the Rhein. Mus. 1907 lxii. 337 'Morphologisch ist diese schöne... Deutung am leichtesten zu rechtfertigen, wenn man Καππώτας als Verkürzung von Καππωτατάς auffasst und mit att. κυβιστητης aus κυβιστητήτης* zu κυβιστᾶν (vgl. hom. κυβιστητήρ und Kretschmer Vaseninschr. 88) und προσαίτης ἐπαίτης aus προσαιτητής ἐπαιτητής zu αἰτεῖν...zusammenstellt.'

[9] Supra i. 1 ff. and passim. [10] Supra p. 925 f. [11] Ib.

The highest peak of Mount Olympos (Mitka, the 'Needle').

See page 943 n. 3.

§ 11. General Conclusions with regard to Zeus as god of the Dark Sky.

We have now gone the round of our subject, surveyed its main lines, and explored in detail some at least of its ramifications. It remains in a few concluding paragraphs to gather up results and attempt some estimate of their significance.

Starting from the primitive belief in an animate Sky, we surmised that already in remote pre-Homeric times Zeús, 'the Bright One[1],' had developed from Sky to Sky-god and was conceived after the fashion of an earthly weather-making monarch[2]. He dwelt in isolated splendour where the summit of Mount Olympos (pl. lxviii)[3] towers up through the cloudy aér into the cloudless aithér[4]. Universally recognised as head of the Hellenic pantheon, he came in the Hellenistic[5] age to be connected more or less closely with sun[6], moon[7], and stars[8]—other manifestations of the same celestial brightness[9].

Even when the sky was dark with a lowering storm, 'the Bright One' might be seen to flash downwards in a dazzling streak[10]. This was regarded sometimes as his destructive glance[11], more often as his irresistible weapon[12]—a double axe[13], a spear[14], a sword[15], a lightning-fork or thunderbolt[16]. Zeus, who thus sent the lightning and the thunder, was naturally thought to send all kinds of weather, rain, snow, or hail[17]. Indeed, any phaenomenon of a meteorological sort was apt to be dubbed Diosemía, a 'Zeus-sign,' and viewed as an omen of serious import[18].

Prominent among such Diosemíai was the Earthquake[19], attributed either to Zeus or to Poseidon, a specialised form of Zeus[20], whose trident was originally the lightning-fork of a storm-god[21]. Clouds, again, played a certain rôle in the ritual and mythology of Zeus[22], as Aristophanes was aware when he wrote and rewrote his Nephélai[23] or elaborated that brilliant extravaganza his Nephelo-

[1] Supra i. 1 ff. [2] Supra i. 9 ff.
[3] Mitka, the highest peak of Mt Olympos, photographed from the Ridge by Mr C. M. Sleeman, Sept. 3, 1926. See further supra ii. 904 n. 6.
[4] Supra i. 101 with pl. ix, 1 and 2. [5] Supra i. 777 f.
[6] Supra i. 186—730. [7] Supra i. 730—740. [8] Supra i. 740—775.
[9] Supra i. 777. [10] Supra ii. 11. [11] Supra ii. 501 ff.
[12] Supra ii. 505 ff. [13] Supra ii. 513 ff. [14] Supra ii. 704 ff.
[15] Supra ii. 712 ff. [16] Supra ii. 722 ff. [17] Supra ii. 1 ff.
[18] Supra ii. 4 ff. [19] Supra iii. 1 ff.
[20] Supra i. 717 n. 2, ii. 31 n. 8, 582 ff., 786 f., 846, 850, 893 n. 0, iii. 20.
[21] Supra ii. 789 ff., 850, iii. 20. [22] Supra iii. 30 ff. [23] Supra iii. 69 f.

kokkygía[1]. The Winds too were not unconnected with Zeus[2]. Their guardian Aiolos was one with Aiolos forefather of the Aeolians, and perhaps began life as a tribal chieftain believed to embody the sky-god[3]. Zeus' titles Oúrios, tkmenos, Euánemos, Bóreios afford more definite proof of his power over the Winds[4]. A further group of his epithets—Érrhos, Ersaîos, Ikmaîos, and the like—associates him with the Dew[5]. The Errhephóroi were 'Dew-bearers' who carried dew, conceived as the very seed of the sky-father, down into the womb of the earth-mother[6], while the dew-sisters Aglauros, Pandrosos, and Herse are best explained as successive names of the earth-mother herself[7]. More obvious and constant is the relation of Zeus to Rain[8]. Rain-magic is found at several of his cult-centres, in Arkadia, in Thessaly, on the Akropolis at Athens[9]. Moreover, the belief was rife that Zeus descended in rain to fertilise the earth—witness the poets in general[10] and the myth of Danaë in particular[11]. His appellatives Ómbrios[12], Hyétios[13], Hýes[14], Chalázios[15] speak for themselves. Lastly, Zeus on occasion let fall a meteorite, a fragment of the solid sky, or even himself fell in meteoric form[16]. In which context we can cite, not only the Syrian Zeus Bétylos[17] and the Arabian Zeus Dousáres[18], but also the Laconian Zeus Kappótas[19] and the stone devoured by Kronos[20].

Such in rough outline were the physical foundations of the cult of Zeus. I have used them throughout as providing a convenient framework for a somewhat discursive investigation of his worship. But the more nearly we study these aspects of it, the more clearly we perceive that they were after all just the ground-plan or lower storey of a greater and grander whole. Resting upon them and rising all the time, here a little and there a little, was a structure of fresh religious concepts, whose height and breadth—pinnacles of individual aspiration and prospects of interracial understanding—were quite without parallel in the pagan world. The fact is that always and everywhere the cult of a Sky-god[21] has proved to be an

[1] Supra iii. 44 ff. [2] Supra iii. 103 ff. [3] Supra iii. 106 ff.
[4] Supra iii. 140 ff. [5] Supra iii. 261 ff. [6] Supra iii. 165 ff., 602.
[7] Supra iii. 237, 241 ff., 603. [8] Supra iii. 284 ff. [9] Supra iii. 314 ff.
[10] Supra iii. 451 ff. [11] Supra iii. 455 ff. [12] Supra iii. 525 ff.
[13] Supra iii. 561 ff. [14] Supra iii. 873 f. [15] Supra iii. 875 ff.
[16] Supra iii. 881 ff. [17] Supra iii. 890 f. [18] Supra iii. 912.
[19] Supra iii. 939 ff. [20] Supra iii. 927 ff.

[21] G. Foucart 'Sky and Sky-gods' in J. Hastings Encyclopædia of Religion and Ethics Edinburgh 1920 xi. 580[b]—585[b], R. Pettazzoni Dio: formazione e sviluppo del monoteismo nella storia delle religioni i L'Essere celeste nelle credenze dei popoli primitivi Roma 1922 pp. 1—397 (to be followed by ii Il Dio supremo nelle religioni politeistiche and iii Il Dio elevating and widening force. Inevitably so, for it tends to raise the thoughts of men from earth to heaven. And the quick-witted Greeks were prompt to seize the opportunity of such uplift and expansion.

Almost every section of this treatise serves to illustrate the process. Zeus Hýpsistos[1], for example, was 'the Highest,' not only literally, but metaphorically too. He may have started, like Zeus Hýpatos[2], as a Hellenic mountain-power. But he ended by becoming identified with the supreme deity of more than one non-Hellenic people, and not least of the Jews. This took place in the Hellenistic age, which also saw the rise of Zeus the Sun[3] and his fusion with a variety of solar gods all round the eastern end of the Mediterranean—Âmen-Râ[4] at Egyptian Thebes, Sarapis[5] at Alexandreia, Ba'al-ḥammân[6] in north Africa, Ba'al-Šamin[7] in Syria, not to mention the Mithras[8] of Chaldean magic. Moreover, it was as a pure sun-god that at Tripolis in Phoinike Zeus acquired the striking appellative Hágios[9], and on the coinage of Gaza was actually equated with the Hebrew Godhead and inscribed with the triliteral form of the name Jehovah[10]. These and other such lines converged and ultimately met in the solar monotheism of Aurelian[11].

Again, the ram[12] and the bull[13], whose procreative powers were connected by pastoral and cattle-breeding peoples with all the fertilising agencies of sun and storm, both alike served to facilitate the union of the Greek Zeus with similar gods in contiguous areas. The ram linked him to the Graeco-Libyan Ammon[14] and the Thraco-Phrygian Sabázios[15]; the bull, to the Amorite Adad[16], the Babylonian Ramman[17], and the Hittite god who in Roman times figures as Iupiter Heliopolitanus[18] or Iupiter Dolichenus[19].

Of all the attributes ascribed to Zeus the most formidable was unico nelle religioni monoteistiche). The views of Foucart and Pettazzoni are summarised and criticised by W. Schmidt The Origin and Growth of Religion trans. H. J. Rose London 1931 pp. 209—217. See also Frazer Worship of Nature i. 19—61 (The Worship of the Sky among the Aryan peoples of Antiquity), 62—73 (The Worship of the Sky among non-Aryan peoples of Antiquity), 74—88 (The Worship of the Sky among the civilized peoples of the Far East), 89—315 (The Worship of the Sky in Africa).

[1] Supra ii. 876 n. 1. [2] Supra ii. 875 n. 1. [3] Supra i. 186 ff.
[4] Supra i. 347 ff. [5] Supra i. 188 ff. [6] Supra i. 353 ff.
[7] Supra i. 8, 191 f. [8] Supra i. 190.
[9] Supra i. 192, 400 n. 6, cp. ii. 1122 n. 9.
[10] Supra i. 232 f. fig. 171, b and pl. xxi, iii. 558. [11] Supra i. 166.
[12] Supra i. 428 ff. [13] Supra i. 633 ff., iii. 606, 615 ff.
[14] Supra i. 348 ff. [15] Supra i. 390 ff., cp. ii. 275, 287 n. 2, 1184.
[16] Supra i. 549 ff., 581 f. [17] Supra i. 576 ff., 633 ff.
[18] Supra i. 550 ff., 576 ff. [19] Supra i. 604 ff.

the thunderbolt. Yet its terrors were not wholly terrific[1]. Zeus might fall as a lightning-flash, but the Dióbletos or 'Zeus-struck' man was deemed divine and even treated as a god. The spot where the fatal bolt fell was elýsion and its victim enelýsios, literally 'in Elysium[2].' He had entered upon the 'road of Zeus,' the Elysian track, which led up the steeps of heaven and was identified by Pythagorean sages with the Milky Way[3]. He, like Er son of Armenios[4], could stand at last on the axis of the world, the central column supporting the very sky, there to witness all that heaven could show[5]. The celestial ascent was sometimes conceived as a ladder[6]—a conception which begins with Egyptian amulets[7], continues with Thracian and Orphic beliefs[8], only to end with the mediaeval Ladder of Salvation[9]. Again, Zeus armed with a thunderbolt in either hand, a primitive storm-god, at Olympia was sublimated into Zeus Hórkios, 'God of Oaths,' a terror merely to perjurers[10], just as on Italian soil Dius Fidius, 'the Cleaver,' a lightning-god, became, thanks to popular etymology, a peaceful 'Protector of Pledges[11].' In general it may be said that from the sixth century onwards the thunderbolt of Zeus begins to be replaced by his sceptre[12], surviving mainly as a symbol of omnipotence[13] or continuous divine activity[14]. Indeed, under Constantine its old Anatolian form, the lábrys, was deliberately re-shaped into the labarum and adopted as the emblem of the all-conquering faith[15].

Omnipotence leads on towards omniscience and omnibenevolence. A Hellenistic type of Zeus enthroned and sceptred shows the god with serious deep-set eyes, brow furrowed by thought, and head propped on hand in an attitude of serene[16] meditation. We can hardly fail to recognise the insight and foresight of the divine ruler, who takes a kindly interest in the affairs of men. His mood, best described by the Greek term prónoia or the Latin providentia, comes close to our own conception of Providence[17]. Thus in imperial times Iupiter Conservator extends a strong protecting arm above the puppet emperor[18], while his Syrian counterpart Iupiter

[1] Supra ii. 852. [2] Supra ii. 22 f. [3] Supra ii. 36 ff.
[4] Supra ii. 54, 114. [5] Supra ii. 44, 108, infra iii. 974. [6] Supra ii. 125 ff.
[7] Supra ii. 125 ff. [8] Supra ii. 129 ff. [9] Supra ii. 136 ff.
[10] Supra ii. 722, 726 f. [11] Supra ii. 724 ff. n. 0. [12] Supra ii. 722, 731 ff.
[13] Supra ii. 852. [14] Supra ii. 854. [15] Supra ii. 601 ff.
[16] Mr H. Mattingly draws my attention to the fact that the same gesture of head propped on hand occurs also in the Roman numismatic type of a seated Securitas (Stevenson—Smith—Madden Dict. Rom. Coins p. 726, J. Ilberg in Roscher Lex. Myth. iv. 595 ff., Hartmann in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. ii A. 1000 ff.).
[17] Supra i. 24 ff., ii. 762 f. [18] Supra i. 276 n. 5 fig. 201.

Dolichenus 'Best and Greatest, the Eternal' is hailed as 'the Preserver of the Whole Sky, a Godhead Pre-eminent, a Provider Invincible[1].'

More and more, as time went on and men's sympathies widened, the cosmic character of such a god tended to find expression in poetry, philosophy, and art. Homer began his Iliad with the parenthetic hint that its plot was but the progressive fulfilment of the will of Zeus[2]. Sophokles[3] ended his Women of Trachis with the reflexion—

In all which happenings is nought but Zeus—and we are left with that impressive monosyllable ringing in our ears. An Orphic fragment paraphrased by Platon said:

Zeus first, Zeus midmost, Zeus hath all things made[4].

And later Orphists under Stoic influence, or Stoics with a leaning towards Orphism[5], expanded the same theme into hymns of a definitely pantheistic sort[6]. Theokritos[7] and Aratos[8] have echoes of the opening line, which for Cicero[9], Virgil[10], Ovid[11], and Calpurnius Siculus[12] passes into a poetical commonplace. Aratos[13] in his great exordium dwells on the ubiquity and helpfulness of the god. The haunts of men are 'full of Zeus'—all the streets, all the markets, the sea and its harbours. Zeus distinguishes the seasons by his signs in the sky above and thereby determines the labours of the earth beneath. And all this with beneficent purpose. So men do well to worship him ever first and last; and the poet in a burst of gratitude cries—

Hail, Father, mighty marvel, mighty boon!

Even the dry-as-dust pedant with his faulty philology attempts to persuade us that Zeus gets his name Zēna as being the giver of [1] Supra i. 608, 633.

[2] Supra i. 14 n. 1.

[3] Soph. Trach. 1278 κοὐδὲν τούτων ὅ τι μὴ Ζεύς.

[4] Supra ii. 1033 n. 1.

[5] R. Harder 'Prismata' 1 in Philologus N.F. 1930 xxxix. 243—247 argues that Orph. frag. 21a Kern is not only not early (Kern), nor even merely Stoic in tone (Wilamowitz), but is actually a Stoic forgery (Class. Quart. 1931 xxv. 216).

[6] Supra ii. 1027 f.

[7] Theokr. 17. 1 f. ἐκ Διὸς ἀρχώμεσθα καὶ ἐς Δία λήγετε, Μοῖσαι, | ἀθανάτων τὸν ἄριστον ἐπὴν κλείωμεν ἀοιδαῖς.

[8] Arat. phaen. 1 ἐκ Διὸς ἀρχώμεσθα (supra ii p. vi).

[9] Cic. de legg. 2. 7 'a Iove Musarum primordia'—sicut in Aratio carmine orsi sumus.

[10] Verg. ecl. 3. 60 ab Iove principium, Musae, Aen. 7. 219 ab Iove principium generis.

[11] Ov. met. 10. 148 f. 'ab Iove, Musa parens,—cedunt Iovis omnia regno— | carmina nostra move.'

[12] Calp. Sic. 4. 82 ab Iove principium, si quis canit aethera, sumat.

[13] Arat. phaen. 1 ff. (supra ii p. vi).

'life' to all things[1], and Día as being the cause 'through' which they came to be[2]. Zeus enthroned as cosmic lord is a frequent theme of imperial art. So he appears, surrounded by all the host of heaven, in a fine ceiling-fresco of Nero's Golden House[3]. And analogous designs were used to decorate minor works of art, an onyx phalera[4], a terra-cotta lamp[5], or what not? Anything circular would serve. Thus handsome bronze coins struck at Nikaia in Bithynia[6] and Perinthos in Thrace[7] show Zeus seated in the midst with smaller flanking figures of Sun and Moon, Earth and Sea, the whole enclosed by a broad band exhibiting all the signs of the zodiac—an irrefutable witness of his claim to world-dominion. Martianus Capella had indeed ample warrant for his hymn to Iupiter as ruler of the starry universe[8]. Small wonder that the type of the infant Zeus seated on a globe surrounded by stars[9] was adapted for figures of the Father and the Son in church-mosaics of the fourth and following centuries[10], or that the similar type of Zeus enthroned with the globe as his footstool[11] is found on a fourth-century gold-glass simply lettered CRISTVS[12].

Meantime morality was on the march, indeed was on the war-path. But reflexion shows that patristic satire on the chronique scandaleuse of Zeus[13], however excusable in the heat of controversy, is not to be taken too seriously. It consists mainly of misdirected attacks on the alleged amours of the god with this, that, or the other mortal maiden. But in reality such liaisons point to the legitimate union of the sky-god with the earth-goddess, who in divers places had divers names and on occasion faded from goddess to heroine[14]. It might even be urged that this notorious characteristic of Zeus was a virtue rather than a vice, proving his permanence and adaptability in the face of changing conditions. The earth-mother 'of many names[15]' took on a score of shapes: the sky-father remained constant to her in them all.

It was precisely this moral stability that made Zeus, not merely the wedding-god par excellence on account of his own hieròs gámos[16],

[1] Supra i. 29 n. 4, ii. 259 n. 0, 855 n. 2, 1102 n. 8.
[2] Supra i. 29 n. 4, ii. 855 n. 2.
[3] Supra iii. 39 pl. v.
[4] Supra iii. 39 ff. fig. 10.
[5] Supra iii. 41 with fig. 15.
[6] Supra i. 752 fig. 551.
[7] Supra i. 752 f. fig. 552.
[8] Supra i. 757.
[9] Supra i. 51 f. figs. 27 and 28.
[10] Supra i. 50 f. figs. 23 and 24.
[11] Supra i. 47 with fig. 20.
[12] Supra i. 49 fig. 22.
[13] Supra i. 167 n. 1.
[14] Supra i. 779 f.
[15] Aisch. P.v. 210 (cited supra ii. 176 n. 1).
[16] Souid. s.v. Τελεία· Ἥρα Τελεία καὶ Ζεὺς Τέλειος ἐτιμῶντο ἐν τοῖς γάμοις, ὡς πρυτάνεις ὄντες τῶν γάμων. τέλος δὲ ὁ γάμος. διὸ καὶ προτέλεια ἐκαλεῖτο ἡ θυσία ἡ πρὸ τῶν γάμων

but also the confessed patron of law and order. For as husband of Ge Thémis[1] he was the natural guardian of thémistes or 'precedents[2]' and the parent of Díke[3] 'the Right Way of Things,' that is 'Justice[4].' It was his to judge between the lawful and the lawless, whether human or otherwise. Archilochos of Paros as far back as the middle of the seventh century[5] could say:

> Zeus, Father Zeus, thou reign'st in heaven above
> Watching the works of mortal men,
> Knavish or just; yea, all the beasts that move
> Have rights and wrongs within thy ken[6].

There are grounds for suspecting that the laws inscribed on Solon's kýrbeis and áxones were held to be the very voice of Zeus[7]. Aischylos[8] makes Dike a close ally of her father. Sophokles[9] speaks of her as seated at his side[10]. Euripides in the Melanippe γινομένη=schol. Aristoph. thesm. 973. Cp. Dion. Hal. ars rhet. 2. 2 Ζεὺς γὰρ καὶ Ἥρα, πρῶτοι ζευγνύντες τε καὶ συνδυάζοντες· οὕτω τοι ὁ μὲν καὶ Πατὴρ καλεῖται πάντων, ἡ δὲ Ζυγία, ἀπὸ τοῦ ζευγνύναι τὸ θῆλυ τῷ ἄρρενι (Poll. 3. 38 mentions Hera Τελεία, but omits Zeus). U. von Wilamowitz-Moellendorff Der Glaube der Hellenen Berlin 1932 ii. 143 n. 2 cites Inscr. Gr. sept. i no. 3217 (a fragment of white marble from Orchomenos in Boiotia) [·····Διὶ Τελ]είῳ, Ἥρᾳ Τελείᾳ as an inscription relating to a marriage. See further A. Klinz ΙΕΡΟΣ ΓΑΜΟΣ Halis Saxonum 1933 p. 109 ff.

[1] Supra ii. 37, 267, 841. Hence, presumably, Plutarch's Zeus Θεμίστιος (infra p. 964 n. 2).

[2] Il. 1. 237 ff. νῦν αὖτέ μιν νῖες Ἀχαιῶν | ἐν παλάμῃς φορέουσι δικασπόλοι, οἵ τε θέμιστας | πρὸς Διὸς εἰρύαται, Od. 16. 403 εἰ μέν κ' αἰνήσωσι Διὸς μεγάλοιο θέμιστες.

[3] Supra i. 755 n. 10. See Hes. o.d. 256 ff., Aisch. s.c.Th. 662, cho. 949 f., Eur. frag. 150 Dindorf=151 Nauck[2] ap. Stob. ecl. 1. 3. 23 p. 56, 19 ff. Wachsmuth.

[4] H. Usener Götternamen Bonn 1896 p. 180 f., O. Waser in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. v. 574, R. Hirzel Themis, Dike und Verwandtes Leipzig 1907 pp. 56—227 (the fullest treatment), Harrison Themis[2] p. 516 ff.

[5] W. Christ Geschichte der griechischen Litteratur[6] München 1912 i. 184.

[6] Archil. frag. 88 Bergk[4], 88 Edmonds, 94 Diehl[2] ap. Stob. ecl. 1. 3. 34 p. 58, 11 ff. Wachsmuth (cp. Clem. Al. strom. 5. 14 p. 412, 3 ff. Stählin (Euseb. praep. ev. 13. 13. 54)) 'ὦ Ζεῦ, πάτερ Ζεῦ, σὸν μὲν οὐρανοῦ κράτος, | σὺ δ' ἔργ' ἐπ' ἀνθρώπων ὁρᾷς | λεωργὰ καὶ θεμιστά, σοὶ δὲ θηρίων | ὕβρις τε καὶ δίκη μέλει' with R. Hirzel op. cit. p. 218 n. 5. P. Shorey in J. Hastings Encyclopædia of Religion and Ethics Edinburgh 1918 x. 801 'In a fable of Archilochus there is an appeal to Zeus who regards both the Hybris and the Dike of beasts. This may be little more than the literary tone of Kipling's "law of the pack" and Aristophanes' "laws of the birds" [av. 1343 ff.]. Pindar echoes Hesiod with the compound beasts "unwitting-of-justice" [Nem. 1. 63 θῆρας ἀϊδροδίκας]. Anaximandros even spoke of all individual things as paying the penalty for their injustice (frag. 9 Diels[3] ap. Simplic. phys. 24. 13 (Theophrast. phys. opin. frag. 2 in H. Diels Doxographi Graeci Berolini 1879 p. 476, 8 ff.) ἐξ ὧν δὲ ἡ γένεσίς ἐστι τοῖς οὖσι, καὶ τὴν φθορὰν εἰς ταῦτα γίνεσθαι κατὰ τὸ χρεών· διδόναι γὰρ αὐτὰ δίκην καὶ τίσιν ἀλλήλοις τῆς ἀδικίας κατὰ τὴν τοῦ χρόνου τάξιν).

[7] Supra ii. 1093 n. 1.

[8] Aisch. cho. 244 f.

[9] Soph. Trach. 279, O.C. 1381 f.

[10] O. Kern Orphicorum fragmenta Berolini 1922 p. 196 thinks that Sophokles was here following Orphic doctrine (infra p. 950 n. 4).

Bound[1] scoffs at the crude Hesiodic[2] idea of Dike acting as court-assessor to Zeus, but in the Troiades[3] still couples his name with hers:

> O Earth's Upbearer on the Earth enthroned,
> Whoe'er thou mayest be, hard to guess or know,
> Zeus, be thou Nature's Law or Mind of Man,
> To thee I pray; for stepping silently
> Thou lead'st all mortal things on the path of Justice.

Orphic teaching represented both Dike[4] and Nomos[5] as paredroi of Zeus. And the eclectic author of the pseudo-Aristotelian work On the Universe (s. i B.C.)[6], after quoting with approval an Orphic hymn to Zeus, concludes his treatise with the words[7]:

'God, then, as the old story has it, holding the beginning and the end and the middle of all things that exist, proceeding by a straight path in the course of

[1] Eur. frag. 506 Nauck[2] ap. Stob. ecl. i. 3. 14[a] p. 54, 12 ff. Wachsmuth δοκεῖτε πηδᾶν τἀδικήματ' εἰς θεοὺς | πτεροῖσι, κἄπειτ' ἐν Διὸς δέλτου πτυχαῖς | γράφειν τιν' αὐτά, Ζῆνα δ' εἰσρῳῶντά νιν | θνητοῖς δικάζειν; οὐδ' ὁ πᾶς ἂν οὐρανὸς | Διὸς γράφοντος τὰς βροτῶν ἁμαρτίας | ἐξαρκέσειεν οὐδ' ἐκεῖνος ἂν σκοπῶν | πέμπειν ἑκάστῳ ζημίαν· ἀλλ' ἡ Δίκη | ἐνταῦθά ποῦστιν ἐγγύς, εἰ βούλεσθ' ὁρᾶν. Cp. Deut. 30. 11 ff. 'For this commandment which I command thee this day....It is not in heaven, that thou shouldest say, Who shall go up for us to heaven, and bring it unto us, and make us to hear it, that we may do it?... But the word is very nigh unto thee, in thy mouth, and in thy heart, that thou mayest do it.'

[2] Hes. o.d. 258 ff.

[3] Eur. Tro. 884 ff. ΕΚ. ὦ γῆς ὄχημα κἀπὶ γῆς ἔχων ἕδραν, | ὅστις ποτ' εἶ σύ, δυστόπαστος εἰδέναι, | Ζεύς, εἴτ' ἀνάγκη φύσεος εἴτε νοῦς βροτῶν, | προσηυξάμην σε· πάντα γὰρ δι' ἀψόφου | βαίνων κελεύθου κατὰ δίκην τὰ θνήτ' ἄγεις.

[4] Orph. frag. 23 Kern ap. pseudo-Dem. c. Aristog. i. 11 (on the spurious character of this speech see W. Christ Geschichte der griechischen Litteratur[6] München 1912 i. 602 n. 1) καὶ τὴν ἀπαραίτητον καὶ σεμνὴν Δίκην, ἣν ὁ τὰς ἀγιωτάτας ἡμῖν τελετὰς καταδείξας Ὀρφεὺς παρὰ τὸν τοῦ Διὸς θρόνον φησὶ καθημένην πάντα τὰ τῶν ἀνθρώπων ἐφορᾶν, εἰς αὐτὸν ἕκαστον νομίσαντα βλέπειν οὕτω δεῖ ψηφίζεσθαι, φυλαττόμενον καὶ προορώμενον μὴ καταισχῦναι ταύτην, κ.τ.λ., cp. Orph. h. Dik. 62. 1 ff. ὄμμα Δίκης μέλπω πανδερκέος, ἀγλαομόρφου, | ἣ καὶ Ζηνὸς ἄνακτος ἐπὶ θρόνον ἱερὸν ἵζει | οὐρανόθεν καθορῶσα βίον θνητῶν πολυφύλων, | κ.τ.λ.

See further G. Caramia 'Chi è la dea ΒΑΣΙΛΕΙΑ negli Uccelli di Aristofane?' in the Rivista Indo-Greco-Italica di filologia, lingua, antichità 1925 ix. 203 ff., who concludes that Basileia (supra p. 60 n. 5) was Dike the πάρεδρος Διός (Soph. O.C. 1381 f., Arrian. 4. 9. 7), and F. Ribezzo 'La Δίκη πάρεδρος Διός degli Orfici' in the same Rivista 1925 ix. 209 f., who regards the three functions of Basileia—εὐβουλία, εὐνομία, σωφροσύνη (Aristoph. av. 1539 f.)—as those of an Orphic Dike.

[5] Orph. frag. 160 Kern ap. Prokl. in Plat. Alcib. 1 p. 499, 2 Cousin[2] πάλιν, ἐπειδήπερ ἡ πρὸ τοῦ κόσμου Δίκη συνέπεται τῷ Διί (πάρεδρος γὰρ ὁ Νόμος τοῦ Διός, ὡς φησιν ὁ Ὀρφεύς) and ap. Prokl. in Plat. Tim. i. 315, 8 ff. Diehl ἐν δὲ τῷ Γοργίᾳ (523 A) συντάττων τε αὐτὸν (sc. τὸν Δία) τοῖς Κρονίδαις καὶ ἐξαιρῶν ἀπ' αὐτῶν, ἵνα καὶ πρὸ τῶν τριῶν ᾖ καὶ μετέχηται ὑπ' αὐτῶν, καὶ τὸν Νόμον αὐτῷ συγκαθιδρύων, ὥσπερ καὶ ὁ Ὀρφεύς· κατὰ γὰρ τὰς ὑποθήκας τῆς Νυκτὸς καὶ παρ' ἐκείνῳ πάρεδρον ποιεῖται τὸν Νόμον· ἔτι δὲ τὴν Δίκην ὅλην ὁπαδὸν αὐτοῦ τιθέμενος ἐν Νόμοις (4. 716 A), ὥσπερ καὶ ὁ θεολόγος.

[6] W. Christ Geschichte der griechischen Litteratur[6] München 1912 i. 736, München 1920 ii. 1. 376.

[7] [Aristot.] de mundo 7. 401 b 24 ff. trans. E. S. Forster.

nature brings them to accomplishment; and with him ever follows Justice, the avenger of all that falls short of the Divine Law—Justice, in whom may he that is to be happy be from the very first a blessed and happy partaker!'

Plutarch[1] in his address To an uneducated Ruler is dissatisfied with such conventional views and protests that Dike is no mere páredros of Zeus but must, like Themis and the highest Nomos[2], be frankly identified with Zeus himself:

'Now it is true that Anaxarchus, trying to console Alexander in his agony of mind over his killing of Cleitus, said that the reason why Justice and Right are seated by the side of Zeus is that men may consider every act of a king as righteous and just; but neither correct nor helpful were the means he took in endeavouring to heal the king's remorse for his sin, by encouraging him to further acts of the same sort. But if a guess about this matter is proper, I should say that Zeus does not have Justice to sit beside him, but is himself Justice and Right and the oldest and most perfect of laws; but the ancients state it in that way in their writings and teachings, to imply that without Justice not even Zeus can rule well.'

When Antiochos i of Kommagene called himself by the bombastic title Theòs Díkaios Epiphanés, 'the Just God Made Manifest,' he was perhaps posing as Zeus Oromásdes incarnate[3]. In late times Zeus acquired the appellation Dikaiósynos as Judge of the just and unjust[4], and at Karousa in Paphlagonia was worshipped as Dikaiósynos Mégas[5].

But, before perfection can be reached, Justice must be tempered with Clemency, Mercy, and Love. Of which kindlier qualities there are stray hints and previsions in the cults of Zeus Meilíchios[6], Zeus Hikésios[7], and Zeus Phílios[8]. Particularly impressive for its moral implicates is the attitude of Zeus towards the man-slayer. It would seem that the bloodguilty person, who fled from the vengeance of his victim's kin and appeared in some far off village as a suppliant stranger, was—according to ancient Greek usage—believed to be under the special protection of a divine escort[9], nay more, was [1] Plout. ad princ. inerudit. 4 trans. H. N. Fowler.

[2] Pind. frag. 169 Bergk[4], 169 Schroeder ap. Plat. Gorg. 484 B Νόμος ὁ πάντων βασιλεὺς | θνατῶν τε καὶ ἀθανάτων | ἄγει δικαιῶν τὸ βιαιότατον ὑπερτάτᾳ χειρί, Eur. Hec. 798 ff. ἡμεῖς μὲν οὖν δοῦλοί τε κἀσθενεῖς ἴσως· | ἀλλ' οἱ θεοὶ σθένουσι χὠ κείνων κρατῶν | Νόμος· νόμῳ γὰρ τοὺς θεοὺς ἡγούμεθα | καὶ ζῶμεν ἄδικα καὶ δικαι' ὡρισμένοι, Plat. epist. 8. 354 E—355 A θεὸς δὲ ἀνθρώποις σώφροσι νόμος, ἄφροσι δὲ ἡδονή, Dion Chrys. or. 75 p. 267 Dindorf οὗτος ὁ τὴν θάλατταν καθαίρων, ὁ τὴν γῆν ἥμερον ποιῶν, ὁ τοῦ Διὸς ἐτεῶς υἱός, ὁ τὴν ἀήττητον καὶ ἀνυπέρβλητον ἰσχὺν ἔχων (sc. ὁ Νόμος). See further R. Hirzel Themis, Dike und Verwandtes Leipzig 1907 p. 386.

[3] Supra i. 742 n. 5. [4] Supra ii. 1092 n. 8. [5] Ib.

[6] Supra ii. 1091 ff. (Append. M). [7] Supra ii. 1093 n. 1, 1097 n. 2.

[8] Supra ii. 1160 ff. (Append. N). Supra ii. 1097 n. 0.

originally regarded as himself a potential god[1]. Hence we hear, not only of Zeus Hikésios 'the God of Suppliants,' but also of Zeus Hikétas, himself 'the Suppliant[2],' and even of Zeus alástor, Zeus 'the curse[3],'—a daring and desperate identification of the deity with the sinner. These things are strangely suggestive. Simple souls dwelling round the Mediterranean were prepared to believe that any day a god might appear in their midst in the likeness of a man[4]. Why not as 'the man Christ Jesus[5]'? Further, it would not stagger them to think that such an one might somehow condescend to identify himself with the sinner and even to 'become a curse for us[6].'

Other 'august anticipations[7]' may be detected, by those who have ears to hear, in all parts of the ancient world. If for cultural and religious purposes Greece as a whole be divided into three zones, northern, central, and southern, it will naturally be found that of these the first and third were to a large extent independent and pursued their own lines of development, while the second lay open to influences received from either side. But in all three the same upward trend is observable.

Thus in the north the Thraco-Phrygians[8] recognised a sky-god Dios, an earth-goddess Zemela, and their offspring Dios Nŷsos, Dios 'the Younger.' The son was held to be a rebirth of the father[9], whose name and nature he duplicated. Hence the ill-understood association of the Anatolian mother-goddess with a partner conceived at once as her husband and her child[10]—Kybele, for example, having a youthful consort invoked as Áttis, 'Daddy,' or Pápas, 'Papa[11].' And hence too the success with which Christianity was propagated in Phrygia and Thrace among a people who already believed in a Father manifesting himself anew in the person of his Son[12]. Even the rites and formulae of Attis might pass muster as quasi-Christian[13].

In central Greece Dios, Zemela, and Dios Nŷsos became naturalised as Zeus, Semele, and Dionysos[14]. But again there were [1] Supra ii. 1096 n. 4. [2] Supra ii. 1096 n. 1.

[3] Supra ii. 1098 n. 5, cp. ib. nn. 4 and 6.
[4] Supra ii. 1096 n. 4. [5] 1 Tim. 2. 5. [6] Gal. 3. 13.
[7] R. Browning Paracelsus 5 sub fin. 'But in completed man begins anew | A tendency to God. Prognostics told | Man's near approach; so in man's self arise | August anticipations, symbols, types | Of a dim splendour ever on before | In that eternal circle life pursues.'
[8] Supra ii. 277 ff., 842. [9] Supra ii. 294 with n. 1, 842.
[10] Supra ii. 294, 842. [11] Supra ii. 292 ff., 842.
[12] Supra ii. 288 ff., 303, 842. [13] Supra ii. 303 ff. [14] Supra ii. 277 ff., 842.

obvious points of contact between Dionysiac and Christian practice. The former like the latter made much of collective emotion[1], treated the inspired devotee as one with his god[2], transcended the narrow limits of Hellenism[3], and taught the mystery of life through death[4]. It is notorious that the Christus Patiens, a play written in the middle ages on the supreme tragedy of Calvary[5], was composed largely of lines and half-lines culled from the Bacchae[6].

In the south we have a similar but older triad—the sky-god Kronos[7], the earth-goddess Rhea[8], and their youthful son Zagreus or the Cretan Zeus, whose death and resurrection were annually celebrated as a means of reviving the life of all that lives[9]. Zeus Idaîos in the fifth century had mystics, who by their sacraments assimilated themselves to their god and thereafter, clad in white raiment, led a life of ceremonial purity[10]. Zeus Astérios of Gortyna seems early to have taken on a solar character, but in the Hellenistic age is viewed as god of the starry sky[11]. Aratos, when about to describe the whole series of constellations, starts with the Bears and tells how once in Crete they hid the infant Zeus in a cave and nurtured him there for a year, while the Dictaean Kouretes were deceiving Kronos[12]. Now Aratos was a native of Soloi or, some [1] Supra i. 667, 672, 688, etc.

[2] Supra i. 648 ff., 673, 675 ff., 705.

[3] The Dionysiac nomenclature was syncretistic. Diónysos came from Thrace (supra i. 695, 780, ii. 268, etc.). Bákchos perhaps came from Egypt, where at Hermonthis men worshipped the bull Bakha (supra i. 436 ff., ii. 268 n. 4). Zagreús probably came from Mt Zágros or Zágron in Assyria, passing first through Phoinike and then through Crete (supra i. 651, ii. 268 n. 4). Thus elements drawn from north, south, and east combined to form a religion of well-nigh universal appeal.

[4] Dionysos, the life-god of the Thracians (supra ii. 1024 f.), dies only to rise again. Those who took part in his drómenon, those who witnessed his drâma, thereby became partakers of his immortality (supra i. 663 f., 673).

[5] K. Krumbacher Geschichte der byzantinischen Litteratur[2] München 1897 p. 746 ff., W. Christ Geschichte der griechischen Litteratur[6] München 1912 i. 353 n. 12, München 1924 ii. 2. 1420 n. 2.

[6] K. Krumbacher op. cit.[2] p. 746 'Ein volles Drittel der 2640 Verse (ausser den vereinzelten Anapästen V. 1461 ff. nur Trimeter), aus welchen das Drama besteht, ist fremdes Eigentum. Den grössten Teil dieses Lehngutes lieferten sieben Dramen des Euripides, nämlich Hekabe, Medea, Orestes, Hippolytos, Troades, Rhesos und Bacchen; dazu kommen einige Dutzend Verse aus dem Prometheus und Agamemnon des Aeschylos und aus der Kassandra des Lykophron.' As to the Bacchae, Sir J. E. Sandys in his edition of that play (ed. 3 Cambridge 1892 p. lxxxv) says: 'a large number of its lines were appropriated by the compiler of the dreary cento known as the Christus Patiens, once attributed to Gregory of Nazianzus.'

[7] Supra ii. 548 ff. [8] Supra i. 649 n. 3, ii. 515, 548.

[9] Supra i. 646. [10] Supra i. 648. [11] Supra i. 547.

[12] Arat. phaen. 30 ff. (cited supra ii. 928 n. 0).

said, of Tarsos[1]. It is therefore of interest to note that Paul of Tarsos in his speech before the Areiopagos actually quotes the words used by his fellow-countryman with regard to the Cretan Zeus—

'For we are also his offspring[2],' and in the same context cites, perhaps from a lost poem by Epimenides[3], Minos' panegyric of the god—

'in him we live, and move, and have our being.'

Paul must have been struck, and struck forcibly, by the Cretan parallel—a divine child born to be king, hidden in a cave from his enemies, apparently weak and helpless, yet able to control the stars in their courses, one with whom his worshippers the world over could claim kinship, while dependent on him for life, and breath, and all things[4]. Truly the cult of Zeus Astérios has once more landed us on the very confines of Christendom.

Proofs might be multiplied, but I have said enough to show that the physical basis of the cult of Zeus involved mental, moral, and spiritual issues, which themselves rose to great heights and were prophetic of even greater things to come.

Many, if not most, of these sublimer aspects were caught and canonized when Pheidias at the very zenith of his fame made his statue of Zeus Olýmpios for the fifth-century temple in the Áltis[5]. For a detailed description of it we are in the main dependent on the dry paragraphs of Pausanias[6], eked out by allusions elsewhere[7]. It appears that the god, a colossal figure in gold and ivory, sat enthroned with a Victory likewise of ivory and gold, bearing a fillet and wearing a wreath, in his right hand and a sceptre, embellished with various metals[8] and topped by an eagle, in his left. He had an olive-wreath on his head and golden sandals on his feet, his himátion

[1] G. Knaack in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. ii. 391 f. ('Wahrscheinlich war die Familie...von Tarsos nach Soloi übergesiedelt; deshalb wohl nennt Asklepiades von Myrlea Tarsos als Geburtsort (Vit. 1 p. 52, 5 [p. 76, 4 ff. Maass Ἀσκληπιάδης δὲ ὁ Μυρλεανὸς ἐν τῷ ιά Περὶ γραμματικῶν Ταρσέα φησὶν αὐτὸν γεγονέναι ἀλλ' οὐ Σολέα = Frag. hist. Gr. iii. 299 Müller]) '), B. A. Müller De Asclepiade Myrleano Leipzig 1903 p. 43.

[2] Acts 17. 28 (cited supra i. 664 n. 3).

[3] Supra i. 157 n. 3, 663 n. 2, 664 n. 1.

[4] Supra i. 664 f.

[5] Supra ii. 757 f.

[6] Paus. 5. 11. 1—11.

[7] Overbeck Schriftquellen p. 125 ff. nos. 692—695, 697—754. A shorter set of extracts, with English rendering and brief notes, will be found in H. Stuart Jones Select Passages from Ancient Writers illustrative of the History of Greek Sculpture London 1895 p. 84 ff. nos. 111—114.

[8] Paus. 5. 11. 1 τῇ δὲ ἀριστερᾷ τοῦ θεοῦ χειρὶ ἐνεστι (so Porson for χαρίεν ἐστι codd.) σκῆπτρον μετάλλοις τοῖς πᾶσιν ἠνθισμένον.

of gold being inwrought with living creatures and lily-flowers[1]. His throne, decked with gold and jewels, ebony and ivory, had upon it numerous figures painted and carved. It was surmounted by groups representing the daughters of Zeus—three Charites[2] and three Horai[3]. Each throne-leg showed four dancing Victories above, and two others below[4]. On the two front legs were Sphinxes grasping Theban children[5], and beneath them Apollon and Artemis shooting down the Niobids[6]. The throne-legs were connected by four bars. The front bar carried seven, originally eight, figures illustrative of ancient athletic contests[7]. The other three bars had, all told, twenty-nine figures—Herakles and his allies, Theseus among them, engaged in fighting the Amazons. The throne was supported not only by four legs, but by four pillars between them. The space beneath it, however, could not be entered, being pro-

[1] Ib. τῷ δὲ ἱματίῳ ζῴδιά τε καὶ τῶν ἀνθῶν τὰ κρίνα ἐστὶν ἐμπεποιημένα. The ζῴδια perhaps typified fertility in the animal world; the κρίνα (supra i. 622 ff.), in the vegetable world.

[2] Supra i. 155.

[3] Supra ii. 37 n. 1, 94 n. 2.

[4] H. Bulle in Roscher Lex. Myth. iii. 328 and 338 ('Es ist das erste bezeugte Beispiel einer ausgedehnteren dekorativen Verwendung der Niken an einem monumentalen Kunstwerke, wofür die zahlreichen kleinen dekorativen Bronzefigürchen von der athenischen Akropolis und die Verdoppelung der Nike auf Vasenbildern kaum als Vorläufer angeführt werden dürfen.' Etc.).

[5] F. Eichler 'Thebanische Sphinx' in the Jahresh. d. oest. arch. Inst. 1937 xxx. 75—110 figs. 19—32 has made it probable that two fragmentary groups in a blackish stone ('Diabastaff ("Schalstein")') found by the Austrians at Ephesos and now in the Depot at Vienna were copied from one of the ebony (?) arm-supports of Pheidias' Zeus.

[6] Supra ii. 475 n. 7.

[7] Paus. 5. 11. 3 adds that the man binding his head with a fillet was said to resemble Pantarkes (cp. 6. 10. 6, 6. 15. 2), an Elean youth who won a victory in the wrestling-match of Ol. 86 (436—433 B.C.) and was the παιδικά of Pheidias.

Later writers affirm that Pheidias inscribed Παντάρκης καλός on the finger of Zeus (Clem. Al. protr. 4. 53. 4 p. 41, 18 ff. Stählin, Arnob. adv. nat. 6. 13, Phot. lex. and Souid. s.v. 'Ραμνουσία Νέμεσις). But Gregory of Nazianzos tells the same tale of Athena Parthénos (Greg. Naz. poemata 1. 2. 10. 863 f. (xxxvii. 742 A Migne)); and Libanios, of Aphrodite (Liban. apʹ. schol. Clem. Al. protr. p. 313, 7 f. Stählin)—perhaps meaning the Nemesis of Rhamnous (supra i. 275) ἐν Ἀφροδίτης σχήματι (Phot. and Souid. locc. citt.). Lastly, Eunapios, if his text be sound (v. Acacii 177 p. 101 Boissonade μήτε Φειδίᾳ τοῦ τὸν δάκτυλον παραλαβεῖν καὶ τὸν παῖδα πρὸς ἔπαινον τῆς θεᾶς), appears to connect the incident with a goddess; but D. Wyttenbach's cj. πόδα for παῖδα may well be right (so J. F. Boissonade ed. 2 Parisiis 1878 and W. C. Wright ed. London 1922). On the whole, this famous anecdote, if not absolutely incredible (it might conceivably be argued that an Olympic victor was an embodiment of the Olympic god (Folk-Lore 1904 xv. 399 ff.), that Zeus mindful of Ganymedes might make allowance for the sculptor, that Παντάρκης could be explained away as πανταρκής—an epithet worthy of Zeus himself (Aisch. Pers. 855 f. πανταρκὴς ἀκάκας ἄμαχος βασιλεύς, | ἰσόθεος Δαρεῖος (cp. supra ii. 853), Hesych. s.vv. πανταρκέα· πᾶσι βοηθόν, πανταρκής· ὁ πᾶσιν αὐταρκῶν), etc.), is at least highly improbable.

In any case Pheidias' statue of a boy binding a fillet on his head (Paus. 6. 4. 5) is not ad rem (see Furtwängler Masterpieces of Gk. Sculpt. p. 40 n. 1, Sir J. G. Frazer and H. Hitzig—H. Blümner ad loc.).

tected by barriers like walls[1]. Of these, the one that faced the door was simply coloured blue; the rest were painted by Panainos the brother of Pheidias with pictures of Atlas and Herakles, Theseus and Peirithoös, Hellas and Salamis, Herakles and the Nemean lion, Aias and Kassandra, Hippodameia and Sterope, Prometheus and Herakles, Penthesileia and Achilles, and lastly two Hesperides. The footstool had golden lions[2] and a frieze showing Theseus'

[1] Paus. 5. 11. 4 f. ἀνέχουσι δὲ οὐχ οἱ πόδες μόνοι τὸν θρόνον, ἀλλὰ καὶ κίονες ἴσοι τοῖς ποσὶ μεταξὺ ἑστηκότες τῶν ποδῶν. ὑπελθεῖν δὲ οὐχ οἷόν τέ ἐστιν ὑπὸ τὸν θρόνον, ὥσπερ γε καὶ ἐν 'Αμύκλαις ἐς τὰ ἐντὸς τοῦ θρόνου παρερχόμεθα· ἐν 'Ολυμπίᾳ δὲ ἑρύματα τρόπον τοίχων πεποιημένα τὰ [δὲ (del. Koraïs)] ἀπείργοντά ἐστι. τούτων τῶν ἑρυμάτων ὅσον μὲν ἀπαντικρὺ τῶν θυρῶν ἐστιν, ἀλήλιπται κυανῷ μόνον, τὰ δὲ λοιπὰ αὐτῶν παρέχεται Παναίνου γραφάς.

The exact construction and decoration of the throne has long been a bone of contention among classical archaeologists: see e.g. H. Brunn 'La nascita di Venere sulla base del Giove fidiaco' in the Bull. d. Inst. 1849 p. 74 f. = id. Kleine Schriften Leipzig—Berlin 1905 ii. 247 f., id. 'Sul Trono del Giove di Fidia in Olimpia' in the Ann. d. Inst. 1851 xxiii. 108—117 pls. C and D (restorations by Stackelberg and Brunn) = id. Kleine Schriften ii. 248—254 figs. 28 and 29, A. S. Murray 'The barrier of the throne of Zeus at Olympia' in the Ath. Mitth. 1882 vii. 274—276, id. A History of Greek Sculpture London 1883 (id.[2] London 1890) ii. 125—127, R. Bohn in S. A. Ivanoff Architektonische Studien Berlin 1892 Heft 1, E. A. Gardner 'The Paintings by Panaenus on the Throne of the Olympian Zeus' in the Journ. Hell. Stud. 1894 xiv. 233—241, A. Trendelenburg in the Jahrb. d. kais. deutsch. arch. Inst. 1897 xii Arch. Anz. pp. 25—29, E. Petersen 'Die Geburt der Aphrodite' in the Röm. Mitth. 1899 xiv. 154—162, H. Blümner 'Die Gemälde des Panainos am Throne des olympischen Zeus' in the Jahrb. d. kais. deutsch. arch. Inst 1900 xv. 136—144, H. G. Evelyn-White 'The Throne of Zeus at Olympia' in the Journ. Hell. Stud. 1908 xxviii. 49—55, G. Pellegrini 'Il trono di Giove e le pitture di Paneno a Olimpia' in the Atti del reale Istituto veneto di scienze, lettere ed arti 1914—1915 lxxiv. 1555 ff., G. Q. Giglioli 'Il trono dello Zeus di Fidia in Olympia' in the Memorie della R. Accademia Nazionale dei Lincei Classe di scienze morali, storiche e filologiche Serie Quinta 1920 xvi. 219—374 with diagrams and 26 figs.

In my restoration (supra ii pl. xlvi) I have assumed (1) that the four bars (κανόνες), as the coins seem to show, carried small figures in the round (ἀγάλματα) representing athletes or combatants; (2) that the wall-like barriers (ἑρύματα), which prevented people from passing under the throne, were painted screens filling the four spaces between the legs (πόδες) and beneath the bars; (3) that the pillars (κίονες), equal in number to the legs (ἴσοι τοῖς ποσί), stood literally between the legs (μεταξὺ ἑστηκότες τῶν ποδῶν), connecting the bar as stylobate with the seat as architrave (for an earlier arrangement see supra p. 669 with fig. 480). This would not exclude the possibility that, as in the case of Athena Parthénos (G. Fougères L'Acropole d'Athènes: Le Parthénon Paris 1910 ii. 2 pl. 134, 1), there was a strong central pier or mast to ensure the stability of the whole colossal figure. Indeed, I suspect that a symbolic value was attached to this group of four pillars with a central stem. We have already seen (supra ii. 141 ff. fig. 83) a similar quincunx of columns apparently serving as a Sardinian model of the sky. The tomb of Porsenna at Clusium with its five pyramides and its superposed petasus (supra ii. 1219) is susceptible of the same interpretation. Recently L. Frobenius Kulturgeschichte Afrikas Zürich 1933 p. 173 ff. figs. 124—139 has cited interesting parallels from Yorubaland, Egypt, Crete (cp. supra ii. 193 n. 2 pl. xi), Etruria, etc., and in particular has shown that in Dahomey, Togoland, Yorubaland, and Assyria thrones for deities and kings often took this precise form. We may therefore justifiably conclude that, if Zeus sat on a seat supported by four pillars and a central stem, he did so in his character of sky-god.

[2] Lions were a traditional feature in the decoration of divine or royal thrones. The seat might be flanked by two lions (supra ii. 810 figs. 773 and 774, cp. i. 586 fig. 449) or contest with the Amazons. The pedestal was adorned with an elaborate composition in gold. In the centre Aphrodite rose from the foreparts of lions (i. 61 fig. 36), or it might have leonine legs (iii. 663 fig. 474, 664 fig. 475, 665 fig. 476, 668 fig. 480, 684 fig. 495, 716 fig. 530, 810 fig. 619) or leonine claws (i. 747 fig. 545, iii. 674 fig. 485, 680 fig. 491), or at least a footstool with leonine feet (i pl. i). And the usage could be traced further afield. Solomon's chryselephantine throne had lions standing beside the stays and on each of the six steps (1 Kings 10. 19 f.). Egyptian chairs of state often have leonine legs and arm-rests in the shape of lions (J. G. Wilkinson Manners and Customs of the Ancient Egyptians London 1837 ii. 196 with col. pl. 11). The finest example is the throne of Tut-ankh-Amen, which has leonine legs surmounted by lion-heads of chased gold (H. Carter—A. C. Mace The Tomb of Tut-ankh-Amen London 1923 i. 117 ff. with pls. 2, 62—64). In India too the lion is a symbol of royalty (A. de Gubernatis Zoological Mythology London 1872 ii. 153 ff.). Mr E. J. Thomas draws my attention to the Hindu Simhāsana or 'Lion-seat' (Sir M. Monier-Williams A Sanskrit-English Dictionary[2] Oxford 1899 p. 1213 'Siṁhâsana, n. "lion's-seat," "king's seat," "a throne," MBh.; Kāv. &c.'), the thirty-two statuettes of which related to king Bhoja thirty-two tales about their former owner king Vikrama (F. Edgerton 'A Hindu Book of Tales: the Vikramacarita' in the Am. Journ. Phil. 1912 xxxiii. 249 ff., id. Vikrama's Adventures or The Thirty-two Tales of the Throne Cambridge, Mass. 1926 vols. i and ii (Text, Translation, and Notes)). A Hittite god at Carchemish was enthroned on a pedestal representing two lions controlled by a servitor (G. Contenau Manuel d'archéologie orientale Paris 1931 iii. 1136 fig. 747). The archaic goddess from Prinia in Crete was similarly enthroned on a base adorned with a frieze of lionesses (E. Löwy in the Jahresh. d. oest. arch. Inst. 1909 xii. 246 fig. 123, V. Chapot in Daremberg—Saglio Dict. Ant. v. 280 with fig. 6917). The huge gilded throne in the Magnaura at Constantinople was guarded by lions with movable tongues, which could roar and lash their tails (Liudprand of Cremona antapodosis 6. 5 p. 154 J. Becker[3] (cxxxvi. 895 A—B Migne)).

Such parallels are hardly fortuitous. Behind them all we can dimly discern that Felidenkultur of which L. Frobenius Kulturgeschichte Afrikas Zürich 1933 pp. 63—101 figs. 1—20 has much to say. Among the Baganda and allied tribes of Bantu speech the lion is a royal totem (J. Roscoe The Baganda London 1911 pp. 128, 187), and it is believed that kings after death are reborn as lions, their mortal remains breeding maggots which turn into lion-cubs (J. Roscoe The Banyankole Cambridge 1923 pp. 27, 54, F. H. Melland In Witch-bound Africa London 1923 p. 151 (chiefs of the Ba-Kaonde)). The king, then, as such was a lion. And I should conjecture that his throne with leonine legs originally emphasised his claim by transforming the human biped into the animal quadruped. Relics of these forgotten or half-forgotten beliefs may be found in prophecies (Aisch. Ag. 1223 ff., 1258 ff.), dreams (Hdt. 6. 131, Plout. v. Per. 3, Artemid. oneirocr. 2. 12, 3. 66, Achmes oneirocr. 267 (ἐκ τῶν Περσῶν καὶ Αἰγυπτίων περὶ λέοντος [καὶ θηρῶν]) p. 218 ff. Drexl), and popular locutions (Aristoph. thesm. 514 λέων λέων σοι γέγονεν, cp. Plout. v. Lyc. 3 βασιλεὺς ἡμῖν γέγονεν). Much ancient lore gathered about the birth of Alexander (Plout. v. Alex. 2 ἡ μὲν οὖν νύμφη, πρὸ τῆς νυκτὸς ᾗ συνείρχθησαν εἰς τὸν θάλαμον, ἔδοξε βροντῆς γενομένης ἐμπεσεῖν αὐτῆς τῇ γαστρὶ κεραυνόν, ἐκ δὲ τῆς πληγῆς πολὺ πῦρ ἀναφθέν, εἶτα ῥηγνύμενον εἰς φλόγας πάντη φερομένας διαλυθῆναι. ὁ δὲ Φίλιππος ὑστέρῳ χρόνῳ μετὰ τὸν γάμον εἶδεν ὕναρ αὐτὸν ἐπιβάλλοντα σφραγῖδα τῇ γαστρὶ τῆς γυναικός· ἡ δὲ γλυφὴ τῆς σφραγῖδος, ὡς ᾤετο, λέοντος εἶχεν εἰκόνα. τῶν δὲ ἄλλων μάντεων ὑφορωμένων τὴν ὄψιν, ὡς ἀκριβεστέρας φυλακῆς δεομένων τῷ Φιλίππῳ τῶν περὶ τὸν γάμον, Ἀρίστανδρος ὁ Τελμησσεὺς κύειν ἔφη τὴν ἄνθρωπον, οὐθὲν γὰρ ἀποσφραγίζεσθαι τῶν κενῶν, καὶ κύειν παῖδα θυμοειδῆ καὶ λεοντώδη τὴν φύσιν), whose leonine looks were successfully rendered by Lysippos (Plout. de Alex. Mag. fort. aut virt. 2. 2) and—it may be added—most unsuccessfully by the later numismatic die-sinkers (e.g. Brit. Mus. Cat. Coins Macedonia, Etc. p. 19 no. 84 fig., p. 20 no. 87 fig., Hunter Cat. Coins i. 355 no. 1 pl. 24, 13, McClean Cat. Coins ii. 86 nos. 3716 and 3717 pl. 138, 10 and 11).

the sea, received by Eros and crowned by Peitho. On either side of this group were a dozen deities arranged in pairs—on the left, Zeus and Hera, Hephaistos and Charis, Hermes and Hestia; on the right, Apollon and Artemis, Athena and Herakles, Amphitrite and Poseidon. The whole assemblage was flanked on the left by Helios in his chariot, on the right by Selene riding her horse or mule.

In front of all this splendour, with its wealth of mythological meaning, was a bare black pavement of Eleusinian stone, which—whatever its practical purpose[1]—aesthetically must have served, in the half-light of the temple, to isolate the statue from the spectator and to uplift the whole glittering vision towards the starry roof.

Pausanias' penultimate comment[2] is worth quoting:

'I am aware that the measurements of the Zeus at Olympia in point of height and breadth are on record[3], but I cannot commend those who measured it. For even the measurements they mention fall far short of the impression made by the image upon such as have seen it. Why, the god himself, they say, bore witness to the art of Pheidias. When the image was finished, Pheidias prayed the god to grant a token if the work was to his mind. And, straightway, they declare, he hurled a thunderbolt into the ground at the spot where down to my time stood a hydria of bronze.'

What this masterpiece really looked like in the full glory of its ancient setting, we cannot, of course, hope to know. Any attempt to reconstruct it on paper (supra ii pl. xlvi), partly from Pausanias' careful enumeration of details, partly from the small-scale copies of form and features on imperial coins of Elis[4]

[1] Infra p. 967. [2] Paus. 5. 11. 9.

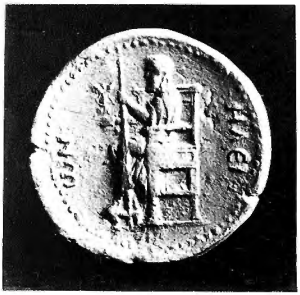
[3] See Sir J. G. Frazer and H. Hitzig—H. Blümner ad loc., also G. Q. Giglioli loc. cit. pp. 299—303 ('Le misure').

[4] S. B. Smith 'Der Zeus des Phidias auf eleischen Münzen' in the Arch. Zeit. 1862 xx. 339 f., J. Friedlaender 'Die unter Hadrian in Elis geprägte Münze mit der Darstellung der Bildsäule des olympischen Zeus von Phidias' in the Berliner Blätter für Münz-, Siegel- und Wappenkunde 1866 iii. 21—26 pl. 30, 1 and 2, J. Overbeck 'Über den Kopf des phidias'schen Zeus' in the Ber. sächs. Gesellsch. d. Wiss. Phil.-hist. Classe 1866 pp. 173—190 pl. 1, 1—9, id. Gr. Kunstmyth. Zeus pp. 34—45 Münztaf. 1, 32—34, 2, 4, J. Friedlaender 'Der Zeus des Phidias auf den Münzen von Elis' in the Monatsber. d. Akad. d. Wiss. Berlin Phil.-hist. Classe 1874 pp. 498—501 with figs. 1—5, id. 'Münze der Eleer mit dem Zeus des Phidias' in the Arch. Zeit. 1876 xxxiv. 34, L. Stephani in the Compte-rendu St. Pét. 1875 pp. 169—198, id. 'Nachträge' ib. 1876 pp. 223—225 with a fine photographic pl., R. Weil 'Elische Münzen mit dem Zeus des Phidias' in the Zeitschr. f. Num. 1880 vii. 110—116 figs. 1—3, id. 'Der Zeus des Phidias auf elischen Münzen der Kaiserzeit' ib. 1912 xxix. 363—382 pl. 10, 1—10, C. T. Seltman The Temple Coins of Olympia Cambridge 1921 p. 2 ff. Groups A—L pls. 1—8.

These articles between them cover all the Zeus-types on the coinage of Olympia from the latter part of s. vi B.C. onwards.

Some at least of the earlier types (e.g. the seated Zeus supra ii. 757 figs. 700 and 701, 1224 fig. 1022) may well be reminiscent of a pre-Pheidiac cult-image. I agree with



2

1 a

1 b

3

4

Coins, struck by Hadrian, representing the Zeus Olympios of Pheidias:
(1 a, 1 b) Two differently lighted views of bronze coin now at Paris.
(2) Bronze coin now at Florence.
(3) and (4) Bronze coins now at Berlin.

See page 959 n. 1.

(pl. lxix)[1], must remain almost laughably inadequate. But, after all, as Pausanias implies, the important thing about the Pheidiac Zeus was not his dimensions but his dignity, not his physical greatness but his moral grandeur. And if we cannot recreate his vanished effigy with much assurance, we can at least recall the impression

Miss G. M. A. Richter The Sculpture and Sculptors of the Greeks Yale Univ. Press 1929 p. 169: 'For the long interval between the completion of the temple and Pheidias' statue we may be permitted to hazard an explanation. Can we not suppose that originally a marble cult statue was made for the temple and stood duly in its place when the building was completed in 456? The existence of such an earlier image is indeed suggested by recent investigations of the floor of the temple which have indicated the presence of a substructure with ex votos beneath the Pheidian construction [K. Lehmann-Hartleben 'Libon und Phidias' in the Jahrb. d. Deutsch. Arch. Inst. 1923/24 xxxviii/ix pp. 37—48]. Possibly the noble and severe head of Zeus (fig. 610) and the enthroned figure (fig. 611) which appear on the coins of Elis...were inspired by it. The expense of this statue—as well as of the temple—was defrayed from the spoils taken by the Eleans when they reduced Pisa and the other dependent cities which had revolted, just as Pausanias [5. 10. 2] tells us. Then thirty years later the same great earthquake which caused the mutilation of the crouching figures from the angles of the western pediment [cp. W. Dörpfeld in Olympia ii. 22]...also damaged this statue of Zeus. By this time the praise of the great gold and ivory statue of the Athena Parthenos was resounding throughout Greece; and Olympia determined to have a similar resplendent figure by the same master sculptor.'

But not till imperial times can we expect to find any accurate renderings of the Pheidiac figure (P. Gardner Types of Gk. Coins pp. 77 ff., 146, 176 ff., 197 with pl. 15). Under Hadrian, when art took an antiquarian turn (W. Weber in The Cambridge Ancient History Cambridge 1936 xi. 320 f. and G. Rodenwaldt ib. p. 800 f.) and the emperor himself posed as Zeus Olympios (supra ii. 956 n. 0, 959 n. 0, 962 n. 2, 1120 n. 0, 1121 n. 0), we get our first really relevant copies of the final cult-statue.

[1] Pl. lxix gives photographic reproductions, to the scale $\frac{3}{4}$, of the four most important coins:

(1 a) and (1 b) are two differently lighted views of a unique bronze coin, struck by Hadrian, now at Paris. It was first figured by J. Friedlaender in the Berliner Blätter loc. cit. pl. 30, 2. See further Overbeck Gr. Kunstmyth. Zeus p. 36 Münztaf. 1, 34.

(2) is another bronze coin struck by Hadrian, now at Florence, which has long been known. See Overbeck Gr. Kunstmyth. Zeus p. 35 f. Münztaf. 2, 4. H. G. Evelyn-White in the Journ. Hell. Stud. 1908 xxviii. 49 fig. 1 illustrates it to the scale $\frac{2}{3}$. A second specimen, formerly owned by Queen Christina of Sweden (1626—1689), is lost. A third, from a slightly varied die, was found by H. Dressel, thickly oxidised, among the duplicates at Olympia and is published by R. Weil in the Zeitschr. f. Num. 1912 xxix. 368 f. pl. 10, 3a. The obv. bust of Hadrian is inscribed AVTOKPATΩP || AΔPIANOC || ΔIC, a very exceptional formula perhaps denoting an honour conferred on the emperor by the Panhellenes, when he was present in person at the Olympic festival of 129 A.D. (so Weil loc. cit. p. 370 f.).

(3) is a third bronze coin struck by Hadrian and secured by J. Friedlaender for the Berlin cabinet. H. G. Evelyn-White loc. cit. p. 51 fig. 2 illustrates it to the scale $\frac{2}{3}$. Several replicas were found at Olympia, of which the best preserved, now at Athens, is published by R. Weil loc. cit. p. 370 pl. 10, 4 a.

(4) is a fourth bronze coin struck by Hadrian, also in the Berlin collection. H. G. Evelyn-White loc. cit. p. 51 fig. 3 illustrates it to the scale $\frac{2}{3}$. This coin, like no. (2), shows small projections on the stile of the throne representing the ἀγάλματα of the κανόνες (supra p. 956 n. 0), but the bared body of the god and his highly raised left arm (supra ii. 754) are concessions to the taste of a later age.

that it made on men of various tempers and types—the soldier, the man in the street, the scholarly thinker, the religious reformer, the eclectic moralist.

L. Aimilius Paullus after his brilliant Macedonian campaign travelled through Greece (167 B.C.), and having long been anxious to see Olympia made his way thither, only to find his expectations utterly eclipsed by the reality[1]. Livy[2] puts it with dry, unconscious humour:

'Passing through Megalopolis he went up to Olympia. Here he saw sundry things worth seeing, and on beholding Zeus as it were face to face was moved in his spirit. And so, just as if he had been about to offer victims on the Capitol, he ordered a bigger sacrifice than usual to be made ready[3].'

It took much to 'move' a Roman general of the old school[4].

The popular verdict is voiced by Quintilian[5]:

'As an artist Pheidias is held to have been better at making gods than at making men, but as a worker in ivory to have been quite without a rival—even had he made nothing beyond the Athena at Athens or the Olympian Zeus in Elis. The beauty of the latter is thought actually to have added something to the received religion; so far did the majesty of the work go towards equality with the godhead.'

Reflective minds would want to know the source of a beauty so striking that it could be described as a real contribution to Greek religion. Cicero[6] speculates along Platonic lines:

'I maintain that nothing is ever so beautiful as not to be beaten in beauty by that from which it is copied as a portrait is copied from a face, that original which cannot be perceived by eye or ear or any other sense but grasped only by [1] Polyb. 30. 10.

[2] Liv. 45. 28 unde per Megalopolim Olympiam escendit. ubi et alia quidem spectanda visa, et Iovem velut praesentem intuens motus animo est. itaque haud secus quam si in Capitolio immolaturus esset, sacrificium amplius solito apparari iussit.

[3] Cp. Plout. v. Aem. Paull. 28.

[4] E. Klebs in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. i. 578 f.

[5] Quint. inst. or. 12. 10. 9 Phidias tamen diis quam hominibus efficiendis melior artifex creditur, in ebore vero longe citra aemulum vel si nihil nisi Minervam Athenis aut Olympium in Elide Iovem fecisset, cuius pulchritudo adiecisse aliquid etiam receptae religioni videtur; adeo maiestas operis deum aequavit.

Lucian in cynical mood bears witness to the same effect on the mind of the populace: ὅμως δ' οὖν οἱ παριόντες ἐς τὸν νεὼν οὔτε τὸν ἐξ Ἰνδῶν ἐλέφαντα ἔτι οἴονται ὁρᾶν οὔτε τὸ ἐκ τῆς Θράκης μεταλλευθὲν χρυσίον, ἀλλ' αὐτὸν τὸν Κρόνου καὶ Ῥέας ἐς τὴν γῆν ὑπὸ Φειδίου μετῳκισμένον καὶ τὴν Πισαίων ἐρημίαν ἐπισκοπεῖν κεκελευσμένον, ἀγαπῶντα εἰ διὰ πέντε ὅλων ἐτῶν θύσει τις αὐτῷ πάρεργον Ὀλυμπίων.

[6] Cic. orat. 8 f. The passage ends: nec vero ille artifex, cum faceret Iovis formam aut Minervae, contemplabatur aliquem e quo similitudinem duceret, sed ipsius in mente insidebat species pulchritudinis eximia quaedam, quam intuens in eaque defixus ad illius similitudinem artem et manum dirigebat. Sir J. E. Sandys ad loc. quotes Plotin. 5. 8. 1 ἐπεὶ καὶ ὁ Φειδίας τὸν Δία πρὸς οὐδὲν αἰσθητὸν ποιήσας, ἀλλὰ λαβὼν οἷος ἂν γένοιτο, εἰ ἡμῖν ὁ Ζεὺς δι' ὀμμάτων ἐθέλοι φανῆναι and an interesting parallel in a letter from thought or mind. Thus we can think of forms more beautiful even than the statues of Pheidias, the most perfect things of their kind that we can see, or than those paintings that I have mentioned. Yet that great artist, when he was fashioning the shape of his Zeus or Athena, did not fix his gaze on any individual whose likeness he drew. No, in his own mind dwelt an ideal of surpassing beauty. Beholding that and lost in the contemplation thereof he turned art and hand to the task of reproducing its likeness.'

Platonic too in its essence is the remark attributed by Philostratos to that eccentric genius Apollonios[1] of Tyana:

'When he saw the statue enthroned at Olympia he said "Hail, good Zeus, whose goodness consists in giving of thine own self to men."'

In the summer of the year 97 A.D. Dion of Prousa delivered a semi-Stoic discourse to the Greeks assembled at Olympia[2]. The greater part of it is concerned with the cult-effigy of Zeus, to which the orator returns again and yet again with an ever fresh ardour of devotion and an astonishing variety of encomiastic phrases. He describes it as being 'of all the images on earth the most beautiful and the most beloved of heaven[3].' And he calls upon Pheidias, 'this wise, inspired maker of a creation at once solemn and supremely beautiful[4],' to expound and justify his rendering of Zeus.

All would admit, says Dion, that it is 'a sweet and welcome vision, a spectacle of untold delight to Hellenes and barbarians alike[5].' Nay, even brute creatures, could they but observe it, would be impressed: bulls led to the altar would be content to suffer, if it pleasured the god; eagles, horses, lions would lose their wildness and be soothed at the sight[6]. 'While of men, whosoever is utterly Raphael to Baldassare Castiglione: 'To paint a figure truly beautiful, it might be necessary that I should see many beautiful forms, with the further provision that you should yourself be near, to select the best; but seeing that good judges and beautiful women are scarce, I avail myself of a certain "idea" which comes into my mind (io mi servo di certa idea che mi viene nella mente).'

[1] Philostr. v. Apoll. 4. 28 p. 167 Kayser ἰδὼν δὲ ἐς τὸ ἕδος τὸ ἐν 'Ολυμπίᾳ 'χαῖρε,' εἶπεν, 'ἀγαθὲ Ζεῦ, σὺ γὰρ οὕτω τι ἀγαθός, ὡς καὶ σαυτοῦ κοινωνῆσαι τοῖς ἀνθρώποις.' This is not the colloquial ὦ 'γαθέ, but a more serious use of the adjective as in Plat. Tim. 29 D—E λέγωμεν δὴ δι' ἥντινα αἰτίαν γένεσιν καὶ τὸ πᾶν τόδε ὁ ξυνιστὰς ξυνέστησεν. ἀγαθὸς ἦν, ἀγαθῷ δὲ οὐδεὶς περὶ οὐδενὸς οὐδέποτε ἐγγίγνεται φθόνος· τούτου δ' ἐκτὸς ὢν πάντα ὅ τι μάλιστα γενέσθαι ἐβουλήθη παραπλήσια ἑαυτῷ. Cp. Mark 10. 17 f., Luke 18. 18 f. (Matth. 19. 16 f.).

[2] W. Christ Geschichte der griechischen Litteratur[6] München 1920 ii. 1. 361.

[3] Dion Chrys. or. 12 p. 220 Dindorf πάντων, ὅσα ἐστὶν ἐπὶ γῆς ἀγάλματα, κάλλιστον καὶ θεοφιλέστατον.

[4] Id. ib. p. 229 Dindorf τὸν σοφὸν τοῦτον καὶ δαιμόνιον ἐργάτην τοῦ σεμνοῦ καὶ παγκάλου δημιουργήματος.

[5] Id. ib. p. 229 Dindorf ὡς μὲν ἡδὺ καὶ προσφιλὲς ὅραμα καὶ τέρψιν ἀμήχανον θέας εἰργάσω πᾶσιν Ἕλλησι καὶ βαρβάροις, ὅσοι ποτὲ δεῦρο ἀφίκοντο πολλοὶ πολλάκις, οὐδεὶς ἀντερεῖ.

[6] Id. ib. p. 229 Dindorf.

weary in soul, having drained many sufferings and sorrows in his life without the solace of sweet sleep, even he, methinks, if he stood over against this statue, would forget all the terrors and hardships of humanity[1].' Aforetime, adds Dion, in lack of clear knowledge we dreamed our several dreams and fashioned our individual fancies, or at most combined the unconvincing likenesses produced by previous craftsmen[2]. 'But you,' he says turning to Pheidias, 'through the potency of your art have conquered and combined Hellas first and then the rest of the world by means of this marvel, a work so amazing and brilliant that no man who had once set eyes on it could afterwards readily form a different conception[3].'

Yet, granted all this, continues Dion, in making a human figure of more than human beauty and magnitude out of these pleasing materials, did you really select the right type and create a form worthy of the god[4]? To which penetrating question Pheidias in his own defence replies[5], that he was not the first exponent and teacher of truth heard by Helias in her infancy. He had to deal with a people already grown up and holding earnestly enough religious views already accepted and established. He would not stress the agreement of sculptors and painters in the past, but look rather to those other craftsmen, the poets, older and wiser than himself. They by virtue of their poems could lead men to form concepts, whereas his handiwork could at best raise a sufficient probability.... Mind and wisdom no modeller or painter can portray. Their task is to know the human body in which these qualities reside, and they attribute the same to God. In default of the original, they seek by means of that which is seen and imaginable to show forth that which is unimaginable and unseen, using a symbol superior to the animal types by which barbarians represent the divine.... Nor can we maintain that it would have been a better plan to have made no statue or semblance of the gods, but to have looked only upon the heavenly bodies. The wise man worships every one of these, deeming that he can see the blessed gods afar off. But all men are so disposed towards the divine that they feel a passionate

[1] Id. ib. p. 229 f. Dindorf ἀνθρώπων δέ, ὃς ἂν ᾖ παντελῶς ἐπίπονος τὴν ψυχήν, πολλὰς ἀπαντλήσας συμφορὰς καὶ λύπας ἐν τῷ βίῳ μηδὲ ὕπνον ἡδὺν ἐπιβαλλόμενος, καὶ ὃς δοκεῖ μοι κατ' ἐναντίον στὰς τῆσδε τῆς εἰκόνος ἐκλαθέσθαι πάντων ὅσα ἐν ἀνθρωπίνῳ βίῳ δεινὰ καὶ χαλεπὰ γίγνεται παθεῖν.

[2] Id. ib. p. 230 Dindorf.

[3] Id. ib. p. 230 Dindorf σὺ δὲ ἰσχύϊ τέχνης ἐνίκησας καὶ συνέλεξας τὴν Ἑλλάδα πρῶτον, ἔπειτα τοὺς ἄλλους τῷδε τῷ φάσματι, θεσπέσιον καὶ λαμπρὸν ἀποδείξας, ὡς μηδένα τῶν ἰδόντων δόξαν ἑτέραν ἔτι λαβεῖν ῥᾳδίως.

[4] Id. ib. p. 230 Dindorf.

[5] Id. ib. p. 231 ff. Dindorf.

desire to honour and tend it near at hand, approaching it and touching it with conviction, offering sacrifices to it and setting wreaths upon it. Just as little children, when torn away from father or mother, are stricken with sore longing and yearning, and often in dreams stretch out their arms to the absent ones, so men, justly loving the gods because of their kindliness and kinship, are eager to associate with them in every way and to share their company. Hence many barbarians through poverty and lack of art give the name of gods to mountains, rough tree-trunks, and shapeless stones, things that are assuredly no more suitable than this form of ours[1]. In choosing the human shape I have followed the lead of Homer...though handicapped by the limitations of my art. Poetry is opulent and can afford to lay down its own laws. It has such resources of language and phrase that it can express every wish of the heart and proclaim aloud any conceivable aspect or achievement, mood or magnitude.... Not so I, who am restricted to a special spot in Elis or Athens. You, Homer, wisest of poets, were admittedly the first to show the Greeks many fair portraits of all the gods, their greatest included, in shapes sometimes gentle, sometimes terrible and appalling. 'But ours is a god of peace and universal mildness, overseer of a Hellas free from faction and at harmony with itself. By the help of my art and the counsel of Elis, a state both wise and good, I have established him, gentle and solemn with untroubled mien, the giver of livelihood and life and all good things, the common Father and Saviour and Keeper of mankind, imitating so far as mortal thought can imitate the nature that is divine and beyond our ken[2].' See, then, whether you will not find this his effigy aptly reflecting all his titles. For Zeus alone of the gods is called both Father and King, Polieús and Homógnios and Phílios and Hetaireíos, aye and Hikésios and Phýxios and

[1] Id. ib. p. 232 f. Dindorf ἀτεχνῶς γὰρ ὥσπερ νήπιοι παῖδες πατρὸς ἢ μητρὸς ἀπεσπασμένοι δεινὸν ἵμερον ἔχοντες καὶ πόθον ὀρέγουσι χεῖρας οὐ παροῦσι πολλάκις ὀνειρώττοντες, οὕτω καὶ θεοὺς ἄνθρωποι ἀγαπῶντες δικαίως διά τε εὐεργεσίαν καὶ συγγένειαν, προθυμούμενοι πάντα τρόπον συνεῖναί τε καὶ ὁμιλεῖν· ὥστε καὶ πολλοὶ τῶν βαρβάρων πενίᾳ τε καὶ ἀπορίᾳ τέχνης ὄρη θεοὺς ἐπονομάζουσι καὶ δένδρα ἀργὰ καὶ ἀσήμους λίθους, οὐδαμῇ οὐδαμῶς οἰκειότερα <ταύτης (ins. J. Geel ed. Lugduni Batavorum 1840 p. 106)> τῆς μορφῆς. Surely the most pathetic, and sympathetic, plea for idolatry ever put forward.

[2] Id. ib. p. 236 f. Dindorf ὁ δὲ ἡμέτερος εἰρηνικὸς καὶ πανταχοῦ πρᾷος, οἷος ἀστασιάστου καὶ ὁμονοούσης τῆς Ἑλλάδος ἐπίσκοπος· ὃν ἐγὼ μετὰ τῆς ἐμαυτοῦ τέχνης καὶ τῆς Ἠλείων πόλεως σοφῆς καὶ ἀγαθῆς βουλευσάμενος ἱδρυσάμην, ἥμερον καὶ σεμνὸν ἐν ἀλύπῳ σχήματι, τὸν βίου καὶ ζωῆς καὶ συμπάντων δοτῆρα τῶν ἀγαθῶν, κοινὸν ἀνθρώπων καὶ πατέρα καὶ σωτῆρα καὶ φύλακα, ὡς δυνατὸν ἦν θνητῷ διανοηθέντι μιμήσασθαι τὴν θείαν καὶ ἀμήχανον φύσιν.

Xénios and Ktésios and Epikárpios and countless other appellations, all of them good[1]....

The speech, which had risen like a rocket, might have concluded with that burst of stars, lingering awhile in memory as a galaxy of glittering points. But the speaker, being Greek, prefers to end on a note of greater quietude and self-restraint. He does so very simply, very effectively, by contrasting the human workman, a Pheidias or a Polykleitos, who has made the most of his paltry materials and trumpery tools, with Zeus the creator of the universe, whom Pindar[2] addresses as—

'Mighty Lord of Dodona, Best of all Artificers, our Father.'

How comes it that this great statue, for centuries the acknowledged masterpiece of ancient religious art, has not, like many others of less merit, left behind it a trail of Greek and Roman copies? Apart from the wonderful Zeus of Mylasa (supra ii pl. xxviii), a fourth-century head of modified Pheidiac style[3], there is hardly an extant marble or bronze in which we can trace with certainty the influence of the original at Olympia[4].

[1] Id. ib. p. 237 Dindorf. L. François 'Dion Chrysostôme critique d'art: le Zeus de Phidias' in the Rev. Ét. Gr. 1917 xxx. 105—116 regards this list of epithets as a Stoic cliché, comparing Kleanthes' Hymn to Zeus [supra ii. 855 ff.], [Aristot.] de mundo 7. 401 a 12 ff., Dion Chrys. or. 1 p. 9 Dindorf, Aristeid. or. 1. 8 (i. 10 f. Dindorf). The theme is handled in greater detail by J. Amann Die Zeusrede des Ailios Aristeides Stuttgart 1931 pp. 99—109 ('Die ἐπικλήσεις des Zeus').

[2] Pind. frag. 57 Schroeder ap. Dion Chrys. or. 12 p. 239 Dindorf ὃν πάνυ καλῶς ποιητὴς προσεῖπεν ἕτερος, 'Δωδωναῖε μεγάσθενες | ἀριστότεχνα πάτερ.' κ.τ.λ. (as supra ii. 693 n. 3). Bergk ad loc. conjectured that the next line in Pindar's paián was Δίκας δαμιοεργὲ καὶ εὐνομίας—a restoration based on Plout. praec. ger. reip. 13 ὁ δὲ πολιτικός, ἀριστοτέχνας τις ὤν, κατὰ Πίνδαρον, καὶ δημιουργὸς εὐνομίας καὶ δίκης, κ.τ.λ., de ser. num. vind. 4 καὶ Πίνδαρος ἐμαρτύρησεν, ἀριστοτέχναν ἀνακαλούμενος τὸν ἄρχοντα καὶ κύριον ἁπάντων θεόν, ὡς δὴ δίκης ὄντα δημιουργόν, de fac. in orb. lun. 13 ἢ τίνος γέγονε ποιητὴς καὶ πατὴρ δημιουργὸς ὁ Ζεὺς ὁ ἀριστοτέχνας. The passage evidently haunted the memory of Plutarch, who quotes it again in his symp. 1. 2. 5 καὶ τὸν θεὸν ὁρᾷς, ὃν ἀριστοτέχναν ἡμῶν ὁ Πίνδαρος προσεῖπεν, κ.τ.λ. and adv. Stoic. 14 ὁ δὲ Πατρῷος καὶ Ὕπατος καὶ Θεμίστιος Ζεύς, καὶ ἀριστοτέχνας κατὰ Πίνδαρον, οὐ δρᾶμα δήπου μέγα καὶ ποικίλον καὶ πολυμαθὲς δημιουργῶν τὸν κόσμον, ἀλλὰ θεῶν καὶ ἀνθρώπων ἅστυ κοινόν, συννομησομένων μετὰ δίκης καὶ ἀρετῆς ὁμολογουμένως καὶ μακαρίως, κ.τ.λ. See also Clem. Al. strom. 5. 14 p. 395, 2 f. Stählin καὶ ἕνα τὸν τούτων δημιουργόν, ὃν 'ἀριστοτέχναν πατέρα' λέγει (sc. ὁ Πίνδαρος) = Euseb. praep. ev. 13. 13. 27 and C. B. Hase in Stephanus Thes. Gr. Ling. i. 2. 1972 A—B.

[3] Supra ii. 597 f.

[4] A marble head in the Hermitage (L. Stephani in the Compte-rendu St. Pét. 1875 pp. 187—200 Atlas pls. 6 and 7, 1), the Otricoli head in the Vatican (Brunn—Bruckmann Denkm. der gr. und röm. Sculpt. pl. 130, cp. pl. 605, G. Lippold in Amelung Sculpt. Vatic. iii. 1. 110—113 Sala Rotonda no. 539 pl. 36), the Jacobsen head at Ny Carlsberg (P. Arndt La glyptothèque Ny-Carlsberg Munich 1896 p. 17 f. Atlas pl. 13, Ny Carlsberg Glyptotek: Billedtavler til Kataloget over Antike Kunstværker Kjøbenhavn 1907 pl. 17, 241), and a bronze head at Vienna (H. Schrader in the Jahresh. d. oest. arch. Inst. 1911

No doubt there were critics of its scale and proportions. Strabon[1] says:

'It was wrought of ivory, and so huge was its size that, although the temple is very large, the artist is thought to have missed the proper symmetry; for he represented the god as seated but almost touching the roof with the crown of his head, and thus produced the impression that, if he arose and stood upright, he would unroof the temple.'

Others, as we might infer from Pausanias[2], felt the force of the objection, and Caecilius the rhetorician, a contemporary of Strabon, even ventured—the blasphemer—to speak of 'the blundered colossus[3].' To which detractors Pheidias might well have retorted that the temple-roof was expressly designed to suggest the starry vault of heaven.

But the real reason for the comparative unpopularity of the statue was not a mere matter of measurements. The gravamen was this. Pheidias, seeking to express a beneficent supremacy, had deliberately omitted the thunderbolt[4], formerly the essential characteristic of the sky-god. The populace could not, or would not, understand the omission, and some writers who ought to have known better actually describe the figure as if it were equipped with the familiar attribute. Seneca[5], for example, in defiance of plain fact, can say:

'Pheidias never saw Zeus, yet made him as it were thundering'— xiv. 81—88 with figs. 91 a, 91 b, 92 and pls. 1, 2, id. Phidias Frankfurt am Main 1924 p. 57 ff. figs. 38 and 39) have all found ardent advocates. Here it must suffice to say that their claims are mutually destructive.

[1] Strab. 353 (quoted by Eustath. in Il. p. 145, 15 f.).

[2] Supra p. 958.

[3] Longin. de sublim. 36. 3 πρὸς μέντοι γε τὸν γράφοντα, ὡς ὁ Κολοσσὸς ὁ ἡμαρτημένος οὐ κρείττων ἢ ὁ Πολυκλείτου Δορυφόρος, παράκειται πρὸς πολλοῖς εἰπεῖν, ὅτι ἐπὶ μὲν τέχνης θαυμάζεται τὸ ἀκριβέστατον, ἐπὶ δὲ τῶν φυσικῶν ἔργων τὸ μέγεθος, φύσει δὲ λογικὸν ὁ ἄνθρωπος· κἀπὶ μὲν ἀνδριάντων ζητεῖται τὸ ὅμοιον ἀνθρώπῳ, ἐπὶ δὲ τοῦ λόγου τὸ ὑπεραῖρον, ὡς ἔφην, τὰ ἀνθρώπινα. F. Granger in his recent translation (London 1935) p. 89 renders 'the Colossus which failed in the casting' and p. 113 notes 'The Colossus of Nero was a failure owing to the decline in the art of casting bronze, Plin. N.H., xxxiv, 46.' But U. von Wilamowitz-Moellendorff 'Der verfehlte Koloss' in the Strena Helbigiana Lipsiae 1900 pp. 334—336 argues convincingly from the context: 'Caecilius also hat dem Doryphoros, dem Kanon, einen Koloss entgegengesetzt. Damit ist die auch sonst haltlose Beziehung auf den Koloss des Nero vorab beseitigt. Aber der Gedankenzusammenhang fordert auch, dass der verfehlte Koloss ein berühmtes, von anderen als musterhaft anerkanntes Werk ist. Er muss sich zu Platon verhalten wie der Kanon Polyklets zu Lysias. Da kann man auch den Koloss des Chares nicht brauchen, der nicht der Vertreter eines erhabenen, aber incorrecten Stiles sein könnte. Wer es ist, lehrt ein Zeitgenosse des Caecilius, Strabon, der bei Gelegenheit der Hera sagt, dass "die Werke des Polyklet an Kunst die schönsten wären, wenn sie auch an Kostbarkeit und Grösse denen des Pheidias nachstünden" [Strab. 372].'

[4] Supra ii. 760.

[5] Sen. controv. 10. 5. 8.

while Lucian[1] goes much further and in a passage of bitter sarcasm upbraids Zeus for failing to use the thunderbolt in his hand:

'O Zeus, where is now your resplendent lightning, where your deep-toned thunder, where the glowing, white-hot, direful bolt? we know now 'tis all fudge and poetic moonshine—barring what value may attach to the rattle of the names. That renowned projectile of yours, which ranged so far and was so ready to your hand, has gone dead and cold, it seems; never a spark left in it to scorch iniquity.

If men are meditating perjury, a smouldering lamp-wick is as likely to frighten them off as the omnipotent's levin-bolt; the brand you hold over them is one from which they see neither flame nor smoke can come; a little soot-grime is the worst that need be apprehended from a touch of it. No wonder if Salmoneus challenged you to a thundering-match; he was reasonable enough when he backed his artificial heat against so cool-tempered a Zeus. Of course he was; there are you in your opiate-trance, never hearing the perjurers nor casting a glance at criminals, your glazed eyes dull to all that happens, and your ears as deaf as a dotard's.

When you were young and keen, and your temper had some life in it, you used to bestir yourself against crime and violence; there were no armistices in those days; the thunderbolt was always hard at it, the aegis quivering, the thunder rattling, the lightning engaged in a perpetual skirmish. Earth was shaken like a sieve, buried in snow, bombarded with hail. It rained cats and dogs (if you will pardon my familiarity), and every shower was a waterspout. Why, in Deucalion's time, hey presto, everything was swamped, mankind went under, and just one little ark was saved, stranding on the top of Lycoreus and preserving a remnant of human seed for the generation of greater wickedness.

Mankind pays you the natural wages of your laziness; if any one offers you a victim or a garland nowadays, it is only at Olympia as a perfunctory accompaniment of the games; he does it not because he thinks it is any good, but because he may as well keep up an old custom. It will not be long, most glorious of deities, before they serve you as you served Cronus, and depose you. I will not rehearse all the robberies of your temple—those are trifles; but they have laid hands on your person at Olympia, my lord High-Thunderer, and you had not the energy to wake the dogs or call in the neighbours; surely they might have come to the rescue and caught the fellows before they had finished packing up the swag. But there sat the bold Giant-slayer and Titan-conqueror letting them cut his hair, with a fifteen-foot thunderbolt in his hand all the time!'

So Lucian, like Seneca, was labouring under the delusion that Zeus Pheidiakós[2], as he came to be called, was fulminant. Roman rhetoric and Greek satire had equally failed to grasp the sculptor's new conception.

In truth that new conception was too exalted for a public which preferred truculence to tranquillity and could appreciate a triumphant victor or even a threatening tyrant more readily than a peaceful, undemonstrative ruler. The god whose government was based upon right not might, love not fear, was an ideal for future ages, born five hundred years in advance of his time.

[1] Loukian. Tim. 1—4 trans. H. W. Fowler and F. G. Fowler.

[2] Schol. Greg. Naz. in Catalogus sive notitia manuscriptorum qui a E. D. Clarke comparati in Bibliotheca Bodleiana adservantur Oxonii 1812 i. 36 (Overbeck Schriftquellen p. 134 no. 739) Φειδίας...ἀγαλματοποιὸς ἄριστος· ὃς τῷ μὲν Διὶ ξόανον ἤγειρεν ὡς ἐπονομασθῆναι Διὸς Φειδιακοῦ...

During those five centuries his statue experienced some surprising vicissitudes. The descendants of Pheidias, entrusted by the Eleans with the task of cleaning it, were called officially the Phaidryntaí or 'Burnishers,' and before setting about their duties used to sacrifice to Athena Ergánē[1]. Oil was poured out in front of Zeus to preserve the ivory from decay[2], a dark oil made from pitch being regarded as best for the purpose[3]. H. C. Schubart[4], however, with the approval of the technologist H. Blümner[5],

[1] Paus. 5. 14. 5 ταύτῃ τῇ Ἐργάνῃ καὶ οἱ ἀπόγονοι Φειδίου, καλούμενοι δὲ Φαιδρυνταί, γέρας παρὰ Ἠλείων εἰληφότες τοῦ Διὸς τὸ ἄγαλμα ἀπὸ τῶν προσιζανόντων καθαίρειν, οὗτοι θύουσιν ἐνταῦθα πρὶν ἢ λαμπρύνειν τὸ ἄγαλμα ἄρξωνται. A base found at Olympia records one of these Φαιδρυνταί (E. Loewy Inschriften griechischer Bildhauer Leipzig 1885 p. 367 f. no. 536, 3 f., W. Dittenberger—K. Purgold in Olympia v. 555 f. no. 466, 3 f. Τίτον Φλάουιον | Ἡράκλειτον, τὸν | ἀπὸ Φειδίου, Φαιδυντὴν | τοῦ Διὸς τοῦ Ὀλυμπίου). Others are mentioned in inscriptions from Athens, where they had a special seat in the theatre (Corp. inscr. Att. iii. 1 no. 283 = Inscr. Gr. ed. min. iii—iii. 3 no. 5064 of Hadrianic date Φαιδυντοῦ | Διὸς ἐκ Πείσης) and might hold office as archon (Corp. inscr. Att. iii. 1 no. 1058, 2 ff. = Inscr. Gr. ed. min. ii—iii. 2 no. 1828, 2 ff. of c. 210 A.D. [ἐπὶ] ἄρχοντος Φεδυν[το][ῦ] Διὸς ἐν Ὀλυπίᾳ Τ.Βε[ρίου] | Κλαυδίου Πατρόκλου [Λα][μ]πτρέως). The corresponding official attached to the Athenian Olympieion had another reserved seat in the theatre (Corp. inscr. Att. iii. 1 no. 291 = Inscr. Gr. ed. min. ii. 3 no. 5072 of Hadrianic date Φαιδυντοῦ | Διὸς Ὀλυμπίου ἐν ἄστει) and dedicates a statue of his wife at Eleusis (Corp. inscr. Att. iii. 1 no. 928, 2 ff. = Inscr. Gr. ed. min. ii. 3 no. 4075, 2 ff. after 150 A.D. [ὁ δεῖνα - - ὁ] | ἀγωνοθέτης Ὀλυμ[πίων καὶ Ὀλυμπίου Διὸ]ς Ἀθήνησιν Φαιδυντή[ς - - -]), where Demeter and Persephone had long had their own cleaner (Dittenberger Syll. inscr. Gr.[3] no. 42, c 129 f. in an Attic decree of c. 460 B.C. καὶ τ[ὸν Φαιδυντὲν] | [τ]ὸν θεοῖν, ib.[3] no. 885, 16 f. in an Attic decree of c. 220 A.D. καὶ ὁ Φαιδυντὴς τοῖν θε|[οῖν]). On the Elean spelling Φαιδυντής, as opposed to the Ionic-Attic Φαιδρυντής, see F. Solmsen in the Rhein. Mus. 1899 liv. 347 f. and 495 f. The duties of the office are discussed by E. Kuhnert 'De cura statuarum apud Graecos' in the Berliner Studien für classische Philologie und Archaeologie 1884 i. 336 ff.

[2] Paus. 5. 11. 10 ὅσον δὲ τοῦ ἐδάφους ἐστὶν ἔμπροσθεν τοῦ ἀγάλματος, τοῦτο οὐ λευκῷ, μέλανι δὲ κατεσκεύασται τῷ λίθῳ. περιθεῖ δὲ ἐν κύκλῳ τὸν μέλανα λίθου Παρίου κρηπίς, ἔρυμα εἶναι τῷ ἐλαίῳ τῷ ἐκχεομένῳ. ἔλαιον γὰρ τῷ ἀγάλματί ἐστιν ἐν Ὀλυμπίᾳ συμφέρον καὶ ἐλαιόν ἐστι τὸ ἀπείρυτον μὴ γίνεσθαι τῷ ἐλέφαντι βλάβος διὰ τὸ ἑλῶδες τῆς Ἄλτεως. κ.τ.λ. Similarly Methodios, bishop of Olympos in Lykia, who was martyrized under Maximinus Daza in 311 A.D. (W. Christ Geschichte der griechischen Litteratur[6] München 1924 ii. 2. 1355), ap. Phot. bibl. p. 293 b 1 ff. Bekker ὅτι φησὶ Φειδίαν τὸν ἀγαλματοποιὸν τὸ Πισαῖον εἴδωλον ποιήσαντα ἐξ ἐλέφαντος προστάξαι ἔλαιον ἔμπροσθεν τοῦ ἀγάλματος ἐκχέειν, ὥστε ἀθάνατον ἐς δύναμιν αὐτὸ φυλάσσεσθαι (cited also by Epiphan. panar. haeres. 64. 19 (ii. 619 Dindorf)).

[3] Plin. nat. hist. 15. 31 f. e pice fit quod pissinum appellant, cum coquitur, velleribus supra halitum eius expansis atque ita expressis...existimaturque et ebori vindicando a carie utile esse. certe simulacrum Saturni Romae intus oleo repletum est.

[4] H. C. Schubart in the Arch. Zeit. 1849 Zeitschrift für die Alterthumswissenschaft 1849 vii. 407—413.

[5] H. Blümner Technologie und Terminologie der Gewerbe und Künste bei Griechen und Römern Leipzig 1879 ii. 374 n. 1.

suggests that the wooden core of the great chryselephantine figure was pierced by tubes or channels, which conveyed the oil in all directions and prevented the wood from being affected by changes of temperature. A similar device was employed for Endoios' xóanon of Artemis at Ephesos[1] and for the cult-image of Saturn at Rome[2]. Such precautions notwithstanding, by the middle of the second century B.C.[3] the ivory of Zeus Olýmpios was cracked and had to be refurbished by the sculptor Damophon[4].

But graver dangers than slow disintegration were to follow. In the days of Iulius Caesar the statue is said to have been struck by lightning[5], we do not know with what effect. Worse than that, in 40 A.D. Caligula actually gave orders that it should be brought to Rome. P. Memmius Regulus, commissioned to carry out the sacrilege, was warned by the architects that the removal of the statue would entail its destruction, and was further deterred by the occurrence of incredible portents. Accordingly he abandoned the attempt and wrote to the emperor explaining his reasons. These scruples might have cost him his life[6], had it not been for the opportune assassination of the tyrant on January 24, 41 A.D.[7]

[1] Mucianus, the consul of 52, 70, and 75 A.D., ap. Plin. nat. hist. 16. 213 f. (supra ii. 410 n. 6) states that the ancient statue of Artemis at Ephesos was made by Endoios (but see C. Robert in Pauly—Wissowa Real. Enc. v. 2554) of vine-wood (J. Murr Die Pflanzenwelt in der griechischen Mythologie Innsbruck 1890 p. 102 'des Keuschlamms' would derive vitigeneum from vitex): adicit multis foraminibus nardo rigari, ut medicatus umor alat teneatque iuncturas.

[2] Plin. nat. hist. 15. 32 (quoted supra p. 967 n. 3).

[3] B. Ashmole in The Cambridge Ancient History Cambridge 1930 viii. 689 f.

[4] Paus. 4. 31. 6 Δαμοφῶντος δὲ ἔργον, ὃς καὶ τὸν Δία <τὸν (ins. H. Hitzig)> ἐν Ὀλυμπίᾳ διεστηκότος ἤδη τοῦ ἐλέφαντος συνήρμοσεν ἐς τὸ ἀκριβέστατον, καί οἱ δεδομέναι τιμαὶ παρὰ Ἠλείων εἰσί. A. Neuburger The Technical Arts and Sciences of the Ancients trans. H. L. Brose London 1930 p. 64 f. says: 'it is now a lost art to join ivory plates without leaving traces or [leg. of] the joins and without the differences of external temperature giving rise to cracks owing to the resultant change of dimensions.' On modern Museum methods of treating ancient ivory see A. Lucas Antiques: their Restoration and Preservation London 1924 pp. 55—58.

[5] Euseb. praep. ev. 4. 2. 8 ἀμφὶ δὲ Ἰούλιον Καίσαρα τὸ μέγα τῶν Ἑλλήνων καὶ Ὀλυμπικὸν ἄγαλμα, τὸ ἐν αὐταῖς Ὀλυμπιάσι, κεραυνῷ πρὸς τοῦ θεοῦ βληθὲν ἀναγράφουσι. Cp. Lucr. 6. 417 ff. with H. A. J. Munro ad loc.

[6] Yet see E. Groag in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. xv. 634.

[7] Ioseph. ant. Iud. 19. 1. 1 ἐπεὶ καὶ τὸν Ὀλυμπιάσι τιμώμενον Δία ὑπὸ τῶν Ἑλλήνων καὶ οὕτως ὀνομασμένον Ὀλύμπιον, Φειδίου τοῦ Ἀθηναίου πεποιηκότος, ἐτόλμησε κελεῦσαι εἰς τὴν Ῥώμην μεταφέρειν. οὐ μὴν ἔπραξέ γε, τῶν ἀρχιτεκτόνων φαμένων πρὸς Μέμμιον Ῥήγουλον, ὃς ἐπετέτακτο τῇ κινήσει τοῦ Διός, ἀπολεῖσθαι τοῦργον κινήσεως αὐτοῦ γεγενημένης. λέγεται δὲ τὸν Μέμμιον διὰ ταῦτα, καὶ σημείων μειζόνων γεγενημένων ἢ ὡς ἄν τινα πιστὰ ἡγεῖσθαι, ὑπερβαλέσθαι τὴν ἀναίρεσιν. καὶ γράφει τάδε πρὸς τὸν Γάϊον ἐπ' ἀπολογίᾳ τοῦ ἐκλιπεῖν ἀδιακόνητον τὴν ἐπιστολήν. ἀπολέσθαι τε ἐκ τούτων αὐτῷ κινδύνου γενομένου, σώζεται φθάσαντος ἤδη Γαΐου τελευτῆσαι.

Caligula's intention had been to replace the head of Zeus by a portrait-head of himself. But whenever the workmen approached to lay hold of the pedestal, loud laughter burst from the lips of the statue and put them to instant flight. Also, the ship built to transport it was shattered by thunderbolts. So Caligula, after threatening Zeus, had perforce to substitute another effigy in his own temple on the Palatine[1]. About the middle of the second century Lucian[2] mentions that thieves, greatly daring, had recently cut off two of Zeus' golden tresses weighing six minas apiece. In 394 A.D. Theodosios i, pursuing his policy of suppressing all paganism[3], abolished the Olympic festival[4] despite its unbroken record of 1169 years. And in the reign of his grandson Theodosios ii (408—450 A.D.) the temple of Zeus Olympios perished in a conflagration[5].

Not so the great statue, which had hitherto contrived to escape the successive threats of decomposition and lightning, mutilation and robbery. At some uncertain date, after the overthrow of its worship and before the destruction of its temple, it was removed to Byzantion and set up in the House of Lausos[6] among such world-famous works as the Samian Hera of Athenis and Boupalos, the [1] Suet. Calig. 22 datoque negotio ut simulacra numinum religione et arte praeclara, inter quae Olympi Iovis, apportarentur e Graecia, quibus capite dempto suum imponeret, partem Palatii ad forum usque promovit, etc., ib. 57 Olympiae simulacrum Iovis, quod dissolvi transferrique Romam placuerat, tantum cachinnum repente edidit ut machinis labefactis opifices diffugerint; supervenitque ilico quidam Cassius nomine, iussum se somnio affirmans immolare taurum Iovi, Dion Cass. 59. 28 οὕτω δὴ ἕτερόν τε νεὼν ἐν τῷ Παλατίῳ σπουδῇ ᾠκοδομήσατο, καὶ ἄγαλμα ἐς αὐτὸν ἠθέλησε τὸ τοῦ Διὸς τοῦ 'Ολυμπίου ἐς τὸ ἑαυτοῦ εἶδος μεταρρυθμίσαι. μὴ δυνηθεὶς δέ (τό τε γὰρ πλοῖον τὸ πρὸς τὴν κομιδὴν αὐτοῦ ναυπηγηθὲν ἐκερανυώθη, καὶ γέλως, ὁσάκις τινὲς ὡς καὶ τοῦ ἕδους ἐφαψόμενοι προσῆλθον, πολὺς ἐξηκούετο) ἐκείνῳ μὲν ἐπιπείλει, αὐτὸς δὲ ἕτερον ἐνέστησε.

This was the laugh of divine derision (cp. e.g. Psa. 2. 4, 37. 13, 59. 8), very different rom the unsympathetic exultation of Zeus in the late Homeric theomachia (Il. 21. 388 ff. at the sight of the gods fighting, 508 at the plight of Artemis) or his rather undignified mirth over the post-Homeric pranks of Hermes (h. Herm. 389, Loukian. dial. deor. 7. 3).

[2] Loukian. Tim. 4 (quoted supra p. 966), Iup. trag. 25 εἴ γ' ἐπ' ἐμοὶ τὸ πρᾶγμ' ἦν, ἐᾶσαί μ' ἂν οἷει τοὺς ἱεροσύλους πρῴην ἀπελθεῖν ἀκεραυνώτους ἐκ Πίσης, δύο μου τῶν πλοκάμων ἀποκείραντας ἓξ μνᾶς ἑκάτερον ἕλκοντα;

[3] Supra i. 167.

[4] Kedren. hist. comp. 326 D—327 A (i. 573 Bekker) ἐν τούτοις ἥ τε τῶν 'Ολυμπιάδων ἀπέσβη πανήγυρις, ἥτις κατὰ τετραετῆ χρόνον ἐπετελεῖτο. ἤρξατο δὲ ἡ τοιαύτη πανήγυρις ὅτε Μανασσῆς τῶν 'Ιουδαίων ἐβασίλευσε, καὶ ἐφυλάττετο ἕως τῆς ἀρχῆς αὐτοῦ τοῦ μεγάλου Θεοδοσίου.

[5] Schol. Loukian. rhet. praec. 9 (p. 176, 3 ff. Rabe) καὶ διήρκεσεν ἀρξάμενος ἀπὸ τῶν καθ' 'Εβραίους κριτῶν μέχρι τοῦ μικροῦ Θεοδοσίου· ἐμπρησθέντος γὰρ τοῦ ἐν 'Ολυμπίᾳ ναοῦ ἐξέλιπε καὶ ἡ τῶν 'Ηλείων πανήγυρις, ib. (p. 178, 2 ff. Rabe) ἀρξάμενος δὲ ἀπὸ τῆς <ἐποχ->ῆς> καθ' 'Εβραίους ἐπ' 'Ιάειρον ἐνά< >διήρκεσε μέχρι τοῦ μικροῦ <Θεοδοσίου>, ὃς 'Αρκαδίου υἱὸς ἦν, τῶν χρό<νων. τοῦ δὲ> ναοῦ τοῦ 'Ολυμπίου Διὸς ἐμπρη<σθέντος ἐξ>έλιπε καὶ ἡ τῶν 'Ηλείων πανήγυρις <καὶ ὁ ἀγὼ>ν ὁ 'Ολυμπικός.

[6] Supra ii. 864 n. 1.

Cnidian Aphrodite of Praxiteles, and the Kairos of Lysippos[1]. But its exile was of no long duration. The Lauseion in turn was burnt in 462 A.D.[2], and with it disappeared for ever the masterpiece of Pheidias.

The statue had gone; its influence remained. Theodoros Anagnostes[3] (c. 530 A.D.) tells a strange tale of a certain painter who ventured to portray the Saviour in the guise of Zeus. The hand with which he painted thereupon withered away, but was restored again in answer to the prayers of Saint Gennadios. Later writers[4] repeat the incident, Theophanes[5] and Kedrenos[6] referring it to the year 463—just a twelvemonth after the destruction of the statue. Theodoros and most of the later authorities add the comment that the type with curly and short hair was the more authentic likeness.

We have here a clear recognition of two main types in the iconography of Christ—the one youthful and beardless, with comparatively short, curly hair, the other more mature and bearded, with moustache and flowing tresses. It used to be thought that the beardless type was considerably earlier than the bearded, the former alone being found till the end of the fourth century, the latter dating from the first half of the fifth[7]. But we now know that the two had existed side

[1] Kedren. hist. comp. 322 B—C (i. 564 Bekker) ὅτι ἐν τοῖς Λαύσου ἦσαν... ἵστατο δὲ... καὶ ὁ Φειδίου ἐλεφάντινος Ζεύς, ὃν Περικλῆς ἀνέθηκεν εἰς νεὼν Ὀλυμπίων.

[2] Kedren. hist. comp. 348 A—B (i. 609 f. Bekker) τῷ ε' ἔτει γέγονεν ἐμπρησμὸς ἐν Κωνσταντινουπόλει...σφόδρα γὰρ ἐκράτει ὁ ἐμπρησμὸς οὗτος...ἐπὶ δὲ μεσημβρίας ἐν τῇ μέσῃ τῆς πόλεως ἀπὸ τῶν Λαύσου μέχρι τοῦ Ταύρου πάντα κατελυμήνατο, Zonar. ann. 14 (ii. 62 B Ducange) πνεύματος δὲ σφοδροῦ πνέοντος τηνικαῦτα, ἡ φλὸξ ἦρτο ταχέως ἀέριος, καὶ πολλὰς μεγίστας τε καὶ καλλίστας οἰκοδομὰς κατηθάλωσε, καὶ ἀγάλματα κατέφλεξεν ἀρχαίων ἀνδρῶν ἐπισήμων ἐπὶ σοφίᾳ καὶ ἐπ' ἀνδρείᾳ, κ.τ.λ.

On this and other conflagrations at Constantinople see E. Oberhummer in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. iv. 1000.

[3] Theodor. Anagnost. eccl. hist. i. 15 (lxxxvi. i. 173 A Migne) ἐπὶ Γενναδίου ἡ χεὶρ τοῦ ζωγράφου ἐξηράνθη τοῦ ἐν τάξει Διὸς τὸν Σωτῆρα γράψαι τολμήσαντος· ὃν δι' εὐχῆς ἰάσατο Γεννάδιος. φησὶ δὲ ὁ ἱστορῶν ὅτι τὸ ἄλλο σχῆμα τοῦ Σωτῆρος, τὸ οὖλον καὶ ὀλιγότριχον, ὑπάρχει τὸ ἀληθέστερον.

[4] Collected by E. von Dobschütz Christusbilder Leipzig 1899 p. 107* f.

[5] Theophan. chronogr. 97 B (i. 174 Classen) on ann. mund. 5955=463 A.D. τῷ δ' αὐτῷ ἔτει ζωγράφου τινὸς τὸν Σωτῆρα γράψαι τολμήσαντος καθ' ὁμοιότητα τοῦ Διός, ἐξηράνθη ἡ χεὶρ· ὃν ἐξαγορεύσαντα δι' εὐχῆς ἰάσατο Γεννάδιος. φασὶ δέ τινες τῶν ἱστορικῶν, ὅτι τὸ οὖλον καὶ ὀλιγότριχον σχῆμα ἐπὶ τοῦ Σωτῆρος οἰκειότερόν ἐστιν.

[6] Kedren. hist. comp. 348 D (i. 611 Bekker) τῷ ϛ' ἔτει ζωγράφου τινὸς τὸν Σωτῆρα γράψαι τολμήσαντος καθ' ὁμοιότητα τοῦ Διός, ἐξηράνθη ἡ χεὶρ· ὃν ἐξαγορεύσαντα δι' εὐχῆς ἰάσατο Γεννάδιος. φασὶ δέ τινες τῶν ἱστορικῶν, ὅτι τὸ οὖλον καὶ ὀλιγότριχον σχῆμα ἐπὶ τοῦ Σωτῆρος οἰκειότερόν ἐστιν—a verbal transcript from Theophanes.

[7] V. Schultze Grundriss der christlichen Archäologie München 1919 p. 132 contends that, in the absence of authentic portraiture, throughout the first four centuries of our era the prevalent conception of Christ, derived alike from the Old Testament (Psa. 45. 2) and by side at least from the second half of the second century[1], though their relative frequency underwent continuous change. At first the the New (John 1. 14, 2 Cor. 4. 4, Col. 1. 15, Hebr. 1. 3), necessitated an ideal rendering of him as the Son of God: 'Daraus ergaben sich für das Christusbild der Kunst zwei Folgerungen und Forderungen, Schönheit und Jugend. Sie bestimmen und erklären das Christusbild bis zum Ende des vierten Jahrhunderts, wo der erste Abschnitt seiner Geschichte schliesst.' Id. ib. p. 141 'Ich behaupte, dass in keinem einzigen Falle bisher ein bärtiger Christuskopf im 3. oder 4. Jahrhundert nachgewiesen ist. Die Reihe beginnt vielmehr erst mit dem 5. Jahrhundert.' To the same effect id. 'Ursprung und älteste Geschichte des Christusbildes' in the Zeitschrift für kirchliche Wissenschaft und kirchliches Leben 1883 iv. 301—315, id. Archäologie der altchristlichen Kunst München 1895 pp. 341—345 ('Das Christusbild'), id. 'Christus in der frühchristlichen Kunst' in the Strena Buliciana Zagrebiae 1924 pp. 331—336 (p. 335 'Ich komme zu dem bärtigen Typus. Er tritt zuerst in der ersten Hälfte des fünften Jahrhunderts auf. Das vierte Jahrhundert kennt ihn nicht. Das ist eine Tatsache, die unumstösslich fest steht'), and elsewhere.

See further H. Holtzmann 'Ueber die Entstehung des Christusbildes der Kunst' in the Jahrbücher für protestantische Theologie 1877 iii. 189—192, id. 'Zur Entwickelung des Christusbildes der Kunst' ib. 1884 x. 71—136, L. Dietrichson Christusbilledet Kjøbenhavn 1880 pp. 1—444, L. von Sybel Christliche Antike Marburg 1906 i. 280—283, 1909 ii. 151—159, H. Dütschke Ravennatische Studien Leipzig 1909 pp. 99—121 ('Der jugendliche Christus von Ravenna'), O. M. Dalton Byzantine Art and Archaeology Oxford 1911 pp. 670—673 ('Types of Christ'), C. M. Kaufmann Handbuch der christlichen Archäologie[2] Paderborn 1913 pp. 375—381, Mrs A. Strong Apotheosis and After Life London 1915 pp. 100 ff., 280 f., H. Preuss Das Bild Christi im Wandel der Zeiten[2] Leipzig 1921, G. E. Meille Christ's Likeness in History and Art trans. E. M. Kirkman London 1924 pp. 1—178, R. Berger Die Darstellung des thronenden Christus in der romanischen Kunst Reutlingen 1926 pp. 1—232.

E. von Dobschütz Christusbilder Leipzig 1899 pp. 1—294 deals exhaustively with one special type of representation, the alleged ἀχειροποίητα (p. 263 'Der christliche Achiropoïiten-Glaube ist die Fortsetzung des griechischen Glaubens an Diipetē').

[1] See especially J. Sauer Die ältesten Christusbilder Berlin 1920 pp. 1—8 with 2 figs. and 13 pls., and the same scholar's enlarged study 'Das Aufkommen des bärtigen Christustypus in der frühchristlichen Kunst' in the Strena Buliciana Zagrebiae 1924 pp. 303—329.

The bronze group at Kaisareia Paneas is described by Euseb. hist. eccl. 7. 18 ἀλλ' ἐπειδὴ τῆσδε τῆς πόλεως εἰς μνήμην ἐλήλυθα, οὐκ ἄξιον ἡγοῦμαι παρελθεῖν διήγησιν καὶ τοῖς μεθ' ἡμᾶς μνημονεύεσθαι ἀξίαν. τὴν γὰρ αἱμορροοῦσαν, ἣν ἐκ τῶν ἱερῶν εὐαγγελίων πρὸς τοῦ σωτῆρος ἡμῶν τοῦ πάθους ἀπαλλαγὴν εὑρέσθαι μεμαθήκαμεν, ἐνθένδε ἔλεγον ὁρμᾶσθαι, τόν τε οἶκον αὐτῆς ἐπὶ τῆς πόλεως δείκνυσθαι, καὶ τῆς ὑπὸ τοῦ σωτῆρος εἰς αὐτὴν εὐεργεσίας θαυμαστὰ τρόπαια παραμένειν. ἑστάναι γὰρ ἐφ' ὑψηλοῦ λίθου πρὸς μὲν ταῖς πύλαις τοῦ αὐτῆς οἴκου γυναικὸς ἐκτύπωμα χάλκεον ἐπὶ γόνυ κεκλιμένον καὶ τεταμέναις ἐπὶ τὸ πρόσθεν ταῖς χερσίν, ἱκετευούσῃ ἐοικός, τούτου δὲ ἄντικρυς ἄλλο τῆς αὐτῆς ὕλης ἀνδρὸς ὄρθιον σχῆμα, διπλοΐδα κοσμίως περιβεβλημένον καὶ τὴν χεῖρα τῇ γυναικὶ προτεῖνον, οὗ παρὰ τοῖς ποσὶν ἐπὶ τῆς στήλης αὐτῆς ξένον τι βοτάνης εἶδος φύειν, ὃ μέχρι τοῦ κρασπέδου τῆς τοῦ χαλκοῦ διπλοΐδος ἀνιὸν ἀλεξιφάρμακόν τι παντοίων νοσημάτων τυγχάνειν. τοῦτον τὸν ἀνδριάντα τοῦ Ἰησοῦ εἰκόνα φέρειν ἔλεγον. ἔμεινε δὲ καὶ εἰς ἡμᾶς, ὡς καὶ ὄψει παραλαβεῖν ἐπιδημήσαντας αὐτοὺς τῇ πόλει. Cp. Nikephoros Kallistos Xanthopoulos hist. eccl. 6. 15 (cxlv. 1160 C—1161 A Migne). J. Wilpert 'Alte Kopie der Statue von Paneas' in the Strena Buliciana pp. 295—301 has shown that this much-discussed monument was certainly Christian not pagan in character, but represented the Syrophoenician woman (Mark 7. 26) rather than the woman with an issue of blood (Mark 5. 25). He accepts the suggestion of R. Garrucci Storia della arte cristiana nei primi otto secoli della chiesa Prato 1881 v. 44—47 pl. 323, 4—6 that a marble sarcophagus (no. 174) now in the Lateran Museum (O. Marucchi beardless type was by far the more common, the bearded was rare and exceptional. But scenes of judgment, law-giving, and teaching, in which stress was laid on the majesty of the central figure, gradually popularised the maturer type[1] until it almost superseded the more youthful. It seems probable that both were to some extent influenced by pre-existing pagan types. I have already suggested that the boyish figure of Christ on the chalice of Antioch is reminiscent of the child Zeus or Dionysos[2]. And Furtwängler[3],

I monumenti del museo cristiano Pio-Lateranense Milano 1910 p. 22 pl. 29, 2, 2A, 2B) has preserved on its right-hand side a faithful copy of the Paneas bronze. If so, the figure of Christ was of the bearded type. Asterios, bishop of Amaseia, ap. Phot. bibl. p. 505 b 5 ff. states that the bronze was destroyed by Maximinus, i.e. Galerius Valerius Maximinus (305—314 A.D.). But Philostorg. hist. eccl. 7. 3 (lxv. 537 C—539 C Migne) puts its demolition in the time of Julian (361—363 A.D.), as does Sozom. hist. eccl. 5. 21 (lxvii. 1280 B—C Migne) adding a story that, when Julian set up a statue of himself in its stead, this was struck by lightning: Philostorgios claims that the head of Christ was separately preserved by the Christians; Sozomenos, that the fragments of the whole figure were piously put together and bestowed in the church. See for details E. von Dobschütz Christusbilder Leipzig 1899 p. 250* ff.

The hypogaeum discovered at Rome in 1919 close to the Viale Manzoni was decorated with paintings which range from the second half of s. ii to the first half of s. iii A.D. (G. Bendinelli in the Not. Scavi 1920 pp. 123—141 with figs. 1—8 and pls. 1—4, Am. Journ. Arch. 1921 xxv. 304, R. Paribeni Antichissime Pitture Cristiane a Roma Milano 1921, R. Lanciani in The Illustrated London News for Jan. 14, 1922 p. 54 f. with 7 figs.). These include fine portrait-figures of the eleven Apostles, four representations of the Good Shepherd carrying a ram on his shoulders, and some more problematic landscape scenes. The most impressive of the second-century paintings shows a bearded man sitting on a wooded or bushy hillside with an open roll in his hand: below him sheep and kids are assembled (Bendinelli loc. cit. p. 131 f. pl. 3, M. H. Swindler Ancient Painting Yale Univ. Press 1929 p. 402 fig. 621, E. Strong Art in Ancient Rome London 1929 ii. 155 with fig. 492). We can hardly fail to recognise the Shepherd-Judge and Divine Ruler (supra ii. 1208 f.). And Bendinelli does well to recall the epitaph of Aberkios μαθητὴς ποιμένος ἀγροῦ, | ὃς βόσκει προβάτων ἀγέλας ὄρεσιν πεδίοις τε, | ὀφθαλμοὺς ὃς ἔχει μεγάλους πάντη καθορῶντας. | οὗτος γάρ μ' ἐδίδαξε < > γράμματα πιστά (text and commentary in C. M. Kaufmann Handbuch der christlichen Archäologie Paderborn 1913 pp. 717—725 and more fully in F. J. Dölger ΙΧΘΥC Münster in Westf. 1922 ii. 454—507).

As to the bearded type in the Catacomb of Domitilla, J. Sauer in the Strena Buliciana p. 310 observes: 'Es findet sich in der Domitilla-Katakombe, Cubiculum III (Wilpert Taf. 40, 2; 54, 2 und S. 107) aus der 1. Hälfte des 3. Jahrhunderts: der Heiland ist hier als Richter oder Lehrer dargestellt mit langem Hauptbaar und kurzem aber vollem Barthaar. An der Identität dieser Figur ist trotz der Einwendungen von Victor Schultze [Grundriss der christlichen Archäologie p. 141] nicht zu zweifeln; die Nachweise Wilperts hiefür [Wilpert p. 406] sind unseres Erachtens völlig überzeugend.'

[1] J. Sauer in the Strena Buliciana p. 319 ff.

[2] Supra ii. 1209 f. For other possible influences see L. Dietrichson Christusbilledet Kjøbenhavn 1880 p. 146 ff. (Zeus, Apollon, Dionysos, with their 'Nebenfiguren' Sarapis, Asklepios, Orpheus), H. Holtzmann in the Jahrbücher für protestantische Theologie 1884 x. 93 ff. (Orpheus, Hermes), A. Furtwängler in the Mélanges Perrot Paris 1902 p. 119 (Triptolemos or Eubouleus, Bonus Eventus).

[3] A. Furtwängler 'Vom Zeus des Phidias' in the Mélanges Perrot Paris 1902 pp. 109—120. Cp. V. Schultze Archäologie der altchristlichen Kunst München 1895 no mean critic of art-pedigrees, has contended that the Byzantine bearded type had for its actual 'Vorbild' the Pheidiac Zeus.

Be that as it may, Theodoros' tale of the fifth-century painter, who drew Christ in the likeness of Zeus, is one more reminder that Pheidias' ideal had gone far towards satisfying the aspirations of the new faith. Even the lower classical conception of Zeus as a threatening storm-god appealed to the barbarians of the empire and finally made its way into the religious art of the Renaissance (fig. 782)[1].

Fig. 782.

* *
*

And what—it may be asked in conclusion—is the ultimate significance of all this coil—this cult of Zeus with its crude physical

p. 344 'Nur einmal ist auf einem Sarkophagrelief im Museo Kircheriano, wo ein ganz unfähiger Bildhauer Scenen aus dem Leben Jesu—Bergpredigt und Heilungen—zusammengefügt hat (Fig. 108), ein barbarisierter Zeustypus übernommen. Besonders tritt derselbe bei dem lehrenden Christus hervor. Für den Kopf, den Nackten Oberkörper, die Haltung lassen sich genaue antike Parallelen finden. Aber dieser Fall ist eine Ausnahme und will so beurteilt sein.' H. Holtzmann loc. cit. p. 87 ff. dwells on the influence of Asklepios (Zeus Asklepiós supra ii. 1076 ff.) and Sarapis (Zeus Sárapis supra i. 188 ff., ii. 1158, iii. 945). A. Alföldi A Festival of Isis in Rome Budapest 1937 p. 38 n. 54 pl. 7, 16 advocates Sarapis.

[1] I give as an example (or warning) a woodcut which appears in Alberto da Castello Rosario della gloriosa Vergine Maria Venetiis 1521 p. 190. See V. Masséna prince d'Essling Les Livres à figures vénitiens Florence—Paris 1909 ii. 2. 426. The illustration beginnings, its slow mental and moral growth, its adolescent complexities, its later multifarious advances, approaches, contacts, overlappings, fusions, and identifications? That is a grave question, which I find hard to answer unless, like Browning's Ixion,

'Out of the wreck I rise—past Zeus to the Potency o'er him.'

Let us be bold to assert that throughout all ages and in every clime God has been making his mute appeal to men, drawing them, Jew and Gentile alike, with the cords of love nearer and nearer to Himself. Progressive illumination has been given them from above as they were able to bear it. The poets and thinkers of Hellas were receptive souls, and to them were vouchsafed glimpses and more than glimpses of eternal truth. If Pherekydes[1] taught that Zeus transformed himself into Love when he created the world, if Aischylos[2] found in Zeus the only possible solution for the problem of evil, if Aratos[3] said that 'always we all have need of Zeus,' if Dion[4] described Zeus as 'the common Father and Saviour and Keeper of mankind,' then Pherekydes and Aischylos and Aratos and Dion were not far from the Kingdom. And, unless I am greatly in error, the cult of Zeus took them one stage, one long stage, on the road thither. Platon[5] in the Phaidros speaks of those who follow Zeus and all the gods by an uphill path to the summit of the heavenly vault, the right view-point of the universe. What is the panorama that greets their purified eyes? A vista of ideal verities, says Platon[6], such as 'no earthly bard has ever yet sung or ever will sing in worthy strains.'

ΚΕΙΝΩΝ ΕΡΑΜΑΙ, ΚΕΙΘΙ ΓΕΝΟΙΜΑΝ[7].

is entitled 'Maria vergine sempre prega el figliolo per gli peccatori.' Christ, seated on the globe of heaven (supra i. 50 f.), is distinguished from Zeus or Iupiter only by the wounds in his hands and feet. The virgin, baring her breast in a last appeal (supra ii. 206 n. 2), is almost equally pagan.

[1] Supra ii. 316.
[2] Supra i p. v.
[3] Supra ii p. v.
[4] Supra p. 963.
[5] Supra ii. 43 f.

[6] Plat. Phaedr. 247 B—C ἔνθα δὴ πόνος τε καὶ ἀγὼν ἔσχατος ψυχῇ πρόκειται. αἱ μὲν γὰρ ἀθάνατοι καλούμεναι, ἡνίκ' ἂν πρὸς ἄκρῳ γένωνται, ἔξω πορευθεῖσαι ἔστησαν ἐπὶ τῷ τοῦ οὐρανοῦ νώτῳ, στάσας δὲ αὐτὰς περιάγει ἡ περιφορά, αἱ δὲ θεωροῦσι τὰ ἔξω τοῦ οὐρανοῦ. τὸν δὲ ὑπερουράνιον τόπον οὔ τέ τις ὕμνησέ πω τῶν τῇδε ποιητὴς οὔ τέ ποτ' ὑμνήσει κατ' ἀξίαν. ἔχει δὲ ὧδε. τολμητέον γὰρ οὖν τό γε ἀληθὲς εἰπεῖν, ἄλλως τε καὶ περὶ ἀληθείας λέγοντα. The Christian equivalent will be found in 1 Cor. 2. 9 and 10.

[7] Eur. ap. Aristoph. vesp. 751. The schol. ad loc. says κείνων ἔραμαι· ἐξ Ἱππολύτου Εὐριπίδου. F. H. M. Blaydes, after L. C. Valckenaer, supposes a quotation from the earlier Ἱππόλυτος καλυπτόμενος. In any case the meaning of the original may be divined from Eur. Alc. 867 f. ζηλῶ φθιμένους, κείνων ἔραμαι, | κεῖν' ἐπιθυμῶ δώματα ναίειν.

CAMBRIDGE: PRINTED BY
W. LEWIS, M.A.
AT THE UNIVERSITY PRESS

3 1197 00285 4443

ΚΡΑΙ
ΜΥΤΙΛΗΝΑ
ΙΩΝ

ZEUS

A STUDY IN ANCIENT RELIGION

VOLUME III

PART II

CAMBRIDGE UNIVERSITY PRESS
LONDON: BENTLEY HOUSE
NEW YORK, TORONTO, BOMBAY
CALCUTTA, MADRAS: MACMILLAN
TOKYO: MARUZEN COMPANY LTD

All rights reserved

ZEUS

A STUDY IN ANCIENT RELIGION

BY

ARTHUR BERNARD COOK, LITT.D.

VICE-PRESIDENT OF QUEENS' COLLEGE, CAMBRIDGE
EMERITUS PROFESSOR OF CLASSICAL ARCHAEOLOGY

VOLUME III

ZEUS GOD OF THE DARK SKY (EARTHQUAKES, CLOUDS, WIND, DEW, RAIN, METEORITES)

χὠ Ζεὺς ἄλλοκα μὲν πέλει αἴθριος, ἄλλοκα δ' ὗει

THEOKRITOS 4. 43

PART II

APPENDIXES AND INDEX

38164 7
11 6 40

Cambridge:
at the University Press
1940

BL
820
J8C66 1914 v.3
pt.2

PRINTED IN GREAT BRITAIN

APPENDIX P.

FLOATING ISLANDS.

Floating islands have not yet been made the subject of any monograph[1]. But examples of them are given by Sen. nat. quaestt. 3. 25. 7 ff., Plin. nat. hist. 2. 209, and the anonymous author de aquis mirabilibus 37 ff. (formerly identified with Sotion (Phot. bibl. p. 145 b 28 ff. Bekker) and printed under that name by A. Westermann ΠΑΡΑΔΟΞΟΓΡΑΦΟΙ Brunsvigae 1839 p. 183 ff., but better edited as Paradoxographi Florentini anonymi opusculum de aquis mirabilibus by H. Oehler Tubingae 1913 and cited as such in W. Christ Geschichte der griechischen Litteratur[6] München 1920 ii. 420 f.). Fact and fable are so blended in their accounts that individual cases call for separate consideration:

(1) Aiolos Hippotades lived on a floating island (Od. 10. 3 πλωτῇ ἐνὶ νήσῳ as explained by Aristarchos ap. schol. H.M.Q.T.V. Od. 10. 3, Apollon. lex. Hom. p. 132, 18 f., Eustath. in Od. p. 1644, 51 ff., cp. Hesych. s.v. πλωτή, Phot. lex. s.v. πλωτόν, Favorin. lex. p. 1523, 18 f., Souid. s.v. πλωτὴ νῆσος, Zonar. lex. s.v. πλωτή, and W. W. Merry ad loc.), which was perhaps originally regarded as an island of souls (supra p. 109). On it see further K. Tümpel in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. i. 1032 ff.

(2) The Homeric Planktai were beetling rocks against which the waves broke. No birds could pass them in safety. Even the doves that brought ambrosia to Zeus always lost one of their number, and another had to be sent by him in its stead. Never yet had any ship escaped these rocks, for billows of salt water and blasts of destructive fire overwhelmed ships and crews alike. The Argo alone, on its voyage from Aietes, had passed them, being sent past in safety by Hera for Iason's sake (Od. 12. 59—72, 23. 327). There is no question here of clashing rocks, between which Odysseus must go (schol. Pind. Pyth. 4. 370). The poet, anxious to eliminate incredible marvels (supra ii. 989), has substituted παρά for διά (62 παρέρχεται, 69 παρέπλω, 72 παρέπεμψεν) and left us to suppose that the danger lay in being dashed against the rocks, not in being crushed between them. Nevertheless the name Πλαγκταί used of them by the blessed gods (61) implies that they were originally conceived as 'Wandering' rocks, and the sinister phrase ἀλλά τε καὶ τῶν αἰὲν ἀφαιρεῖται λὶς πέτρη (64) looks like a reminiscence of the clashing motif.

The Kyaneai (first in Soph. Ant. 966 or Hdt. 4. 85) or Symplegades (first in Eur. Med. 431) of the Argonauts' adventure were two living rocks which rushed together, rolling faster than the winds (Pind. Pyth. 4. 208 ff.). As early as s. v B.C., if not earlier, they were located on the Thracian Bosporos (Soph. Ant. 966 f. and Hdt. 4. 85) at the entrance to the Euxine (Eur. I.T. 124 f.), where they formed the mouth of the Pontos (Theokr. 22. 27 f., Nikeph. Greg. hist. Byz. 5. 4 (i. 134 Schopen)). Apollonios of Rhodes tells how the Argonauts on their outward voyage were warned by Phineus of the two Kyaneai, which were not firmly fixed with roots beneath but constantly clashed together amid boiling surf, and advised by him to send a dove in advance (Ap. Rhod. 2. 317 ff.); how they acted on his advice and saw the rocks shear off the tail-feathers of the bird; how they themselves making a desperate dash just got through, thanks to the helpful hands of Athena, with the loss of the tip of their stern-ornament; and how the rocks thenceforward were rooted fast and remained motionless (ib. 2. 549 ff.—a fine piece of writing). It should be observed that Apollonios is careful to distinguish the Kyaneai or Plegades, as he terms them (Ap. Rhod. 2. 596, 2. 645, and Καύνου κτίσις frag. 5. 4 Powell ap. Cramer anecd. Par. iv. 16, 1 ff. and Tzetz. in Lyk. Al. 1285), from the Homeric Planktai. For it is only on the return voyage that he works in an allusion to the Planktai, which are described as having surge at their bases and flame at their tops (Ap. Rhod. 4. 786 ff., 924 ff.) in obvious reference to the Lipari Islands (cp. Ap. Rhod. 3. 41 f. ἀλλ' ὁ μὲν (sc. Hephaistos) ἐς χαλκεῶνα καὶ ἄκμονας ἦρι βεβήκει, | νήσοιο πλαγκτῆς εὐρὺν μυχόν with schol. ad loc.).

[1] Unless we concede the name to such articles as those by Mary Johnston 'Floating islands, ancient and modern' in the Classical Weekly 1925—1926 xix. 58, L. R. Shero 'The Vadimonian Lake and floating islands of Equatorial Africa' ib. 1933—1934 xxvii. 51 f., J. W. Spaeth 'More floating islands' ib. p. 78, R. M. Geer 'Floating islands once more' ib. p. 152 or to such chapters as those of A. Breusing 'Nautisches zu Homeros. 6. ΠΛΩΤΗΙ ΕΝΙ ΝΗCΩΙ' in the Jahrb. f. class. Philol. 1886 xxxii. 85—92 and E. Hawks The Book of Natural Wonders London 1932 pp. 192—198 ('Disappearing Islands').

Many of the Greeks, however, identified the Kyaneai or Symplegades of the Bosporos with the Planktai (so first, perhaps, Hdt. 4. 85, then Asklepiades (? of Myrleia: see G. Wentzel in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. ii. 1629) ap. schol. Od. 12. 69 and other νεώτεροι (schol. Eur. Med. 2) listed by O. Jessen in Roscher Lex. Myth. iii. 2546). And sundry Roman poets, placing Scylla in Sicilian waters, associate her with clashing rocks (Ov. met. 7. 62 ff.) called Symplegades (Ov. her. 12. 121) or Cyaneae (Iuv. 15. 19 f.).

The right conclusion is drawn by O. Jessen loc. cit., viz. that both the Planktai and the Kyaneai or Symplegades presuppose the ancient popular belief in a doorway to the Otherworld formed by clashing mountain-walls (T. Waitz Anthropologie der Naturvölker Leipzig 1864 iv. 166 the Mexican dead 'hatte aneinander schlagende Berge...zu passiren,' Jülg 'über die griechische Heldensage im Wiederscheine bei den Mongolen' in the Verh. d. 26. Philologenversamml. in Würzburg 1869 p. 64 in the Mongolian saga of Gesser Chan bk 4 'Von da weiterhin kommst du zu einer andern Verwandlung, nämlich zu zwei an einander schlagenden Felswänden; um zwischen denselben durchzukommen, musst du selbst ein Mittel ausfindig machen,' E. B. Tylor Primitive Culture[3] London 1891 i. 347 f. the Karens of Burma 'say that in the west there are two massive strata of rocks which are continually opening and shutting, and between these strata the sun descends at sunset,' ib. i. 348 f. in an Ottawa tale Iosco and his friends after travelling eastward for years reached the chasm that led to the land of the Sun and Moon; as the sky rose, Iosco and one friend leapt through, but the other two were caught by the sky as it struck the earth, A. Leskien—K. Brugman Litauische Volkslieder und Märchen Strassburg 1882 p. 550 in a Slovenian tale the hero's mother 'stellt sich krank und will Wasser von zwei zusammenschlagenden Felsen, die aber keine Felsen, sondern Teufel sind, und nur um Mitternacht zwei Minuten schlafen,' ib. p. 551 in a similar Slovak tale the mother 'stellt sich krank und verlangt...das Wasser des Lebens und des Todes, das unter zwei Bergen ist, von denen der eine um Mittag, der andere um Mitternacht sich erhebt und gleich wieder zufällt,' ib. in a similar tale from Little Russia the mother 'stellt sich krank und schickt den Sohn...nach heilendem und belebendem Wasser zu den zusammenschlagenden Bergen,' W. R. S. Ralston Russian Folk-tales London 1873 p. 235 f. cites stories of the same type. In one 'the hero is sent in search of "a healing and a vivifying water," preserved between two lofty mountains which cleave closely together, except during "two or three minutes" of each day...."Prince Ivan spurred his heroic steed, flew like a dart between the mountains, dipped two flasks in the waters, and instantly turned back." He himself escapes safe and sound, but the hind legs of his horse are caught between the closing cliffs, and smashed to pieces. The magic waters, of course, soon remedy this temporary inconvenience.... In a similar story from the Ukraine, mention is made of two springs of healing and life-giving water, which are guarded by iron-beaked ravens, and the way to which lies between grinding hills. The Fox and the Hare are sent in quest of the magic fluid. The Fox goes and returns in safety, but the Hare, on her way back, is not in time quite to clear the meeting cliffs, and her tail is jammed in between them. Since that time, hares have had no tails,' M. Gaster Rumanian Bird and Beast Stories London 1915 p. 263 ff. in a Rumanian tale Floria, sent to fetch the Water of Life and the Water of Death, was helped by a lame stork, which went straight to the mountains that knock against one another, waited—at the advice of a swallow—till noon when they rest for half an hour, then plunged into their depth and filled two bottles, but lost his tail as the mountains closed furiously upon him. And that is why storks have no tails, J. G. von Hahn Griechische und albanesische Märchen Leipzig 1864 ii. 46 in a Greek tale from Syra (supra ii. 1004 ff.) the girl Moon, helped by the bird Dikjeretto, fetched the Water of Life from a spring in a mountain which opened at midday, but had to cut off a piece of her dress that was caught by the closing cleft, ib. ii. 280 f. in another tale from Syra, akin to the group noted by Leskien and Brugman (=von Hahn's nineteenth formula 'Schwester- oder Mutter-Verrath oder Skyllaformel'), the hero's mother feigns illness and craves for the Water of Life (ἀθάναρο νερό): the young man is directed by an old dame, in reality his Fate (ἦταν ἡ τύχη τοῦ παιδιοῦ), to a mountain which opens every day at noon and contains many springs; he is guided to the right one by a bee, ib. ii. 283 f. in a variant from Vitza in Epeiros the prince's elder sister pretends to be ill and sends him for the Water of Life, which a lame crow obtains from a mountain that opens and shuts, ib. i. 238 in a tale from the Zagori district of Epeiros a prince, to win Goldylocks, must needs fetch the Water of Life from a mountain which opens only for a moment and then shuts to with a snap; he gets it from a helpful raven, who brings it to him in a gourd, ib. ii. 194 f. in another tale from Zagori the hero, to win the king's daughter, has to obtain the Water of Life from a mountain which opens and closes again with the speed of lightning; he borrows the wings of a helpful eagle and escapes with filled gourd, R. Köhler in the Gott. Gel. Anz. 1871 ii. 1403 f. no. (3)=id. Kleinere Schriften Weimar 1898 i. 367 f. in a modern Greek tale a king's son sets out to find for his sick father the Water of Immortality (τ' ἀθάναρο νερό) 'welches sich am Ende der Welt hinter zwei hohen Bergen befindet, die nach Art der Symplegaden immer auseinandergehen und wieder zusammenstossen' [...ebenso bei Sakellarios No. 8. Vgl. auch Wenzig Westslaw. Märchenschatz S. 148]. On the Water of Life see further A. Wünsche Die Sagen vom Lebensbaum und Lebenswasser Leipzig 1905 pp. 90—104 ('Das Wasser des Lebens als Zauberbrunnen in den Märchen der Völker'), J. Bolte—G. Polívka Anmerkungen zu den Kinder- u. Hausmärchen der Brüder Grimm Leipzig 1915 iii. 394—401 ('Das Wasser des Lebens')). A seafaring people might naturally conceive of such a portal as a pair of floating rocks or islets. Thus in a Greenland tale the hero Giviok 'continued paddling until he came in sight of two icebergs, with a narrow passage between them; and he observed that the passage alternately opened and closed again. He tried to pass the icebergs by paddling round outside them, but they always kept ahead of him; and at length he ventured to go right between them. With great speed and alacrity he pushed on, and had just passed when the bergs closed together, and the stern-point of his kayak got bruised between them' (H. Rink Tales and Traditions of the Eskimo Edinburgh—London 1875 p. 158 f.). It would, however, be unsafe to infer from this tale that the Planktai were 'an early attempt to reproduce some sailor's story of the floating icebergs' (W. W. Merry on Od. 12. 61) and that the Kyaneai or Symplegades presuppose a dim recollection of icebergs in the Black Sea (cp. for the facts E. H. Minns Scythians and Greeks Cambridge 1913 p. 6). Both alike are but mariners' versions of the gateway to the Otherworld.

See further F. Wieseler commentatio de Cyaneis sive Symplegadibus Gottingae 1879 pp. 1—20, O. Jessen 'Planktai' in Roscher Lex. Myth. iii. 2540—2548, Sir J. G. Frazer in his ed. of Apollodoros London—New York 1921 ii. 355—358 (Append. v 'The Clashing Rocks'), Miss J. R. Bacon The Voyage of the Argonauts London 1925 p. 79 f.

(3) As knowledge of the Mediterranean increased there was a tendency to put the clashing rocks further and further afield. Close to the Ceraunian mountains were two rocks which clashed together as often as any trouble threatened the natives (Dionys. per. 394 ff. ἔνθα σφιν τέρας ἄλλο θεοὶ θέσαν· ἀμφὶ γὰρ αἶαν | κείνην ἀμφοτέρωθεν ἐρηρέδαται δύο πέτραι, | αὖτ' ἄμφω ξυνίασι δονεύμεναι, εὖτέ τις ἀρχὴ | γίγνεται ἐνναέτησι κυλινδομένοιο κακοῖο with Eustath. ad loc. Tzetz. chil. 4. 707 ff. confuses these rocks with the graves of Kadmos and Harmonia noted by Dionysios in the same context): this reads like a bit of genuine folklore and may even be older than the location of the Homeric Planktai in the Lipari Islands. Others, impressed apparently by the fact that Tartessos sounds like Tartaros (Strab. 149), transferred both the Planktai and the Symplegades to the neighbourhood of Gadeira and identified them with the pillars of Herakles (Strab. 170, quoted by Eustath. in Dionys. per. 64). Others, again, declared that Homer etc. were speaking of rocks that lay between Kilikia (? Lykia A.B.C.) and Pamphylia (Tzetz. in Lyk. Al. 815—apparently by confusion with the Chelidonides Nesoi: see Ap. Rhod. Καύνου κτίσις frag. 5. 3 f. Powell ap. Cramer anecd. Par. iv. 16, 4 f.).

(4) An oriental analogue to the Planktai may be found in the Ambrosiai Petrai of Tyre. Nonn. Dion. 40. 422 ff. relates that, when Dionysos was in Tyre, he enquired of Herakles Ἀστροχίτων how the city came to be. The god replied that he had roused the original earth-born natives from slumber, bidding them build the first ship and cross the sea till they should reach the Ambrosiai Petrai. These were two floating rocks, on which grew an olive in the very centre of the rock. On its topmost boughs they would see an eagle perched and a well-wrought bowl. Fiery sparks sprang from the flaming tree, which, for all that, was not consumed. A snake was coiled about it, but neither hurt nor was hurt by the eagle (467 ff. εἰσόκε χῶρον ἵκοισθε μεμορμένον, ὁππόθι δισσαὶ | ἀσταθέες πλώουσιν ἀλήμονες εἰν ἁλὶ πέτραι, | ἃς Φύσις Ἀμβροσίας ἐπεφήμισεν, αἷς ἔνι θάλλει | ἥλικος αὐτόρριζον ὁμόζυγον ἔρνος ἐλαίης, | πέτρης ὑγροπόροιο μεσόμφαλον· ἀκροτάτοις δὲ | αἰετὸν ἀθρήσητε παρεδρήσοντα κορύμβοις | καὶ φιάλην εὔτυκτον· ἀπὸ φλογεροῖο δὲ δένδρου | θαμβαλέους σπινθῆρας ἐρεύγεται αὐτόματον πῦρ, | καὶ στέλας ἀφλεγέος περιβόσκεται ἔρνος ἐλαίης· | καὶ φυτὸν ὑψιπέτηλον ἕλιξ ὄφις ἀμφιχορεύει, | κ.τ.λ.). They were to capture the bird and sacrifice it to Kyanochaites, pouring its blood as a libation to the sea-roaming hills and to Zeus and to the blessed ones. The rock would then stay rooted to the spot, and on both its peaks they would be able to plant their town. This remarkable description is borne out on the one hand by a passage in the novel of Achilleus Tatios, on the other by a modern Palestinian folk-tale.

Ach. Tat. 2. 14 quotes an oracle current among the Byzantines—νῆσός τις πόλις ἐστὶ φυτώννυμον αἷμα λαχοῦσα, | ἰσθμὸν ὁμοῦ καὶ πορθμὸν ἐπ' ἠπείροιο φέρουσα,| ἔνθ' Ἥφαιστος ἔχων χαίρει γλαυκῶπιν Ἀθήνην· | κεῖθι θυηπολίην σε φέρειν κέλομαι Ἡρακλεῖ (cp. Anth. Pal. 14. 34)—and explains that the island-city with inhabitants named after trees is Tyre occupied by the Phoinikes. Its isthmus-strait is the narrow neck of land uniting it with the shore, since water flows beneath it. Here, too, Hephaistos in a sense enjoys Athena—witness the sacred precinct in which a flaming fire and an olive-tree are to be seen side by side, the soot of the former positively tending the branches of the latter.

A. J. Wensinck Tree and Bird as cosmological symbols in Western Asia Amsterdam 1921 p. 45 draws attention to a tale published by H. Schmidt—P. Kahle Volkserzählungen aus Palästina Göttingen 1918 p. 146 ff. no. 42, in which it is said of the hero: 'Er kam zu Schâms ed-Duhha und fragte sie nach dem Wasser des Lebens. Da sagte sie: "Hinter dem Garten der Jungfrauen eine Tagereise zwischen zwei Bergen! Wer hinuntersteigt, über dem schlagen die beiden Bergen zusammen. Sein Lebtag ist niemand, der hinunterstieg, wieder herausgekommen. Du aber schöpfe es (das Wasser) von oben aus." Er gelangte dorthin. Da war ein Baum, über dem schwebte ein Vogel, über seinem Wipfel. Er zog sein Schwert und ging auf den Baum zu. Da war dort eine Schlange, die wollte die Brut des Vogels fressen. Sie kam auf ihn zu. Er schlug auf sie ein und tötete sie. Dann band er dem Vogel eine Flasche an den Hals. Der flog hin, füllte die Flasche und flog auf. Und während er aufflog, schlugen die Berge hinter ihm zusammen und rupften ihm den Schwanz und die Flügel. Da nahm jener die Flasche und ging zurück zur Schâms ed-Duhha.' It will be observed that the two clashing mountains, behind which is the Water of Life, the tree, the snake, the helpful bird with the bottle attached to its neck, make up a picture curiously similar to that of the Ambrosiai Petrai as described by Nonnos.

Bronze coins of Tyre, struck by a succession of Roman imperial persons from Caracalla (211—217 A.D.) to Salonina (253—268 A.D.), have for reverse type the ΑΜΒΡΟCΙЄ ΠЄΤΡЄ or ΠΑΙΤΡЄ (sic). These are shown sometimes as two omphaloí on separate bases, with an olive-tree growing between them (Brit. Mus. Cat. Coins Phoenicia p. 281 no. 430 Gordianus iii pl. 33, 15 = my fig. 783 from a cast, p. 284 no. 442 Trebonianus Gallus, p. 291 no. 473 Valerianus i, E. Babelon Les Perses Achéménides Paris 1893 p. 328 no. 2241 Elagabalos, p. 330 no. 2255 Aquilia Severa pl. 37, 9, p. 331 no. 2258 Iulia Maesa pl. 37, 11, p. 333 no. 2270 Gordianus iii, p. 340 no. 2302 Volusianus, p. 348 nos. 2349—2351 Gallienus pl. 38, 24 f., W. M. Leake Numismata Hellenica London 1854 Asiatic Greece p. 140 f. Elagabalos = my fig. 784 from a cast), sometimes as two stêlai on a single base, between crescent and star, with a flaming thymiatérion on one side and an olive-tree on the other (Brit. Mus. Cat. Coins Phoenicia p. 281 no. 429 Gordianus iii pl. 33, 14 = my fig. 785 from a cast, Hunter Cat. Coins iii. 270 no. 58 Gordianus iii pl. 77, 9 = my fig. 786, E. Babelon Les Perses Achéménides p. 334 no. 2271 Gordianus iii pl. 37, 16). Or, again, they appear in the field as a local background. Thus Herakles, with club and lion-skin, pours a libation from a phiále over a burning altar, above which are seen the two stêlai, with streams issuing from their bases (Brit. Mus. Cat. Coins Phoenicia p. 281 no. 427 Gordianus iii pl. 33, 13 = my fig. 787 from a cast, E. Babelon Les Perses Achémenides p. 321 f. no. 2198 Caracalla pl. 36, 16, p. 330 no. 2253 Aquilia Severa, p. 341 no. 2309 Valerianus i pl. 38, 8, p. 346 no. 2342 Gallienus: p. 341 no. 2308 Valerianus i pl. 38, 7 has trophy in place of altar). Okeanos, reclining, with head-dress of crab's claws, holds in his left hand an oar and extends his right towards the stêlai, from which streams flow (Brit. Mus. Cat. Coins Phoenicia p. 289 no. 464 Valerianus i, p. 296 no. 497 Salonina pl. 35, 5 = my fig. 788 from a cast, E. Babelon Les Perses Achéménides p. 347 no. 2343 Gallienus pl. 38, 20).

Fig. 783.

Fig. 784.

Fig. 785.

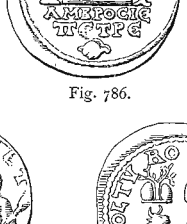

Fig. 786.

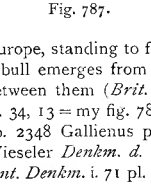

Fig. 787.

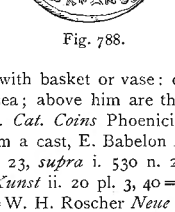

Fig. 788.

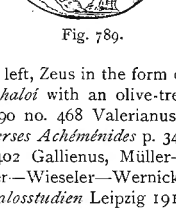

Fig. 789.

Europe, standing to front, with basket or vase: on the left, Zeus in the form of a bull emerges from the sea; above him are the omphaloi with an olive-tree between them (Brit. Mus. Cat. Coins Phoenicia p. 290 no. 468 Valerianus i pl. 34, 13 = my fig. 789 from a cast, E. Babelon Les Perses Achéménides p. 347 no. 2348 Gallienus pl. 38, 23, supra i. 530 n. 2 fig. 402 Gallienus, Müller—Wieseler Denkm. d. alt. Kunst ii. 20 pl. 3, 40 = Müller—Wieseler—Wernicke Ant. Denkm. i. 71 pl. 7, 6 = W. H. Roscher Neue Omphalosstudien Leipzig 1915 pp. 15 n. 34, 71 fig. Gallienus).

These coins enable us to trace the Ambrosiai Petrai back to a date nearly a century earlier than Achilleus Tatios, our earliest literary authority, and some two centuries earlier than Nonnos. As is so often the case, the earliest conception is the simplest. Here are seen two omphaloí or stêlai with rounded tops, from the base of which streams are flowing. Streams of what? Presumably of ambrosía. The rocks, to deserve their name, must themselves be the very source of that elixir (for the Water of Life as honey see e.g. Kalevala 15. 377 ff. trans. W. F. Kirby, cp. W. H. Roscher Nektar und Ambrosia Leipzig 1883 p. 46 ff., W. Robert—Tornow De apium mellisque apud veteres significatione et symbolica et mythologica Berolini 1893 pp. 85—89, 122—126). I cannot, therefore, agree with Eckhel Doctr. num. vet.[2] iii. 390 'profluente subtus aqua, nimirum quod aqua maris perpetuo humectantur.' Again, the coins give no hint of the eagle and the phiále. These are not mentioned before the fifth-century epic of Nonnos and may be an accretion due partly to the popular concept of Zeus as an eagle fed on ambrosía from the phiále of Ganymedes (e.g. Reinach Rép. Reliefs i. 115, 190 no. 1, ii. 232 no. 3, iii. 231 no. 2, 370 no. 2, 489 no. 2. I add in fig. 790 a Roman lamp of Augustan date in my possession (scale $\frac{1}{1}$), cp. a similar but smaller lamp with bungled inscription published by R. Kekulé in the Ann. d. Inst. 1866 xxxviii. 121 f. pl. G, 1, and in pl. lxix, (1) the relief on a bronze mirror-case of early imperial date from Miletopolis (Melde) acquired in 1907 by the Fitzwilliam Museum, Cambridge (diameter 6½ inches); (2) an exact replica of it in the collection of the late Dr A. H. Lloyd, Cambridge. On comparison with the sarcophagus at Rome (Müller—Wieseler—Wernicke Ant. Denkm. i. 87 pl. 9, 19=Amelung Sculpt. Vatic. ii. 277 f. no. 97 a pl. 24=Reinach op. cit. iii. 370 no. 2) it becomes clear that the design is better suited to a circular than to an oblong space. The recumbent female figure, according to Amelung, is 'wohl eine Personification des Berges Ida.' I too should take her to be the Phrygian or Cretan nymph Ide (E. Neustadt in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. ix. 880), or—less probably—the nymph Ambrosia (K. Wernicke ib. i. 1809), from whom Ganymedes has received the bowl. Overbeck Gr. Kunstmyth. Zeus p. 546 f., W. Drexler in Roscher Lex. Myth. i. 1599, and P. Friedländer in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. vii. 748, however, contend that the scene is laid in heaven, not on earth: cp. Val. Flacc. 2. 415 ff.), partly to the fact that in Levantine art of the Graeco-Roman age an eagle on a sacred stone had a solar significance (supra i. 603 f. fig. 475, ii. 186 figs. 129 f. See also F. Cumont in the Revue de l'histoire des religions 1910 lxii. 119—164, 1911 lxiii. 208—214, republished with modifications and additions in his Études Syriennes Paris 1917 pp. 35—118 ('L'aigle funéraire d'Hiérapolis et l'apothéose des empereurs'), S. Ronzevalle in the Mélanges de la Faculté orientale de Beyrouth 'L'aigle funéraire en Syrie' 1912 v. 2. 117—178, 221—231, L. Deubner 'Die Apotheose des Antoninus Pius' in the Röm. Mitth. 1912 xxvii. 1—20, Mrs A. Strong Apotheosis and After Life London 1915 pp. 181—187). The snake is a further accretion, elsewhere connected with the solar eagle of the Phoenician Ba'al-šamin (supra i. 191 f. fig. 138) and comparable with the snake twined round an ovoid stone or omphalós on other bronze coins of Tyre (Brit. Mus. Cat. Coins Phoenicia pp. cxli, 278 no. 413 Elagabalos pl. 33, 8=my fig. 791 from a cast, E. Babelon Les Perses Achéménides p. 328 no. 2240 Elagabalos pl. 37, 5, p. 339 no. 2296 Trebonianus Gallus pl. 37, 29). This serpent-twined egg appears to have had a cosmic significance: cp. Epikouros ap. Epiphan. panar. haeres. 1. 8. 1 (i. 294 Dindorf)=H. Diels Doxogr. p. 589, 11 ff. εἶναι δὲ ἐξ ὑπαρχῆς ᾠοῦ δίκην τὸ σύμπαν, τὸ δὲ πνεῦμα δρακοντοειδῶς περὶ τὸ ᾠὸν ὡς στέφανον ἢ ὡς ζώνην περισφίγγειν τότε τὴν φύσιν. θελῆσαν δὲ βιασμῷ τινι †καιρῷ (Diels cj. καὶ σῷ cp. Aristot. de caelo 4. 6 313 b 5) περισσοτέρῳ σφίγξαι τὴν πᾶσαν ὕλην εἴτ' οὖν φύσιν τῶν πάντων, οὕτω διχάσαι μὲν τὰ ὄντα εἰς τὰ δύο ἡμισφαίρια καὶ λοιπὸν ἐκ τούτου τὰ ἄτομα διακεκρίσθαι.

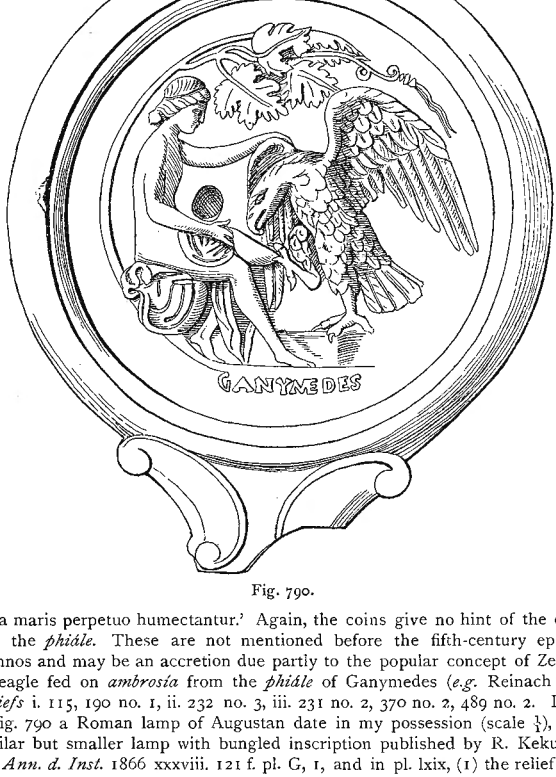

Fig. 790.

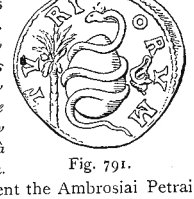

Fig. 791.

It does not appear with certainty on coins that represent the Ambrosiai Petrai (pace J. F. Vaillant Numismata ærea Imperatorum, Augustorum, et Cæsarum, in coloniis, municipiis, et urbibus iure Latio donatis, ex omni modulo percussa Parisiis 1695 ii. 101 fig., 151 fig., Eckhel Doctr. num. vet.[2] iii. 389, Stevenson—Smith—Madden Dict. Rom. Coins p. 828. Sir G. F. Hill wrote to me (April 8, 1926) with regard to the specimens in the British Museum: 'There is something twining (?) round the trunk of the tree between the stones, and I have no reason to suspect either Vaillant or Eckhel...'). Lastly, the fire, which Achilleus Tatios makes into a marvel and Nonnos into a miracle, figures on the coins only as a flaming thymiatérion or altar. The essential elements, present from the first, are the two rocks, the Water of Life or ambrosía that flows from them, and the olive-tree growing between or beside them.

Now the whole of this ambrosial business has a suspiciously Hellenistic look about it, and we may well surmise that it has been grafted on to older beliefs of indigenous growth. Sir G. F. Hill in the Brit. Mus. Cat. Coins Phoenicia p. cxli

1

2

(1) A bronze mirror-case in the Fitzwilliam Museum, Cambridge: Ganymedes feeds the Eagle in the presence of a Nymph.

(2) A similar mirror-case in the Lloyd collection, Cambridge.

See page 981.

very pertinently asks: 'Have these two baetyls any connexion with the two stelae dedicated by "Ousoos" to fire and wind?' Ousoös, the eponym of Ušû or Palai-Tyros (F. Hommel Ethnologie und Geographie des alten Orients München 1926 pp. 8, 166 f.), was the brother and rival of Samemroumos or Hypsouranios (supra ii. 981 n. 1). If Hypsouranios invented huts made of reeds, grasses, and papyrus, Ousoös invented clothing made of skins from beasts that he had captured. During a violent storm of rain and wind the trees at Tyre, rubbing against one another, kindled a fire and burnt the wood. Ousoös caught hold of a tree, stripped off the branches, and was the first who dared to put to sea. He dedicated two stêlai to Pyr and Pneuma, worshipped them, and poured as a libation to them the blood of the beasts that he had taken in the chase. When these persons died, the survivors dedicated rods to them and, celebrating a yearly festival for them, worshipped the stêlai (Philon Bybl. frag. 2 (Frag. hist. Gr. iii. 566 Müller) ap. Euseb. praep. ev. 1. 10. 10 f. δένδρου δὲ λαβόμενον τὸν Οὐσώου καὶ ἀποκλαδεύσαντα πρῶτον τολμῆσαι εἰς θάλατταν ἐμβῆναι· ἀνιερῶσαι δὲ δύο στήλας Πυρὶ καὶ Πνεύματι, καὶ προσκυνῆσαι, αἷμά τε σπένδειν αὐταῖς ἐξ ὧν ἤγρευε θηρίων. τούτων δὲ τελευτησάντων, τοὺς ἀπολειφθέντας φησὶ ῥάβδους αὐτοῖς ἀφιερῶσαι, καὶ τὰς στήλας προσκυνεῖν, καὶ τούτοις ἑορτὰς ἄγειν κατ' ἔτος). If, as seems probable, we have here a genuine echo of Phoenician cosmogony (supra ii. 1036 ff.), we may reasonably suppose at Tyre an actual cult of two cosmic stêlai (cp. supra ii. 425 f.) later equated with the Ambrosiai Petrai. Hence the abnormal representation of the Petrai on imperial coins as a couple of stêlai. R. Eisler Weltenmantel und Himmelszelt München 1910 ii. 576 n. 5 asserts with confidence: 'Es sind die zwei Masseben, die Usōos...dem Wind und dem Feuer geweiht haben soll; d. h. die beiden Gipfel des Weltenberges, durch die zwei Stelen dargestellt, versinnlichen den Feuer- und den Windpunkt des Jahreskreises (oben S. 451 f.), die winterliche Wassertiefe ist durch das Meer vertreten, auf dem die διοσαὶ πέτραι schwimmen. Hinter dem Namen "ambrosische" Felsen steckt hier in Palaityrus natürlich eine semitische Bezeichnung, etwa 'amm bērōth "Mutter der Quellen" oder dgl.'

On this showing there is a close parallelism between the Ambrosiai Petrai of Tyre, perhaps identified with the pillars of Pyr and Pneuma, and the Planktai or Symplegades of Gadeira, certainly identified with the pillars of Herakles (supra p. 978 n. 0 (3)). Even the olive-tree of Tyre reappears at Gadeira (Philostr. v. Apoll. 5. 5 p. 167 Kayser ἡ Πυγμαλίωνος δὲ ἐλαία ἡ χρυσῆ, ἀνάκειται δὲ κἀκείνη ἐς τὸ Ἡράκλειον, ἀξία μέν, ὡς φασι, καὶ τοῦ θαλλοῦ θαυμάζειν, ᾧ εἴκασται, θαυμάζεσθαι δ' ἂν ἐπὶ τῷ καρπῷ μᾶλλον, βρύειν γὰρ αὐτὸν σμαράγδου λίθου—noted by A. J. Wensinck op. cit. p. 19).

(5) Bouto (Boutos, Boutoi), an Egyptian town in the north-western part of the Delta (K. Sethe in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. iii. 1087 f., H. R. Hall The Ancient History of the Near East London 1913 p. 97 f., F. Hommel Ethnologie und Geographie des alten Orients München 1926 p. 903 ff.), gave its name to a neighbouring lake the Boutike Limne (Strab. 802). The town was famous for its cult of Leto, the lake for a floating island called Chembis (E. A. Wallis Budge The Gods of the Egyptians London 1904 i. 442 'the Island of Khebit'), which was sacred to Apollon (Hekataios frag. 284 (Frag. hist. Gr. i. 20 Müller) =frag. 305 (Frag. gr. Hist. i. 40 Jacoby) ap. Steph. Byz. s.v. Χέμμις). According to Herodotos, the lake near the sanctuary at Bouto was deep and wide; the island carried a great temple of Apollon with three altars, besides many palms, fruit-trees, etc.; and the local myth was as follows. When Typhon was searching high and low for the son of Osiris, Leto, one of the eight earliest deities, having an oracle at Bouto, received Apollon in charge from Isis and hid him for safety in this island (cp. Plout. de Is. et Os. 38), which up to that time had been fixed but was thenceforward said to be afloat. Apollon and Artemis were children of Dionysos by Isis, Leto being their nurse and preserver: in Egyptian Apollon was Horos, Demeter was Isis, Artemis was Boúbastis (Hdt. 2. 156, cp. Mela 1. 55 Chemmis, Eustath. in Od. p. 1644, 60 f. Ἔχεμις). The goddess thus identified by the Greeks with Leto was the Egyptian Bouto, earlier Udō, on whom see K. Sethe loc. cit. iii. 1086 f., H. R. Hall op. cit. p. 97. Hommel claims that she was originally the chief goddess of Punt and notes an Egyptian folk-tale, dating from the early part of the second millennium B.C., in which the serpent-king of Punt inhabits an Island of Ghosts that can suddenly sink in the waves (F. Hommel op. cit. p. 636, cp. id. Die Insel der Seligen in Mythus und Sage der Vorzeit München 1901 p. 18 ff.). Gruppe regards the Egyptian floating island Chemmis as, 'direkt oder mittelbar,' the source of the Greek floating island Delos (Gruppe Gr. Myth. Rel. p. 813 n. 2, cp. ib. p. 239). But definite evidence of Egyptian cult in Delos is late (P. Roussel *Les cultes égyptiens à Délos du iii*e *au i*er siècle av. J.-C. Nancy 1916 p. 239 ff., id. Délos colonie athénienne Paris 1916 p. 249 ff. ('Divinités égyptiennes')).

(6) When Leto was in travail with Apollon, she went round the coasts and islands of the Aegean seeking a home for her future son. No place would accept him save Delos, and even Delos at first feared to do so, since he was like to be a froward and masterful child, who might on seeing the rocky nature of the island overturn it with his feet and sink it in the sea. Such fears were set at rest by Leto, who swore that her son should have his cult established in Delos and honour it for ever (h. Ap. 14—88). This passage suggests that Delos was unstable, if not actually afloat—a notion far more clearly expressed by Pindar, who definitely states that the island was driven about by winds and waves till Leto, as her time drew near, set foot upon it: then and there four pillars sprang from the abyss and bore up the rocky isle, where the goddess gave birth to the god (Pind. frag. 87+88 Bergk⁴, Schröder ap. Theophr. ap. Philon. de incorrupt. mundi 23 p. 511 Mangey+Strab. 485, schol. Od. 10. 3, Cramer anecd. Paris. iii. 464, 6 ff., Eustath. in Od. p. 1644, 54 f., cp. Arrian. frag. 73 (Frag. hist. Gr. iii. 599 f. Müller) ap. Eustath. in Dionys. per. 525, Plout. de facie in orbe lunae 6, Sen. nat. quaestt. 6. 26. 3). L. Bürchner in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. iv. 2462 holds that Pindar in the same context represents Delos as 'vom Himmel gefallen.' That is hardly so. Pindar loc. cit. says ἄν τε βροτοί | Δᾶλον κικλήσκοισιν, μάκαρες δ' ἐν Ὀλύμ|πῳ τηλέφαντον κυανέας χθονὸς ἄστρον—hinting at the old name Ἀστερία (supra i. 543 n. 6) and working it into a metaphor of exceptional beauty (U. von Wilamowitz-Moellendorff Sappho und Simonides Berlin 1913 p. 131 'Hier den Namen Asteria herauszuhören, ist etwas Rätselraten; aber wie grossartig ist die Vorstellung, dass die Erde für den Blick der Götter eine blaue Fläche ist, wie ihr Himmel für uns, auf dem ihnen dann Delos, so klein sie ist, als ein heller Stern lieblich aufleuchtet. Wer an sprachlicher Kunst als solcher Gefallen findet, wird hier ein Juwel, einen seltenen Edelstein in reichster Fassung anerkennen;' etc., quoted by Sir J. E. Sandys ad loc.). But the metaphor of the fifth century becomes the myth of the third: ἀλλ' ἄφετος πελάγεσσιν ἐπέπλεες, οὔνομα δ' ἦν σοι | Ἀστερίη τὸ παλαιόν, ἐπεὶ βαθὺν ἦλαο τάφρον | οὐρανόθεν φεύγουσα Διὸς γάμον ἀστέρι ἴση (Kallim. h. Del. 36 ff.).

The story of Delos, once afloat but now fixed for ever, was popularised by Virgil and became a commonplace in later literature (Varro ap. Macrob. Sat. 1. 7. 29, Verg. Aen. 3. 73 ff. with Serv. and interp. Serv. ad loc., Prop. 4. 6. 27, Ov. her. 21. 82 ff., met. 6. 186 ff., 333 ff., Sen. nat. quaestt. 6. 26. 3 f., Ag. 384 ff., H.f. 15, 457, Petron. de Delo 1 ff. (Poet. Lat. min. iv. 101 Baehrens), Plin. nat. hist. 4. 66, Stat. Ach. 1. 388, Theb. 7. 182 ff., 8. 197 f., Lact. Plac. in Stat. Theb. 1. 701, 3. 439, 7. 182, Paneg. 3. 18 Jäger = 4 (9). 18. 2 Bährens, Claud. 1 in Prob. et Olyb. cons. 185, 35 de rapt. Pros. 2. 34 f., carm. min. append. 2 laudes Herculis (p. 1418 Weber). 62 = A. Riese Anthologia Latina[2] Lipsiae 1906 i. 2. 54 carm. 494[b]. 62, Dracont. 10. 594 f. (Poet. Lat. min. v. 214 Baehrens), Eustath. in Od. p. 1644, 52 ff., in Dionys. per. 561). The fullest form of the tale is that given by Serv. in Verg. Aen. 3. 73 (= Lact. Plac. in Stat. Theb. 4. 795, 5. 533, and Ach. 1. 206, Myth. Vat. 1. 37, 2. 17, 3. 8. 3, cp. Hyg. fab. 53, 140, Isid. orig. 14. 6. 21 = Antonini Augusti itinerarium maritimum p. 527 Wesseling) post vitiatam Latonam Iuppiter cum etiam eius sororem Asterien vitiare vellet, illa optavit a diis ut in avem converteretur, versaque in coturnicem est. et cum vellet maria transfretare, quod coturnicum est, adflata a Iove et in lapidem conversa diu sub fluctibus latuit. postea supplicante Iovi Latona levata superferri aquis coepit. haec primo Neptuno et Doridi fuit consecrata. postea, cum Iuno gravidam Pythone inmisso Latonam persequeretur, terris omnibus expulsa, tandem aliquando adplicante se litoribus sorore suscepta est, et illic Dianam primo, post Apollinem peperit. qui statim occiso Pythone ultus est matris iniuriam. sane nata Diana parturienti Apollinem matri dicitur praebuisse obstetricis officium. unde, cum Diana sit virgo, tamen a parturientibus invocatur. haec namque est Diana, Iuno, Proserpina. nata igitur duo numina terram sibi natalem errare non passa sunt, sed eam duabus insulis religaverunt. etc.

Aristot. frag. 446 Rose ap. Plin. nat. hist. 4. 66 (Solin. 11. 18) thought that Delos was so called because it had appeared suddenly on the surface of the sea—a notion repeated in schol. Ap. Rhod. 1. 308 and expanded in et. mag. p. 264, 23 ff. Δῆλος· ἡ ἱερὰ (so F. Sylburg for ἡ ἱέρεια codd. F. G. Sturz cj. νῆσος ἱερὰ after Favorin. lex. p. 475, 21) τοῦ Ἀπόλλωνος, εἴρηται ὅτι κρυπτομένην αὐτὴν ἐν τῇ θαλάσσῃ ὁ Ζεὺς δῆλην ἐποίησε καὶ ἀνέδωκεν ἵνα τέκῃ ἡ Λητώ (so, or with τέκοι, F. Sylburg for ἵνα ᾖ Λητὼ codd. A. Berkel cj. ἵνα ἀνέβῃ Λητώ). Ζεὺς γὰρ ἐρασθεὶς Λητοῦς, τῆς Κοίου θυγατρὸς ἑνὸς τῶν Τιτάνων καὶ Φοίβης, ἔγκυον αὐτὴν ἐποίησεν· ἥτις, δεκαμηνιαίου χρόνου διαγενομένου, παρεγένετο διὰ θαλάσσης εἰς Ἀστέριον (Ἀστερίαν A. B. C.) τὴν νῆσον, μίαν οὖσαν τῶν Κυκλάδων· ἐκεῖ τε ἐλθοῦσα καὶ ἁψαμένη δύο φυτῶν ἐλαίας καὶ φοίνικος, διδύμους ἀπεκύησε παῖδας Ἄρτεμιν καὶ Ἀπόλλωνα· καὶ τὴν νῆσον ἐκάλεσε Δῆλον ὅτι ἐξ ἀδήλου βάσεως ἐρριζώθη. Plin. nat. hist. 2. 202 mentions Delos first in a list of islands that had so emerged, and Amm. Marc. 17. 7. 13 supposes that such islands were thrown up by earthquakes of a particular type (brasmatiae, cp. brastae (Apul. de mund. 18)).

(7) Delos set the fashion, and Patmos followed it (F. G. Welcker in the Rhein. Mus. 1843 ii. 338, ib. 1845 iii. 270, K. Wernicke in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. ii. 1398, Gruppe Gr. Myth. Rel. p. 813 n. 2). An inscription found there and first edited by L. Ross (Inscriptiones Graecae ineditae Athenis 1842 ii. 72—74 no. 190) tells how Artemis appointed as her hydrophóros a girl named Vera, daughter of the physician Glaukias, who had crossed over from Argos (?), and adds that Patmos the island of Leto's daughter had remained hidden in the depths of the sea till Orestes came from Skythia (?) and established there the cult of the Scythian Artemis (Kaibel Epigr. Gr. no. 872. 1 ff. = Cougny Anth. Pal. Append. 1. 258. 1 ff. (after R. Bergmann Berolini 1860) ἀγαθῇ τύχῃ. αὐτῇ παρθενικὴ ἑλαφηβόλος ἀρήτειραν | θήκατο κυδ[αλίμ]ην Γ[λα]υκίεω θύγατρα, | ὑδροφόρον Βήραν Πατνίην παραβώμι' ἐφέξαι (Kaibel prints παραβώμια ῥέξαι) | σπαιρόντων αἰγῶν ἔμπρα καλλιθύτων. | [εἰν Ἄργει δ' ἐτράφη γε]ρ[α]ρὴ π[α]ίς, ἠδὲ τιθήνης (Kaibel prints ἡ δὲ τιθήνη) | ἑ[κ γενεῆς Β]ή[ρου] ἔκτροφός ἐστι Πάτνος, | νῆσ(σ)ος ἁ[γα]υ[ο]τάτη Λητωίδος ἧς προβέ[βηκε] | [β]ένθεσιν [εἰν ἁλίης] ἔδρανα ῥυομένη· | [εἰς ὅτε μιν Σκυθ]έ[η]θεν ἀρήιος εἶσεν Ὀρέστης | [ῥυσαμένην στυγερ]ῆς μητροφόνου μανίης· | [κἀν] δεκάτῃ κούρη θυγ]άτηρ σοφοῦ ἰητῆρος | Γλαυκί[εω ’ν α]ὐλαῖς Ἀρτέμιδος Σκυθίης, | Αἰγαίου πλεύσασα ῥόου δυσχείμερον οἶδμα, | ὄργια κ[αὶ θαλίην, ὡ]ς θέμις, ἠγλάϊσεν. εὐτυχῶς. I give the passage with all, or almost all, faults; but a fresh inspection of the stone is much to be desired). Artemis in Patmos was worshipped as Παρθένος (I. Sakkelion in the Ἐφ. Ἀρχ. 1863 p. 260 f. no. 229, 6 ff. τὸ ψήφισμα | τόδε ἀναγράψαι εἰς στήλην λιθίνην, καὶ | ἀναθεῖναι εἰς τὸ ἱερὸν τῆς Παρθένου· κ.τ.λ.) and as Πατμία (I. Sakkelion loc. cit. p. 261 f. no. 230 = Dittenberger Syll. inscr. Gr.[2] no. 785, ib.[3] no. 1152 [Ἀ]ρτέμιδι Πατμ[ίᾳ] | [ἀ]νέθηκε Ζω[ΐς] | καθ’ ὕπνο[ν]ος), cp. the month Ἀρτεμισιών (Dittenberger op. cit.[2] no. 681, 1, ib.[3] no. 1068, 1). St Christodoulos (Hagiographi Bollandiani Bibliotheca Hagiographica Graeca Bruxellis 1895 p. 23 f., U. Chevalier Répertoire des sources historiques du moyen âge Bio-bibliographie Paris 1905 i. 916), a native of Nikaia in Bithynia (born 1020 A.D.), is said to have founded the monastery of St John the Evangelist in Patmos (1088 A.D.) on the site of a temple of Artemis, whose statue he demolished (L. Ross Reisen auf den griechischen Inseln des ägäischen Meeres Stuttgart—Tübingen 1843 ii. 137 n. 12 ‘Die Legende des h. Chriſtodulos (in vulgärem Griechiſch) ſagt hierüber: Πρῶτον ἐσύντριψεν ἕνα εἴδωλον ὅπου εἶχασι ἐκεῖ μὲ τέχνην πολλὴν εἰς τὸ ὄνομα τῆς Ἀρτέμιδος’).

(8) Rhodes was another island that had risen from the sea-bottom. A tale already ancient in 464 B.C. said that, when Zeus and the immortals were dividing the earth among them, Rhodes lay hidden in the briny depths. Helios, who was absent from the division, complained that he was left without a portion. So Zeus was about to order a new casting of the lot. The sun-god, however, would not suffer it; for, as he declared, he could see a plot of land rising from the bottom of the sea and destined to prove fruitful for man and beast. He bade Lachesis and Zeus swear that it should be his. Thereupon from the sea sprang the island, where Helios wedded Rhodos and begat seven sons, one of whom became the father of Ialysos, Kameiros, and Lindos (Pind. Ol. 7. 54 ff. with scholl. ad loc.). Rhodes was thus included in the canonical list of islands that had emerged from the sea (Plin. nat. hist. 2. 202, Amm. Marc. 17. 7. 13), and C. Torr Rhodes in Ancient Times Cambridge 1885 p. 152 justifies its inclusion: ‘Rhodes certainly rose from the sea. The great limestone mass of Mount Atabyros and the lesser limestone hills, Akramytis, Elias, Archangelo and Lindos, must once have formed a group of islands: and as these were gradually elevated, the lower hills were being formed round them by volcanic action. These facts were no doubt beyond the Rhodians of the mythopœic age: but the elevated beds of sea shells at the base of the hills would readily have suggested the legend.’ Perhaps in the Hellenistic age Isis, whose temple stood near the city-wall beside the sea (Appian. Mithr. 27), was believed to have raised the island from the watery abyss. That at least would square with the claim made on behalf of the goddess in an Isiac hymn of s. i B.C. found in Andros (Lebas—Foucart Péloponnèse ii no. 1796. 4, 23 ff. = Kaibel Epigr. Gr. no. 1028, 70 ff. = E. Abel Orphica Lipsiae—Pragae 1885 p. 301 h. in Isim 158 ff. = Cougny Anth. Pal. Append. 4. 32. 70 ff. = Inscr. Gr. ins. v. 1 no. 739, 160 ff. νάσῳ δὲ βαθυνομένας ἀπὸ ῥιζῶν | ἐς φάος ἐκ βυθίας ποταναγαγον ἰλύος αὐτὰ | ὤρεα καὶ πε[δίω]ν σπορίμων βάσιν ὀργάδα τ’ ἄκραις | στηρικταῖ[ς ἐξαΐ]ρον ὑπερτείνουσα, βοαύλοις | μαλοκόμοι[ς θ’ ἁδεῖ]αν). A. H. Krappe in Anglia Beiblatt 1932 xliii. 256 ff. draws an interesting comparison between Pindar’s description of Rhodes and James Thomson’s Rule, Britannia (1740). In the former the emergent island becomes the personified Rhodos. In the latter the same thing happens: the opening lines run 'When Britain first at Heaven's command | Arose from out the azure main,' etc., yet the burden 'Rule, Britannia' and the succeeding stanzas bring the allegorical figure to the fore.

(9) The Strophades, two islets off the coast of Messene to the south of Zakynthos, were originally called the Plotai (Antimachos frag. 13 Bergk[4], 60 Wyss ap. schol. Paris. Ap. Rhod. 2. 296 ταύτας οὖν φησὶν τὰς νήσους Ἀπολλώνιος Στροφάδας μετὰ ταῦτα κληθῆναι διὰ τὸ ἐκεῖθεν ὑποστρέψαι τοὺς Βορεάδας καὶ μηκέτι διώκειν αὐτάς. παρὰ Ἀντιμάχου δὲ τοῦτο εἴληφεν ὁ Ἀπολλώνιος· οὕτω γὰρ ἐκεῖνος ἐν τῇ Λυδῇ περὶ αὐτῶν μέμνηται. ἄλλοι δὲ καὶ διὰ τοῦτο Στροφάδας φασὶν αὐτὰς κληθῆναι ὅτι ἐν αὐταῖς ὑποστραφέντες οἱ Βορεάδαι ηὔξαντο τῷ Διὶ λαβεῖν αὐτάς. κ.τ.λ. (cp. supra ii. 907 n. 2), Ap. Rhod. 2. 285 νήσοισιν ἔπι Πλωτῇσι κιχόντες with schol. ad loc.= Favorin. lex. p. 1523, 25 ff., Ap. Rhod. 2. 296 f. Στροφάδας δὲ μετακλείουσ' ἄνθρωποι | νήσους τοὺ γ' ἔκητι, πάρος Πλωτὰς καλέοντες, Hyg. fab. 14 p. 47, 17 ff. quae inhabitabant insulas Strophadas in Aegaeo (sic) mari, quae Plotae appellantur, Mela 2. 110 olim Plotae nunc Strophades, Plin. nat. hist. 4. 55 ante Zacynthum XXXV in Eurum ventum Strophades duae, ab aliis Plotae dictae). The names are significant. The two Turning Isles or Floating Isles, haunted by the Harpies (Apollod. 1. 9. 21, Verg. Aen. 3. 210 ff., Hyg. fab. 19, alib.: see Gruppe Gr. Myth. Rel. pp. 398, 813 n. 8, 846 n. 5), are in all probability an early variant of the Planktai or Symplegades (Gruppe op. cit. p. 556 n. 3)—a perilous gateway of the Otherworld.

(10) The same name Plotai was given by Dionysios the geographer to the seven islands of Aiolos in the Sicilian Sea (Dionys. per. 465 f. ἑπτὰ δέ οἱ ταί γ' εἰσίν, ἐπώνυμοι ἀνδράσι Πλωταί, | οὕνεκα μέσσον ἔχουσι περίπλοον ἀμφιέλικτον with Eustath. and paraphr. ad loc., cp. schol. Ap. Rhod. 2. 297 αἱ δὲ Πλωταὶ νῆσοι κεῖνται ἐν τῷ Σικελικῷ πελάγει). Homer had made Aiolos live πλωτῇ ἐνὶ νήσῳ (supra (1)), and Apollonios had perhaps spoken of Hiera or Lipara as νήσοιο πλωτῆς (so schol. Flor. on Ap. Rhod. 3. 42 νήσοιο πλαγκτῆς (supra (2))).

(11) Theophrastos speaks of Ploades or 'Floating' Islands on the lake of Orchomenos, i.e. Lake Kopaïs in Boiotia, and compares them with others in the marshes of Egypt, Thesprotis, etc. (Theophr. hist. pl. 4. 10. 2 φύεται δὲ ὁ πλείστος (sc. ἐλαίαγνος, 'goat-willow', salix caprea) μὲν ἐπὶ τῶν πλοάδων νήσων· εἰσὶ γάρ τινες καὶ ἐνταῦθα πλοάδες, ὥσπερ ἐν Αἰγύπτῳ περὶ τὰ ἕλη καὶ ἐν Θεσπρωτίδι καὶ ἐν ἄλλαις λίμναις, 4. 12. 4 τῶν δὲ νήσων τῶν πλοάδων τῶν ἐν Ὀρχομενῷ τὰ μὲν μεγέθη παντοδαπὰ τυγχάνει, τὰ δὲ μέγιστα αὐτῶν ἐστιν ὅσον τριῶν σταδίων τὴν περίμετρον. ἐν Αἰγύπτῳ δὲ μάλιστα μεγάλα σφόδρα συνίσταται, ὥστε καὶ ὗς ἐν αὐταῖς ἐγγίνεσθαι πολλούς, οὓς καὶ κυνηγετοῦσι διαβαίνοντες, Hesych. Πλοάδες τῶν ἐν Ἐρχομενῷ· <νῆσοί> τινες (so M. Schmidt[2] for πλοάδες· τῶν ἐπερχομένων τινὲς cod.) οὕτω καλοῦνται, Theophr. hist. pl. 4. 11. 1 καλοῦσι δὲ τὸν μὲν ἰσχυρὸν καὶ παχὺν (sc. κάλαμον) χαρακίαν τὸν δ' ἕτερον πλόκιμον· καὶ φύεσθαι τὸν μὲν πλόκιμον ἐπὶ τῶν πλοάδων τὸν δὲ χαρακίαν ἐπὶ τοῖς κώμυσι=Plin. nat. hist. 16. 168 de Orchomenii lacus harundinetis accuratius dici cogit admiratio antiqua. characian vocabant crassiorem firmioremque, plocian (K. L. von Urlichs cj. plocimon) vero subtiliorem, hanc in insulis fluvitantibus natam, illam in ripis exspatiantis lacus). O. Gruppe held that these Boiotian islands were connected with chthonian powers thought to issue from the Underworld in the form of winds (Gruppe Gr. Myth. Rel. p. 813). If so, note the belief that reeds used for pipes grew in the lake only at intervals of eight years (Theophr. hist. pl. 4. 11. 2 δι' ἐννεατηρίδος=Plin. nat. hist. 16. 169 nono...anno). But Gruppe's assumption is gratuitous. We are here dealing with purely natural phenomena. H. N. Ulrichs Reisen und Forschungen in Griechenland Bremen 1840 i. 192 observes that the river Melas (Mauropotamos), which crosses the site of Lake Kopaïs, is surrounded by black vegetable fens and quotes the peasants of Skripou as saying 'dass das Land am Mauropotamos schwimme.' He identifies these patches of unstable ground with the πλοάδες of Theophrastos and the insulae fluitantes of Pliny. A. Philippson 'Der Kopaïs-See in Griechenland und seine Umgebung' in the Zeitschrift der Gesellschaft für Erdkunde zu Berlin 1894 xxix. 39 and Geiger in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. xi. 1348 follow suit. Frazer Pausanias v. 120 says: 'The fable was probably told of the islands in the bay of Tzamali, to the north of Orchomenus, whose banks overhung and quaked under the tread, as do the banks of the river Melas in some places.'

(12) Some five miles to the north of Sardeis lies the Gygaia Limne, later called the Koloë Limne, and now known as Mermereh-Gheul, the 'Marble Lake' (L. Bürchner in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. vii. 1956, xi. 1107). Its brackish waters are fringed with dense beds of reeds (W. J. Hamilton Researches in Asia Minor, Pontus, and Armenia London 1842 i. 145), which dry up and mixing with other detritus form floating islands (G. Radet La Lydie et le monde grec au temps des Mermnades (687—546) Paris 1893 p. 13). A. H. Sayce, after a visit to the spot in 1879, writes: 'The foundations of the old temple of Artemis (?) are very visible on the southern shore of the lake as well as of a causey thrown out into the lake....The fish caught in it are carp, which are usually of a wonderfully large size. According to the local superstition every carp has a bitter stone in its mouth. If this is not removed before the fish is eaten fever will be the inevitable result. If, however, the stone is removed the fish is considered innocuous' (Journ. Hell. Stud. 1880 i. 87).

It is to this lake that we must attach a whole series of ancient notices about floating islands, dancing islands, dancing reeds, and poisonous fish. Attempts to distinguish the floating islands of Koloë from the dancing islands, reeds, etc. of the Nymphs (H. Oehler Paradoxographi Florentini anonymi opusculum de aquis mirabilibus Tubingae 1913 p. 117 ff., cp. L. Bürchner in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. x. 1532) are in my opinion unsuccessful.

The floating islands of Lydia are composed of light pumice-like stones (Theophrast. ap. Sen. nat. quaestt. 3. 25. 7 sunt enim multi pumicosi et leves, ex quibus quae constant insulae in Lydia, natant. Theophrastus est auctor). In Lydia the floating islands named Calaminae, which are shifted not only by the winds but by barge-poles in any direction you please, proved a refuge to many during the Mithridatic war (Plin. nat. hist. 2. 209 quaedam insulae semper fluctuantur, sicut...in Lydia quae vocantur Calaminae, non ventis solum, sed etiam contis quo libeat inpulsae, multorum civium Mithridatico bello salus). Lake Koloë near Sardeis breeds many fish and waterfowl: its floating islands have a deceptive appearance of stability, for they change their position with the winds (anon. de aquis mirabilibus (supra p. 975) 39 ἡ κατὰ Σάρδεις λίμνη καλουμένη δὲ Κολόη πλῆθος μὲν ὕψου πάμπολυ τρέφει· ἔχει δὲ καὶ αὐτὴ νήσους οἰκουμένας πρὸς ἀπάτην· ἐπινήχονται γάρ· καὶ τῇ τῶν ἀνέμων πνοῇ συμμετοικοῦσι· πτηνῶν δὲ τῶν ἐνύδρων τοσοῦτο τρέφει πλῆθος ὥστε καὶ ταριχεύεσθαι).

Varro claimed to have seen in Lydia the Islands of the Nymphs, which at the sound of flutes move out from the bank into the middle of the lake, go circling round, and return to the shore (Varr. ap. Mart. Cap. 928 in Lydia Nympharum insulas dici, quas etiam recentior asserentium Varro se vidisse testatur, quae in medium stagnum a continenti procedentes cantu tibiarum primo in circulum motae dehinc ad litora revertuntur). He further states that, when he sacrificed on the shore of the lake, fish came crowding towards the flute-player and the altar, though nobody ventured to catch them (Varr. rer. rust. 3. 17. 4 loculatas habent piscinas, ubi dispares disclusos habent pisces, quos, proinde ut sacri sint ac sanctiores quam illi in Lydia, quos sacrificanti tibi, Varro, ad tibicinem [graecum] gregatim venisse dicebas ad extremum litus atque aram, quod eos capere auderet nemo, cum eodem tempore insulas Lydorum ibi χορευούσας vidisses, sic hos piscis nemo cocus in ius vocare audet). Pliny, after his account of the Lydian Calaminae, goes on to say that in the Nymphaeum too are small islands called Saliares because, when choruses are sung, they move in time with the beating feet (Plin. nat. hist. 2. 209 sunt et in Nymphaeo parvae, Saliares dictae, quoniam in symphoniae cantu ad ictus modulantium pedum moventur). Elsewhere he asserts, on the authority of Ktesias (?), that the fish in the Lake of the Nymphs are poisonous (Ktesias frag. 83 Müller ap. Plin. nat. hist. 31. 25 hoc idem et in Lydia in stagno Nympharum tradunt)—a belief still prevalent with regard to the carp of the Koloë Limne (supra).

Strabon mentions the sanctuary of Artemis Κολοηνή, on the Gygaia or Koloë Limne, where 'the baskets' are said to dance on festal days (Strab. 626 ἐν δὲ σταδίοις τετταράκοντα ἀπὸ τῆς πόλεως (sc. Sardeis) ἐστὶν ἡ Γυγαία μὲν ὑπὸ τοῦ ποιητοῦ λεγομένη <λίμνη (ins. A. Koraës)>, Κολόη δ' ὕστερον μετονομασθεῖσα, ὅπου τὸ ἱερὸν τῆς Κολοηνῆς Ἀρτέμιδος, μεγάλην ἀγιστείαν ἔχον. φασὶ δ' ἐνταῦθα χορεύειν τοὺς καλάθους (F. E. Ruhkopf, followed by G. Bernhardy and C. Müller, cj. καλάμους. E. Müller cj. κοβάλους. πιθήκους, a curious variant in codd. m, z and edd. Ald. Cas., was altered by C. A. Lobeck Aglaophamus Regimontii Prussorum 1829 p. 226 into πιθάκνας, but may imply some confusion with καλλίας, 'apes,' which A. Westermann would restore to the text) κατὰ τὰς ἑορτάς, οὐκ οἶδ' ὅπως ποτὲ παραδοξολογοῦντες μᾶλλον ἢ ἀληθεύοντες=Eustath. in Il. p. 365, 46 ff.).

Lastly, according to Isigonos the paradoxographer of Nikaia, whose floruit probably falls in s. i A.D. (W. Kroll in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. ix. 2082, cp. W. Christ Geschichte der griechischen Litteratur[6] ii. 1. 420 n. 5), in Lydia there is a lake called Tala (?) sacred to the Nymphs. It bears a multitude of reeds and in their midst one that the natives term king. A yearly festival is held, at which sacrifices are offered and a chorus sounds on the shore of the lake. Thereupon all the reeds dance, and the king dancing with them comes to the shore. The natives wreath him with fillets and send him off, praying that both he and they may come again another year; that is their sign of a fertile season (Isigonos frag. 8 (Frag. hist. Gr. iv. 436 Müller) ap. anon. de aquis mirabilibus 43 ἐν Λυδίᾳ ἔστι λίμνη Τάλα μὲν (C. Müller, followed by L. Bürchner, cj. Καλαμίνη. But cp. Il. 2. 865 υἷε Ταλαιμένεος, τὸν Γυγαίη τέκε λίμνη, where Ταλαιμένης may be a Greek adaptation of the Lydian name) καλουμένη, ἱερὰ δὲ οὖσα νυμφῶν, ἣ φέρει καλάμων (A. Westermann cj. καλλιῶν (?)) πλῆθος ἄφθονον καὶ μέσον αὐτῶν ἕνα, ὃν βασιλέα προσαγορεύουσιν οἱ ἐπιχώριοι· θυσίας δὲ καὶ ἑορτὰς ἐπιτελοῦντες ἐνιαυσίους ἐξιλάσκονται· τούτων δὲ ἐπιτελουμένων, ἐπειδὰν ἐπὶ τῆς ἠϊόνος κτύπος συμφωνίας γένηται, πάντες οἱ κάλαμοι χορεύουσι καὶ ὁ βασιλεὺς σὺν αὐτοῖς χορεύων παραγίνεται ἐπὶ τὴν ἠϊόνα· οἱ δὲ ἐπιχώριοι ταινίαις αὐτὸν καταστέψαντες ἀποπέμπουσιν, εὐχόμενοι καὶ εἰς τὸ ἐπιὸν αὐτόν τε καὶ ἑαυτοὺς παραγενέσθαι, ὡς εὐετηρίας ὄντι σημείῳ (F. Sylburg cj. ὅν τι σημεῖον)· ὡς ἱστορεῖ Ἰσίγονος ἐν δευτέρῳ ἀπίστων).

Isigonos' work was entitled Ἄπιστα, but his statements here are by no means incredible and may easily be reconciled with those of our other sources. Artemis Κολοηνή (on whom see Scherling in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. xi. 1108 f.) had a temple on a hill close to the southern shore of the lake: its ruins are still to be seen, including walls of great basalt blocks, three Doric columns of weather-worn marble only 6 ft (?) high, and huge stone slabs with reliefs of an archer in a pointed cap, a lion's head, etc. (E. Curtius in the Arch. Zeit. 1853 xi. 152, von Olfers 'Über die Lydischen Königsgräber bei Sardes und den Grabhügel des Alyattes' in the Abh. d. berl. Akad. 1858 Phil.-hist. Classe p. 542 pl. 1 = Perrot—Chipiez Hist. de l'Art v. 267 fig. 157). Her cult involved a yearly festival, at which a dance known as οἱ κάλαθοι, 'the baskets,' took place. The beating feet of the dancers communicated their vibration to the floating reed-mats of the lake and set them in motion. The reeds eddying round appeared to share in the dance. The tallest reed, called βασιλεύς by the countryfolk, would in time be drifted inshore, decorated by the worshippers, and pushed off into the lake again. The successful performance of this little ceremony was deemed a happy omen. The crowd at the lake-side and the prospect of altar-scraps would be quite enough to attract the carp. Naturally the fish were sacred to Artemis of the lake (see e.g. the large Boeotian amphora, found near Thebes, which represents Artemis with a fish on her robe (Collignon—Couve Cat. Vases d'Athènes p. 108 f. no. 462, figured by P. Wolters in the Ἐφ. Ἀρχ. 1892 p. 219 ff. pl. 10, 1 = Reinach Rép. Vases i. 517, 2, Perrot—Chipiez Hist. de l'Art x. 40 f. fig. 30, R. Eisler Orpheus—the Fisher London 1921 p. 260 f. pl. 64, 1 (wrongly described), F. J. Dölger ΙΧΘΥC Münster in Westf. 1922 ii. 179 f., iii pl. 12, 2), and the facts cited by Gruppe Gr. Myth. Rel. pp. 1295 n. 1, 1536 n. 2, 1585 n. 2) and the reed-islands would be connected with her attendant Nymphs. The whole story is consistent and credible. After all, Varro was no visionary and Strabon is a serious authority.

A point of interest remains. The dance κάλαθος is mentioned elsewhere in the diminutive form καλαθίσκος. Apollophanes, an early comedian, coupled it with the pirouette (Apolloph. frag. 1 (Frag. com. Gr. ii. 879 Meineke) ap. Athen 467 F (δεῖνος) ἔστι καὶ γένος ὀρχήσεως, ὡς Ἀπολλοφάνης ἐν Δαλίδι παρίστησιν οὑτωσί· 'δεινόν τι δεῖνος (so J. Schweighäuser for δεῖνος τι δεινος cod. A. J. G. J. Hermann cj. δῖνός γε δεινός) καὶ καλαθίσκος οὑτωσί' (K. W. Dindorf would write ἔστι καὶ γένος ὀρχήσεώς τι δεῖνος, ὡς Ἀπολλοφάνης ἐν Δαλίδι παρίστησιν οὑτωσὶ 'δεῖνος καὶ καλαθίσκος,' regarding οὑτοσί as a repetition of οὑτωσί), and various later writers mention it in a tragic (satyric?) connexion (Poll. 4. 105 καὶ μὴν τραγικῆς ὀρχήσεως σχήματα σιμὴ χείρ, καλαθίσκος, χεὶρ καταπρανής, ξύλου παράληψις, διπλῆ, θερμαυστρίς, κυβίστησις, παραβῆναι τέτταρα, Athen. 629 F σχήματα δ' ἐστὶν ὀρχήσεως ξιφισμός, καλαθισμός (K. W. Dindorf in Stephanus Thes. Gr. Ling. iv. 859 D cj. καλαθίσκος), καλλαβίδες, σκώψ, σκώπευμα, 630 A θερμαστρίς, ἑκατερίδες, σκοπός, χεὶρ καταπρηνής, χεὶρ σιμή, διποδισμός, ξύλου παράληψις, ἐπαγκωνισμός, καλαθίσκος (so codd. A. B. καλαθισμὸς cod. P. edd. Ald. Casaub.), στρόβιλος).

It should be carefully distinguished from the κάλαθος or ritual basket used in the cult of Demeter at Eleusis (Clem. Al. protr. 2. 21. 2 p. 16, 18 ff. Stählin κἄστι τὸ σύνθημα Ἐλευσινίων μυστηρίων· 'ἐνήστευσα, ἔπιον τὸν κυκεῶνα, ἔλαβον ἐκ κίστης, ἐργασάμενος ἀπεθέμην εἰς κάλαθον καὶ ἐκ καλάθου εἰς κίστην,' on which formula see A. Dieterich Eine Mithrasliturgie[2] Leipzig and Berlin 1910 p. 125 f. and S. Angus The Mystery-Religions and Christianity London 1925 p. 115), Athens, Alexandreia (Kallim. h. Dem. 1 ff. τῶ καλάθω κατιόντος ἐπιφθέγξασθε, γυναῖκες, | 'Δάματερ, μέγα χαῖρε, πολυτρύφε πουλυμέδιμνε.' | τὸν κάλαθον κατιόντα χαμαὶ θαεῖσθε, βέβαλοι, | κ.τ.λ. with schol. ad loc. ὁ Φιλάδελφος Πτολεμαῖος κατὰ μίμησιν τῶν Ἀθηνῶν ἔθη τινὰ ἵδρυσεν ἐν Ἀλεξανδρείᾳ, ἐν οἷς καὶ τὴν τοῦ καλάθου πρόοδον. ἔθος γὰρ ἦν ἐν Ἀθήναις, ἐν ὡρισμένῃ ἡμέρᾳ ἐπὶ ὀχήματος φέρεσθαι καλάθιον (κάλαθον cod. E) εἰς τιμὴν τῆς Δήμητρος. Variants in the text of Kallimachos are attested by Elias in Aristotelis categorias 27 a 24 ff. (Commentaria in Aristotelem Graeca xviii. 1. 125, 7 ff. Busse) καὶ τὸ Καλλιμάχειον ἐκεῖνο 'τὸν κάλαθον κατιόντα χαμαὶ δέρκεσθε, γυναῖκες, | μηδ' ἀπὸ τοῦ τέγεος μηδ' ὑψόθεν αὐγάσασθε (αὐγάσησθε Kallim.)' and by schol. Plat. symp. 218 B (960 b 47 f. ed. Turic.) ἐντεῦθεν παρῴδησε Καλλίμαχος ἐν ὕμνῳ Δήμητρος καλάθου τὸ 'θύρας δ' ἐπίθεσθε, βέβηλοι.' Ib. 121 ff. χὡς αἱ τὸν κάλαθον λευκότριχες ἵπποι ἄγουντι | τέσσαρες, ὡς ἁμὶν μεγάλα θεὸς εὐρυάνασσα | λευκὸν ἔαρ λευκὸν δὲ θέρος καὶ χεῖμα φέρουσα | ἠξεῖ καὶ φθινόπωρον, ἔτος δ' εἰς ἄλλο φυλαξεῖ. Bronze coins of Alexandreia show a kálathos containing corn-ears and poppy-heads (Brit. Mus. Cat. Coins Alexandria p. 66 no. 551 pl. 30= Anson Num. Gr. i. 95 no. 931 pl. 16=my fig. 792 Trajan), sometimes bound with a wreath of flowers and flanked by two torches with snakes (Brit. Mus. Cat. Coins Alexandria p. 4 no. 29 pl. 30=Anson Num. Gr. i. 97 no. 939 pl. 17=my

Fig. 792.

Fig. 793.

Fig. 794.

Fig. 795.

Fig. 796.

Fig. 797.

fig. 793 Livia, Hunter Cat. Coins iii. 405 no. 21 Livia) or fillets (Brit. Mus. Cat. Coins Alexandria p. 42 no. 345 pl. 30=Anson Num. Gr. i. 97 no. 940 pl. 17=my fig. 794 Domitian, Brit. Mus. Cat. Coins Alexandria p. 42 no. 346 Domitian, p. 144 no. 1212=Anson Num. Gr. i. 97 no. 942 Antoninus Pius) or ties of some sort (Brit. Mus. Cat. Coins Alexandria p. 105 nos. 903, 904, 905 pl. 30=Anson Num. Gr. i. 97 no. 941 pl. 17=my fig. 795 Hadrian, Hunter Cat. Coins iii. 457 nos. 392—394. Fig. 796 Hadrian is from a specimen of mine). Once the kálathos is adorned with the rape of Persephone (Brit. Mus. Cat. Coins Alexandria p. 105 no. 906 pl. 30=Anson Num. Gr. i. 96 no. 932 pl. 16=my fig. 797 Hadrian). More often, on large billon pieces, it appears drawn in procession by a quadriga of horses (Brit. Mus. Cat. Coins Alexandria p. 67 no. 552 pl. 30=Anson Num. Gr. i. 96 no. 935 pl. 16=my fig. 798 Trajan) or a biga of humped oxen (Brit. Mus. Cat. Coins Alexandria p. 67 no. 553=Anson Num. Gr. i. 96 no. 934 pl. 16=my fig. 799 Trajan) or of winged snakes wearing the skhent (Brit. Mus. Cat. Coins Alexandria p. 67 no. 554 pl. 30=Anson Num. Gr. i. 96 no. 933 pl. 16=my fig. 800 Trajan, Brit. Mus. Cat. Coins Alexandria p. 67 no. 555 f. Trajan, Hunter Cat. Coins iii. 434 no. 245 Trajan). Exceptionally it rests on the top of a column flanked by two winged snakes, one of which wears the skhent, the other a poppy-head as crown (Brit. Mus. Cat. Coins Alexandria p. 67 no. 557 pl. 30=my fig. 801

Trajan, Hunter Cat. Coins iii. 456 no. 390 pl. 87, 24=Anson Num. Gr. i. 97 no. 937 pl. 16=my fig. 802 Hadrian)), and Darmara near Theira in the valley of the Kaystros (K. Buresch in the Ath. Mitth. 1895 xx. 241 f. and A. Fontrier in the Bull. Corr. Hell. 1894 xviii. 538 f. ΟΙΚΑ–– ..... | Πό(πλιον) Αἴλιον Μενεκράτην | τῇ ἱερατείᾳ τῆς Δήμητρος | ἀνενένκαντα καὶ καθιερώ|[σ]αντα κάλαθον περιάργυρον, | τὸν λείποντα τοῖς τῆς Δήμη|τρος μυστηρίοις καὶ τῷ προκα|θημένῳ τῆς κώμης Μηνὶ ση|μήαν ('effigy') περιάργυρον τὴν προ|πομπεύσασαν τῶν μυστηρί|ων αὐτοῦ. διά τε τοῦτο καθι|έρωσεν ὑπὲρ τῆς ἱερωσύνης | εἰς τὰς ἐπιθυσίας τῆς Δήμη|τρος τὰ πρὸ τῆς [οἰ]κίας ἐργα|στήρια εἰς τὸ [κα(τ')] ἐνιαυτὸν | ἕκαστον τῇ

Fig. 798.

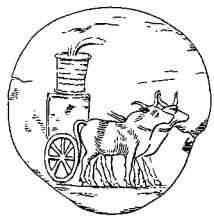

Fig. 799.

Fig. 800.

Fig. 801.

Fig. 802.

τοῦ καλάθου | ἀναφορᾷ τοὺς κληρωθέν|τας εἰς τὴν πομπὴν ἄνδρας | μετὰ τῶν ἀρχόντων προθύ|ονταις εὐωχεῖσθαι ἐν τῇ | οἰκίᾳ αὐτοῦ διὰ παντὸς τοῦ | βίου. | ἐπὶ ἄρχοντος τῆς κατοικίας | Λ(ουκίου) Βερίου Βάσσου φιλοσεβάστου καὶ | τῶν συναρχ-όντων αὐτοῦ, cp. Nilsson Gr. Feste p. 352 n. 2). K. Latte De saltationibus Graecorum Giessen 1913 p. 82 cites also Eustath. in Od. p. 1627, 49 f. καλάθους, ὁποῖοι καὶ οἱ τῆς Δήμητρος, οὓς ὀρχεῖσθαι μῦθος ἔν τινι τελετῇ Δημητρειακῇ, but fails to perceive that Eustathios is merely confusing the Lydian dance with the rites of Demeter as described by Kallimachos (Eustath. in Il. p. 1208, 38 f., in Od. p. 1488, 60 f.). More to our purpose is Usener's discovery that in Bithynia a certain yearly festival was known as ὁ κάλαθος τῆς Ἀρτέμιδος (H. Usener 'Übersehenes' in the Rhein. Mus. 1895 l. 145 f. (=id. Kleine Schriften Leipzig—Berlin 1913 iv. 195) quoting Acta Sanctorum edd. Bolland. Iunius iii. 343 B—C Kallinikos vita s. Hypatii presb., monasterii Rufinianarum prope Chalcedonem in Bithynia hegumeni (died 30 June 446 A.D., commemorated June 17) 70=de vita s. Hypatii 129 f. p. 96 f. edd. seminarii philologorum Bonnensis sodales ποτὲ δὲ γέγονεν αὐτὸν ἀπελθεῖν εἰς ἐπίσκεψιν ἀδελφῶν εἰς τὴν ἔνδον χώραν τῶν Βιθυνῶν

ὅπου καὶ ὁ Ῥήβας ἐστὶ ποταμός. καὶ ἦν ἐν τῷ καιρῷ ἐκείνῳ, ὅπερ λέγουσιν, ὁ κάλαθος τῆς μυσερᾶς Ἀρτέμιδος· ὅπερ κατ' ἐνιαυτὸν ἡ χώρα φυλάττουσα, οὐκ ἐξήρχοντο εἰς μακρὰν ὁδὸν ἡμέρας πεντήκοντα. αὐτοῦ δὲ βουλομένου ὁδεύειν ἔλεγον αὐτῷ οἱ ἐντόπιοι· 'ποῦ ἀπέρχῃ, ἄνθρωπε; ὁ δαίμων σοι ἔχει ἀπαντῆσαι ἐν τῇ ὁδῷ. μὴ ὁδεύσῃς· πολλοὶ γὰρ ἐπηρεάσθησαν.' ὁ δὲ Ὑπάτιος ἀκούσας ταῦτα ἐμειδίασε λέγων· 'ὑμεῖς ταῦτα φοβεῖσθε, ἐγὼ δὲ ἔχω τὸν συνοδεύοντά μοι Χριστόν.' ἐν τῷ οὖν ὁδεύειν αὐτὸν θαρσαλέος (θαρσαλέως codd.) ἦν· δίκαιος γὰρ ὡς λέων πέποιθεν (Prov. 28. 1). ἀπήντησε δὲ αὐτῷ γυνὴ μακρέα (H. Usener cj. μακραία? The Bollandists print μακρὰ) ὡς δέκα ἀνδρῶν τὸ μῆκος. νήθουσά τε περιεπάτει καὶ χοίρους ἔβοσκεν. ὡς οὖν εἶδεν αὐτήν, εὐθὺς ἑαυτὸν ἐσφράγισεν καὶ ἔστη εὐχόμενος τῷ θεῷ, καὶ εὐθὺς ἐκείνη ἀφανὴς ἐγένετο, καὶ οἱ χοῖροι μεγάλῳ ῥοίζῳ ἔφυγον, καὶ διῆλθεν ἀβλαβής)—a fact which Nilsson Gr. Feste p. 255 justly connects with another Bithynian festival, the κάλαθος-procession of Kios (A. Körte in the Ath. Mitth. 1899 xxiv. 413 ff. no. 13 on a marble stéle near the sea at Gemlik, the ancient Kios or Prousias, in lettering hardly later than 100 A.D. and perhaps as early as s. i. B.C. [– – – i]|λασσομέν[αις ἱερεὺς] | δαιτρ(ε)νέτω ἀνήρ· πᾶσαι ἀ|νιλίποδές (W. Kroll, followed by A. Körte, cj. ἀνειλίποδες 'with no trailing feet, with active feet,' and M. P. Nilsson cj. ἀνιπτόποδες 'with unwashen feet,' cp. supra ii. 959 f.; but K. Latte rightly restores ἀνηλίποδες 'with unshod feet,' cp. Theokr. 4. 56 where all codd. give ἀνήλιπος or ἀνάλιπος except cod. k νήλιπος) τε [κα]ὶ (ε)ἵμασι | φαιδρυνθ(ε)ῖσαι τῷ καλά|θῳ συνέπεσθε, τὰ δὲ | χρύσ(ε)ια θέτ' οἴκοις· δηρ[ό]θι γὰρ τὰ μὲν ἐχθραίνει το[ῖ]||σιν δὲ προσα[υ]δᾷ ('of old she (?) hates trinkets and welcomes simple garb,' cp. e.g. Dittenberger Syll. inscr. Gr.[3] no. 736, 15 f., 22 Andania, no. 999, 2 ff. Lykosoura). The contents of these ritual baskets were almost certainly sexual emblems (phallós? ktels?), cp. the Cabiric basket in Phrygia and Etruria (supra i. 107 f., ii. 299).

If the Lydian dancers represented the reeds of the Gygaia Limne, they might no doubt sway and curtsy with mimetic motions. A tomb at Beni Hasan shows the dances performed at the funeral feast of the nomarch Chnemhôtep in the twelfth dynasty (J. G. Wilkinson Manners and Customs of the Ancient Egyptians London 1837 ii. 416 no. 291 fig. 1, R. Lepsius Denkmaeler aus Aegypten und Aethiopien Berlin 1849—1859 iv. 2 pl. 126=my fig. 803, Text herausgegeben von E. Naville—L. Borchardt—K. Sethe Leipzig 1904 ii. 88, P. E. Newberry Beni Hasan London 1893 i. 68, 72 pl. 29 (tomb 3, west wall), P. Richer Le nu dans l'Art Égypte—Chaldée—Assyrie Paris 1925 p. 240 fig. 405 (after I. Rosellini I monumenti dell' Egitto e della Nubia Pisa 1834 ii pl. 101, 3)). 'One figure... parodies a royal group, one of the frequent victory reliefs, in which the monarch seizes the kneeling barbarian by the hair, and swings his sickle-shaped sword above his head. This group is called "Under the feet," the superscription over the relief being always, "all nations lie under thy feet." Another group in the same picture is called the wind: one woman bends backwards, till her hands rest on the ground, a second performs the same movement above her, a third stretches out her arms over them. Possibly the former represent the reeds and grasses bent by the wind' (A. Erman Life in Ancient Egypt trans. H. M. Tirard London 1894 p. 248 f., with fig., cp. F. Weege Der Tanz in der Antike Halle/Saale 1926 p. 24 fig. 24 (=my fig. 804), A. Weigall Ancient Egyptian Works of Art London 1924 p. 258 fig. from a limestone fragment at Turin referable to the reign of Seti i (1313—1292 B.C.), H. Ranke The Art of Ancient Egypt Vienna 1936 fig. 268 assigned to Dynasty xx (c. 1180 B.C.), Sir A. J. Evans The Palace of Minos London 1935 iv. 2. 507 f. fig. 452 a, b, c ('Female Egyptian Tumblers of Social and Ceremonial Occasions'). A surer method, however, of identifying the dancers with the reeds was to give them a head-dress of rushes or basket-work such as Laconian women called σαλία and others θολία (Hesych. σαλία· πλέγμα καλάθῳ ὅμοιον, ὃ ἐπὶ τῆς κεφαλῆς φοροῦσιν αἱ Λάκαιναι. οἱ δὲ θολία). It figures not infrequently on works of art and has been the subject of much speculation (L. Stephani Nimbus und Strahlenkranz St Petersburg 1859 p. 111 ff. (extr. from the Mémoires de l'Académie des Sciences de St.-Pétersbourg. vi Série. Sciences politiques, histoire, philologie ix. 471 ff.), id. in the Compte-rendu St. Pét. 1865 pp. 27 ff., 57 ff. Atlas pl. 3, 2 and 3, T. Homolle in the Bull. Corr. Hell. 1897 xxi. 605, L. Séchan in Daremberg—Saglio Dict. Ant. iv 1037 f. fig. 6063 f., V. K. Müller Der Polos, die griechische Götterkrone Berlin 1915 pp. 28, 82 ff., Hug in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. x. 1549, F. Poulsen Delphi trans. G. C. Richards London 1920 p. 263).

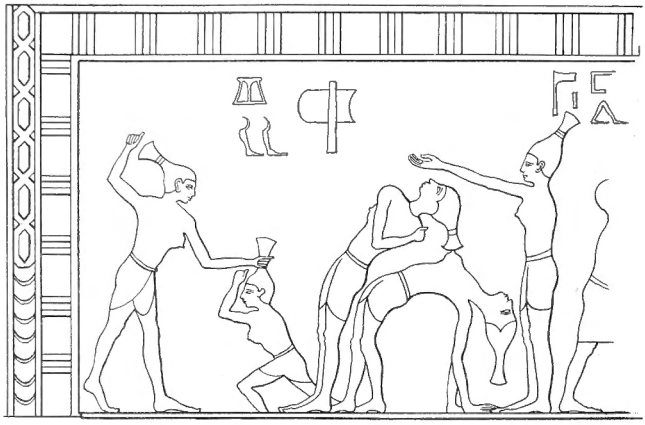

Fig. 803.

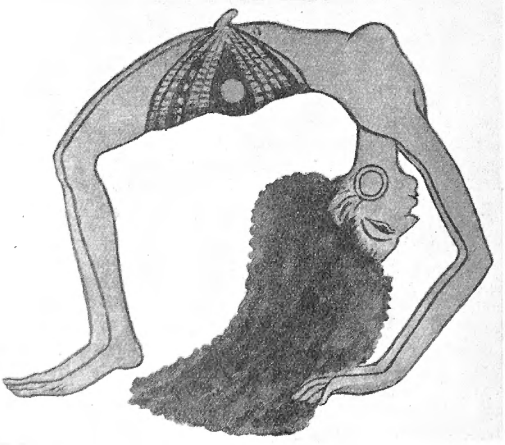

Fig. 804.

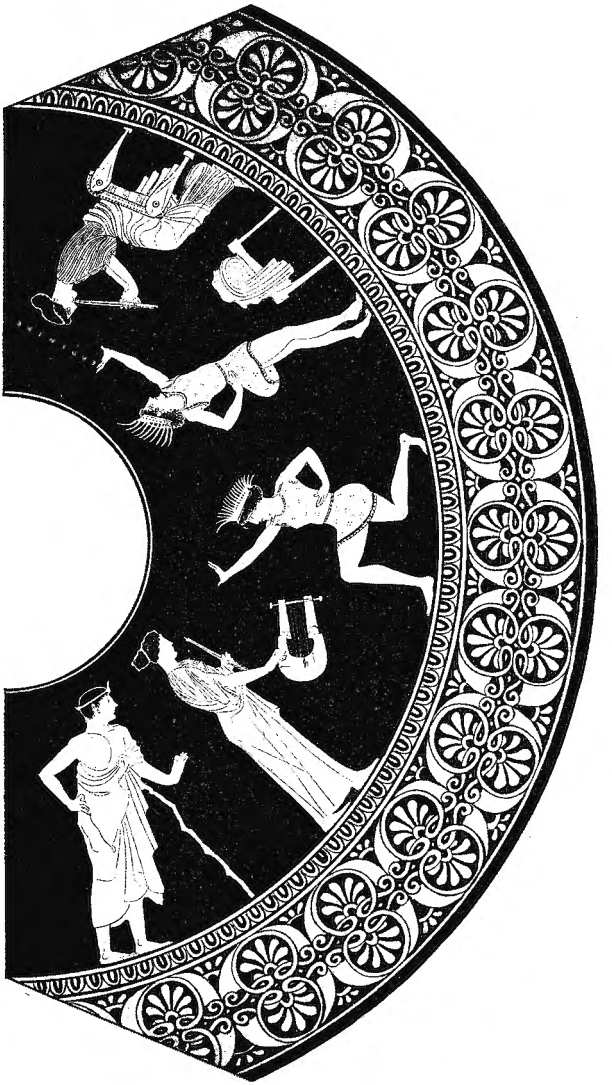

Fig. 805.

The earliest ceramic example of kalathískos-dancers occurs on a red-figured hydría from Nola, now at Naples (Heydemann Vasensamml. Neapel p. 531 ff. no. 3232), which may be dated c. 450—440 B.C. (C. Watzinger in Furtwängler—Reichhold—Hauser Gr. Vasenmalerei iii. 319 ff. figs. 151—154 pl. 171, 1 (=my fig. 805)). It is decorated with four groups of female dancers and acrobats. The section of the shoulder-frieze here reproduced shows, on the right, a seated flute-player (ΕΛΓΙΝΙΚΕ), before whom on tip-toe pirouettes a dancing-girl (...ΓΟΝΕ) with hand outstretched in the gesture known as σιμὴ χείρ (Poll. 4. 105 τραγικῆς ὀρχήσεως σχήματα σιμὴ χείρ, καλαθίσκος, χεὶρ καταπρανής, κ.τ.λ., Hesych. σιμὴ χείρ· σχῆμα τραγικόν). To the left of her, a second dancing-girl sinks on her knee, to show that her performance is finished. The musician who has accompanied her lays aside the double flutes and takes up a kithára. Behind her stands an interested youth leaning on his staff. Each dancer wears a short chitón and a high crown of leaves painted white. A volute-kratér from Ceglie, now at Taranto, of early south-Italian style (P. Wuilleumier in the Rev. Arch. 1929 ii. 197—202 and at greater length ib. 1933 ii. 3—30 with figs. 1—7, of which fig. 4=my fig. 806. I am indebted to Mr A. D. Trendall for the photographs of detail reproduced in my pl. lxxi, (1)—(3)), represents the following subjects: A. Dionysos (nárthex, kántharos) seated on a rock between a dancing Maenad (thýrsos) and a flute-girl (long chitón) on the left, a female torch-bearer (short chitón with sleeves, nebrís, endromídes) and a bearded Satyr (thýrsos) on the right. B. (1) Perseus dangling the Gorgon's head before five bearded Satyrs in dance-attitudes—apparently a scene from Satyric drama. (2) A square pillar inscribed ΚΑΡΝΕΙΟΣ (i.e. Apollon Kárneios in south-Italian aniconic form: cp. supra i. 36 ff. pl. iii, ii. 815 fig. 781), to the right of which is a group of kalathískos-dancers. One is about to put on his basket as ritual head-dress (cp. the figure in the lower left-hand corner of the pelike from Ruvo, wrongly interpreted by me supra i. 128 pl. xii). A second, crowned with palm-leaves (Sosibios of Sparta frag. 5 (Frag. hist. Gr. ii. 626 Müller)=frag. 2 Tresp ap. Athen. 678 B Θυρεατικοί· οὕτω καλοῦνταί τινες στέφανοι παρὰ Λακεδαιμονίοις, ὥς φησι Σωσίβιος ἐν τοῖς Περὶ θυσιῶν, ψιλίνους (cp. Hesych. s.vv. ψιλίον, ψιλὸς στέφανος) αὐτοὺς φάσκων νῦν ὀνομάζεσθαι, ὄντας ἐκ φοινίκων. φέρειν δ' αὐτοὺς ὑπόμνημα τῆς ἐν

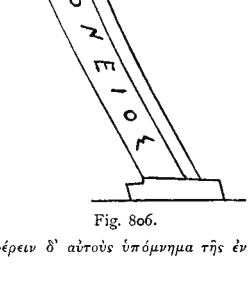

Fig. 806.

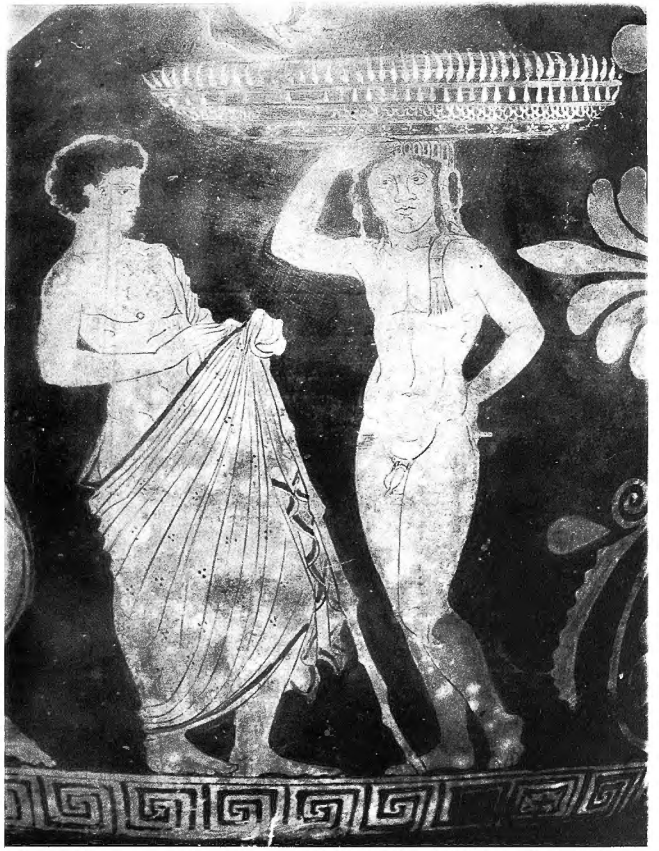
1

2



3

1—3) Details of kratér from Ceglie, now at Taranto: a group of kalathískos-dancers.

See page 996 f.

Θυρέᾳ γενομένης νίκης τοὺς προστάτας τῶν ἀγομένων χορῶν ἐν τῇ ἑορτῇ ταύτῃ, ὅτε καὶ τὰς Γυμνοπαιδίας ἐπιτελοῦσιν. κ.τ.λ.), holds an aryballos with straps, as he stands between a basin and a draped flute-player (flutes, phorbeiá). A third and fourth are dancing, the former decked with palm-leaf crown, the latter dressed as a girl with basket on head and ballooning chitón. A fifth, also wearing the basket, stands engaged in talk with a spectator. Mr Trendall compares an unpublished kályx-kratér from Scoglitti near Kamarina, now at Syracuse (no. 14626), which shows: A. A woman and a youth with basket head-dress. B. Two draped youths. 'The main scene is framed between two Ionic columns. The woman is elaborately draped, and holds up her hands as if to catch something thrown to her by the boy. He is nude with the large basket (in applied yellow, which has worn off) on his head, as on the Taranto Karneia-krater.' Again, a bell-kratér of early south-Italian style, purchased in Rome and now at Leyden (A. E. J. Holwerda Catalogus van het Rijksmuseum van Oudheden te Leiden. Afdeeling Griekenland en Italie. 1 Deel: Vaatwerk. Leiden 1905 i. 104 no. 28), has for obverse design a girl in a short chitón dancing between two naked youths. All three wear spreading kálathoi formed of reeds (?) arranged like rays. Two wreaths are hung in the background, and the scene is enclosed by a pair of simple pillars (V. K. Müller Der Polos, die griechische Götterkrone Berlin 1915 p. 83 n. 3 pls. 6 and 7. My fig. 807 is from a photograph supplied by Mr Trendall. This must be the vase from Gnathia (Fasano) formerly owned by R. Barone and partially published by G. Minervini in the Bull. Arch. Nap. Nuova Serie 1854 ii. 184 pl. 14 facing head of dancer only). Another bell-kratér of the same style, from Ruvo(?), now in the South Kensington Museum, and attributed by Miss Moon (Mrs Oakeshott) to 'the Sisyphus painter,' represents a similar scene—two naked youths wearing spread kálathoi of reeds (?) and gesticulating as they dance on either side of a bearded flute-player in a long chitón (Noël Moon in Papers of the British School at Rome 1929 xi. 30 ff. pl. 12 (=my fig. 808), C. Dugas in the Rev. Ét. Gr. 1931 xliv. 101 with fig. 6). Mrs Oakeshott loc. cit. notes another bell-kratér by the same hand and exhibiting the same subject in the collection of Dr A. Ruesch at Zürich (Ruesch Sale Catalogue 1936 no. 14 pl. 22. The vase is now in the Wolfensperger Collection, 23 Maienburgweg, Zürich. My fig. 809 is from a photograph kindly lent by Mrs Oakeshott): the man in the centre here pirouettes. Similarly on a red-figured bell-kratér at Berlin (inv. no. 3326), which A. Furtwängler in the Jahrb. d. kais. deutsch. arch. Inst. 1895 x Arch.

Fig. 807.

Fig. 808.

Fig. 809.

Anz. p. 39 f. fig. 16 (inadequate) describes as being 'in schöner Zeichnung der Zeit des peloponnesischen Krieges' and R. Zahn in Furtwängler—Reichhold—Hauser Gr. Vasenmalerei iii. 193 n. 84 calls 'attischen,' but C. Watzinger ib. iii. 323 takes to be 'wohl eher böotischen als attischen...aus der ersten Hälfte des 4. Jahrhunderts,' a girl wearing a short chitón of foldless embroidered stuff suggestive of barbaric (? Lydian) attire and the reed-crown of a kalathískos-dancer capers before young Dionysos, who is sitting on a broad three-stepped base or platform. Eros, leaning against his shoulder, points to the lively dancer. Behind her, an Ionic column painted white implies a sanctuary; and beyond it stands a Maenad equipped with nebrís, thýrsos, and large týmpanon (K. Latte De saltationibus Graecorum Giessen 1913 p. 57, like Furtwängler, thought it a shield). The best available illustration of this ritual scene is a photographic cut in H. Licht Sittengeschichte Griechenlands Dresden—Zürich 1925 i. 122. With it should be compared a bell-kratér of Paestum style in the British Museum (Brit. Mus. Cat. Vases iv. 97 no. F 188, P. F. H. d'Hancarville Antiquités étrusques, grecques et romaines, tirées du cabinet de M. Hamilton Naples 1767 iv col. pl. 118, Corp. vas. ant. Brit. Mus. iv E. a pl. 2, 3 a and 3 b with text p. 4 by A. H. Smith and F. N. Pryce), on which the youthful Dionysos holds out fruit to a male kalathískos-dancer performing before him (my fig. 810 is from the official photograph), and an Apulian bell-kratér from Rugge at Berlin (B. Schröder in the Röm. Mitth. 1909 xxiv. 119 fig. 6), on which is a male dancer of like aspect.

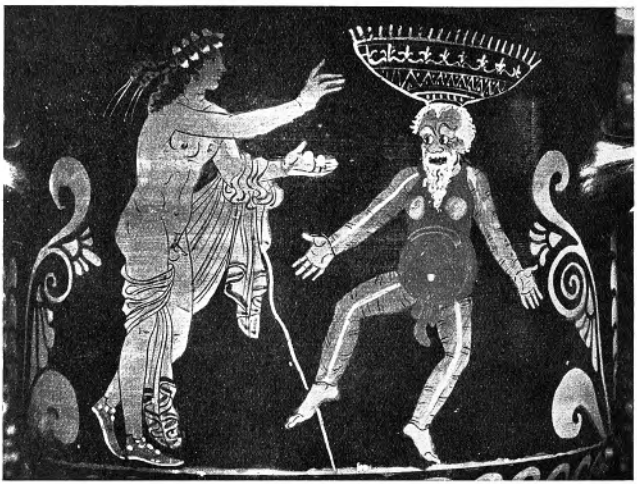

Fig. 810.

Once more, on a late red-figured bell-kratér at Petrograd (Stephani Vasensamml. St. Petersburg ii. 299 no. 1778, id. in the Compte-rendu St. Pét. 1869 p. 236 Atlas pl. 6, 4 and 5 (=my fig. 811), Reinach Rép. Vases i. 32, 5 and 7) a girl wearing the short chitón and kalathískos places the pinakískion on the kóttabos-stand for a recumbent feaster (hardly Dionysos, as F. Hauser in the Jahrb. d. kais. deutsch. arch. Inst. 1890 v Arch. Anz. p. 68 supposed).

Other early examples of the motif are to be found among the limestone reliefs of c. 420—410 B.C. that decorate the inner surface of the herôion at Trysa. The doorway on the southern side is here flanked by two female (?) dancers wearing a large kálathos perhaps originally painted with a design of reeds or rushes (cp. the dancing-girl with yellow krótala and a white kálathos marked with red rays in a tomb-painting of s. iv (?) B.C. found in 1854 at S. Maria in Fondo Vetta, south of the amphitheatre at Capua, and published by G. Minervini in the Bull. Arch. Nap. Nuova Serie 1854 ii. 183 f. pl. 14, P. W. Forchhammer in the Mon.

Ann. e Bull. d. Inst. 1854 p. 63, F. Weege 'Oskische Grabmalerei' in the Jahrb. d. kais. deutsch. arch. Inst. 1909 xxiv. 111, 130, 135 no. 25. A Lydian dance might well reappear at Capua, where the Etruscans held sway till 445 or 424 B.C. (C. Hülsen in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. iii. 1556)). The lintel above has a frieze of eight grotesque and Bes-like musicians wearing the same head-dress: they have been taken to be the eight Phoenician Kabeiroi (on whom see F. Lenormant in Daremberg—Saglio Dict. Ant. i. 772 f. fig. 918 and R. Pettazzoni 'Le origini dei Kabiri nelle isole del mar tracio' in the Memorie della R. Accademia dei Lincei. Classe di Scienze Morali, Storiche e Filologiche. Serie Quinta. Roma 1909 xii. 672 ff.), and are commonly associated with the dancing figures below them (O. Benndorf—G. Niemann Das Heroon von Gjölbaschi-Trysa Wien 1889 pp. 58, 95 f. pl. 6 = my fig. 812, S. Reinach in the Gazette des Beaux-Arts 1892 viii. 306 ff.

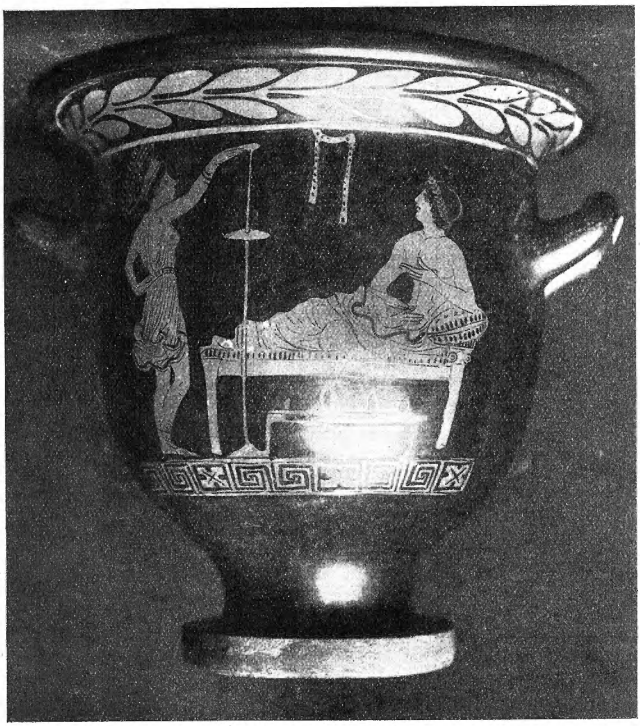

Fig. 811.

with fig. on p. 295 = id. Monuments nouveaux de l'art antique Paris 1924 ii. 299 ff. with fig. 435, id. Rép. Reliefs i. 444 no. 1, Collignon Hist. de la Sculpt. gr. ii. 204 with fig. 97, H. Thiersch in the Jahrb. d. kais. deutsch arch. Inst. 1907 xxii. 238).

Between c. 425 and c. 400 B.C. may be placed certain silver statêres of Abdera, which have as reverse type the magistrate's date ΕΠΙ ΜΟΛΠΑΓΟΡΕΩ and the canting badge of a similar dancing girl turned left (Brit. Mus. Cat. Coins

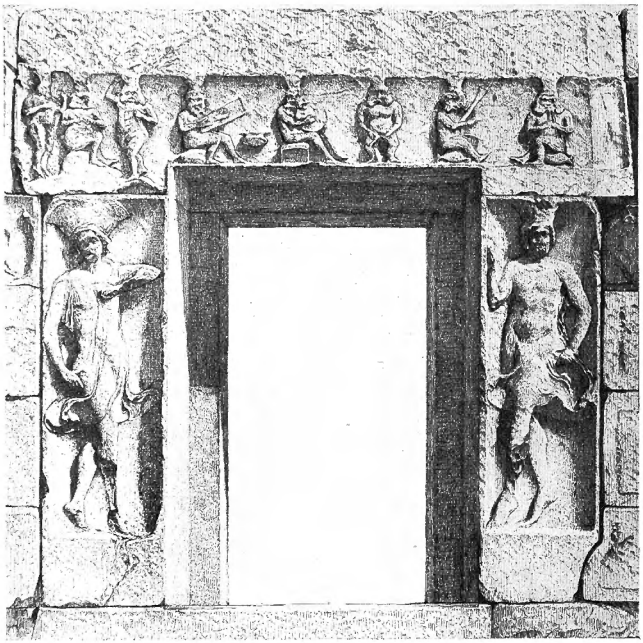

Fig. 812.

The Tauric Chersonese, etc. p. 70 no. 35 fig., p. 230 no. 35 a (my fig. 813 from a cast), Ant. Münz. Berlin Taurische Chersonesus, etc. i. 106 no. 68 pl. 4, 38, Ant. Münz. Nord-Griechenlands ii. 1. 1. 71 no. 99 pl. 3, 2, J. N. Svoronos in the Ἐφ. Ἀρχ. 1889 p. 99 ff. pl. 2, 22, H. von Fritze in Nomisma 1909 iii pl. 2, 21, K. Regling Die antike Münze als Kunstwerk Berlin 1924 pp. 71, 84 no. 492 pl. 22) or right (J. Millingen Sylloge of ancient unedited coins of Greek cities and kings, from various collections London 1837 pp. 30, 33 pl. 2, 13, Ant. Münz. Berlin Taurische Chersonesus, etc. i. 106 no. 67, Ant. Münz. Nord-Griechenlands ii. 1. 1. 71 no. 100 pl. 3, 1 Berlin, J. N. Svoronos in the Ἐφ. Ἀρχ. 1889 p. 99 ff.

pl. 2, 21 (=my fig. 814) Paris, H. von Fritze in Nomisma 1909 iii pl. 2, 20 Paris, K. Regling Die antike Münze als Kunstwerk Berlin 1924 pp. 71, 84 no. 493 pl. 22, Babelon Monn. gr. rom. ii. 4. 897 f. pl. 335, 15 Paris, C. Seltman Greek Coins London 1933 p. 144 pl. 28, 13 Berlin).

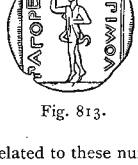

Fig. 813.

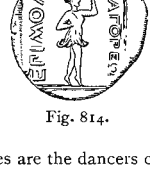

Fig. 814.

Closely related to these numismatic examples are the dancers carved on two slabs of Pentelic marble, which were brought from Italy to Berlin in 1892 (figs. 815, 816 are from C. Blümel Staatliche Museen zu Berlin: Katalog der Sammlung antiker Skulpturen Berlin 1931 iv. 45 f. nos. K 184 and 185 pl. 77, cp. F. Weege Der Tanz in der Antike Halle/Saale 1926 p. 45 figs. 48 and 49). The more complete relief measures 0·95^{m} high by 0·54^{m} broad; the less complete, 0·80^{m} high by 0·56^{m} broad. It seems probable that, like three similar but fragmentary reliefs at Athens (H. Schrader Phidias Frankfurt am Main 1924 p. 346 figs. 315, 316), they were intended for mural decoration. The reliefs at Berlin exhibit such delicious freshness and abandon that R. Kekulé, who first published them in the Jahrb. d. kais. deutsch. arch. Inst. 1893 viii Arch. Anz. p. 76 with two figs., did not hesitate to regard them as Attic work dating from the earlier half of s. v B.C. (cp. M. Sauerlandt Griechische Bildwerke Düsseldorf—Leipzig p. x 'aus dem Anfange des v. Jahrhunderts v. Chr.,' Kurze Beschreibung der antiken Skulpturen im Alten Museum[2] Berlin—Leipzig 1920 p. 90 no. 1456 f. pl. 26 'Griechische Werke des 5. Jh. v. Chr.', F. Weege op. cit. p. 45 'aus demselben Künstleratelier der 5. Jahrh. v. Chr.'). But Furtwängler Masterpieces of Gk. Sculpture p. 438 n. 3 with greater circumspection claims that they are only 'good specimens of the so-called later Attic school, by no means genuine archaic works' (cp. id. Ueber Statuenkopieen im Alterthum München 1896 i. 4 n. 3 (=Abh. d. bayer. Akad. 1896 Philos.-philol. Classe xx. 528 n. 3).

If so, they must be ranked with the kalathiskos-dancers of Arretine ware (c. 150 B.C.—50 A.D.) discussed by H. Dragendorff in the Bonner Jahrbücher 1895 xcvi—xcvii. 58 ff. A skyphos from Capua has four dancers grouped in pairs. Between the two pairs is a small Eros standing on a pillar, and between the dancers of the right-hand pair is a thymiatérion (H. Dragendorff loc. cit. figs. 14, 14 a after Riccio Notizie degli scavamenti nel suolo dell' antica Capua Napoli 1855 pl. 5). A fragmentary mould found at Arezzo in 1896 and now in the British Museum shows four girls likewise dancing in pairs and wearing a head-dress of open wicker-work. Above them runs a wreath to which festoons are looped up with large bows. Between the pairs of dancers a flower springs from the ground (Brit. Mus. Cat. Rom. Pottery p. 34 no. L 108, H. B. Walters History of Ancient Pottery London 1905 ii. 493 f. pl. 66, 5). Another specimen, in the Loeb collection, has a very similar dancer standing between two bases (?) with a festoon fastened to bucrania behind her and a flower or flowering rush (?) at her feet (F. Weege op. cit. pp. 45, 48 with fig. 51 after G. H. Chase Guide to Loeb Collection of Arretine Pottery Harvard University no. 53 pl. 3). Another mould in New York shows the dancer, once more between two bases (?) with a festoon of vine and ivy behind her (G. M. A. Richter in the Am. Journ. Arch. 1936 xl. 15 fig. 4). Again, fragments of a mould found near the church of S. Maria in Gradi at Arezzo and now in the museum of that town represent two such dancers facing left. In front of one is a Dionysiac herm, in front of the other a fighting Athena, each effigy set on the top of an Ionic column (G. F. Gamurrini reported by G. Fiorelli in the Not. Scavi 1884 p. 372 gruppo v nos. 1—3 pl. 7, 2). The moulds found with this bear the signature of that admirable craftsman M. Perennius, on whom see M. Ihm in the Bonner Jahrbücher 1898 cii. 114 ff., H. B. Walters op. cit. pp. 483, 492, 494 and in the Brit. Mus. Cat. Rom. Pottery pp. xvii, xx, xxii.

Fig. 815.

Fig. 816.

Similarly the upper part of a Roman mural relief in terra cotta, made during the first half of Augustus' reign and now preserved in the Antiquarium at Berlin, figures a facing Palladion flanked by two kalathiskos-dancers, whose pink garments contrasted with a blue background (Von Rohden—Winnefeld Ant. Terrakotten iv. 1. 248 pl. 18, Furtwängler op. cit. p. 438 fig. 179, J. Sieveking in Roscher Lex. Myth. iii. 1332 fig. 8. A fragment in the Brit. Mus. Cat. Terracottas p. 412 no. D 646 fig. 76 gives the head and shoulder of the right-hand dancer). More complete but less delicate is the replica in G. P. Campana Antiche opere in plastica Roma 1842 p. 37 f. pl. 4, cp. Le Musée d'Aix Paris 1882—1921 p. 477 no. 1588. Another example in the Casino of Pius iv in the Vatican Garden is published by Müller—Wieseler Denkm. d. alt. Kunst ii. 151 pl. 20, 214 a.

Neo-Attic reliefs, which perhaps imply Attic originals of s. i B.C. (F. Hauser in the Jahresh. d. oest. arch. Inst. 1913 xvi. 53 f., Ada von Netoliczka ib. 1914 xvii. 132), make use of similar motifs. A three-sided base of Flavian date (69—96 A.D.) in the Museo Archeologico at Venice is adorned with two kalathiskos-dancers and an ecstatic Maenad. Each figure is framed by an over-elaborate and meaningless combination of ram's head, lion's leg, and bust of winged female Sphinx wearing a rayed kálathos, on which kneels Nike with spread wings (L. Stephani in the Compte-rendu St. Pét. 1865 p. 60 no. 6, H. Heydemann Mittheilungen aus den Antikensammlungen in Ober- und Mittelitalien Halle 1879 p. 65 n. 154, F. Hauser Die neu-attischen Reliefs Stuttgart 1889 p. 100 f. no. 31, Einzelaufnahmen nos. 2469—2471 with Text ix. 13 by P. Arndt and G. Lippold, Reinach Rép. Reliefs iii. 432 nos. 4—6, F. Weege op. cit. p. 46 with fig. 47). A second and exactly similar base in the same collection is due to a copyist of the Renaissance (Einzelaufnahmen nos. 2472—2474 with Text ix. 13 by P. Arndt and G. Lippold). Another three-sided base in the Louvre again couples the kalathiskos-dancers with a Maenad, whose head and right arm are a misleading restoration. The framework here with its rams' heads at the upper corners is of a simpler and more satisfactory sort (Clarac Mus. de Sculpt. ii. 343 f. pl. 167 fig. 77 and pl. 168 fig. 78=Reinach Rép. Stat. i. 61 no. 3 and i. 62 no. 1, Müller—Wieseler Denkm. d. alt. Kunst ii. 133 pl. 17, 188, F. Hauser op. cit. p. 100 no. 29. Height 1·011^{m}). Yet another three-sided base, in the Villa Albani, shows three such dancers, of whom one uplifts a dish of fruit before a rude stone altar with fruit laid out upon it and a fire burning, a second stands before a similar altar, and a third before a reed-plant springing from the ground (G. Zoega Li bassirilievi antichi di Roma Roma 1808 i. 111—118 pl. 20=Reinach Rép. Reliefs iii. 152 nos. 1—3, Welcker Alt. Denkm. ii. 146—152 pl. 7, 12, L. Stephani loc. cit. p. 60 no. 2, F. Hauser op. cit. p. 96 no. 19, Helbig Guide Class. Ant. Rome ii. 67 f. no. 816. Height of figures 0·30^{m}). A large kratér of Italian marble with grey stripes, formerly in the Cook collection at Richmond, has on one side a snake-entwined tripod, from which flames are rising, flanked by a pair of Nikai filling phiálai from their raised oinochóai, on the other side an exact repetition of the central and left-hand dancers on the Villa Albani base described above—a repetition which includes both the altar with fruit and the reed-plant springing from the ground.

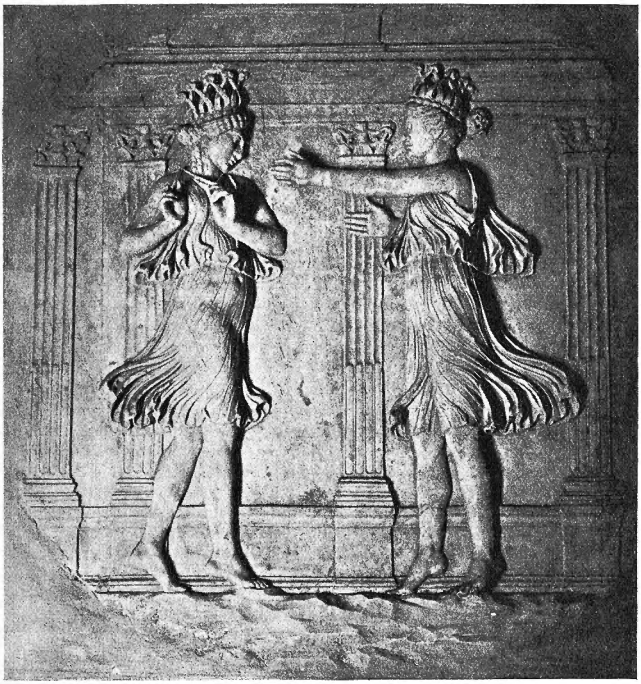

Fig. 817.

Under each handle are two thýrsoi laid crosswise. The handles themselves end in large ivy-leaves (A. Michaelis Ancient Marbles in Great Britain trans. C. A. M. Fennell Cambridge 1882 p. 638 no. 66, F. Hauser op. cit. p. 96 no. 18, Mrs S. A. Strong in the Journ. Hell. Stud. 1908 xxviii. 24 f. no. 33 pl. 17 = Reinach Rép. Reliefs ii. 531 no. 3 f. Height 0·80^{m}; diameter c. 0·80^{m}. The surface has been worked over, but the authenticity of the vase is above suspicion). A marble relief in the Villa Albani figures a couple of kalathískos-dancers facing each other in front of an edifice with two ranges of pilasters (G. Zoega Li bassirilievi antichi di Roma Roma 1808 i. 111—118 pl. 21 = Reinach Rép. Reliefs iii. 151 no. 1, L. Stephani loc. cit. p. 60 no. 3, F. Hauser op. cit. p. 97 no. 21, Helbig Guide Class. Ant. Rome ii. 38 f. no. 769, W. Helbig Führer durch die öffentlichen Sammlungen klassischer Altertümer in Rom[3] Leipzig 1913 ii. 422 f. no. 1867, F. Weege op. cit. p. 46 with fig. 52 from a photograph (my fig. 817, H. Licht Sittengeschichte Griechenlands Dresden—Zürich 1925 i. 73 fig.), which shows that—as Hauser observed—the kálathoi are largely restored. The restoration affects the left hand of the dancer on the right, both hands, the right foot, and the lower part of the left leg of the other dancer, together with the rocky foreground and portions of the architectural background. Height 0·85[m]). A finely worked relief of Pentelic marble in the Lateran collection preserves the single headless figure of a similar dancer turned towards the right in front of a wall with pilasters (Matz—Duhn Ant. Bildw. in Rom iii. 19 no. 3499). A fragment now in the Sala Lapidaria of the Arcivescovado at Ravenna also gives a single kalathískos-dancer from the knees upwards with the remains of a flat pilaster and wall (H. Heydemann op. cit. p. 65 no. 5, C. Ricci in Ausonia iv. 258 with fig. 10). Another in the Palazzo Farnese shows a single dancer of the same sort (Matz—Duhn op. cit. iii. 19 no. 3499[a]). Finally, a marble puteal in the Palazzo Doria represents two pairs of kalathískos-dancers fronting each other amid a fine growth of tendrils. They are here assimilated to Nikai by having large wings on their shoulders (Matz—Duhn op. cit. iii. 112 no. 3678, cp. Comm. Datti in the Bull. d. Inst. 1860 p. 98).

Looking back over the evidence thus detailed we gather that the kalathískos-dancers of the Arretine sherds, the Roman mural terra cottas, and the neo-Attic reliefs are archaistic derivatives of similar types already existing in the second half of s. v B.C.—witness the Naples hydría, the door-jambs at Trysa, and the coins of Abdera. Furtwängler acutely conjectured that the original from which they are all descended was a famous masterpiece (in archaïsing bronze relief?) by Kallimachos, the saltantes Lacaenae described by Plin. nat. hist. 34. 92 as 'a work of faultless technique, but one which has lost all charm through over-elaboration' (Furtwängler Masterpieces of Gk. Sculpt. p. 438). This conjecture has been widely accepted and is indeed highly probable. But the further attempt to name the dancers Karyatides and to connect them with architectural 'Caryatids' in general (P. Wolters in the Zeitschrift für bildende Kunst Neue Folge 1895 vi. 36—44 after Visconti Mus. Pie- Clém. iii pl. b, ii, F. Weege op. cit. p. 44 ff.) is in my judgment a mistake (cp. supra ii. 535 n. 2). I incline to the following solution of the problem. Alkman, who came to Sparta Σαρδίων ἀπ' ἀκρᾶν (Alkm. frag. 24. 5 Bergk[4], 2. 5 Edmonds, 13. 5 Diehl ap. Steph. Byz. s.v. Ἐρυσίχη, cp. Anth. Pal. 7. 709. 1 ff. (Alexandros (of Aitolia?)), 7. 18. 3 ff. (Antipatros of Thessalonike), Krates (of Mallos?) ap. Souid. s.v. Ἀλκμάν), is known to have composed parthéneia for Artemis and other deities. Moreover, he wrote for the Spartan Gymnopaidiai songs to be sung by boys and men wearing 'Thyreatic' crowns made of palm-leaves (Sosibios of Sparta frag. 5 (Frag. hist. Gr. ii. 626 Müller) ap. Athen. 678 E cited supra p. 996 f.). Such a poet can hardly have failed to import into Sparta the famous kalathískos-dance of his own Sardeis. It was perhaps formerly figured on an inscribed but mutilated stéle of s. iii B.C., found in the Amyklaion (B. Schröder in the Ath. Mitth. 1904 xxix. 29, 31 with fig. 2). Identical with it, or at least akin to it, was a dance performed at the Spartan festival of Promacheia (Nilsson Gr. Feste p. 470), when the Perioikoi as distinct from the Spartiatai wore a crown of reeds (Sosibios of Sparta frag. 4 (Frag. hist. Gr. ii. 626 Müller)=frag. 1 Tresp ap. Athen. 674 A καὶ γὰρ καὶ Λακεδαιμόνιοι καλάμῳ στεφανοῦνται ἐν τῇ τῶν Προμαχείων ἑορτῇ, ὥς φησι Σωσίβιος ἐν τοῖς περὶ τῶν ἐν Λακεδαίμονι θυσιῶν γράφων οὕτως· 'ἐν ταύτῃ συμβαίνει τοὺς μὲν ἀπὸ τῆς χώρας καλάμοις στεφανοῦσθαι ἢ στλεγγίδι (cp. Plout. inst. Lac. 32 στλεγγίσιν οὐ σιδηραῖς ἀλλὰ καλαμίναις ἐχρῶντο), τοὺς δ' ἐκ τῆς ἀγωγῆς παῖδας ἀστεφανώτους ἀκολουθεῖν'). Another ritual link between Lakonike and Lydia is noted by L. Stephani, who observes in the Compte-rendu St. Pét. 1865 pp. 31, 58 that the cult of Artemis Ὀρθία at Sparta involved a Ἀνδῶν πομπή (Plout. v. Aristid. 17. Cp. the case of Artemis Κορδάκα at Olympia (Paus. 6. 22. 1 with H. Hitzig—H. Blümner ad loc.)).

Three dancing-girls in like attire surmounted the very beautiful acanthus-column of Pentelic (not Parian) marble, which stood on the north side of the Sacred Way at Delphoi, close to the votive offerings of the Syracusan princes. Arranged back to back round a central stem, the girls supported the lébes of the bronze tripod whose legs rested upon the leafy capital. This group of dainty light-footed damsels in some ways anticipates the art of Praxiteles. Indeed, T. Homolle in the Rev. Arch. 1917 i. 31—67 figs. 1—6 was prepared to regard it as a contemporary replica of the Praxitelean 'figures called Thyiades and Karyatides' later to be seen in the gallery of Asinius Pollio (Plin. nat. hist. 36. 23). But C. Praschniker Zur Geschichte des Akroters Brünn 1929 p. 48 f. has shown that the Dancers' Column was found in the same deposit as the Charioteer, i.e. in the débris caused by the earthquake of 373 B.C., and should therefore be accepted as pre-Praxitelean and referred to a date perhaps as early as the late fifth century (S. Casson in the Journ. Hell. Stud. 1932 lii. 133). In any case we may admit that the Delphian dancers with their crowns of 'sharp-ribbed rushes' are a composition of infinite grace, which forms a later (c. 400 B.C.) variation on the saltantes Lacaenae designed by Kallimachos and owes its ultimate inspiration to the kalathískos-dancers of the Lydian lake-side. See further the Fouilles de Delphes ii. 1 pl. 15 (the column restored by A. Tournaire, with tripod-legs supported by dancers), iv. 2 pls. 60 (the dancers = my fig. 818), 61 (the dancers, another view), 62 (head of one dancer in profile), É. Bourguet Les ruines de Delphes Paris 1914 pp. 188—192 fig. 63 f., F. Poulsen Delphi trans. G. C. Richards London 1920 pp. 246—264 figs. 113—128, and especially H. Pomtow 'Die Tänzerinnen-Säule in Delphi' in the Jahrb. d. kais. deutsch. arch. Inst. 1920 xxxv. 113—128 with figs. 1 (=my fig. 819), 2—6, who is followed by A. Rumpf in H. Haas Bilderatlas zur Religionsgeschichte Leipzig 1928 xiii—xiv fig. 128.

A gold earring in the F. L. von Gans collection of the Berlin Antiquarium further attests the popularity of the motif in the fourth century B.C. It represents a dancing-girl with short chitón and high kálathos: her left arm is raised, her right is missing (Amtliche Berichte aus den königl. Kunstsammlungen (Beiblatt zum Jahrbuch der königlichen preussischen Kunstsammlungen) 1913 xxxv. 76 with fig. 37 c).

A bronze statuette, formerly in the Gréau collection, again shows a dancing-girl with short chitón and basket-like head-dress (Reinach Rép. Stat. iv. 242 no. 9) after W. Froehner Collection Julien Gréau. Bronzes Paris 1891 pl. 95), as does a Hellenistic terracotta in the Louvre (J. Charbonneaux Les Terres cuites Grecques London 1936 pp. 23, 50 fig. 54, Encyclopédie photographique de l'Art Paris 1937 ii. 199 with text by Mme Massoul). But examples of the type 'in the round' are rare, for terra-cotta dolls from Myrina with elaborate head-dress (Brit. Mus. Cat. Terracottas p. 243 no. C 522 pl. 35, Mendel Cat. Fig. gr. de Terre Cuite Constantinople p. 378 f. no. 2640 pl. 8, 6) are hardly to be classed as kalathískos-dancers.

Fig. 818.

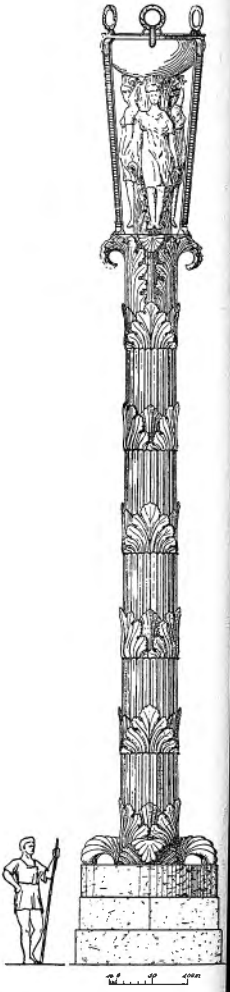

Fig. 819.

Similar figures are found on gems of imperial date, either alone as on a specimen in my collection (fig. 820: scale $\frac{2}{1}$), or else with a palm-branch (Furtwängler Geschnitt. Steine Berlin p. 284 no. 7668 pl. 57 cornelian, no. 7669 cornelian) or a hydría containing a palm-branch (id. ib. p. 284 no. 7670 pl. 57 sardonyx) before them. The palm-branch is here apparently a later substitute for the original reed-plant.

Fig. 820.

Important confirmation of this hypothesis is afforded by terra-cotta plaques of Hellenistic date found at Praisos in eastern Crete. They show a girl with short chitón and spread kálathos, who is dancing in front of 'a tall, bending plant, apparently a reed' (E. S. Forster in the Ann. Brit. Sch. Ath. 1904—1905 xi. 255 with fig. 17 = my fig. 821 (height ·23^{m}), cp. F. Halbherr in the Am. Journ. Arch. 1901 v. 390 pl. 12, 5).

Fig. 821.

In this connexion it may be noted that some would see a phallic significance in the reed. K. F. Johansson Über die altindische Göttin Dhiṣáṇā und Verwandtes Uppsala 1917 p. 33 quotes Dion Cass. 72. 12 ὅτι Ἀστιγγοι, ὧν Ῥάός τε καὶ Ῥάπτος ἡγοῦντο, ἦλθον μὲν ἐς τὴν Δακίαν κ.τ.λ. and explains that Ῥάος and Ῥάπτος, 'Rush' and 'Rafter,' imply the phallic god of fertility conceived as a Reed (cp. Finnish Sämpsä, 'scirpus') and a horizontal Roof-beam. But his etymologies and his symbolism seem equally precarious. He would do better to cite the myth of Pan and Syrinx (H. Ostern in Roscher Lex. Myth. iv. 1642 ff.) as illustrated on imperial bronze coins of Thelpousa in Arkadia (K. Wernicke ib. iii. 1356, 1467 fig. 25 after Brit. Mus. Cat. Coins Peloponnesus p. 204 no. 3 Septimius Severus pl. 37, 23, Imhoof-Blumer and P. Gardner Num. Comm. Paus. ii. 102 Geta, Vienna pl. T, 24, Head Hist. num.[2] p. 456: see further F. Imhoof-Blumer in the Zeitschr. f. Num. 1874 i. 134).

With the extension of the kalathiskos-type to runners in the Lampadedromia as represented on a series of vases c. 400 B.C. (Daremberg—Saglio Dict. Ant. iii. 910 f. figs. 4328—4330) we are not here concerned. One such vase, that signed by the potter Nikias (Hoppin Red-fig. Vases ii. 218 f. no. 1 fig., J. D. Beazley Attische Vasenmaler des rotfigurigen Stils Tübingen 1925 p. 466 no. 1), is reproduced on the five-drachma postage-stamp designed by J. N. Svoronos for the Greek government and issued at Athens in 1906 to commemorate the 'Olympic Games.'

(13) Floating islands are reported from various districts of Italy. Thus one or more of them existed in agro Caecubo (Plin. nat. hist. 2. 209). The allusion is probably to the Lacus Fundanus (Lago di Fondi) in the marshy plain between Fundi and the sea (C. Hülsen in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. iii. 1244).

(14) In the country of the Sabines a lake known as Aquae Cutiliae, between Reate (Rieti) and Interocrium (Antrodoco), was reckoned 'the navel of Italy' (Varr. ap. Plin. nat. hist. 3. 109, Solin. 2. 23). It could boast a floating island (Varr. ap. Plin. loc. cit. and in de ling. Lat. 5. 71) covered with trees and grasses and so easily moved by the wind that it was never to be seen in the same place for a day and night together (Plin. nat. hist. 2. 209, Sen. nat. quaestt. 3. 25. 8 f., cp. anon. de aquis mirabilibus (supra p. 975) 37). If the Greeks dubbed it Κοτύλη (oracle of Zeus at Dodona ap. Dion. Hal. ant. Rom. 1. 19, Macrob. Sat. 1. 7. 28, Steph. Byz. s.v. Ἀβοριγῖνες (=Cougny Anth. Pal. Append. 6. 177), Paul. ex Fest. p. 51, 8 Müller, p. 44, 22 f. Lindsay), that was a well-meant etymology of the Aquae Cutiliae (Ὕδατα Κωτίλια). Of greater interest is the account given by Dion Hal. ant. Rom. 1. 15 (after Varro): 'At a distance of seventy furlongs from Reate is Kotylia, a famous town, situated at the base of a mountain. Not far from it is a lake, four hundred feet across, full of spring water which is always flowing and —so they say—has no bottom to it. This lake, having a touch of divinity about it, the natives deem sacred to Victory (sc. Vacuna). They enclose it round about with fillets, that nobody should approach the water, and preserve it as a spot unprofaned by human tread except on certain yearly occasions (for καιροῖς τισι διετησίοις cod. Vat. has καιροῖς τισὶν ἐτησίοις), when they offer customary sacrifices and particular persons charged with the office land on the small island in it. The island is some fifty feet in diameter and rises not more than one foot above the level of the water. It has no fixed position and floats round here there and everywhere, the wind turning it now hither now thither. A plant resembling sedge grows upon it and sundry bushes of no great size—a thing inexplicable to those who have not seen the handywork of nature and a marvel second to none.' On which E. H. Bunbury in Smith Dict. Geogr. i. 721 comments: 'It is evident that this marvel arose from the incrustations of carbonate of lime formed by the waters of the lake, fragments of which might from time to time be detached from the overhanging crust thus formed on the banks: the same phenomenon occurs, though on a smaller scale, at the Aquae Albulae near Tibur. ([Sir W.] Gell [The] Top[ography] of Rome [and its Vicinity London 1834 i. 74, *ib.*² London 1846 i.] 41.)...The Cutilian Lake still exists under the name of Pozzo di Ratignano or Latignano, though apparently reduced in size by the continual incrustation of its banks; but the floating island has disappeared.'

(15) Two islands in the Lacus Tarquiniensis (more often called the Lacus Volsiniensis, nowadays the Lago di Bolsena, a quondam crater near Volsinii) are described as floating groves blown by the winds now into triangular, now into circular forms, but never into squares (Plin. nat. hist. 2. 209). It is not clear how these two islands (the Isola Martana and the Isola Bisentina (cp. Plin. nat. hist. 3. 52 Vesentini and Corp. inscr. Lat. xi nos. 2910 Honori Visentium, 2911 Virtuti Visenti = Dessau Inscr. Lat. sel. nos. 3796, 3796ª)) could suggest either a triangle or a circle, let alone a square. G. Dennis *The Cities and Cemeteries of Etruria*³ London 1883 ii. 29 shakes his head: 'Shall we not rather refer this unsteady, changeful character to the eyes of the beholders, and conclude that the propagators of the miracle had been making too deep potations in the rich wine of [the lake-side]? Now, at least, the islands have lost their erratic and Protean propensities, and, though still capt with wood, have taken determinate and beautiful forms, no longer plastic beneath the breath of Æolus.' Possibly Santa Cristina, the virgin-martyr of Bolsena (July 24), who was cast into the lake and touched bottom—witness her footprints on the rocks—but, despite the millstone round her neck, would not drown and, after gruesome sufferings, had to be bound to a tree and shot with arrows, should be regarded as the Christian successor of a pagan lake-goddess (Diana?). On her see the Acta Sanctorum edd. Bolland. Antverpiæ 1727 Julius v. 495 ff. 'De S. Christina virg. et martyri apud Lacum Vulsinium, ut volunt, in Tuscia' (Passio 2. 11 p. 526 F Urbanus...jussit eam ligari ad saxum, & medio mari dare præcepit: cumque hoc fieret, saxum disruptum est, & ipsa ab angelis suscepta est, & ita pedibus super aquas maris ferebatur, 2. 17 p. 528 A Julianus irâ commotus jussit mammillas ejus abscindere. Christina dixit: Lapideum cor & abominabile, mammillas meas abscidere jussisti; respice & vide, quia pro sanguine lac in terram defluxit, 2, 18 p. 528 B Tunc iratus Julianus duas sagittas [misit] in eam, unam ad cor ejus, & aliam contra latus ejus, & cum percuteretur, cum gaudio reddidit spiritum), S. Baring-Gould The Lives of the Saints Edinburgh 1914 viii. 527—531 (p. 530 'on this day [July 24], as we are solemnly assured, her head is seen to swim about the lake'), M. and W. Drake Saints and their Emblems London 1916 pp. 26, 143, 193, alib., K. Künstle Ikonographie der Heiligen Freiburg im Breisgau 1926 p. 153 f. The tradition that she walked the water and the belief that her head still swims recall the floating islands mentioned by Pliny. Such wonders die hard.

(16) The Lacus Statoniensis, identified by P. Cluverius Italia antiqua Lugduni Batavorum 1624 p. 517 with the Lago di Mezzano, a tiny sheet of water about five miles west of the Lago di Bolsena, had once a floating island (Plin. nat. hist. 2. 209, Sen. nat. quaestt. 3. 25. 8, and perhaps Strab. 614), but now has none, 'so that we must either reject Cluver's conclusion, or suppose that the island has since disappeared. As there is no other lake in central Etruria which can answer to the Statonian, we must take the alternative, and consider the island to have floated, as it is described, and to have become eventually attached to the shores of the lake' (G. Dennis *The Cities and Cemeteries of Etruria*³ London 1883 i. 494 f.).

(17) The Vadimonis Lacus, another lakelet of Etruria, lying on the right bank of the Tiber about four miles above Horta (Orte) and in modern times variously termed the Laghetto or Laghetello or even Lago di Bassano or Basanello from a village in the neighbourhood, could boast in antiquity not only one floating island (Plin. nat. hist. 2. 209, Sen. nat. quaestt. 3. 25. 8, and perhaps Strab. 614) but several (anon. de aquis mirabilibus (supra p. 975) 38 ἔστι δὲ καὶ λάκκος Οὐαδίμωνος καλουμένη λίμνη οὐ μεγάλη ἐν Ἰταλίᾳ ὁμοίως ἔχουσα νησία πλείονα πάσῃ πνοῇ μετακινούμενα). An interesting account of them is given by Plin. epist. 8. 20 (trans. W. Melmoth rev. W. M. L. Hutchinson): 'I went close up to this lake. It is formed exactly circular (in similitudinem iacentis rotae circumscriptus et undique aequalis); there is not the least obliquity or winding, but all is regular and even as if it had been hollowed and cut out by the hand of art. The colour of its water is a whitish-blue, verging upon green, and somewhat cloudy; it has the odour of sulphur and a strong medicinal taste, and possesses the property of cementing fractures. Though it is but of moderate extent, yet the winds have a great effect upon it, throwing it into violent commotions. No vessels are suffered to sail here, as its waters are held sacred; but several grassy islands swim about it, covered with reeds and rushes, and whatever other plants the more prolific neighbouring marsh and the borders of the lake produce. No two are alike in size or shape; but the edges of all of them are worn away by their frequent collision against the shore and one another. They have all the same depth, and the same buoyancy; for their shallow bases are formed like the hull of a boat. This formation is distinctly visible from every point of view; the hull lies half above and half below the water. Sometimes the islands cluster together and seem to form one entire little continent; sometimes they are dispersed by veering winds; at times, when it is calm, they desert their station and float up and down separately [at times the wind falls dead and they are left floating in isolation A.B.C.]. You may frequently see one of the larger islands sailing along with a lesser joined to it, like a ship with its long boat; or perhaps, seeming to strive which shall outswim the other; then again all are driven to one spot of the shore, which they thus advance, and now here, now there, diminish or restore the area of the lake; only ceasing to contract it anywhere, when they occupy the centre. Cattle have often been known, while grazing, to advance upon those islands as upon the border of the lake, without perceiving that they are on moving ground, till, being carried away from shore they are alarmed by finding themselves surrounded with water, as if they had been put on board ship; and when they presently land wherever the wind drives them ashore, they are no more sensible of disembarking than they had been of embarking. This lake empties itself into a river, which after running a little way above ground, sinks into a cavern and pursues a subterraneous course and if anything is thrown in brings it up again where the stream emerges.' 'But,' says G. Dennis The Cities and Cemeteries of Etruria[3] London 1883 i. 144, 'he who would expect Pliny's description to be verified, might search for ever in vain. It is, indeed, no easy matter to find the lake; for it has so shrunk in dimensions, that what must have been a spacious tract of water in the olden time, is now but a small stagnant pond, almost lost in the tall reeds and bulrushes that wave over it. These we may conclude represent the islets, which either never had an existence, or have now clubbed together to stop up the lake.'

(18) A floating island in agro...Mutinensi (Plin. nat. hist. 2. 209) is mentioned but once and has not been further identified.

(19) Yet another, on the Lacus Benacus (Lago di Garda), the largest of all the lakes in Italy, is said to have been inhabited and to have been planted with trees (anon. de aquis mirabilibus (supra p. 975) 37 ἐπὶ τῆς ἐν Ἰταλίᾳ λίμνης καλουμένης μὲν Βηνάκου, οὔσης δὲ τὸ περίμετρον σταδίων φ' (on its real size see E. H. Bunbury in Smith's Dict. Geogr. i. 389 or C. Hülsen in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. iii. 268), νῆσός ἐστιν οἰκουμένη κατάφυτος δένδρεσιν ἡμέροις ἐπινηχομένη καὶ μεταβαίνουσα πρὸς τὰς τῶν πνευμάτων φοράς).

(20) Lastly, at (Aquae) Salsulae in Gallia Narbonensis, the modern Salces or Salses on the western bank of the Étang de Leucate, was a whole plain, green with fine slender reeds and afloat on underlying water. The centre of it, detached from its surroundings, formed an island which could be pushed away from you or pulled towards you. Holes made in the surface of this plain showed the sea beneath; whence ignorant or lying authors had stated that fish were here dug out of the ground (Mela 2. 82 f., cp. Aristot. mir. ausc. 89, Polyb. 34. 10. 2—4, and perhaps Liv. 42. 2, also Theophr. frag. 171. 7, 11 f. Wimmer, Plin. nat. hist. 9. 176, 178, Sen. nat. quaestt. 3. 16. 5, 3. 17. 3, Iuv. 13. 65 f.). See further E. Desjardins Géographie historique et administrative de la Gaule romaine Paris 1876 i. 251 f., 256 f. and Keune in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. i A. 2012.

It will be obvious from a survey of the foregoing passages that floating islands as such made a deep impression on Greeks and Romans alike and were almost always regarded with naive feelings of awe and veneration. Such phenomena attached themselves readily to the cult of the local deity, often a lake-goddess, and at least in one case gave rise to a popular ritual and an art-type of remarkable beauty. We must not, however, lend an ear to the persuasions of a latter-day mythologist, who would have us believe that the floating islands of Greek story were originally nothing but drifting clouds (F. L. W. Schwartz Der Ursprung der Mythologie Berlin 1860 p. 69 n. 1 'es sind immer ursprünglich die Wolkeninseln der Sage'). Earthly fact plus heavenly fancy will amply suffice to explain the whole flotilla (see e.g. the Celtic parallels in Sir J. Rhŷs Celtic Folklore: Welsh and Manx Oxford 1901 i. 171 f., W. C. Borlase The Dolmens of Ireland London 1897 ii. 591, H. Güntert Kalypso Halle a. S. 1919 p. 145 f.). Doubters should visit Derwentwater and enquire for the Floating Island near Lodore which 'appears periodically about the middle of October at intervals of four years' (M. J. B. Baddeley The English Lake District[10] London 1906 p. 130 with Append. by E. D. Jordan p. 11). It has been studied with scrupulous exactitude by G. J. Symons The Floating Island in Derwentwater, its History & Mystery, with notes of other dissimilar islands London 1888 pp. 1—64 (Frontisp. map of the south-east portion of Derwentwater showing the position of three floating islands on Aug. 27, 1884, p. 19 ff. list of recorded appearances from 1753 to 1888 A.D., p. 23 ff. notice of other floating islands, etc.). Another interesting case is examined by Marietta Pallis 'The Structure and History of Plav: the Floating Fen of the Delta of the Danube' in the Linnean Society's Journal Botany 1916 xliii. 233—290 pls. 11—25.

APPENDIX Q.

THE PROMPTING EROS.

The evolution of this artistic type deserves fuller treatment than it has yet received. Its successive stages may be exemplified as follows:

(1) A small plaque of reddish gold, found in the third shaft-grave at Mykenai, shows a nude Aphrodite (Astarte?) pressing her breasts, with a dove flying over her head. A second plaque of yellow gold, from the same grave, repeats the motif but adds two other doves flying from her shoulders (H. Schliemann Mycenæ London 1878 p. 180 f. fig. 267 f., C. Schuchhardt Schliemann's Excavations trans. E. Sellers London 1891 p. 197 f. fig. 180 f., Perrot—Chipiez Hist. de l'Art vi. 652 fig. 293 f., Ch. Tsountas—J. I. Manatt The Mycenaean Age London 1897 p. 101 f. fig. 38 f., Staïs Coll. Mycénienne: Athènes p. 13 ff. no. 27 fig., Sir A. J. Evans The Palace of Minos London 1921 i. 223 with fig. 169, H. T. Bossert Altkreta[2] Berlin 1923 pp. 32, 220 fig. 311 e, G. Karo Die Schachtgräber von Mykenai München 1930/33 p. 48 pl. 27, 28 and 27 (=my figs. 822, 823).

Fig. 822.

Fig. 823.

(2) A bronze mirror-stand from Hermione, Greek work of c. 600—550 B.C., now in the Museum antiker Kleinkunst at Munich, represents a nude Aphrodite with two human-headed birds (Sirens) perched on lotos-flowers to left and right of her shoulders (J. Sieveking Antike Metallgeräte München s.a. pp. 9, 12 pl. 19 front (=my fig. 824) and back).

(3) Towards the close of s. vi B.C. other variations were attempted. A bronze mirror-stand from Corinth, now at Athens, figures Aphrodite, draped in Ionic chitón and himátion, holding a dove in her right hand, while two winged Sphinxes rest a forepaw on either shoulder of the goddess (Staïs Marbres et Bronzes: Athènes[2] p. 337 no. 11691 fig., C. D. Mylonas in the Arch. Zeit. 1875 xxxiii. 161 no. 1 pl. 14, 1, E. Pottier in A. Dumont—J. Chaplain Les céramiques de la Grèce propre Paris 1890 ii. 249 no. 2 pl. 33). Another bronze mirror-stand, Greek (Corinthian? Argive?) work of c. 500 B.C., formerly in the Cook collection at Richmond, has Aphrodite in Ionic chitón and Doric péplos, but replaces the soul-birds by two winged female figures (Nikai?), who fly towards the shoulders of the goddess with one hand outstretched and a small object (perfume-vase??) in the other (A. Michaelis Ancient Marbles in Great Britain trans. C. A. M. Fennell Cambridge 1882 p. 631 Richmond no. 39, Mrs A. Strong in Burlington Fine Arts Club: Exhibition of Ancient Greek Art London 1904 p. 38 no A 8 pl. 45, a front, b back (wrongly described as 'two hovering Erotes'), Sir C. H. Smith in Catalogue of the Antiquities (Greek, Etruscan and Roman) in the Collection of the late Wyndham Francis Cook, Esqre London 1908 ii. 114 Bronze no. 46 pl. 35 (=my fig. 825: 'two hovering Victories'), K. A. Neugebauer Antike Bronzestatuetten Berlin 1921 p. 45 fig. 25 ('zwei ... Siegesgöttinnen')).

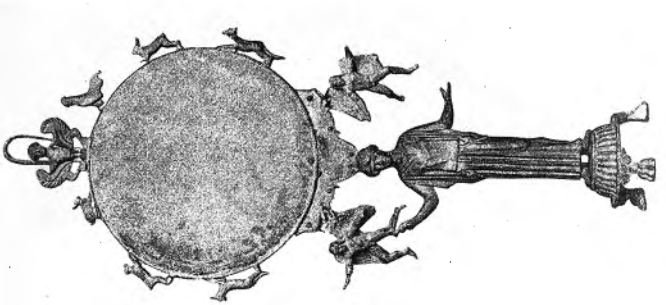

Fig. 826.

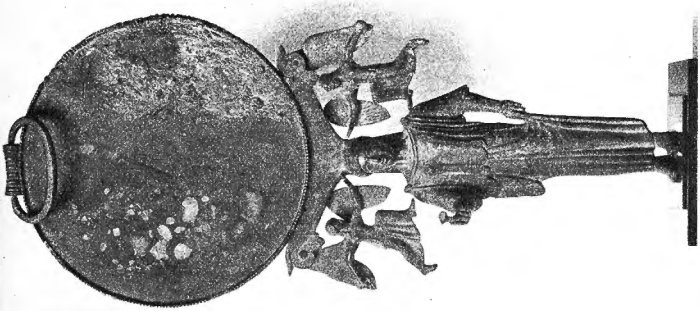

Fig. 825.

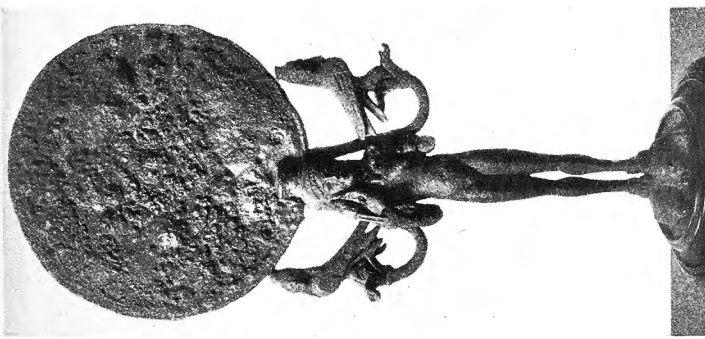

Fig. 824.

(4) Numerous bronze mirror-stands of s. vi—v (listed by E. Pottier in A. Dumont—J. Chaplain op. cit. ii. 249—253: see also Mrs A. Strong loc. cit. p. 38) figure an archaic or at least severe Aphrodite flanked by a pair of Erotes hovering above her shoulders (e.g. Brit. Mus. Cat. Bronzes p. 24 no. 241 pl. 4 Athens, p. 24 no. 242 Sounion, p. 24 f. no. 243 pl. 4 Corinth, De Ridder Cat. Bronzes du Louvre ii. 43 no. 1687 pl. 77 Hermione, ii. 43 f. no. 1689 pl. 77 Corinth, ii. 44 no. 1691 pl. 77 (=my fig. 826) Greece, ii. 44 no. 1692 pl. 77 Corinth, Staïs Marbres et Bronzes: Athènes[2] p. 335 no. 7576 (6576 is apparently a misprint) with fig. on p. 336, J. Sieveking Antike Metallgeräte München s.a. pp. 9, 12 pl. 20 Boston).

(5) About the decade 450—440 B.C. Eros was represented on reliefs in terra cotta or marble as standing on the arm or stepping down from behind the shoulder of Aphrodite (supra ii. 1043 fig. 892, 1044). From this it is not a far cry to—

(6) a kratér from Falerii, now in the Villa Giulia at Rome, which dates from the period of the Peloponnesian War and shows Eros whispering in the ear of Hebe (supra ii. 737 fig. 668), or again to a kratér from Ruvo, now at Naples, which likewise belongs to the latter part of s. v B.C. and makes the small kindred figure of Himeros, kneeling beside the right shoulder of a goddess (Aphrodite? a Muse??), stretch out his arms to crown a tragic mask held in her left hand (Heydemann Vasensamml. Neapel p. 546 ff. no. 3240 ('Muse'), J. de Witte in the Ann. d. Inst. 1841 xiii. 303 ff. ('Aphrodite'), Mon. d. Inst. iii pl. 31, Reinach Rép. Vases i. 114, 1 ('Muse'), B. Arnold in Baumeister Denkm. i. 388 ff. pl. 5 fig. 422, G. Nicole Meidias et le style fleuri dans la céramique attique Genève 1908 p. 120 f. fig. 29, M. Bieber Die Denkmäler zum Theaterwesen im Altertum Berlin—Leipzig 1920 p. 91 ff. fig. 97 pl. 48 ('Muse'), P. Ducati Storia della ceramica greca Firenze 1922 ii. 415 ff. fig. 298).

(7) This conception of Eros or Himeros as a small figure haunting the shoulder to proffer his amatory advice becomes a commonplace on vases produced during the earlier part of s. iv B.C. in the style of the Meidias-painter (G. Nicole op. cit. pl. 10, 6—8, pl. 11, 18), e.g. on a hydría from Ruvo at Karlsruhe (Winnefeld Vasensamml. Karlsruhe p. 63 ff. no. 259, F. G. Welcker in the Ann. d. Inst. 1845 xvii. 172 ff. no. 59, id. Alt. Denkm. v. 403 ff. no. 59, E. Gerhard Apulische Vasenbilder des königlichen Museums zu Berlin Berlin 1845 p. 32 f. pl. D, 2, Overbeck Gall. her. Bildw. i. 233 ff. no. 67 Atlas pl. 11, 1, Furtwängler—Reichhold Gr. Vasenmalerei i. 141 ff. pl. 30, G. Nicole op. cit. p. 65 ff. pl. 2, 2, Hoppin Red-fig. Vases ii. 185 f. no. 20, Pfuhl Malerei u. Zeichnung d. Gr. ii. 595 f. iii. 241 fig. 595, J. D. Beazley Attische Vasenmaler des rotfigurigen Stils Tübingen 1925 p. 459 no. 3, supra i. 125 f. pl. xi: Aphrodite and Alexandros), on a hydría from Populonia at Florence (L. A. Milani Monumenti scelti del R. Museo Archeologico di Firenze Firenze 1905 i pls. 4 and 5, 3, G. Nicole op. cit. p. 69 ff. pl. 3, 2, Hoppin op. cit. ii. 185 no. 17, P. Ducati op. cit. ii. 399 ff. fig. 290, Pfuhl op. cit. ii. 593 ff. iii. 240 fig. 594, J. D. Beazley op. cit. p. 460 no. 4: Eros with Chrysothemis, Himeros with Adonis), on an aryballos from Athens in the British Museum (Brit. Mus. Cat. Vases iii. 345 f. no. E 697, Furtwängler—Reichhold op. cit. ii. 99 f. pl. 78, 2, G. Nicole op. cit. p. 97 no. 1 pl. 7, 1, Hoppin op. cit. ii. 196 no. 60, P. Ducati op. cit. ii. 401, 403 fig. 291, J. D. Beazley op. cit. p. 460 no. 14: Eros seated on the left shoulder of Aphrodite), on an aryballos from Ruvo in the Jatta collection (A. Michaelis Thamyris und Sappho auf einem Vasenbilde Leipzig 1865 pp. 1—18 with pl., D. Comparetti in the Museo italiano di antichità classica Firenze 1888 ii. 59—64 no. 4 pl. 5=Reinach Rép. Vases i. 526, 1, A. Baumeister in his Denkm. iii. 1727 f. fig. 1809, G. Jatta 'La gara di Tamiri con le Muse' in the Röm. Mitth. 1888 iii. 239—253 pl. 9, G. Nicole op. cit. p. 96 f. pl. 7, 4, Hoppin op. cit. ii. 192 no. 47 bis, J. D. Beazley op. cit. p. 460 no. 12: Eros seated on the right shoulder of Sappho (ΣΑΟ), two Erotes to right and left of Aphrodite, of whom one lets fly a bird, the other points). Cp. a hydria from Nola in the British Museum (Brit. Mus. Cat. Vases iv. 55 f. no. F 90 pl. 2: Eros stoops to touch the right shoulder of a seated female).

(8) The same conception persists throughout s. iv B.C. on Attic vases of the 'Kertch' variety such as a hydria from Jüz Oba at Petrograd (Stephani Vasensamml. St. Petersburg ii. 383 ff. no. 1924, id. in the Compte-rendu St. Pét. 1861 pp. 124—127 Atlas pl. 5, 1 and 2=Reinach Rép. Vases i. 9, 4 and 3, Furtwängler—Reichhold op. cit. ii. 102 f. pl. 79, 1: Eros leans on the right shoulder of Paris, a second Eros seated above the right shoulder of Helene looks towards him ἀποσκοπεύων), a kratér from Jüz Oba at Petrograd (Stephani Vasensamml. St. Petersburg ii. 339 ff. no. 1807, id. in the Compte-rendu St. Pét. 1861 p. 33 ff. Atlas pl. 3, 1 and 2=Reinach Rép. Vases i. 7, 5 and 6, L. Weniger in the Arch. Zeit. 1866 xxiv. 185 ff. pl. 211, supra ii. 262 pl. xvii: Eros, standing by Aphrodite's right shoulder, touches her breast), an aryballos from Jüz Oba at Petrograd (Stephani Vasensamml. St. Petersburg ii. 389 f. no. 1929, id. in the Compte-rendu St. Pét. 1861 p. 127 ff. Atlas pl. 5, 3 and 4=Reinach Rép. Vases i. 9, 2 and 1: Eros hovers behind the shoulders of Paris, another Eros with torches hovers beside Helene), a pelike from Kameiros in the British Museum (Brit. Mus. Cat. Vases iii. 261 f. no. E 424, A. Salzmann Nécropole de Camiros Paris 1875 col. pl. 59, A. Conze in the Wien. Vorlegebl. ii pl. 6, 2, 2^a, P. Ducati op. cit. ii. 427 f. fig. 306: Eros hovers above Peleus as he seizes Thetis), a hydria from Kyrenaïke in the British Museum (Brit. Mus. Cat. Vases iii. 179 f. no. E 227, G. Dennis in the Transactions of the Royal Society of Literature of the United Kingdom Second Series 1870 ix. 181 f. pls. 3 and 4, Furtwängler—Reichhold op. cit. ii. 103 f. no. 2 pl. 79, 2: Eros standing on the right upper arm of Herakles offers him apples from the tree of the Hesperides), and finally a hydria from Alexandreia at Munich (Furtwängler—Reichhold op. cit. i. 204—208 pl. 40, P. Ducati op. cit. ii. 432 f. fig. 310, Pfuhl op. cit. ii. 712, iii. 244 fig. 598: Eros, reclining above the head of Paris, leans on the left shoulder of Aphrodite).

(9) B. Schröder in the Jahrb. d. Deutsch. Arch. Inst. 1925 xl Arch. Anz. pp. 364—367 figs. 1—6 and, at greater length, in the Zeitschrift für deutsche Volkskunde 1925 xxxv. 85 ff. contends that the type of Lysippos' statue in bronze representing Herakles deprived of his weapons by Eros (Anth. Plan. 103. 1—6 (Geminos), 104. 1—6 (Philippos): see Overbeck Schriftquellen p. 279 no. 1474, Collignon Hist. de la Sculpt. gr. ii. 425) can be recovered from a vase in the Louvre, a mirror at Athens, a bronze statuette in the British Museum, and sundry gems, which show the hero with a youthful Eros on his shoulder. Schröder further supports a suggestion first made by A. von Le Coq Bilderatlas zur Kunst und Kulturgeschichte Mittel-Asiens Berlin 1925 pp. 26, 83 fig. 159 (Pāñcika and child) viz. that Herakles with Eros on his shoulder ultimately gave rise to the legend of St Christopher bearing the Christ-child (for bibliography etc. see K. Künstle Ikonographie der Heiligen Freiburg im Breisgau 1926 pp. 154—160 figs. 66—68). It is, however, far from certain that such was the motif of Lysippos' bronze; and another possible prototype for St Christopher and the Child is the Pompeian Polyphemos driven by the infant Eros (infra p. 1023).

(10) Eros at-the-shoulder was a motif obviously better suited to painting or to bas-relief than to sculpture in the round. Nevertheless Hellenistic art produced, not only such types as that of a marble statuette from Pella in Makedonia, now at Christ Church, Oxford, which shows Eros standing on a tree-trunk and leaning against the right shoulder of Aphrodite (Mrs A. Strong in Burlington Fine Arts Club: Exhibition of Ancient Greek Art London 1904 p. 21 no. 28 pl. 27 = Reinach Rép. Stat. iv. 231 no. 5), or that of a terra cotta from Myrina, now in the Albertinum at Dresden, which makes him stand on a pillar and rest his hand on her left shoulder (Winter Ant. Terrakotten iii. 2. 84 fig. 9), but also the type of the little fellow leaning forward all agog over his mother's left shoulder (e.g. the bronzes in Clarac Mus. de Sculpt. pl. 632 D figs. 1295 A Turin (A. Fabretti in the Atti della Società di archeologia e belle arti per la provincia di Torino 1880 iii. 99 f. pl. 15, 2) and 1295 B Paris = Reinach Rép. Stat. i. 342 nos. 4 and 5. Cp. the terracottas given by Winter op. cit. iii. 2. 46 fig. 3 (= Furtwängler Samml. Sabouroff Terres cuites pl. 133, 2), 195 fig. 7, 200 fig. 9, 202 fig. 4) or perched precariously on either shoulder (e.g. the terracottas in Winter op. cit. iii. 2. 85 fig. 8 Asia Minor (= C. Lecuyer Terres cuites antiques trouvées en Grèce et en Asie mineure Paris 1882 pl. H[3] (modern?)), 101 fig. 1 Rudiae, cp. 82 fig. 7 Greece but not Tanagra (= Furtwängler Samml. Sabouroff Terres cuites pl. 133, 1), 88 fig. 4 Myrina (?)), if not duplicated on both (e.g. a stone statuette from Beaune, now at Moulins (Catalogue du Musée de Moulins 1885 iii. 125, E. Tudot Collection de figurines en argile Paris 1860 pl. 75 = Reinach Rép. Stat. ii. 376 no. 7), and a gold pendant from south Russia, now at Petrograd (L. Stephani in the Compte-rendu St. Pét. 1867 p. 47 Atlas pl. 1, 6 = Reinach Rép. Stat. ii. 377 no. 6)), and even ambitious statuary groups in marble like that from Delos, now in the National Museum at Athens, which represents a naked Aphrodite defending herself with uplifted sandal against the advances of Pan and a helpful Eros hovering over her left shoulder (M. Bulard 'Aphrodite, Pan et Éros' in the Bull. Corr. Hell. 1906 xxx. 610—631 pls. 13—16 (of which pl. 14 = my fig. 827) (fig. 2 is a second Eros belonging to some similar group) = Reinach Rép. Stat. iv. 230 nos. 2 and 3, C. Picard La sculpture antique Paris 1926 ii. 263 fig. 103).

(11) Venus with a tiny Cupid on her shoulder appears on denarii struck by M'. Cordius Rufus (Babelon Monn. rép. rom. i. 383 no. 1 f. rev. fig. (c. 49 B.C.), M. Bahrfeldt Nachträge und Berichtigungen zur Münzkunde Wien 1897 p. 88 no. 1 pl. 4, 92, H. A. Grueber in Brit. Mus. Cat. Rom. Coins Rep. i. 523 f. nos. 4037—4039 pl. 51, 11 and 12 (c. 46 B.C.), supra ii. 99 n. 1) and by C. Egnatius Maxsumus (Babelon op. cit. i. 473 f. nos. 1 obv. fig., 2 rev. fig. (c. 69 B.C.), H. A. Grueber op. cit. i. 399 nos. 3274, 3275 pl. 42, 15, i. 401 nos. 3285—3292 pl. 42, 17 (c. 75 B.C.): see further F. Münzer in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. v. 1997 no. (27)), and on others issued by Iulius Caesar (Babelon op. cit. ii. 11 f. nos. 11 obv. fig., 12 obv. fig. (c. 50 B.C.), H. A. Grueber op. cit. ii. 368 f. nos. 86—88 pl. 101, 9, nos. 89—92 pl. 101, 10 (c. 45 B.C.)).

The same type recurs on a fine fragment of relief in the church of San Vitale at Ravenna (Friederichs—Wolters Gipsabgüsse p. 762 no. 1923 f., J. J. Bernoulli Römische Ikonographie Berlin und Stuttgart 1886 ii. 1. 254 ff. pl. 6 ('Venus genetrix...eine Umkleidung der LIVIA'), Mrs A. Strong Roman Sculpture from Augustus to Constantine London 1907 p. 96 ('Venus Genetrix (or Livia?)'), Reinach Rép. Reliefs iii. 128 no. 1, C. Picard op. cit. ii. 390 ('Vénus genitrix')), on a relief in the Villa Medici at Rome (E. Braun in the Ann. d. Inst. 1852 xxiv. 338—345, Mon. d. Inst. v pl. 40, Matz—Duhn Ant. Bildw. in Rom iii. 29 ff. no. 3511. Mrs A. Strong op. cit. p. 143 f. pl. 43, b, Reinach op. cit. iii. 313 no. 1) which represents the pediment of the temple of Mars Ultor (E. Petersen Ara Pacis Augustae (Sonderschriften des österreichischen archäologischen Institutes in Wien Band ii) Wien 1902 p. 58 ff. pl. 3, vii and figs. 26, 27) in the Forum Augustum

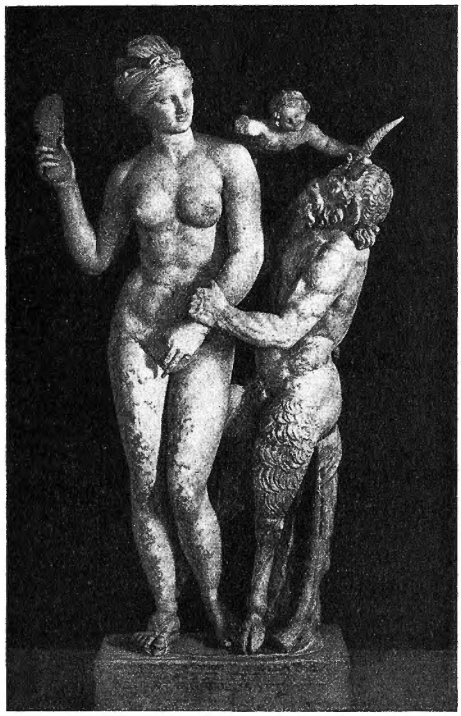

Fig. 827.

(H. Jordan Topographie der Stadt Rom im Alterthum Berlin 1885 i. 2. 443 ff., O. Richter Topographie der Stadt Rom[2] München 1901 pp. 110—112, H. Kiepert et C. Huelsen Formae urbis Romae antiquae Berolini 1912 pp. 25, 91), on a relief decorating the arm of a marble seat found at Solous in Sicily (Domenico lo Faso Pietrasanta Duca di Serradifalco Le Antichità della Sicilia Palermo 1842 v. 63 f. pl. 39, A. Conze Die Familie des Augustus Halis Saxonum 1867 p. 10, F. Hauser 'Marmorthron aus Solunt' in the Jahrb. d. kais. deutsch. arch. Inst. 1889 iv, 255—260 with figs.), on another decorating an altar found at Tarentum (L. Viola in the Not. Scav. 1881 p. 388 f.), and on yet another decorating an altar formerly at Cività Castellana (A. Reifferscheid in the Ann. d. Inst. 1863 xxxv. 367 f.). Cp. a relief found at Carthage (S. Gsell in the Rev. Arch. 1899 i. 37—43 pl. 2, A. Schulten in the Jahrb. d. kais. deutsch. arch. Inst. 1899 xiv Arch. Anz. pp. 73—75 fig. 3, E. Petersen op. cit. p. 184), the 'basis Surrentina' (W. Amelung 'Bemerkungen zur sorrentiner Basis' in the Röm. Mitth. 1900 xv. 198—210, especially p. 205 f., E. Petersen op. cit. pp. 69 ff., 184 f.), and a gem at Petrograd (A. Conze op. cit. p. 10).

The contention that the type represented by these coins and reliefs was that of the famous Venus Genetrix made by Arkesilaos for her temple in the Forum Iulium (Plin. nat. hist. 35. 156: see further H. Jordan op. cit. i. 2. 439 f., O. Richter op. cit.[2] p. 110, H. Kiepert et C. Huelsen op. cit. p. 35), though put forward by many scholars (e.g. A. Reifferscheid 'De ara Veneris Genetricis' in the Ann. d. Inst. 1863 xxxv. 361 ff., G. Wissowa De Veneris simulacris Romanis Breslau 1882 p. 22 ff. (=id. Gesammelte Abhandlungen zur römischen Religions- und Stadtgeschichte München 1904 p. 25 ff.), L. von Urlichs Arkesilaos Würzburg 1887 p. 10 ff., Collignon Hist. de la Sculpt. gr. ii. 686 f., E. Petersen op. cit. p. 187 f., C. Picard op. cit. ii. 308), is beset with uncertainties and far from proven (R. Kekulé von Stradonitz in the Arch.-ep. Mitth. 1879 iii. 8—24, S. Reinach in the Gaz. Arch. 1887 xii. 250 ff., id. in the Gazette des Beaux-Arts 1896 ii. 329 ff. =id. Monuments nouveaux de l'art antique Paris 1924 i. 256 ff., H. Bulle Der schoene Mensch im Altertum[2] Muenchen—Leipzig 1912 pp. 263 ff., 682 f. pl. 124, Sir C. Walston (Waldstein) Alcamenes Cambridge 1926 p. 202 ff.).

(12) Pompeian painters went further afield and exploited to the full the possibilities of the type. We find Eros at the shoulder, not only of Aphrodite (e.g. R. Liberatore in the Real Museo Borbonico Napoli 1835 xi pl. 6 with text pp. 1—4, Helbig Wandgem. Camp. p. 76 no. 276, Reinach Rép. Peint. Gr. Rom. p. 62 no. 7), but also of a human beauty (R. Liberatore loc. cit., Helbig op. cit. p. 337 no. 1428, Reinach Rép. Peint. Gr. Rom. p. 62 no. 8). He occupies the same position in regard to the better-known lovers of mythology (e.g. Paris (W. Zahn Die schönsten Ornamente und merkwürdigsten Gemälde aus Pompeji, Herkulanum und Stabiae Berlin 1844 ii pl. 31, L. Stephani in the Compte-rendu St. Pét. 1861 p. 123, Helbig op. cit. p. 278 no. 1287, Reinach Rép. Peint. Gr. Rom. p. 165 no. 1), Narkissos (Helbig op. cit. p. 302 no. 1363, id. XXIII Tafeln zu dem Werke Wandgemälde der vom Vesuv verschütteten Städte Campaniens Leipzig 1868 pl. 17, 2, Reinach Rép. Peint. Gr. Rom. p. 196 no. 4; G. Bechi in the Real Museo Borbonico Napoli 1824 i pl. 4 with text pp. 1—5, Helbig Wandg. Camp. p. 302 no. 1364, P. Decharme in Daremberg—Saglio Dict. Ant. ii. 451 fig. 2596, Reinach Rép. Peint. Gr. Rom. p. 196 no. 8), and even Hippolytos (?) (A. Sogliano in the Not. Scavi 1897 p. 32 with fig. 4, A. Mau in the Röm. Mitth. 1898 xiii. 26 f., E. Petersen 'Artemis und Hippolytos' ib. 1899 xiv. 96 with fig. on p. 93, Reinach Rép. Peint. Gr. Rom. p. 55 no. 4)). See also the medallions grouped together by Reinach Rép. Peint. Gr. Rom. p. 62 nos. 10 (Antichità di Ercolano Napoli 1779 vii (Pitture v) 19—22 pl. 4, Helbig op. cit. p. 337 no. 1427[b]), 11 and 12 (W. Zahn op. cit. ii pl. 43); to which add Antichità di Ercolano Napoli 1779 vii (Pitture v) 25 f. pl. 5, 1.

More often, however, Eros is promoted from being a mere prompter to playing some subordinate part in the action represented. If Aphrodite arrives from the sea, a tiny but helpful Eros hands her ashore (Sogliano Pitt. mur. Camp. p. 33 no. 132, P. Gusman Pompéi Paris 1899 p. 72 col. pl. 1, 1, Reinach Rép. Peint. Gr. Rom. p. 60 no. 3). If Ares makes love to her, a hovering Eros spins the magic iynx (H. Hinck in the Ann. d. Inst. 1866 xxxviii. 82, 93 ff. pl. EF, 2, Helbig op. cit. p. 84 no. 325, Herrmann Denkm. d. Malerei pl. 2 Text p. 7, Reinach Rép. Peint. Gr. Rom. p. 66 no. 3) or removes the god's helmet (G. Bechi in the Real Museo Borbonico Napoli 1824 i pl. 18 with text pp. 1—3, Helbig op. cit. p. 81 f. no. 316, Reinach Rép. Peint. Gr. Rom. p. 65 no. 2). And, briefly, wherever Aphrodite's power is manifested, Eros at-the-shoulder has his work to do. If Zeus woos Danae, Eros pours the golden rain from amphora or cornu copiae (?) (supra p. 465 f. with figs. 300 and 301. To the references there given add Müller—Wieseler Denkm. d. alt. Kunst ii. 27 f. pl. 3, 48 b, Welcker Ant. Denkm. v. 281, W. Helbig in the Ann. d. Inst. 1867 xxxix. 349, Reinach Rép. Peint. Gr. Rom. p. 11 no. 1; H. Heydemann in the Bull. d. Inst. 1868 p. 47 ('urna'), but cp. Sogliano Pitt. mur. Camp. p. 21 no. 75 ('corno': the 'urna' of previous publications must be due to the unintelligent repetition of a mere misprint), Reinach Rép. Peint. Gr. Rom. p. 10 no. 7). If he seeks Ganymedes, Eros leads the divine bird by the neck towards the dreamy youth (C. Bonucci in the Bull. d. Inst. 1829 p. 147, G. Bechi in the Real Museo Borbonico Napoli 1831 vii Relazione degli scavi di Pompei p. 5, G. Finati ib. 1834 x pl. 56 with text pp. 1—4, Helbig op. cit. p. 45 no. 154, Overbeck op. cit. p. 538 no. 28 Atlas pl. 8, 14, Reinach Rép. Peint. Gr. Rom. p. 14 no. 8). If he carries off Europe, Eros flits behind them bearing a thunderbolt (P. Gauckler 'Le domaine des Laberii à Uthina' in the Mon. Piot 1896 iii. 190 f. fig. 2, id. —A. Merlin Inventaire des mosaïques de la Gaule et de l'Afrique: Tunisie Paris 1910—1915 no. 350, Reinach Rép. Peint. Gr. Rom. p. 13 no. 5) or a tainia (J. V Millingen Peintures antiques et inédites de vases grecs Rome 1813 p. 44 f. pl. 25=Reinach Vases Ant. p. 105 f. pl. 25, Lenormant—de Witte Él. mon. cér. i. 60 ff. pl. 27, Overbeck op. cit. p. 438 f. no. 19 Atlas pl. 6, 11, J. A. Hild in Daremberg—Saglio Dict. Ant. ii. 863 fig. 2847, Brit. Mus. Cat. Vases iv. 95 no. F 184) or an alábastron (?) (Helbig op. cit. p. 37 no. 124, Overbeck op. cit. p. 452 no. 34 Atlas pl. 7, 6, Reinach Rép. Peint. Gr. Rom. p. 13 no. 3), or before them leading the bull by a flowery chain and waving the bridal torch (in a magnificent mosaic from Aquileia supra p. 627 n. 0 (3) with pl. xlviii: cp. the painting, in Astarte's temple at Sidon, described by Ach. Tat. 1. 1 Ἔρως εἵλκε τὸν βοῦν· Ἔρως, μικρὸν παιδίον, ἡπλώκει τὸ πτερόν, ἥρτητο <τὴν (ins. R. Hercher)> φαρέτραν, ἐκράτει τὸ πῦρ), or beside them driving the bull with reins and a whip (C. Lugebil in the Bull. d. Inst. 1861 p. 234, Helbig op. cit. p. 37 f. no. 128, Overbeck op. cit. p. 451 no. 32 Atlas pl. 7, 5, Reinach Rép. Peint. Gr. Rom. p. 14 no. 4: cp. Eros standing as a diminutive figure on the left shoulder of the love-sick Polyphemos and driving him with reins in pursuit of Galateia (G. Perrot in the Rev. Arch. 1870—1871 N.S. xxii. 47—53 pl. 18 (reduced $\frac{2}{3}$ in my fig. 828) = id. Mémoires d'archéologie d'épigraphie et d'histoire Paris 1875 pp. 100—111 pl. 6, A. Mau in the Ann. d. Inst. 1880 lii. 136 ff., Mon. d. Inst. xi col. pl. 23, P. Weizsäcker in Roscher Lex. Myth. i. 1588 with fig., Reinach Rép. Peint. Gr. Rom. p. 172 no. 7, supra p. 1020 (9))).

Attendant Erotes multiply apace. We find two (e.g. with Aphrodite and Ares (Antichità di Ercolano Napoli 1779 vii (Pitture v) 29—31 pl. 6, G. Finati in the Real Museo Borbonico Napoli 1834 x pl. 40 with text p. 1 f., Helbig op. cit. p. 85 no. 328, Reinach Rép. Peint. Gr. Rom. p. 66 no. 10. Cp. G. Bechi in the Real Museo Borbonico Napoli 1827 iii pl. 36 with text p. 1 f., W. Zahn op. cit. 1828

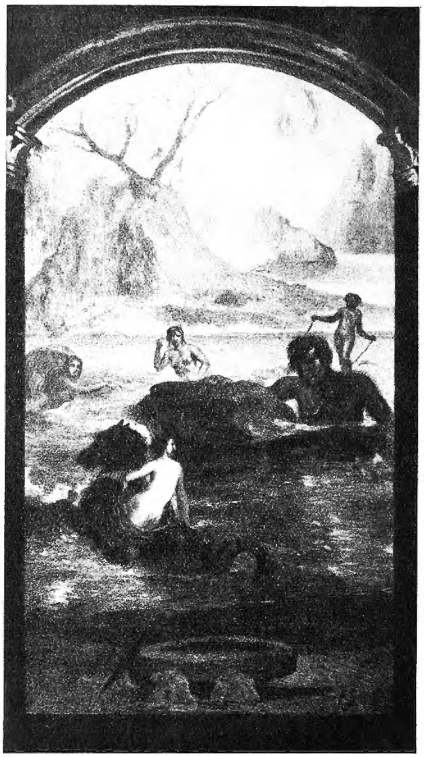

Fig. 828.

i pl. 44, F. G. Welcker in W. Ternite Wandgemälde aus Pompeji una Herculanum Berlin (1844) 3. Abth. iv. 13 f. pl. 29 (Helene and Achilles), Overbeck Gall. her. Bildw. i. 334—337 Atlas pl. 15, 8 (Helene and Achilles), Helbig op. cit. p. 85 no. 327 (Aphrodite and Ares), J. Six in the Röm. Mitth. 1917 xxxii. 190 f. fig. 5 (Briseis and Achilles), Reinach Rép. Peint. Gr. Rom. p. 66 no. 4), with Europe and the bull (R. Engelmann in the Arch. Zeit. 1881 xxxix. 130—132

pl. 6, 2, Reinach Rép. Peint. Gr. Rom. p. 13 no. 2 mosaic from Sparta; supra i. 506 with fig. 369 vase at Petrograd)) or three (e.g. with Herakles, Omphale, and Priapos (Helbig op. cit. p. 231 f. no. 1140, J. Sieveking in Roscher Lex. Myth. iii. 889 with fig. 1, Herrmann Denkm. d. Malerei col. pl. 3, pls. 59, 60 Text pp. 75—77, Reinach Rép. Peint. Gr. Rom. p. 191 no. 5, Pfuhl Malerei u. Zeichnung d. Gr. ii. 826 f. iii. 284 col. fig. 664)) or four (e.g. with Aphrodite and Adonis (Sir W. Gell Pompeiana London 1832 ii. 66 pl. 12, Roux—Barré Herc. et Pomp. iii. 89 f. pl. 139, Helbig op. cit. p. 88 no. 339, Reinach Rép. Peint. Gr. Rom. p. 65 no. 3), with Aphrodite and Ares (A. Sogliano Monumenta Pompeiana Naples 1905 ii pl. 85, Reinach Rép. Peint. Gr. Rom. p. 65 no. 7)) or six (e.g. with Aphrodite (J. P. Bellorius et M. A. Causseus Picturae antiquae cryptarum Romanarum, et sepulcri Nasonum Romae 1750 p. 89 f. Appendix pl. 7, O. Benndorf in the Ath. Mitth. 1876 i. 63 ff. pl. 2, Reinach Rép. Peint. Gr. Rom. p. 59 no. 6), with Aphrodite and Adonis (E. G[erhard] in the Arch. Zeit. 1843 i. 88 f. pl. 5, 2, W. Zahn op. cit. 1844 ii pl. 30, Helbig op. cit. p. 88 f. no. 340, Herrmann Denkm. d. Malerei pl. 52 Text pp. 65—67, Reinach Rép. Peint. Gr. Rom. p. 64 no. 2)) or eight (with Omphale and Herakles (R. Rochette Choix de peintures de Pompéi Paris 1853 p. 239 ff. pl. 19, Helbig op. cit. p. 230 f. no. 1138, A. Ruesch in the Guida del Mus. Napoli p. 322 no. 1354, Reinach Rép. Peint. Gr. Rom. p. 191 no. 6)) or even nine (in Aëtion's picture of Roxane and Alexander the Great as described by Loukian. Herod. s. Aët. 4—6 = Overbeck Schriftquellen p. 363 no. 1938, A. Reinach Textes Peint. Anc. i. 376 ff. no. 507, cp. W. Helbig Untersuchungen über die kampanische Wandmalerei Leipzig 1873 p. 242, B. Nogara Le Nozze Aldobrandine Milano 1907 p. 23, Pfuhl Malerei u. Zeichnung d. Gr. ii. 771 f., 806). The way is thus prepared for the numerous Erotes of early Christian art, the putti of the Renaissance, and the Cupids of modern sentimentalism (O. Waser in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. vi. 515 f., supra ii. 1050).

APPENDIX R.

THE HIERὸS GÁMOS.

Greek literature from Homeric poetry to Byzantine prose links the name of Zeus with that of Hera. But this tradition, though practically universal, involves certain peculiar and even abnormal features, which, if carefully considered, make it difficult to believe that Hera was from the outset the wife of Zeus. The relations subsisting between them are deserving of detailed study[1].

Zeus, according to Kallimachos[2] and Nonnos[3], was courting Hera for a period of three hundred years. Homer[4] states that they met 'without the [1] Years ago I dealt with the topic, somewhat light-heartedly, in two papers contributed to the Class. Rev. 1906 xx. 365—378 and 416—419 (supra p. 744 n. 1).

[2] Kallim. aitia 2 frag. 20 Schneider ap. schol. A.D. Il. 1. 609 and Tzetz. in eund. loc. (P. Matranga anecdota Graeca Romae 1850 ii. 450, 11 ff.) ὥς τε Ζεὺς ἐράτιζε τριηκοσίους ἐνιαυτούς.

[3] Nonn. Dion. 41. 322 ff. ὅττι πολυχρονίοιο πόθου δεδονημένον οἴστρῳ (cp. supra p. 941 n. 1) | Ἥρης κέντρον ἔχοντα κασιγνήτων ὑμεναίων | εἰς χρόνον ἰμείροντα τριηκοσίων ἐνιαυτῶν | Ζῆνα γάμοις ἕξευξα.

[4] Il. 14. 295 f. οἷον ὅτε πρῶτόν περ ἐμισγέσθην φιλότητι, | εἰς εὐνὴν φοιτῶντε, φίλους λήθοντε τοκῆας.

knowledge of their dear parents'; and later authors[1] lay stress on their secrecy, which indeed passed into a proverb. But it must be remembered that such clandestine intercourse was in Samos[2] and at Sparta[3], if not elsewhere in the Greek world[4], the recognised beginning of married life. Zeus and Hera were conforming to a custom, which savours of extreme antiquity[5], though it is not extinct even in modern Europe[6].

The union of Zeus with Hera, commonly known as the hierὸs gámos or 'sacred marriage,' involved at once a myth and a ritual, though evidence of the one or the other is often lacking[7].

[1] Theokr. 15. 64 πάντα γυναῖκες ἴσαντι, καὶ ὡς Ζεὺς ἠγάγεθ' Ἥρην with schol. ad loc., cp. Plaut. trin. 208 sciunt quod Iuno fabulatast cum Iove.

[2] In Samos the practice was referred to the example of Zeus (schol. B.L.T.V. Il. 14. 296, Eustath. in Il. p. 987, 9 ff.).

[3] Plout. v. Lycurg. 15, Xen. de rep. Lac. 1. 5, Hermippos frag. 6 (Frag. hist. Gr. iii. 37 Müller) ap. Athen. 555 c.

[4] The Lydian practice of prenuptial free love (Ail. var. hist. 4. 1 Λυδοῖς ἦν ἔθος πρὸ τοῦ συνοικεῖν τὰς γυναῖκας ἀνδράσιν ἑταιρεῖν, ἅπαξ δὲ καταξευχθεἰσας σωφρονεῖν· τὴν δὲ ἁμαρτάνουσαν ἐς ἕτερον συγγνώμης τυχεῖν ἀδύνατον ἦν) is hardly analogous. And the Naxian custom of placing a baby boy in the bride's bed on the eve of her wedding (Kallim. aitia 3. 1. 1 ff. Mair=B. P. Grenfell and A. S. Hunt The Oxyrhynchus Papyri London 1910 vii. 15 ff. no. 1011 ἤδη καὶ κούρῳ παρθένος εὐνάσατο | τέθμιον ὡς ἐκέλευε προνύμφιον ὕπνον ἰαῦσαι | ἄρσενι τὴν τἀλιν παιδὶ σὺν ἀμφιθαλεῖ. | Ἥρην γάρ κοτέ φασι—), though adduced as a parallel by Kallim. loc. cit. and schol. B.L.T.V. Il. 14. 296, is better explained as a piece of mimetic magic by A. E. Housman in the Class. Quart. 1910 iv. 114 f., D. R. Stuart in Class. Philol. 1911 vi. 302 ff., E. Samter 'Ein naxischer Hochzeitsbrauch' in the Neue Jahrb. f. klass. Altertum 1915 xxxv. 90—98. Cp. E. Westermarck The History of Human Marriage[5] London 1921 ii. 468 'in some parts of Sweden she should have a boy-baby to sleep with her on the night preceding the wedding day in order that her first-born shall be a son.'

[5] P. Wilutzky Vorgeschichte des Rechts Breslau 1903 i. 201 argues that monogamy, since it involved the infringement of earlier communal rights, was at first viewed as an offence to society and its practice carefully concealed.

[6] F. G. Welcker in K. Schwenck Etymologisch-mythologische Andeutungen Elberfeld 1823 p. 271 cp. 'die Sitte des Kiltgangs, die auch bey den Slawen häufig gefunden werde.' On the Kiltgang of tbe Bernese Oberland see J. Grimm—W. Grimm Deutsches Wörterbuch Leipzig 1873 v. 704 s.v. KILT (3) 'schweiz. der nächtliche besuch des burschen bei seinem mädchen, das kilten' and in much greater detail F. Staub—L. Tobler—R. Schoch—A. Bachmann—H. Bruppacher in the Schweizerisches Idiotikon Frauenfeld 1895 iii. 242 ff. s.v. Chilt.

[7] For the subject in general see P. H. Larcher 'Mémoire sur la noce sacrée' (read in 1790) in the Mémoires de l'Académie des Inscriptions et Belles-Lettres 1808 xlviii. 323 ff., R. Foerster Die Hochzeit des Zeus und der Hera Breslau 1867 pp. 1—38, W. H. Roscher Juno und Hera Leipzig 1875 pp. 69—85, id. in his Lex. Myth. i. 2098—2103, H. Graillot in Daremberg—Saglio Dict. Ant. iii. 177—181 ('Hiéros Gamos').

The valuable monograph of A. Klinz ΙΕΡΟΣ ΓΑΜΟΣ Halis Saxonum 1933 pp. 1—134 is of wider scope (p. 118 'Gravissimas res breviter complectens affirmaverim me demonstravisse notionem sacrarum nuptiarum in religione Minoiorum vi et notione iuris materni originem atque principium habere, inde in sacra Graecorum sollemnia translata esse, antiquissimis quidem religionis Graecae temporibus numina cthonia fertilitatis et inferorum coniugiis inter se coniungi, sed postea pro iure paterno Indogermanorum tempore religionis Olympiae Iovem ut caeli lucidi deum, qui sacris matrimoniis cum veteribus terrae deabus conectitur, auctoritate plurimum posse'), but in pp. 89—111 deals systematically with 'Διὸς γάμοι.'

(1) The Hierὸs Gâmos at Samos.

In the case of Samos both are to hand. Parthenia, an old name of the island[1], was connected with the maidenhood of Hera, who here grew up and was married to Zeus[2]. This myth corresponded with a definite ritual. A statue of Hera in the Samian Heraion—presumably the wooden image made by Smilis of Aigina[3]—was dressed as a bride[4]; and at an annual festival the goddess was married to Zeus[5]. Terra-cotta groups found in Samos show Zeus and Hera

[1] The island was formerly (Strab. 637 πρότερον οἰκούντων Καρῶν) named Παρθενία (Aristot. frag. 570 Rose[2] ap. Plin. nat. hist. 5. 135, Herakleid. resp. Sam. frag. 10. 1 (Frag. hist. Gr. ii. 215 Müller), Kallim. h. Del. 48 f., Ap. Rhod. 1. 187 f. with schol. ad loc., Strab. 457, 637, Steph. Byz. s.v. Σάμος, Eustath. in Dionys. per. 533) after Parthenia the wife of Samos (Loukillos of Tarrha frag. 10 Linnenkugel ap. schol. Ap. Rhod. 1. 187), or after the river Parthenios (Strab. 457, Eustath. loc. cit.), which was so called because Hera had been brought up there as a virgin (schol. Ap. Rhod. 1. 187). Probably it was believed that Hera renewed her virginity by bathing in the river, just as the Argives declared that she annually became a virgin by washing in the spring Kanathos at Nauplia (supra p. 224 n. 3). W. M. Leake Travels in the Morea London 1830 ii. 360 detected a trace of this notion in the saying still current at Nauplia, that the women of the place are handsome, while those of Argos are ugly, thanks to the different water of the two towns. Similarly, after her marriage with Zeus Hera was said to have bathed in the spring of the Mesopotamian river Aborras: hence the surrounding air was filled with fragrance, and shoals of tame fish disported themselves in the water (Ail. de nat. an. 12. 30). Alleged names of Samos include Παρθένιον (Eutekn. metaphr. in Nik. alex. 148 f.) and even †Parthenoarrhusa† (Plin. nat. hist. 5. 135—a bungled blend of Παρθενία and Δρυοῦσα, as J. Hardouin saw, cp. Herakleid. loc. cit. ἡ δὲ νῆσος Παρθενία, ὕστερον δὲ Δρυοῦσα). A certain soil found in Samos was known as παρθενία (Nik. alex. 149 with schol. ad loc.). Hera herself was entitled Παρθενία both in Samos (Kallim. ap. schol. Paris. Ap. Rhod. 1. 187, cp. schol. Pind. Ol. 6. 149) and elsewhere (see O. Höfer in Roscher Lex. Myth. iii. 1649).

[2] Varr. frag. 399 Funaioli ap. Lact. div. inst. 1. 17. 8 insulam Samum scribit Varro prius Partheniam nominatam, quod ibi Iuno adoleverit ibique etiam Iovi nupserit.

[3] Supra i. 444 f. figs. 313, 314, iii. 645 n. 0 fig. 446. See further Overbeck Gr. Kunstmyth. Hera pp. 12—16 Münztaf. 1, 1—12.

[4] Perhaps in the robe called πάτος (Kallim. frag. 495 Schneider ap. Cramer anecd. Oxon. iii. 93, 19 ff., Hesych. s.v. πάτος).

[5] Lact. div. inst. 1. 17. 8 itaque nobilissimum et antiquissimum templum eius est Sami et simulacrum in habitu nubentis figuratum et sacra eius anniversaria nuptiarum ritu celebrantur, Aug. de civ. Dei 6. 7 sacra sunt Iunonis, et haec in eius dilecta insula Samo celebrabantur, ubi nuptum data est Iovi.

On the cult of Hera in Samos see now the results of the important excavations (1910—1914 and 1925—1929) described by E. Buschor in the Ath. Mitth. 1930 lv. 1—99 and summarised by E. H. Heffner in the Am. Journ. Arch. 1931 xxxv. 175 f.

Chrysippos frag. 1074 von Arnim ap. Orig. c. Cels. 4. 48 (xi. 1105 C—1108 A Migne) commented at length on a Samian picture ἐν ᾗ ἀρρητοποιοῦσα ἡ "Ηρα τὸν Δία ἐγέγραπτο (cp. frag. 1071 von Arnim ap. Diog. Laert. 7. 187 f.), and frag. 1072 von Arnim ap. Clem. Rom. hom. 5. 18 (ii. 188 B Migne) on another of the same sort at Argos πρὸς τῷ τοῦ Διὸς ἀἰδοίῳ φέρων (Wilamowitz cj. φύρων) τῆς "Ηρας τὸ πρόσωπον. Such works aroused the indignation of Christian (Theophil. ad Autol. 3. 3 and 8) and pagan (Diog. Laert. prooem. 5, 7. 187 f.) alike. But, when it is recollected that Orpheus, possibly in his lines περὶ Διὸς καὶ "Ηρας (frag. 220 Abel=frag. 115 Kern), ascribed such conduct to the gods (Diog. Laert. prooem. 5), it becomes probable that these pictures were not mere libidines but had some religious significance. Cp. e.g. the figure of Geb the seated side by side (figs. 829 and 830)[1]. Both deities wear the bridal veil[2] and thereby justify R. Foerster's[3] identification of the subject as the hierὸs gámos.

It is highly probable that a Samian festival called the Tonea stood in some relation to this hierὸs gámos. The facts regarding it are as follows. A certain willow, which grew in the sanctuary of Hera at Samos, was said to be the oldest

Fig. 829.

Fig. 830.

Egyptian earth-god on a papyrus in the British Museum (Lanzone Dizion. di Mitol. Egiz. p. 409 f. pl. 159, 6).

[1] (1) From a child's grave in the Samian necropolis, now at Vienna (J. Böhlau Aus ionischen und italischen Nekropolen Leipzig 1898 p. 45, id. in the Jahresh. d. oest. arch. Inst. 1900 iii. 210 with fig. 84 (=my fig. 829: scale $\frac{2}{3}$)).

(2) and (3) Two similar groups, now at Cassel, said to have come from a single Samian grave. One gives the head of Zeus an opening like a vase-mouth on the top. But both are holed at the bottom (J. Böhlau Aus ionischen und italischen Nekropolen pp. 48, 159 pl. 14, 6 and 8).

(4) A similar group, found at Kameiros, now in the Cabinet des Médailles, Paris (Winter Ant. Terrakotten iii, i. 43 fig. 3=i. 190 fig. 1).

(5) A similar but somewhat more advanced group, formerly in the possession of Sir William Gell (Gerhard Ant. Bildw. pl. 1 (=my fig. 830: scale $\frac{2}{3}$), Overbeck Gr. Kunstmyth. Zeus pp. 20, 251, 558, ib. Hera p. 24 f. fig. 4 a, Farnell Cults of Gk. States i. 115 pl. 5, b).

(6) and (7) Winter locc. citt. notes two similar but smaller groups, the one from Tanagra (?) in the Louvre (L. Heuzey Les figurines antiques de terre cuite du Musée du Louvre Paris 1883 p. 9 pl. 11, 6), the other from Kameiros in the British Museum (uncatalogued?).

[2] Infra p. 1033.

[3] R. Foerster Die Hochzeit des Zeus und der Hera Breslau 1867 p. 24 f., followed e.g. by J. A. Hild in Daremberg—Saglio Dict. Ant. iii. 674 fig. 4167.

of all existing trees: it belonged to the species known as lýgos or ágnos by the Greeks (the vitex agnus castus of Linné), and was still thriving in the time of Pausanias[1]. It is shown or at least symbolized on coins struck by Gordianus Pius[2]. Some maintained that the Heraion, where the tree stood, had been founded by the Argonauts, who brought the image of Hera with them from Argos; but the Samians themselves supposed that the goddess had been born in their island beside the river Imbrasos and beneath this very willow[3]. According to Menodotos[4], a Samian historian, Admete the daughter of Eurystheus[5] once fled from Argos to Samos, where she had a vision of Hera and, wishing to give the goddess a thankoffering for her safe journey, undertook the care of the temple built by the Leleges and the Nymphs. The Argives, indignant at this, bribed Tyrrhenian pirates to carry off the image, in order that the Samians might punish Admete. The Tyrrhenians came to the port of Hera, found the temple without a door to it, carried off the image, and put it on board their ship. But, though they loosed their cables, weighed anchor, and rowed their hardest, they could not get away from the land. So they set the image ashore and, after offering it sundry cakes, took their departure in fear and trembling. Next morning Admete raised the alarm, and the searchers discovered the image on the shore. Being but barbarous Carians[6], they believed that it had run away of its own accord, placed it against a willow fence[7], drew towards it the longest branches on either side of it and wrapped it round about with them. Admete released the image from these bonds, purified it, and erected it on the pedestal which it had occupied before. Hence every year the image is carried off to the shore, disappears from view, and has cakes set beside it[8]. The festival in question is named Tónea[9] because the image was so tightly (syntónōs) bound by those that first sought it. Further it is said that, when the Carians consulted Apollon of Hybla about these occurrences, the god bade them escape serious disaster by paying the goddess a voluntary penalty. Prometheus after his release from bonds had been willing to pay a light penalty, and Zeus had bidden him wear a willow wreath[10]. The Carians must do the same and, when feasting, bind their heads with willow branches just as they had bound the goddess. They were to abandon the use of every other kind of wreath, with the exception of

[1] Paus. 8. 23. 5.

[2] Supra p. 645 n. 0 fig. 446.

[3] Paus. 7. 4. 4. Cp. supra p. 1027 n. 1 f. On the probable site of the lýgos towards the south-east corner of the precinct see E. Buschor in the Ath. Mitth. 1930 lv. 51 with fig. 7 and pl. 13.

[4] Menodotos frag. 1 (Frag. hist. Gr. iii. 103 ff. Müller) ap. Athen. 671 E ff.

[5] So Syncell. chron. 172 A (i. 324 Dindorf) Ἀδμάτα θυγάτηρ Εὐρυσθέως ἐν Ἄργει ἱεράτευσεν ἔτη λη'. αἱ δ' ἀπὸ ταύτης τὴν ἱερωσύνην διαδεξάμεναι Φαλίδες ἐκαλοῦντο.

[6] Strab. 637 cited supra p. 1027 n. 1.

[7] πρός τι λύγου θωράκιον.

[8] E. Buschor in the Ath. Mitth. 1930 lv. 33 would associate these rites with a large quadrangular flooring in the south-east corner.

[9] The form Τόνεα is supported by all the MSS. of Athen. 672 D—E and was accepted by Dindorf. For the termination cp. the Ποσίδεα of Mytilene and the Ποσείδεα of Megara (Nilsson Gr. Feste p. 83 f.). A. Meineke, however, cj. Τόνεια, and G. Kaibel cj. Τόναια. The name is connectible with τείνω 'stretch,' τόνος 'tension, force, vigour,' cp. Dioskor. 1. 134 (135) p. 130 Sprengel λύγος δὲ διὰ τὸ περὶ τὰς ῥάβδους αὐτῆς εὔτονον.

[10] It is not definitely stated, but it is probably implied that Prometheus' wreath was of λύγος: cp. Aisch. Προμηθεὺς λυόμενος frag. 202 Nauck[2] and Σφίγξ frag. 235 Nauck[2], Hyg. poet. astr. 2. 15. Apollod. 2. 5. 11 has δεσμὸν ἑλόμενος τὸν τῆς ἐλαίας. Prometheus' ring (supra i. 329 n. 0) may be a later variant of his wreath.

bay-leaves which might be worn by those that actually served the goddess. This Samian custom of wearing willow is mentioned elsewhere[1]. Anakreon[2] says of a young friend from Samos:

Megistes whose heart answers mine
Ten months ago
Would wreath him so
With willow and drink deep the honeyed wine.

More important is an epigram by Nikainetos[3] of Samos, which throws some further light upon the usage:

Ah, Philotheros, fain would I
Fanned by the western breezes lie
Feasting with Hera—not in town.
Enough for me a mere shake-down.
See, nigh at hand there is a spread
Of native willow for my bed
And osiers, the old Carian wear.
Bring wine, and list the lyre's sweet air,
That we may drink and praise beside
Our island-queen, Zeus' glorious bride.

From this it appears that at the feast of Hera the guests not only wreathed their heads with willow, but also reclined upon willow boughs and sang of Hera as the bride of Zeus.

Such rites can be paralleled, at least in part, from other cult-centres. Thus at Sparta the image of Artemis was called Lygodésma the 'Willow-bound' as well as Orthía the 'Upright' ostensibly because it had been found in a thicket of willows, which twining round it kept it upright[4]. And at Athens it was customary for women celebrating the Thesmophoria to lie on a bed of willows[5]. Indeed, priests in general used to strew willow leaves under their couches[6], and as late as the eighteenth century Christian monks wore girdles made of willow osiers[7].

[1] Tenaros ap. Athen. 672 A states that willow was ἀγροίκων...στεφάνωμα. But we do not know who Tenaros was, nor whether his ἀγροῖκοι were Samians. Still less information is given by the jejune note of Aristarchos ap. Athen. 671 F f. ὅτι καὶ λύγοις ἐστεφανοῦντο οἱ ἀρχαῖοι.

[2] Anakreon frag. 41 Bergk[4], 21 Diehl ap. Athen. 671 E f., 673 D, cp. Poll. 6. 107. Hephaistion (the metrician?) published a pamphlet περὶ τοῦ παρ' Ἀνακρέοντι λυγίνου στεφάνου (Athen. 673 E).

[3] Nikainetos ap. Athen. 673 B ff.

Both Anakreon and Nikainetos speak of the feasters as drinking wine. E. Maass in Hermes 1891 xxvi. 187 n. 3 holds that Hesych. Ἐλυγεύς· Διόνυσος ἐν Σάμῳ implies the existence of a Dionysos 'in the Willow' (ἐν λύγῳ) at Samos. But the order of the words in Hesychios demands the reading Ἐλιγεύς: see M. Schmidt ad loc., O. Jessen in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. v. 2367.

[4] Paus. 3. 16. 11 (quoted supra ii. 421 n. 5). Asklepios at Sparta was called Ἀγνίτας because his wooden image was made of ἄγνος (Paus. 3. 14. 7).

[5] Ail. de nat. an. 9. 26, Dioskor. 1. 134 (135) p. 130 Sprengel, Galen. de simpl. medicament. temp. ac fac. 6. 2 (xi. 808 Kühn), schol. Nik. ther. 71, Eustath. in Od. p. 1639, 2 ff., Plin. nat. hist. 24. 59.

[6] Schol. A Il. 11. 105, Eustath. in Il. p. 834, 37 ff.

[7] N. Venette La Génération de l'homme Londres 1779 i. 231 f. 'quelques moines chrétiens se font aujourd'hui des ceintures avec des branches de cet arbre (sc. agnus

The reason commonly given for these practices is that the willow possesses antiaphrodisiac qualities[1]. If so, the binding of the Samian Hera and her votaries with willow may have been part of a purificatory ceremony, whereby the goddess after her annual marriage with Zeus was believed to recover her virginity[2]. Artemis Lygodésma too was presumably a virgin[3]. And ceremonial purity was incumbent upon women at the Thesmophoria and priests at all times. This explanation might be supported by the fact that the Tonea included a visit of Hera to the sea-shore: salt-water cleansed all[4].

Nevertheless there are not wanting some indications that the willow was credited with powers of a precisely opposite character and regarded as a strong aphrodisiac[5]. Confusion may have arisen owing to the popular but erroneous assumption that the name ágnos was derived from hagnós, 'pure,' or from ágonos, 'unfruitful[6].' On this showing the ritual above described must have aimed at increasing the fertility of the goddess[7]. But in either case it was castus), qui se plie comme de l'osier, et ils prétendent par là s'arracher du cœur tous les désirs que l'amour y pourroit faire naître.' Etc.—cited by A. de Gubernatis La Mythologie des Plantes Paris 1882 ii. 5. See also P. Sébillot Le Folk-lore de France Paris 1906 iii. 388.

[1] In addition to the authorities given in p. 1030 n. 5 f. see Paul. Aeg. 7. ἡ ἄγνος ἡ λύγος... καὶ πρὸς ἀγνείαν πεπίστευται δρᾶν, οὐ μόνον ἐσθιόμενος καὶ πινόμενος ἀλλὰ καὶ ὑποστρωννύμενος with the note ad loc. of F. Adams Paulus Ægineta London 1847 iii. 20. Cp. also what is said of the ἰτέα or salix by Ail. de nat. an. 4. 23, schol. Od. 10. 510, Eustath. in Od. p. 1667, 20 ff., Plin. nat. hist. 16. 110, Serv. in Verg. georg. 2. 48.

[2] Supra p. 1027 n. 1.

[3] Wide Lakon. Kulte p. 130 n. 2, cp. O. Höfer in Roscher Lex. Myth. iii. 1662.

[4] On the purificatory virtue of salt-water see Gruppe Gr. Myth. Rel. p. 889 n. 1.

Gruppe op. cit. p. 858 n. 3 finds traces of a similar ritual in the Homeric hymn to Dionysos, who appeared by the sea-shore, was captured by Tyrrhenian pirates and bound with withies of willow, but burst his bonds and took vengeance on his captors (h. Dion. 1 ff.).

[5] J. Jonston Thaumatographia naturalis Amstelodami 1665 p. 191 cites from Scalig. Exerc. 175 sect. 1 [J. C. Scaliger Exot. exerc. Lutetiae 1557 p. 226] the following account: 'Agnacath est arbor pyri facie & magnitudine perpetuo folio viridissima, nitidissimaque superficie. Adeo validos ad coitum efficit, ut miraculo sit omnibus ejus efficacia.' See further A. de Gubernatis op. cit. p. 6 f.

Plin. nat. hist. 24. 60 urinam cient et menses...lactis ubertatem faciunt, 62 volvam etiam suffitu vel adpositu purgat. Cp. Dioskor. 1. 134 (135) p. 129 f. Sprengel.

A. Thomsen 'Orthia' in the Archiv f. Rel. 1906 ix. 407 ff. showed that Artemis Λυγοδέσμα or Orthia was a tree-goddess (supra ii. 421 n. 8) and that the flogging of Spartan youths, presumably with rods of λύγος (cp. Plout. symp. 6. 8. 1 τύπτοντες ἀγίναις ῥάβδοις at the Βουλίμου ἐξέλασις), transferred her virtue to the sufferers. Supra ii. 635 n. 9.

[6] Most of the writers referred to supra p. 1030 n. 5 f. and p. 1031 n. 1 connect ἄγνος with ἀγνός or ἄγονος—both very dubious etymologies (L. Meyer Handb. d. gr. Etym. i. 121, Boisacq Dict. étym. de la Langue Gr. p. 8).

[7] R. Wünsch Das Frühlingsfest der Insel Malta Leipzig 1902 drew attention to a Maltese custom recorded by an Arab writer of the sixteenth century. Every year a large golden idol set with precious stones was thrown into a field of bean-flowers hy a monk, who told the people that their lord had departed. Hereupon there was mourning and fasting for some three days, till the monk announced that the lord's anger was appeased. The idol was then brought back to the town in procession with great rejoicings. Wünsch holds that the idol represented John the Baptist, who here as elsewhere succeeded to the position of Adonis. His hypothesis has been called in question or controverted by appropriate to a divine marriage, and we must bear in mind the fact that those who took part in the Tonea sang of Hera as 'Zeus' glorious bride[1].'

(2) The Hierὸs Gámos at Knossos.

Another locality in which the hierὸs gámos was represented by both myth and ritual is Knossos at the base of Mount Ide in Crete. The wedding of Zeus and Hera was said to have taken place near the river Theren (the modern Platyperama[2]). Here in later times a sanctuary was built and yearly sacrifices offered with traditional wedding-rites[3]. I have suggested that the earlier ceremony involved the ritual pairing of solar bull with lunar cow[4].

(3) The Hierὸs Gámos on Mount Ide.

More frequently the hierὸs gámos is attested by a localised myth without direct evidence of a ritual performance.

Thus the famous passage of the Iliad that describes how Zeus consorted with Hera on Mount Ide in the Troad[5] expressly alludes to the tale of their early amours[6]; and we are probably justified in inferring that the tale was told of the mountain in question.

However that may be, it is the myth itself, not the Homeric adaptation of it[7]—and the myth as localised on the Trojan rather than the Cretan

W. H. D. Rouse in the Class. Rev. 1903 xvii. 232 f., K. Lübeck Adoniskult und Christentum auf Malta Fulda 1904 p. 7 ff., Gruppe Myth. Lit. 1908 p. 317 f., A. Mayr Die Insel Malta im Altertum München 1909 p. 129. In any case it seems probable that contact with the beans was believed to supply the idol with a fresh stock of virility or power to bless: beans=testes.

[1] A. de Gubernatis op. cit. ii. 4 'Dans les noces helléniques, les jeunes mariés portaient des couronnes d'agnus-castus employées aussi comme un moyen d'éloigner tout empoisonnement.' I do not know the source of this statement about young married couples, which is copied by R. Folkard Plant Lore, Legends, and Lyrics London 1884 p. 208 and reappears in J. Murr Die Pflanzenwelt in der griechischen Mythologie Innsbruck 1890 p. 103 f. On the plant and its uses see further P. Wagler in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. i. 832—834.

[2] R. Herbst in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. v A. 2367.

[3] Diod. 5. 72 λέγουσι δὲ καὶ τοὺς γάμους τούς τε Διὸς καὶ τῆς Ἥρας ἐν τῇ Κνωσίων χώρᾳ γενέσθαι κατά τινα τόπον πλησίον τοῦ Θήρηνος ποταμοῦ, καθ' ὃν νῦν ἱερόν ἐστιν, ἐν ᾧ θυσίας κατ' ἐνιαυτὸν ἁγίους ὑπὸ τῶν ἐγχωρίων συντελεῖσθαι, καὶ τοὺς γάμους ἀπομιμεῖσθαι, καθάπερ ἐξ ἀρχῆς γενέσθαι παραδόθησαν. Id. 5. 80 mentions as his authorities for things Cretan Epimenides, Dosiades, Sosikrates, and Laosthenidas. The river Theren in Crete may have had the same peculiar properties as the spring Kanathos at Nauplia and perhaps the river Parthenios in Samos (supra p. 1027 n. 1). It was apparently an arm of the Amnisos (K. Hoeck Kreta Göttingen 1829 iii. 315), at the mouth of which was the cave of Eileithyia (Od. 19. 188, cp. Strab. 476), a daughter of Hera born here (Paus. 1. 18. 5): hence Nonn. Dion. 8. 115 Ἀμνισοῖο λεχώιον...ὕδωρ. It is noteworthy that Artemis the virgin bathes in the Parthenios (a river of Paphlagonia, according to the schol. ad loc.) or in the Amnisos, and is escorted by the nymphs of the latter stream (Ap. Rhod. 3. 875 ff., Kallim h. Artem. 15).

[4] Supra i. 523. The myth of the Cretan bull was attached to the same locality (Paus. 1. 27. 9 ἐπὶ ποταμῷ Τεθρίνι).

[5] Supra i. 154, iii. 35, 180.

[6] Il. 14. 295. Cp. Preller—Robert Gr. Myth. i. 164.

[7] Müller—Wieseler—Wernicke Ant. Denkm. ii. 1. 38 f.

Fresco from Pompeii, now at Naples:
the Hierὸs Gámos of Zeus and Hera on Mount Ide in the Troad.

See page 1032 ff.

Ide[1]—that is represented by the wall-painting found at Pompeii in the 'House of the Tragic Poet' (pl. lxxii)[2]. Here we see Zeus, a kingly figure seated on a rocky throne[3]. A himátion wrapped about his legs is drawn up so as to cover his hair like a veil[4], and falls again over his shoulder and left arm. The wreath on his head is possibly, but not certainly[5], composed of oak leaves. He rests his left hand, the fourth finger of which wears a wedding-ring, on a long sceptre. With an affectionate[6] and at the same time symbolic[7] gesture of his right hand he draws towards him his bride. She is robed in a white péplos and an ample veil. Her hair is confined by a richly decorated stephánе; and her jewels include earrings, a necklace, bracelets, and a wedding-ring worn like that of Zeus. Her large and brilliant eyes, which recall the epithet boôpis[8], are averted from the face of her bridegroom and with a subtle blend of outward dignity and inward alarm look straight into the distance. The same mixture of feelings is betrayed by her stately yet hesitating advance, and again by the studied nervous way in which she is holding the end of her veil between herself and Zeus. Hera is followed and supported by Iris, a youthful winged figure whose anxious questioning expression is the natural accompaniment of her mistress' mood. But the difference between bride and bridesmaid is finely brought out by the artist. Hera with head erect and full of virginal pride emerges into the light—a queen indeed. Iris watching her with upturned face obscured by a semi-darkness is plainly subordinate and serves as her foil. On the rocks beside Zeus sit three male figures of diminutive size, scantily clad and wreathed with flowers[9]: they have been interpreted with much probability as the Idaean

[1] In the Class. Rev. 1903 xvii. 413 f. I accepted the conclusions of Overbeck Gr. Kunstmyth. Zeus pp. 239—243 and maintained that the scenery of the fresco is that of the Cretan mountain. Certainly the woods (supra ii. 932 n. 1), the cult of Rhea (Diod. 5. 65 f.), and the Idaean Daktyloi ([Hes.] frag. 14 Flach ap. Plin. nat. hist. 7. 197, Ap. Rhod. 1. 1129 with schol. ad loc., Diod. 5. 64, Paus. 5. 7. 6 with schol. ad loc., Porph. v. Pyth. 17, Hesych. s.v. Ἰδαῖοι Δάκτυλοι, et. mag. p. 465, 25 ff., cp. Plin. nat. hist. 37. 170) all suit the neighbourhood of Knossos. But they suit the Trojan Ide equally well: here too were woods (supra ii. 949 n. 5), a cult of Rhea (Strab. 469: see further Gruppe Gr. Myth. Rel. p. 1523 n. 1), and the Idaean Daktyloi (schol. Ap. Rhod. 1. 1126 and 1131, Strab. 473, Diod. 5. 64, 17. 7, Plout. de music. 5, Clem. Al. strom. 1. 15 p. 46, 24 ff. Stählin, Hesych. s.v. Ἰδαῖοι Δάκτυλοι). Moreover, the other frescoes found in the same atrium depict scenes from Homeric epos (Herrmann Denkm. d. Malerei i. 16), and the flowers worn by the Daktyloi may be due to a reminiscence of Il. 14. 347 ff.

[2] Pl. lxxii is from Herrmann op. cit. pl. 11, a photographic reproduction which supersedes all previous publications.

[3] Supra i. 124 ff.

[4] Supra p. 1028.

[5] Herrmann op. cit. i. 17 n. 1.

[6] Cp. the Homeric ἐπὶ καρπῷ χεῖρα κ.τ.λ. (Il. 24. 671, Od. 18. 258, 24. 398).

[7] C. Sittl Die Gebärden der Griechen und Römer Leipzig 1890 p. 131 f., R. Foerster Die Hochzeit des Zeus und der Hera Breslau 1867 p. 15 (who cites inter alia Eur. Ion 891 ff. λευκοῖς δ' ἐμφὺς καρποῖς χειρῶν | εἰς ἄντρου κοίτας | κραυγάν, ὦ μᾶτερ, μ' αὐδῶσαν | θεὸς ὁμευνέτας ἄγες κ.τ.λ.).

[8] Supra i. 444. A drawing of Hera's head, almost full-size, is given by A. Baumeister in his Denkm. i. 649 fig. 719.

[9] Herrmann op. cit. i. 17 n. 3 (cp. ib. i. 15 fig. 3) states that their wreaths consist of sprays entwined with flowers, but thinks it impossible to decide whether these flowers are, as Helbig Wandgem. Camp. p. 33 f. no. 114 supposed, primroses.

Daktyloi[1], who haunted the woods of Mount Ide and were associated with Rhea, the Idaean Mother[2]. The locality is further indicated by wooded hills in the background and a pillar adorned with Rhea's attributes—three bronze lions standing on its capital, a timbrel lying against its base, flutes and cymbals bound by a fillet to its shaft. The whole fresco must be regarded as a good Pompeian copy of a splendid Hellenistic original[3].

The presence of Iris as bridesmaid recalls the similar, though not identical, scenes portrayed by a couple of the later Greek poets. Theokritos in the Hellenistic age writes:

> So came about the wedlock of the gods,
> Whom puissant Rhea bare to rule Olympos.
> One couch she strewed for the sleep of Zeus and Hera—
> Iris, a maid with hands all perfume-pure[4].

Nonnos in the age of decadence spoils the picture by far-fetched bombast:

> He spake, and rolling cloud on golden cloud
> Tower-wise inglobed a circumambient veil,
> So shaped and fashioned forth a bridal-bower,
> Which then the dazzling diverse-tinted form
> Of Iris the ethereal crowned—a covert
> Of Nature's make for Zeus and his bright-armed bride,
> What time they lay on the mountain, and withal
> A perfect copy of their destined union[5].

Iris and the Daktyloi, like the landscape-background, were additions to the accepted type. A Hellenistic relief in island marble, unfortunately much corroded, was found in Rhodes and is now in the Rhodian Museum (fig. 831)[6]. It shows Zeus seated on a throne, the side of which is decorated with a large Sphinx. He raises his right hand in admiration of Hera, who stands before him, one hand resting on the god's knee, the other on her own hip. Between them is seen a pillar, on which is perched an eagle with spread wings. A. Maiuri well compares another Hellenistic relief, in Parian marble, likewise found in [1] Welcker Alt. Denkm. iv. 96 f. and in the Arch. Zeit. 1865 xxiii. 58 was the first to propound this view. R. Foerster Die Hochzeit des Zeus und der Hera Breslau 1867 p. 36 n. o suggested that they might be the Σελλοὶ χαμαιεῦναι of Dodona—a suggestion refuted by Overbeck Gr. Kunstmyth. Zeus p. 241 f. L. Stephani in the Bulletin histor.-phil. de l'Académie de St. Pétersbourg 1855 xii. 301 n. 80 and Helbig loc. cit., Ann. d. Inst. 1864 xxxvi. 277 ff., Rhein. Mus. 1869 xxiv. 508 ff., Untersuchungen über die campanische Wandmalerei Leipzig 1873 p. 117 argued that they are Λειμῶνες, personified 'Meadows': cp. Philostr. mai. imagg. 2. 4. 3 λειμῶνες δ' ἐν ὥρᾳ μειρακίων, οὓς ἀκηράτους ὠνόμαζες, μαραίνουσιν ἐπὶ σοὶ (sc. Hippolytos) τὰ ἄνθη and supra ii. 164 n. 6 (Leimon). N. Terzaghi in Atene e Roma 1902 v. 434 ff. regards them as Κούρητες.

[2] L. v. Sybel in Roscher Lex. Myth. i. 940 f., O. Kern in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. iv. 2018 ff. Supra p. 922.

[3] Herrmann op. cit. i. 15—17, G. Rodenwaldt Die Komposition der pompejanischen Wandgemälde Berlin 1909 pp. 203—206.

[4] Theokr. 17. 131 ff.

[5] Nonn. Dion. 32. 76 ff. The text of line 78 f. is disputed. I have translated the passage as it stands in the editions of D. F. Graefe (1826) and A. Ludwich (1911), viz. καὶ θαλάμου ποιητὸς ἔην τύπος, ὃν τότε κύκλῳ | Ἶριδος αἰθερίης ἑτερόχροος ἔστεφε μορφὴ κ.τ.λ. The Count de Marcellus (ed. Paris 1856) prints the conjectural readings ὅν ποτε for ὃν τότε and ἔτρεφε for ἔστεφε.

[6] A. Maiuri in Clara Rhodos 1932 ii. 44—46 fig. 22 (=my fig. 831).

Rhodes and now in London (fig. 832)[1]. Zeus sitting on a very similar throne, with a winged and lion-headed Sphinx, leans his right hand on a long sceptre. Before him stands Hera, also holding a long sceptre—for she plays queen to his king. Between them appears a pillar, on which are the feet of a small statue. In front of it is an ox (for sacrifice?). Behind Zeus was a standing figure, on a smaller scale, with a palm-branch in its right hand—possibly Nike, but possibly a victor in some local contest who had dedicated a statue to Zeus and Hera[1].

Fig. 831.

[1] Brit. Mus. Cat. Sculpture iii. 223 f. no. 2150, Reinach Rép. Reliefs ii. 493 no. 2. My fig. 832 is from the official photograph.

The pillar present in these Graeco-Roman compositions was itself no part of the older Hellenic type—witness a metope from Selinous now at Palermo

[1] This relief has been variously interpreted. P. Perdrizet in the Bull. Corr. Hell. 1899 xxiii. 559 f. pl. 3, 1 thinks that it represents Zeus and Hera, or else Asklepios and Hygieia. W. Amelung in the Röm. Mitth. 1901 xvi. 258—263 fig. 1 reverts to an older view that the deities are Sarapis and Isis. Reinach loc. cit. is non-committal.

Fig. 832.

A. Maiuri, moved by the new Rhodian discovery, inclines to Zeus and Hera. I agree with him: Sarapis, as Amelung admits, ought to have had a chitón and a much more prominent kálathos.

For similar thrones see e.g. that of Epiktesis (supra i. 536 fig. 407) and that of Dionysos (supra i. 710 with pl. xl, 4). A relief in Pentelic marble, now at Munich (A. Furtwängler Ein Hundert Tafeln nach den Bildwerken der kgl. Glyptothek zu München München 1903 pl. 28, id. Glyptothek zu München[2] p. 183 ff. no. 206, Reinach Rép. Reliefs ii. 75 no. 1. My fig. 833 is from a photograph), again shows Zeus on his throne with Hera (?) standing before him, a group of worshippers at their altar, and a pillar surmounted by two archaistic figures, male and female, beneath the boughs of a huge plane-tree. Furtwängler comments (p. 185): 'Leider fehlt eine Dedikations-Inschrift, so dass wir das göttliche Paar nicht benennen können. Es kann ebensogut irgend ein lokaler Heros und seine Gattin wie etwa Zeus Philios mit Agathe Tyche sein.'

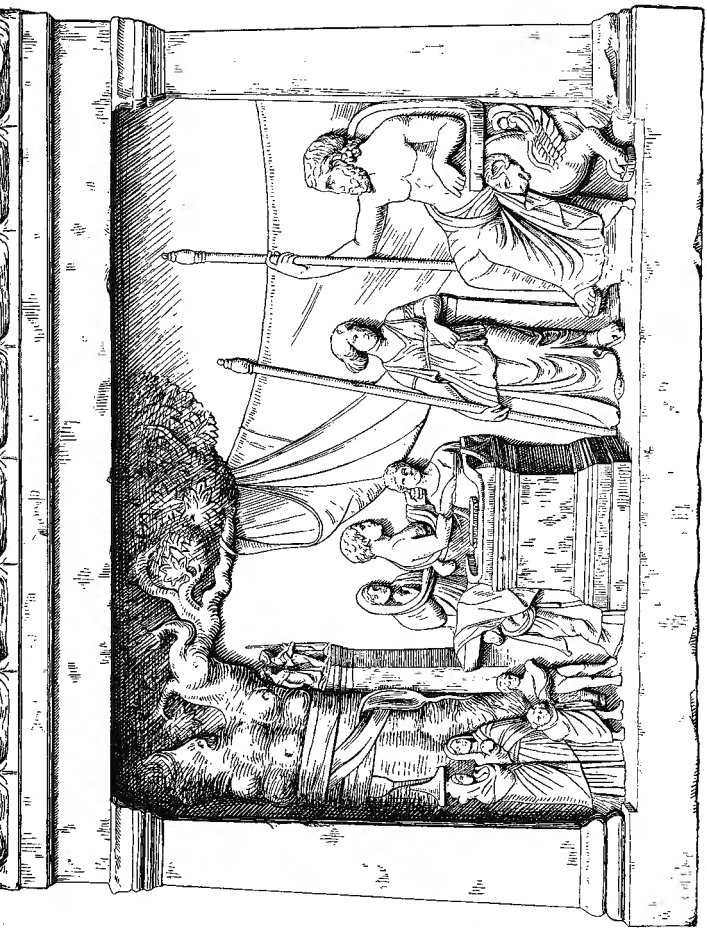

Fig. 833.

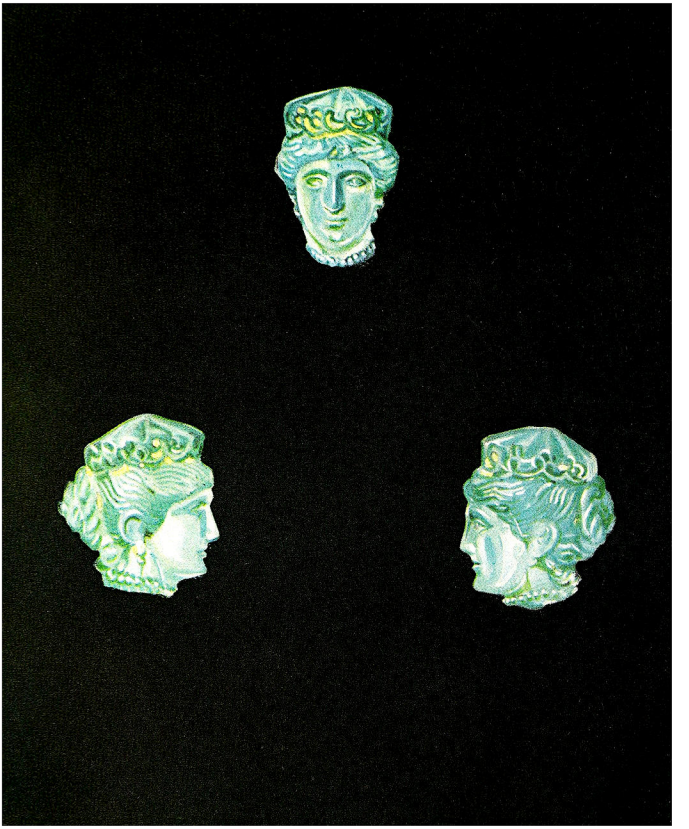
(fig. 834)[1]. This metope, which may be referred to the first half of the fifth century B.C., represents Zeus seated on a rock[2]. He has a diadem in his hair and sandals on his feet. A himátion, which has slipped from his left shoulder,

Fig. 834.

[1] O. Benndorf Die Metopen von Selinunt Berlin 1873 p. 54 ff. pl. 8, Brunn—Bruckmann Denkm. der gr. und röm. Sculpt. pl. 290, 1 (=my fig. 834), Reinach Rép. Reliefs ii. 399 no. 1. The metope belongs to the temple commonly known as E or R and regarded as that of Hera (?). It is carved in local limestone, the face, hands, and feet of the goddess being added in white marble—a peculiar technique, which together with other traces of archaism (hair of Zeus, full-front torso, costume of Hera, etc.) points to a date c. 475—460 B.C. (G. M. A. Richter The Sculpture and Sculptors of th Greeks Yale Univ. Press 1929 p. 31 with fig. 410).

[2] It would be rash to identify this rock with Mt. Ide or any other definite locality.



A head cast in blue glass (Greek work of c. 400 B.C.), from Girgenti, now at Queens' College, Cambridge: Hera Lakinía (?).

is wrapped about his legs; but otherwise his broad and powerful figure is undraped. Leaning back on his left hand, he raises his right and clasps Hera by the wrist. She is bare-footed and clad, like the archaic maidens on the akropolis at Athens, in a long sleeved chitón with a himátion slung over her right shoulder and under her left breast. But the stephánе above her brow and the large veil that falls over her head and forms a framework for her whole figure betoken that she is Hera as a bride[1]. With her left hand she is unveiling herself to her bridegroom. In her right she probably held a sceptre.

Variations of the same type may be detected in late Greek vase-paintings, which introduce Zeus and Hera among other deities as accessory figures. Thus a fragmentary Apulian vase in Sir William Hamilton's collection represented a battle of Greeks and Persians below with a council of the gods in the upper register (fig. 835)[2]. Here we see Zeus seated on a rock with Ganymedes (?) standing behind him and Hera in front. Zeus is half-draped in a himátion and has a fillet in his hair. His left hand, decorated with a bracelet, holds a long sceptre; his right he raises in conversation with Hera. She wears an Ionic chitón, ornamented with a broad stripe down the middle, and a bridal veil, which she is lifting with her right hand. In her left she supports a long sceptre topped by a palmette; and on her head is a handsome stephánе.

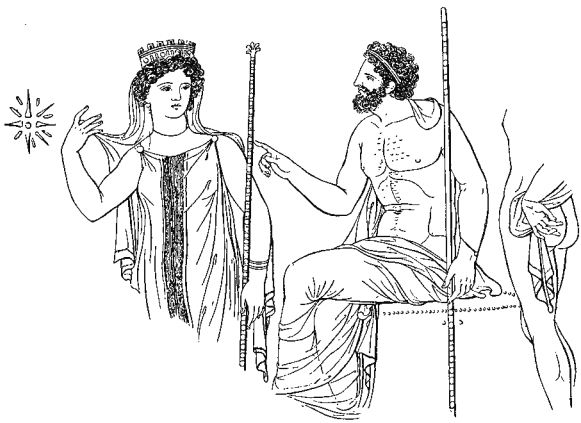


Fig. 835.

A large kratér from Ruvo, now at Naples, shows the rape of Persephone, [1] Other interpretations are considered and dismissed by R. Foerster Die Hochzeit des Zeus und der Hera Breslau 1867 p. 34 n. 6.

[2] W. Tischbein Collection of Engrævings from Ancient Vases...now in the possession of Sir W^m Hamilton 1795 ii. 14 ff. pl. 1, F. Köpp in the Jahrb. d. kais. deutsch. arch. Inst. 1892 vii Arch. Anz. p. 125 f. fig., Reinach Rép. Vases ii. 293, 2—3.

again with an upper tier of divine spectators (fig. 836)[1]. The design is much damaged, and the greater part of Zeus is a modern restoration. But enough remains to prove that the god sat on a richly embellished throne, which has a couple of swans by way of arm-rests. A himátion is wrapped about his legs; and his feet, which are shod, are placed on a footstool. The sceptre in the right hand of Zeus is surmounted by an eagle with spread wings. Before her lord with downcast eyes stands Hera. She is clad in a Doric péplos with a long overfold, and has sandals on her feet. She has also a stephánē on her head and a veil. This she raises with her left hand, while in her right she holds a long sceptre. Behind the throne of Zeus stands Ganymedes. And, between them, a winged thunderbolt points downwards to the scene of tumult in progress below.

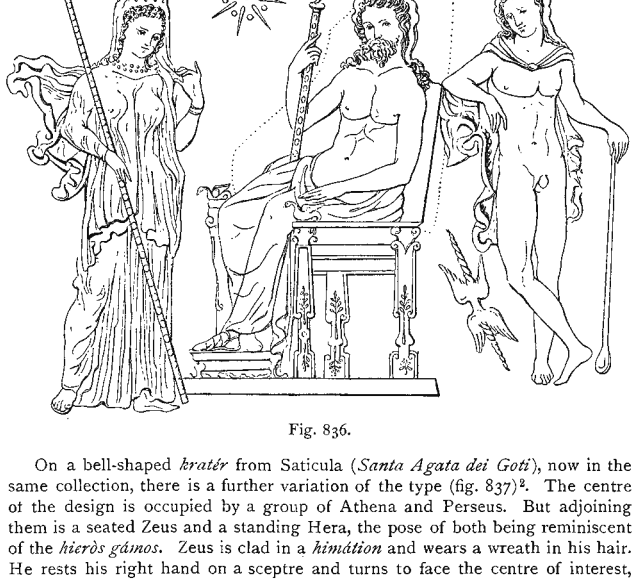

Fig. 836.

On a bell-shaped kratér from Saticula (Santa Agata dei Goti), now in the same collection, there is a further variation of the type (fig. 837)[2]. The centre of the design is occupied by a group of Athena and Perseus. But adjoining them is a seated Zeus and a standing Hera, the pose of both being reminiscent of the hieròs gámos. Zeus is clad in a himátion and wears a wreath in his hair. He rests his right hand on a sceptre and turns to face the centre of interest, regardless of a small hovering Nike, who somewhat needlessly presents him with a second wreath. Before him at a lower level stands Hera, draped in Doric péplos and star-spangled veil. In her right hand is a long sceptre, and on her head a rayed stephάne. She too faces the central group, but is obviously conceived as the bride of Zeus.

[1] Heydemann Die Vasensamml. Neapel p. 591 ff. no. 3256, figured in the Mon. d. Inst. ii pl. 31, E. Gerhard Über die Lichtgottheiten auf Kunstdenkmälern Berlin 1840 pl. 2, 3, Reinach Rép. Vases i. 99.

[2] Heydemann op. cit. p. 224 ff. no. 2202, C. A. de Jorio in the Real Museo Borbonico Napoli 1829 v pl. 51 with text pp. 1—7.

(4) The Hierὸs Gámos on Mount Oche.

Euboia, a great centre of Hera-worship, was another place associated with the hierὸs gámos. It was believed that Zeus had met Hera on Mount Oche, the highest point in the south of the island. In this belief, no doubt, folk-etymology played a part[1]. But it is to be observed that bronze coins of Karystos at the foot of Mount Oche, struck in s. ii B.C., show sometimes a laureate head of Zeus[2], sometimes a veiled head of Hera[3]—a suggestive choice of deities[4].

(5) The Hierὸs Gámos at Elymnion.

Elymnion or Elymnia, an island-town off the coast of Euboia[5], has been identified with the largest of the Petalian Isles near Karystos[6], but is better placed on the north coast near Oreos[7]. Sophokles[8] in his Naúplios spoke of 'bridal Elymnion,' because this too was reputed to have been the spot where

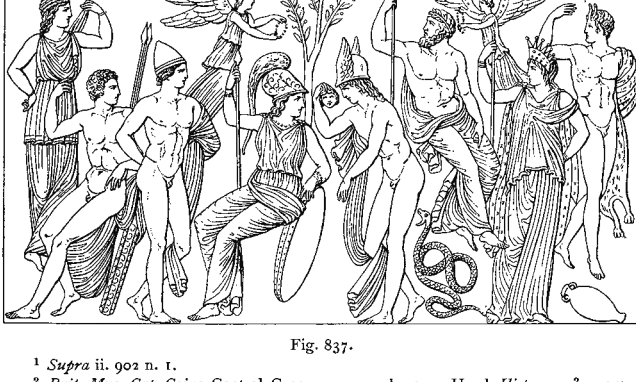

Fig. 837.

[1] Supra ii. 902 n. 1.

[2] Brit. Mus. Cat. Coins Central Greece p. 103 pl. 19, 4, Head Hist. num.[2] p. 357. Cp. supra p. 127 fig. 48.

[3] Brit. Mus. Cat. Coins Central Greece p. 104 pl. 19, 5 and 8, McClean Cat. Coins ii. 332 pl. 203, 23, Head Hist. num.[2] p. 357.

[4] There is, however, no reason to connect with either of them the early corbelled building on Mt Oche (for which see T. Wiegand 'Der angebliche Urtempel auf der Ocha' in the Ath. Mitth. 1896 xxi. 11—17 pls. 2 and 3).

[5] Steph. Byz. s.v. 'Ελύμνιον.

[6] C. Bursian Geographie von Griechenland Leipzig 1868—1872 ii. 434 n. 1, H. Kiepert Formae orbis antiqui Berlin 1894 Map 15 (with a query), Text p. 3 ('very doubtfully').

[7] A. Wilhelm in the Arch.-ep. Mitth. 1892 xv. 115, A. Philippson in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. v. 2468.

[8] Soph. Naúplios frag. 404 Nauck[2], 437 Jebb ap. schol. Aristoph. pax 1126 Καλλίστρατος φησὶ τόπον Εὐβοίας τὸ 'Ελύμνιον. 'Απολλώνιος δὲ ναὸν (an leg. νῆσον? A.B.C.) φησὶν εἶναι πλησίον Εὐβοίας. νυμφικὸν δέ τινες αὐτὸ φασίν, ὅτι ὁ Ζεὺς τῇ "Ηρᾳ ἐκεῖ συνεγένετο. μέμνηται καὶ Σοφοκλῆς 'πρὸς πέτραις 'Ελυμνίαις,' καὶ ἐν Ναυπλίῳ 'νυμφικὸν 'Ελύμνιον.'

Zeus consorted with Hera. But that Zeus in Euboia, like Poseidon in Lesbos[1], bore the cult-title Elýmnios is an unsupported conjecture[2].

(6) The Hierὸs Gámos on Mount Kithairon.

Plutarch, who as a native of Chaironeia knew the mythology of Boiotia well, gives us a more detailed account[3]. Hera was brought up as a virgin in Euboia, but was stolen away by Zeus and carried across the strait to Boiotia. Kithairon, the mountain-god, provided the run-aways with a shady nook and a bridal chamber of nature's making[4]. And, when Makris the nurse of Hera came in search of her and was minded to pry too far, Kithairon prevented her by saying that Zeus was there resting with Leto. So Hera escaped detection and later showed her gratitude by admitting Leto Mychía, 'of the Nook,' or Nychía, 'of the Night,' to share her altar and her temple. Others declared that Hera herself, since she companied there in secret with Zeus, was called Letὸ Nychía, 'the Secret One of the Night[5],' but when their union was made public—and this happened first in the neighbourhood of Kithairon and Plataiai[6]—came to be known as Hera Teleía, 'of the Wedding Rites,' and Gamélios, 'the goddess of Marriage[7].'

Plutarch's narrative proves that the cult of Zeus and Hera on Mount Kithairon, its ancient ritual[8] notwithstanding, had been influenced by the Euboean worship of Hera, and must in fact be treated as the remodelled form of an earlier cult, in which Zeus had been paired, not with Hera at all, but with Leto Mychía or Nychía[9].

[1] Hesych. 'Ελύμιος· Ποσειδῶν ἐν Λέσβῳ. καὶ νῆσος τῆς Εὐβοίας. But also Hesych. 'Ελύτιος· Ποσειδῶν ἐν Λέσβῳ.

[2] O. Jessen in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. v. 2468, E. Fehrle in Roscher Lex. Myth. vi. 623.

[3] Plout. περὶ τῶν ἐν Πλαταιαῖς Δαιδάλων 3 ap. Euseb. praep. ev. 3. 1. 3.

[4] Plout. loc. cit. ἐπίσκιόν τινα μυχὸν καὶ θάλαμον αὐτοφυῆ. Cp. supra ii. 898 n. 6. Kithairon is described as Ἐρωτύων μυχός by Hermesianax of Kypros frag. 2 (Frag. hist. Gr. iv. 428 Müller) ap. [Plout.] de fluv. 2. 3: see further K. Dilthey in the Arch. Zeit. 1874 xxxi. 93 f. and S. Eitrem in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. xvi. 994 f.

[5] Λητώ from λήθω, λανθάνω, and Νυχία from νύξ, νύχιος. On these derivations see A. Enmann in Roscher Lex. Myth. ii. 1969 f., to whose references for Λητώ add L. Meyer Handb. d. gr. Etym. iv. 537, Prellwitz Etym. Wörterb. d. Gr. Spr.[2] p. 267 f., Walde Lat. etym. Wörterb. p. 327 s.v. 'lateo,' Walde—Pokorny Vergl. Wörterb. d. indogerm. Spr. ii. 377 s.v. 'lā- "verborgen, versteckt sein."' But F. Wehrli in Pauly—Wissowa Real. Enc. Suppl. v. 571 ff. supports the connexion of Λητώ, Λατώ, Letun, Latona with Lycian lada (supra ii. 455) and adds: 'Darum hat auch die ursprüngliche Identität von Leto-Lato und Leda [supra i. 763 n. 4] einige Wahrscheinlichkeit.'

[6] At Plataiai Hera bore the titles Τελεία and Νυμφευομένη (Paus. 9. 2. 7).

[7] For these epithets see Gruppe Gr. Myth. Rel. p. 1134 nn. 5 and 3 f.

[8] Supra ii. 898 n. 6.

[9] Schöll—Studemund anecd. i. 269 'Επίθετα Ἥρας...15 νυχίας with the note: 'μυχίας potius quam νυχίας videtur in L exstare; nisi potius νυχίας ex μυχίας correctum est.' See further O. Höfer in Roscher Lex. Myth. ii. 3298.

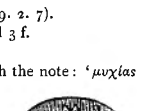

Fig. 838.

An interesting relic of this goddess is a paste in the Vienna collection (fig. 838 is enlarged (⅔) from T. Panofka Gemmen mit Inschriften Berlin 1852 pp. 122, 135 pl. 4, 40), which shows a cock surrounded by the inscription ΛΕΤΟΜΥΧΙ (Corp. inscr. Gr. iv no. 7361 d') = Λητο(ῖ) Μυχί(ᾳ). The cock was dear to Leto, as to all women in childbirth, because he stood by her to lighten her labour (Ail. de nat. an. 4. 29). Possibly Leto Φυτίη of Phaistos (Ant. Lib. 17 (after

(7) The Hierὸs Gámos in the Cave of Achilleus.

A parallel to the 'nook' of Kithairon in the Boeotian myth is furnished by the cave of Achilleus. Ptolemaios Chénnos ('the Quail'), who flourished in the reigns of Trajan and Hadrian, in his New or Surprising History told the tale as follows[1]. When Hera was fleeing from the embraces of Zeus, Achilleus the earth-born received her in his cave and persuaded her to yield to the importunity of the god. This was their first union, and Zeus rewarded Achilleus by a promise that all who bore his name thereafter should become famous. Hence the fame of Achilleus son of Thetis. The teacher of Cheiron, too, was called Achilleus; indeed Peleus' son was named after him by Cheiron. Now we are not definitely told by Ptolemaios where his cave of Achilleus was situated. But it may fairly be surmised that Achilleus the earth-born was one with Achilleus the teacher of Cheiron; and, if so, the cave of Achilleus the earth-born must have been the famous cave of Cheiron on Mount Pelion[2]. The whole story is meant to sound like a genuine Magnesian myth.

(8) The Hierὸs Gámos at Argos.

(α) Zeus and Hera at Hermione.

Another locality specially connected with the hierὸs gámos is the Argolid. At Hermione there was a sanctuary of Hera Parthénos; and pious but ignorant folk derived the name of the town from the notion that Zeus and Hera had come to an 'anchorage' here after their voyage from Crete[3]. Aristotle, or perhaps rather Aristokles[4], in a lost treatise on the cults of Hermione had included the local myth, which told how Zeus had transformed himself into a cuckoo in order to consort with Hera[5]. But we have no proof that the union of these two deities was celebrated at Hermione by actual marriage rites.

(β) Zeus and Hera at Argos.

The same conception of the manner in which Zeus gained his desires was current at Argos also, thirty miles away, in the fifth century B.C. The cult-statue of Hera at the Argive Heraion[6] had in one hand a pomegranate Nikandros ἑτεροιούμενα book 2)) stood in some relation to Zeus ϝελχάνος of Phaistos, whose sacred bird was the cock (supra ii. 946 f. n. 0 figs. 838–841).

[1] Ptol. nov. hist. 6 (p. 196, 11 ff. ed. Westermann) = Phot. bibl. p. 152 a 29 ff. Bekker. The bona fides of Ptolemaios Chennos, impugned by R. Hercher in the Jahrb. f. class. Philol. Suppl. 1856 i. 269—293, was vainly defended by C. Müller Geographi Graeci minores Parisiis 1882 ii p. lvii. See W. Christ Geschichte der griechischen Litteratur[6] München 1920 ii. 1. 421 f.

[2] On the cave of Cheiron see supra ii. 869 n. 2. Zeus was worshipped on Mt Pelion as Ἀκταῖος (ib.) and Ἀκραῖος (supra ii. 871 n. 3 (1)).

[3] Steph. Byz. s.v. Ἑρμιὼν καὶ Ἑρμιόνη·...Ἑρμιον δὲ ἀπὸ τοῦ τὸν Δία καὶ τὴν Ἥραν ἐνταῦθα ἀπὸ Κρήτης ἀφικομένους ὁρμισθῆναι, καὶ τροπῇ τοῦ ο εἰς ε, ὅθεν καὶ ἱερὸν Ἥρας παρθένου ἦν ἐν αὐτῇ (cp. Eustath. in Il. p. 286, 39 ff.).

[4] Aristot. frag. 287 (Frag. hist. Gr. ii. 190 Müller) = Aristokl. frag. 3 (Frag. gr. Hist. i. 258 Jacoby) ap. schol. vet. Theokr. 15. 64 (Eudok. viol. 414[11]) cited supra ii. 893 n. 2. For attempts to alter Ἀριστοτέλης into Ἀριστοφάνης, Ἀριστείδης, Ἀριστοκλῆς, etc. see C. Müller ad loc. The most plausible emendation is Ἀριστοκλῆς, on whom see Tresp Frag. gr. Kultschr. p. 126 ff. (frag. 1).

[5] Supra p. 65 from Paus. 2. 36. 2 (cited supra ii. 893 n. 2).

[6] Supra p. 65 f.

(fig. 839)[1] about which strange things were said, and in the other a cuckoo-sceptre which Pausanias[2] explains by the story of Zeus' metamorphosis.

But was the hieròs gámos at Argos represented by definite rites? W. H. Roscher[3] has collected various facts which point towards that conclusion. On the right hand side of the prónaos or vestibule of the Heraion stood a couch known as Hera's couch[4]. A sacrifice offered to the goddess was called by the Argives Lechérna[5], a name presumably related to the word léchos 'a bed.' In the story of Kleobis and Biton the priestess of Hera had to visit her temple on a car drawn by white oxen[6]—a circumstance suggestive of a bridal procession[7].

Fig. 839.

Fig. 840.

[1] Brit. Mus. Cat. Coins Peloponnesus p. 149 nos. 155 and 156 pl. 28, 16 (my fig. 839 is from a cast) Antoninus Pius, p. 150 no. 159 L. Verus, p. 151 no. 164 Septimius Severus, cp. p. 152 no. 172 pl. 28, 24 Caracalla, Hunter Cat. Coins ii. 154 no. 23 Antoninus Pius, Overbeck Gr. Kunstmyth. Hera p. 44 ff. Münztaf. 3, 2 Iulia Domna, Imhoof-Blumer and P. Gardner Num. Comm. Paus. i. 34 pl. 1, 12 Antoninus Pius, Müller—Wieseler—Wernicke Ant. Denkm. ii. 1. 130 pl. 12, 5 Iulia Domna.

[2] Paus. 2. 17. 4 (cited supra p. 65 n. 2).

[3] W. H. Roscher Juno und Hera Leipzig 1875 p. 79 f., id. in his Lex. Myth. i. 2101 f.

[4] Paus. 2. 17. 3 κλίνη τῆς Ηρας, cp. Poll. 3. 43 κλίνη τις ὠνομάζετο γαμική.

S. Casson in the Journ. Hell. Stud. 1920 xl. 137—142 developed the curious view that the central figure of the 'Ludovisi Throne' is Hera, who annually recovers her virginity by bathing in the spring Kanathos (Paus. 2. 38. 2: supra p. 224 n. 3). She is successively Τελεία and Παρθένος (cp. Paus. 8. 22. 2). As Τελεία she is immersed with breasts covered by a cloth symbolic of matronhood. As Παρθένος she emerges with cloth lowered and virginal breasts fully displayed. The figures on the side-arms are typical of Τελεία and Παρθένος.

J. N. Svoronos 'Le lit de la Héra d'Argos œuvre de Polyclète ou le "trône Ludovisi" avec son "pendant' à Boston' in the Journ. Intern. d'Arch. Num. 1920—21 xx. 108—159 pl. 3 f. goes further and fares worse. He contends that the 'Ludovisi Throne' and its Boston pendant were the actual couch of Hera seen by Pausanias in the Heraion, and that every detail of their relief-decoration has reference to the hieròs gámos of the goddess. He cites as relevant Philarg. expl. in Verg. ecl. 4. 63 (H. Hagen Appendix Serviana Lipsiae 1902 p. 88, 6 ff.) pueris nobilibus editis in atrio Iunoni Lucinae lectus ponitur, Herculi mensa, Myth. Vat. 1. 177 templum Iunonis fuit, in quo mensam Hercules et Diana lectum habuit; ubi portabantur pueri ut de ipsa mensa ederent et inde acciperent fortitudinem, et in lecto Dianae dormirent ut omnibus amabiles fierent et illorum generatio succresceret. But Philargyrius is obviously alluding to a Roman custom (Class. Rev. 1906 xx. 374), and the Vatican mythographer is copying him with a blunder or two thrown in. Neither writer says a word about the Argive Heraion.

[5] Hesych. Λεχέρνα· ὑπὸ Ἀργείων ἡ θυσία ἐπιτελουμένη τῇ Ἥρᾳ.

[6] Supra i. 447 f.

[7] Phot. lex. s.v. ζεῦγος ἡμιονικὸν ἢ βοεικόν· ζεύξαντες τὴν λεγομένην κλινίδα, ἥ ἐστιν ὁμοία διέδρᾳ, τὴν τῆς νύμφης μέθοδον ποιοῦνται· κ.τ.λ. M. Collignon in Daremberg—Saglio Dict. Ant. iii. 1651.

And on billon coins of Alexandreia struck by Nero (fig. 840)[1] Hera Argeta is conspicuously veiled.

These considerations, despite the doubts of M. P. Nilsson[2], do raise a certain presumption that the marriage of Hera was duly celebrated at Argos, though they do not of course prove that the original consort of the goddess was Zeus[3]. But that as early as the fifth century B.C. Zeus had come to be regarded as the rightful partner of the Argive Hera, and that their union was commemorated by the ritual of a hierὸs gámos, seems to me a reasonable inference from the final scene of Aristophanes' Birds[4].

At this point the argument can be strengthened by taking into account Roman as well as Greek evidence. Apuleius in his Metamorphoses makes Psyche pray to Hera as follows: 'O sister and wife of mighty Zeus, whether thou abidest in the ancient temple of Samos, which alone can boast thy birth, thine infant cries, and thy nursing, or hauntest thy blissful seat in lofty Carthage, which worships thee as a virgin carried up to heaven on a lion[5], or presidest over the famous walls of the Argives near the banks of the Inachos, which tells of thee as already the bride of the Thunderer and the queen of the gods[6],' etc. etc. Argos is here chosen as a typical centre for the cult of Hera conceived as the bride of Zeus. The same conception underlies the Agamemnon of Seneca, in which a chorus of Mycenaean women invokes Hera thus:

> Come, consort of the mighty sceptre, come,
> Hera the Queen,—
> All we that in Mykenai have our home
> On thee must lean[7].

Later in the play Agamemnon on reaching his palace exclaims:

> O father, hurler of the cruel bolt,
> Driver of clouds, sovereign of stars and lands,
> To whom the conqueror brings his triumph-spoils,
> And thou too, sister of an almighty lord,
> Argolic Hera, gladly will I serve you
> With gifts of Araby and suppliant entrails[8].

[1] Brit. Mus. Cat. Coins Alexandria p. 17 nos. 132, 133 pl. 1 (=my fig. 840), 134 f., Hunter Cat. Coins iii. 416 nos. 114 pl. 85, 23, 115 f., J. G. Milne Catalogue of Alexandrian Coins Oxford 1933 p. 8 nos. 266 f., 281—284, 291, 297.

[2] Nilsson Gr. Feste p. 44. He notes, however, that the marriage of Hebe and Herakles, a relief on a silver altar in the Heraion (Paus. 2. 17. 6), was perhaps viewed as a parallel to the marriage of Hera and Zeus. And he accepts as probable the suggestion of W. H. Roscher Juno und Hera Leipzig 1875 p. 33 that the wedding of Demetrios Poliorketes, when agonothétes at the Heraia, with Deïdameia, daughter of the Molottian king Aiakides and sister of Pyrrhos (Plout. v. Demetr. 25), was designed in imitation of the hierὸs gámos.

[3] I am hinting at Herakles, on whose relations to Hera I have said my say in the Class. Rev. 1906 xx. 371 ff.

[4] See supra p. 58 ff.

[5] W. H. Roscher in his Lex. Myth. ii. 612 ff., F. Cumont in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. iii. 1247—1250, H. Frère 'Sur le culte de Caelestis' in the Rev. Arch. 1907 ii. 21—35, A. von Domaszewski Abhandlungen zur römischen Religion Leipzig—Berlin 1909 pp. 148—150 ('Virgo Caelestis'). Cp. supra ii. 68 n. 2, 869 n. 0, iii. 834.

[6] Apul. met. 6. 4 sive prope ripas Inachi, qui te iam nuptam Tonantis et reginam deorum memorat, inclitis Argivorum praesides moenibus.

[7] Sen. Ag. 348 ff. [8] Sen. Ag. 839 ff.

But more explicit and detailed is a passage in the Thebaid of Statius[1]. The poet is describing how the wives and children of the Argive warriors implored Hera to protect their absent ones in the perilous expedition against Thebes:

> The day of prayer was done, but all night long
> They kept their vigil round the altars' flame.
> Ay, and they brought a robe by way of gift,
> Whose wondrous woof no barren hand had woven > Nor such as lacked a husband—this they brought
> In a basket as a veil acceptable
> To their chaste goddess. Rich the purple shone
> With broidered work and threads of glittering gold—
> On it the bride of the great Thunderer
> Within her bridal bower: nought she knows
> Of wedlock and is fearful to lay by > Her sisterhood; with down-dropped eye she kisses
> The lips of youthful Zeus, a simple maid
> As yet untroubled by his stolen loves.
> With this same veil the Argolic matrons clothed
> The ivory goddess, and with tears and prayers
> Besought her:—'Look now on the sinful towers
> Of Kadmos' daughter, who seduced thy lord,
> Queen of the starry sky. Oh, bring to nought
> The foemen's rebel hill, and on their Thebes
> Fling—for thou canst—another thunderbolt.'

We are surely justified in maintaining that this veil, woven for Hera by fruitful wives and embroidered to represent her wedlock with Zeus, implies the existence of an actual marriage-rite.

One other indication of such a rite is forthcoming, and that from a late and unexpected source. Cyprian, bishop of Antioch, à propos of the numerous pagan ceremonies through which he passed in his youth[2], says: 'I went and at Argos, in Hera's rite, was there initiated into the purposes of union—the union, I mean, of lower with upper and of upper with lower air, and likewise of earth with water and of water with lower air[3].' It can hardly be doubted that this, as L. Preller[4] long since conjectured, refers to the old hieròs gámos of Zeus and Hera, still kept up in the third century A.D., though then encumbered with a symbolic and quasi-philosophical significance[5].

[1] Stat. Theb. 10. 54 ff.

[2] Cp. supra i. 110 f., iii. 775.

[3] Confessio S. Cypriani (in Acta Sanctorum edd. Bolland. Septembris vii. 222 ff.) ἦλθον καὶ ἐν "Αργει, ἐν τῇ τῆς "Ηρας τελετῇ, ἐμυήθην ἐκεῖ βουλὰς ἑνότητος, ἀέρος πρὸς αἰθέρα καὶ αἰθέρος πρὸς ἀέρα, ἅμα δὲ καὶ γῆς πρὸς ὕδωρ καὶ ὕδατος πρὸς ἀέρα. Hence Eudok. de s. Cyprian. 2. 52 ff. ἔνθεν ἐς ἱππόβοτον θαλερὸν γενόμην κατὰ "Αργος· | ἦν δὲ Τιθωνιάδος ἔροτις λευχείμονος 'Ηοῦς. | μύστης δ' αὖ γενόμην, καὶ αὐτόθι ἠέρος ἄμμα (so A. Ludwich for ἀμφω cod. L) | ἠδὲ πολυπτύχοιο πόλου καὶ εἶδον ἄεημα, | συγγενίην δ' ὑδάτων καὶ εὐφόρβοιο ἀρούρης | ἠδ' αὖτις δροσερῶν ναμάτων εἰς ἠέρα δῖαν.

[4] L. Preller in Philologus 1846 i. 351. Cp. Nilsson Gr. Feste p. 44 n. 4.

[5] For Zeus as αἰθήρ and Hera as ἀήρ see supra i. 31. Such teaching as that to which Cyprian listened would easily be grafted upon the Heraclitean doctrine of flux or a Stoic adaptation of the same (supra i. 28 ff.).

(9) The Hierὸs Gámos at Athens.

At Athens, and at Athens alone, we have evidence of the rite without the myth. The Athenians had a definite festival called the Hierὸs Gámos, at which they commemorated the marriage of Zeus and Hera[1]. A. Mommsen[2] rightly identified this festival with the Theogamia, which took place towards the end[3] of Gamelion, the month of Hera[4] (our January to February). H. Usener[5] drew attention to a passage of Menandros[6], which enables us to fix the date more exactly as the twenty-fourth or the twenty-seventh of that month[7]. H. von Prott[8] and L. Deubner[9] further connect with the same festival the sacrifice of a pig for Zeus Heraῖos recorded in a ritual calendar of the early fifth century found on the Akropolis at Athens[10]. The unique epithet by which the husband is named after the wife[11] recalls the fact that at Samos[12] and perhaps elsewhere[13] Zeus in deference to Hera wore the bridal veil[14].

[1] Hesych. ἱερὸς γάμος· ἑορτὴ Διὸς καὶ Ἥρας, Phot. lex. s.v. ἱερὸν γάμον· Ἀθηναῖοι ἑορτὴν Διὸς ἄγουσι καὶ Ἥρας, ἱερὸν γάμον καλοῦντες, et. mag. p. 468, 56 f. ἱερὸν γάμον· Ἀθηναῖοι ἑορτὴν Διὸς ἄγουσι καὶ Ἥρας, οὕτω καλοῦντες (text reconstituted by T. Gaisford).

[2] Mommsen Feste d. Stadt Athen p. 382 f. But his subsequent contention that Hephaistos and Athena, conceived at the Theogamia, were born nine months later at the Chalkeia and Athenaia respectively is neither proved nor probable.

[3] Prokl. in Hes. o.d. 780 διὸ καὶ Ἀθηναῖοι τὰς πρὸς σύνοδον ἡμέρας ἐξελέγοντο πρὸς γάμους καὶ τὰ Θεογάμια ἐτέλουν, τότε φυσικῶς εἶναι πρῶτον οἰόμενοι γάμον, τῆς σελήνης οὔσης (H. Usener cj. λούσης) πρὸς ἡλίου σύνοδον. T. Bergk Beiträge zur griechischen Monatskunde Giessen 1845 p. 36 f. and W. H. Roscher Juno und Hera Leipzig 1875 p. 75 and in his Lex. Myth. i. 2100 held that Proklos was referring to the first day of the month. But A. Mommsen Heortologie Leipzig 1864 p. 343 and A. Schmidt Handbuch der griechischen Chronologie Jena 1888 p. 524 showed that the reference must be to the last third of the month, when the conjunction of sun and moon was approaching.

[4] Hesych. Γαμηλιών· ὁ (ζ') τῶν μηνῶν, τῆς Ἥρας ἱερός.

[5] H. Usener in the Rhein. Mus. 1879 xxxiv. 428.

[6] Menand. Mέthe frag. 2 (Frag. com. Gr. iv. 162 Meineke) ap. Athen. 243 A—B ἐμὲ γὰρ διέτριψεν ὁ | κομψότατος ἀνδρῶν Χαιρεφῶν ἱερὸν γάμον | φάσκων ποήσειν δευτέρᾳ μετ' εἰκάδας (so Usener for δευτέραν μετ' εἰκάδα) | καθ' αὐτόν, ἵνα τῇ τετράδι δειπνῇ παρ' ἑτέροις· | τὸ τῆς θεοῦ γὰρ πανταχῶς ἔχειν καλῶς. J. de Prott Leges Graecorum sacrae Lipsiae 1896 Fasti sacri p. 4 expounds: 'gloriatur Chaerepho calliditate sua dicens matrimonium Iovis ac Iunonis, quod Gamelionis diei ultimo adtribuisse usum sacrum sumendum est, domi sese die nefasto [cp. et. mag. p. 131, 13 ff.] antecedente celebraturum esse, ne hospites accedant; at Antheste rionis sollemni Veneris apud alios esse cenaturum.'

[7] F. G. Allinson ad loc.: 'here the "Fourth" may mean the 24th, i.e. the fourth day after the twentieth, or, more probably, the 27th, i.e. the fourth (the third) day before the "New and the Old."'

[8] J. de Prott op. cit. p. 4.

[9] L. Deubner Attische Feste Berlin 1932 p. 177 f.

[10] J. de Prott op. cit. p. 1 ff. no. 1, 20 f., Inscr. Gr. ed. min. i no. 840, A 20 f. [– – Δ]ιὶ hεραῖοι : χ[ῖρος – – –]. Class. Rev. 1906 xx. 416 n. 6.

[11] J. de Prott op. cit. p. 4 'Plane singularem esse Δία Ἡραῖον ipse fateor. Non est quod miremur Ἀθηνᾶν Ἡφαιστίαν [supra p. 216 n. 2], Ἀμφιτρίτην Ποσειδωνίαν (schol. Hom. γ 91) 'aut Ἀπόλλωνα Λατῷον, Διόνυσον Θυωνέα. At deum ab uxore denominari aliud est.' He adds ib. n. 4 'Non habeo exemplum simile nisi Hesychii glossam Ἥραιον· Ἡρακλέα [supra p. 216 n. 1].'

[12] Supra p. 1028 figs. 829 and 830.

[13] Supra p. 1033 pl. lxxii.

[14] Class. Rev. 1906 xx. 378.

Greek art normally recognises Hera as the lawful bride of Zeus. Accordingly they are grouped together in a succession of hieratic types, which perhaps postulate a ritual origin[1].

(α) Zeus with Hera behind him.

Vases of the mid sixth century, whether Attic[2] or otherwise[3], represent Olympos by the king and queen of the gods sitting in state. Zeus is enthroned to the right. Hera is enthroned to the right behind him.

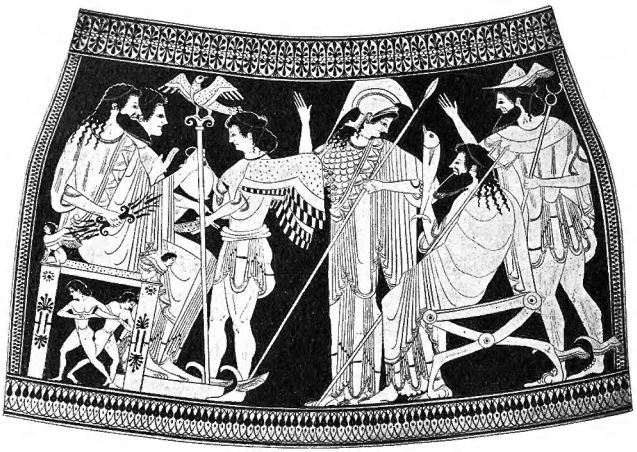

Fig. 841.

(β) Zeus with Hera beside him.

By the end of the sixth century painters had learnt to economize their design. They now represented Olympos by Zeus enthroned to the right with Hera sitting at his side[4]. Zeus as the more important deity is nearer to the eye

[1] Cp. supra pp. 668, 669 f., 688.

[2] So on the kratér of Klitias and Ergotimos (Furtwängler—Reichhold Gr. Vasenmalerei i. 58 pl. 11—12, Hoppin Black-fig. Vases p. 150 ff. no. 2, Pfuhl Malerei u. Zeichnung d. Gr. i. 255 ff.).

[3] So on a 'Chalcidian' kýlix in the British Museum (supra ii. 771 n. 1 with fig. 734).

[4] The red-figured kýlix by the potter Sosias, at Berlin (supra ii. 1167 n. 6, iii. 818 n. o), shows Zeus seated with Hera by his side. The upper part of both figures is missing, but enough remains to prove that Zeus in chitón and himátion was holding out a phiále, while his eagle-tipped sceptre leant against his stool (lion-footed and covered with a spotted lion-skin), and that Hera in like costume held sceptre and phiále. Before her stands Hebe ("H[βη], not [Νίκ]η, nor "H[ρα]), with spread wings, filling Hera's phiále from an oinochóe.

A red-figured amphora at Munich, attributed to 'the Nikoxenos painter' (Gerhard of the spectator[1] (fig. 841). Hebe or Iris or other attendants may stand before them.

(γ) Zeus with Hera facing him.

Meantime other painters had hit upon a more effective arrangement. They represent Olympos as an assemblage of deities seated vis-à-vis[2]. The partner of Zeus, who still looks towards the right, is almost always Hera, though once

Fig. 842.

Auserl. Vasenb. i. 31 ff. pl. 7, Jahn Vasensamml. München p. 137 f. no. 405, Overbeck Gr. Kunstmyth. Hera pp. 31 (i), 32 f., Hoppin Red-fig. Vases ii. 233 no. 6, J. D. Beazley Attische Vasenmaler des rotfigurigen Stils Tübingen 1925 p. 91 no. 1, E. Buschor in Furtwängler—Reichhold Gr. Vasenmalerei iii. 250 f. pl. 158 (=my fig. 841)), again has Zeus and Hera seated side by side and served by a winged attendant—Hebe (Gerhard, Jahn, Hoppin) or Iris (Beazley) or possibly Nike (Buschor). Buschor notes that the throne of Zeus is shown as if seen from the front, the two Sphinxes being arm-rests and the two wrestlers decorative supports for the seat (cp. supra p. 682 figs. 492 and 493). He draws up a list of such thrones, which he regards as characteristic of Zeus.

[1] A black-figured hydrla from Vulci, at Berlin (Furtwängler Vasensamml. Berlin i. 387 f. no. 1899, Lenormant—de Witte Él. mon. cér. i. 39 ff. pl. 22 (=my fig. 842)), promotes Athena to the place of honour—a novelty pardonable on the part of an Athenian painter. With a spear that length she can hardly be Hera, pace R. Foerster Die Hochzeit des Zeus und der Hera Breslau 1867 p. 31 f.

[2] (1) A black-figured kýlix at Berlin (supra ii. 776 n. 3 with fig. 740).

(2) A red-figured kýlix at Corneto, by the potter Euxitheos and the painter Oltos (H. Heydemann in the Ann. d. Inst. 1875 xlvii. 254—267, Mon. d. Inst. x pl. 23—24 (=my fig. 843), Wien. Vorlegebl. D pl. 1—2, A. Baumeister in his Denkm. iii. 2141 pl. 93, P. Hartwig Die griechischen Meisterschalen der Blüthezeit des strengen rothfigurigen Stiles Stuttgart—Berlin 1893 p. 71 ff., Reinach Rép. Vases i. 203, 4—8, Hoppin Red-fig. Vases ii. 250 f. no. 2 fig., Pfuhl Malerei u. Zeichnung d. Gr. i. 431 f., iii. 103 figs. 359 f., J. D. Beazley Attische Vasenmaler des rotfigurigen Stils Tübingen 1925 p. 15 no. 49), has Zeus served by Ganymedes and Hestia seated in place of Hera. The figures from left to right are A: Hebe (pomegranate, flower), Hermes (flower), Athena (spear, helmet), Zeus (phiálē, thunderbolt), Ganymedes (oinochóē), Hestia (branch, flower), Aphrodite (flower, dove), Ares (spear, helmet), and B: Thero (thýrsos, doe, snake), Terpes

Fig. 843.

Fig. 844.

(plēktron, phórminx), Dionysos (vine, kántharos), Kalis (lion, thýrsos), Terpon (double flute). On the foot is an Etruscan graffito: Itun Turuce Venela Telinas Tinas Cliniiaras.

(3) A red-figured stámnos in the Louvre, by the 'Providence painter' (supra ii. 735 n. 4, E. Pottier Vases antiques du Louvre 3me Série Paris 1922 p. 237 f. no. G 370 pl. 138, J. D. Beazley op. cit. p. 134 no. 31). My fig. 844 is from the Mon. d. Inst. vi—vii pl. 58, 2. The figures from left to right are: Zeus, Nike, Apollon, Hera, Hermes, Poseidon, Athena, Plouton, Persephone (?).

(4) A red-figured kýlix in the British Museum, attributed to the school of Brygos (Brit. Mus. Cat. Vases iii. 90 f. no. E 67, E. Gerhard Trinkschalen und Gefässe des Königlichen Museums zu Berlin und anderer Sammlungen Berlin 1848 i. 25 f. pl. D (=my fig. 845), P. Hartwig op. cit. p. 361 f., Hoppin Red-fig. Vases i. 131 no. 61, J. D. Beazley op. cit. p. 184 no. 1), shows Zeus seated over against Hera. Ganymedes serves the one; Iris, the other. Ares as a sample god stands between them.

(5) A red-figured hydría at Leyden, by the 'Oinanthe painter' (Roulez Vases de Leide

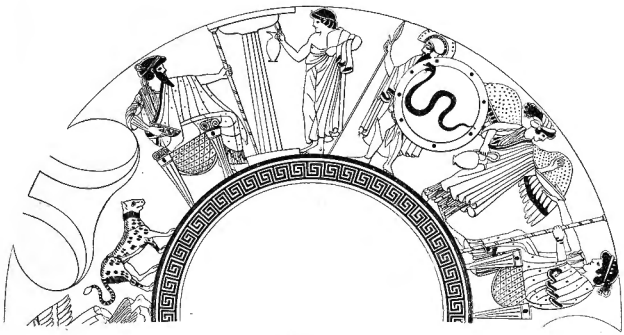

Fig. 845.

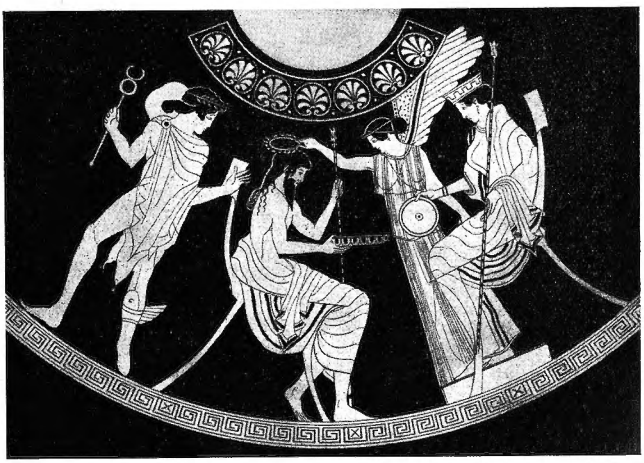

Fig. 846.

p. 1 ff. pl. 1 (=my fig. 846), Müller—Wieseler—Wernicke Ant. Denkm. i. 16 f. pl. 1, 7, Reinach Rép. Vases ii. 266, 1, J. D. Beazley op. cit. p. 252 no. 3). Zeus is seated opposite to Hera. Nike (rather than Iris) crowns his head. Hermes starts away, prepared to do his bidding. J. Roulez, followed with some hesitation by S. Reinach, took this vase to by way of exception, Hestia takes her place[1]. Iris or Ganymedes or both may be there, and sometimes a Doric column marks the scene as the celestial palace.

Others again varied the scheme by making Zeus and Hera change sides, so represent the hierὸs gámos. But K. Wernicke concludes: 'Einen tiefen Sinn in dem Bilde zu suchen wäre verfehlt; es ist gewissermassen eine Genrescene im Olymp.'

Fig. 847.

(6) The fragment of a red-figured skýphos from Tarentum, now at New York (G. M. A. R[ichter] in the Bulletin of the Metropolitan Museum of Art 1912 vi. 97 fig. 5 (=my fig. 847), K. Schefold in the Jahrb. d. Deutsch. Arch. Inst. 1937 lii. 60 with fig. 19). Zeus seated on an elaborate throne (arm-rest, supported on a lion, ends in a Gorgon-head) has his himátion drawn up like a veil over the back of his head and holds a sceptre tipped with a dove (Richter) or, more probably, a small eagle (Schefold). Opposite to him is a seated goddess, presumably Hera. And Eros, flying from her to him, presents him with a wreath. Again the scene is suggestive of the hierὸs gámos.

Fig. 848.

[1] Supra p. 1050 n. 0 (2) fig. On the association of Zeus with Hestia see supra i. 17 n. 1, 149 n. 2, 330 n. 4, ii. 259 n. 0, 317 n. 2, 960 n. 0, 1228 f. More in Gruppe Gr. Myth. Rel. p. 1405 n. 2 and Süss in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. viii. 1300 f.

that he looks to the left and she to the right[1]. But such transposition is due to mere love of variety[2].

(δ) Zeus with Hera on the frieze of the Parthenon.

The 'Kodros painter,' as Professor Beazley[3] put it, was 'Parthenonian' in his effects. But the Parthenon itself on its eastern frieze[4] combined in one triumphant synthesis all three traditional types—the tandem, the side-by-side, and the face-to-face arrangement. The deities are mostly seen en échelon. Hera is thus behind Zeus, and yet beside him, while with a gesture characteristic of the bride[5] she turns herself to face her bridegroom. Zeus, alone of the gods, sits on a throne with back and arms: its top-bar terminates in a circular disk and its side-rail is supported on a winged Sphinx. His attitude is one of dignified ease[6]. The right arm, sceptre in hand, rests on his lap; the left leans on the back of his throne. He wears a wreath or fillet in his hair, a himátion about his legs, and sandals on his feet. Hera sits on a stool, wearing sandals, a Doric péplos, and a large outspread veil. She too has a wreath, which is composed of pointed and serrated leaves—probably those of her sacred tree, the willow[7]. At her side in a Doric péplos stands Iris[8], who raises her left hand to adjust a mass of hair and in her right probably held a fillet or garland. In this complex Pheidias—for the design was surely his—has given faultless expression to the current Athenian belief about the wedlock of Zeus and Hera. Moreover, as in the vase-paintings, so on the frieze the group of Zeus and Hera is extended to include a series of other seated deities.

[1] (1) A red-figured stámnos, formerly with Depoletti at Rome, latterly with Kalebdjian in Paris, and now attributed to the painter Hermonax (F. T. Welcker in the Ann. d. Inst. 1861 xxxiii. 293—298, Mon. d. Inst. vi—vii pl. 58, 1 (=my fig. 848), id. Alt. Denkm. v. 360, 362 ff. pl. 24 b, Reinach Rép. Vases i. 157, 1, J. D. Beazley Attische Vasenmaler des rotfigurigen Stils Tübingen 1925 p. 476 no. 12 bis) arranges from left to right: a goddess (quis?), Dionysos (kántharos, vine-staff), Aphrodite (swan, apple), Poseidon? (restored as Dionysos), Plouton (cornu copiae), Hera (sceptre), Iris rather than Nike (oinochóe, caduceus), Zeus (phiále, sceptre).

(2) A red-figured kýlix in the British Museum, assigned to the 'Kodros painter' (Brit. Mus. Cat. Vases iii. 108 ff. no. E 82, E. Braun in the Ann. d. Inst. 1853 xxv. 103—113, Mon. d. Inst. v pl. 49 (=my fig. 849), A. Baumeister in his Denkm. iii. 2141 f. pl. 92 fig. 2401, Reinach Rép. Vases i. 143, 1 f., Hoppin Red-fig. Vases ii. 154 no. 3, J. D. Beazley op. cit. p. 425 no. 5), depicts a symposium of the gods. Outside, A Amphitrite (dipper, alábastron), Poseidon (trident, phiále), Hera (sceptre), Zeus (sceptre, phiále), Ganymedes (strainer seen edgewise): B Aphrodite (smematothéke?), Ares (spear, phiále on table), Ariadne (love-gesture of fingers, cp. C. Sittl Die Gebärden der Griechen und Römer Leipzig 1890 pp. 256, 287 n. 2), Dionysos (phiále, thýrsos), Komos. Inside, Pherrephatta (love-gesture of fingers?), Plouton (phiále, cornu copiae).

[2] Cp. supra p. 694 fig. 502.

[3] J. D. Beazley op. cit. p. 425 'Sehr feine Schalen mit Anklängen an Parthenonisches.'

[4] Supra ii. 1135 n. 5 with pl. xliv.

[5] Cp. supra p. 1038 fig. 834.

[6] Supra i. 91 f. fig. 64.

[7] Supra p. 1028 ff. So already A. H. Smith A Guide to the Sculptures of the Parthenon London 1908 p. 76.

[8] The choice lies between Nike (Overbeck Gr. Plastik[4] i. 444, F. Studniczka Die Siegesgoettin Leipzig 1898 p. 20 pl. 9, 39—40) and Iris (J. Stuart and N. Revett The Antiquities of Athens London 1787 ii. 13 pl. 24, followed by most modern critics). Somewhat in favour of the former is her long clothing; but decisive for the latter is her position next Hera, not Zeus.

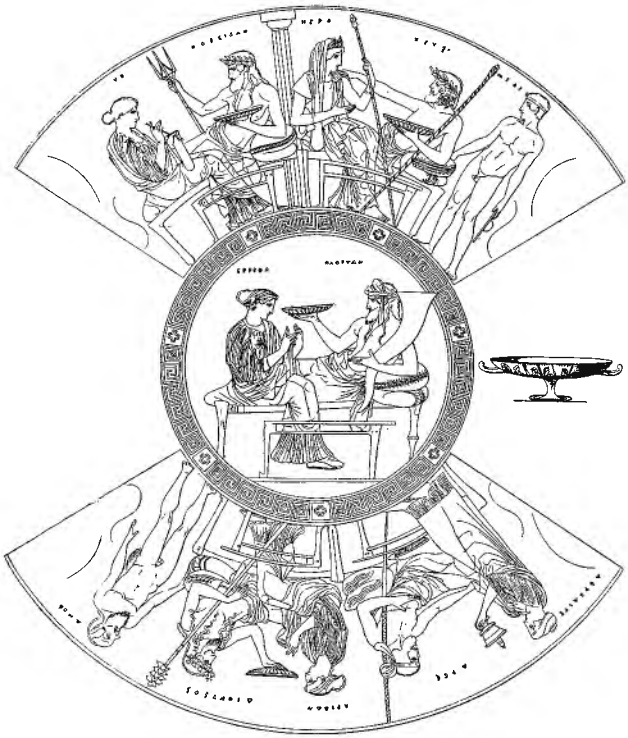

Fig. 849.

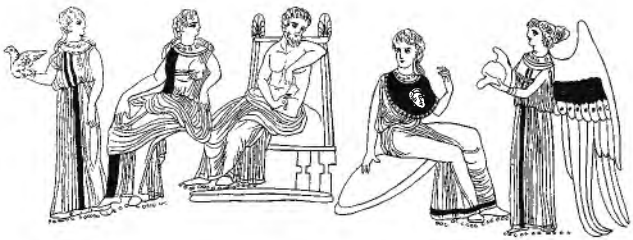

Fig. 850.

Not altogether uninfluenced by the Parthenon frieze is the upper[1] row of figures on an 'Apulian' amphora in the Santangelo collection at Naples (fig. 850)[2]. The painter of this vase has represented in crude and clumsy juxtaposition a sequence of Aphrodite, Hera, Zeus, Athena, and Nike. The arrangement of Hera, Zeus, and perhaps Athena[3] owes something to the Pheidiac scheme, modified of course to suit the subject in hand.

(ε) Zeus with Hera in archaistic reliefs.

Zeus and Hera, conceived as a wedded pair, had long since taken their place among the traditional gods of Greece. They figure therefore as two of the canonical twelve, who from the fifth century onwards tend to be represented in an affected archaistic style suggestive of long-standing cults. O. Weinreich[4] in a recent article has traced with masterly skill the whole rise and development of these 'Zwölfgötter.' He shows convincingly that they were ab origine the Olympian counterpart of an earthly 'Zwölfstaat'—a divine 'Synoikismos' which shaped itself on Ionian soil at least as far back as the seventh century B.C.[5], that in the fourth century owing to Iranian influence on the Platonic school they came to be viewed as 'Monats- oder Zodiakusgötter[6],' and that in Graeco-Roman times they played a noteworthy part in the formation of political and social ideals[7], in theological speculation[8], and in magic[9]. Here I am concerned merely to illustrate the various positions assigned to Zeus and Hera in the archaistic renderings of the canon.

A votive relief, said to have been found at Tarentum and offered for sale in Paris, was well published by E. Schmidt (fig. 851)[10], who now dates it as early as c. 460 B.C.[11] It represents, on Pentelic(?) marble and in curiously flat technique, the twelve gods standing, not walking, with left foot advanced, as if they were lined up for the start of a procession. Their order from right to left is Apollon

[1] Cp. supra i. 200 n. 6.

[2] Heydemann Vasensamml. Neapel p. 636 ff. Santangelo no. 24, Raoul-Rochette Monumens inédits d'antiquité figurée Paris 1833 p. 201 ff. pl. 41 (part of which = my fig. 850).

[3] Her relative position may be reminiscent of the Parthenon frieze, but her type is obviously taken from the balustrade of Nike Ápteros (R. Kekulé Die Reliefs an der Balustrade der Athena Nike Stuttgart 1881 p. 7 pl. 2, E, R. Heberdey 'Die Komposition der Reliefs an der Balustrade der Athena Nike' in the Jahresh. d. oest. arch. Inst. 1922 xxi—xxii. 14 f. fig. 10), as is that of the helmet-bearing Nike who stands beside her (Kekulé op. cit. p. 8 pl. 4, M, Heberdey loc. cit. p. 22 f. fig. 18).

[4] O. Weinreich in Roscher Lex. Myth. vi. 764—848. See also the same scholar's earlier works: 'Lykische Zwölfgötter-Reliefs' in the Sitzungsber. d. Heidelb. Akad. d. Wiss. Phil.-hist. Classe 1913 Abh. v. 1—42 fig. 1 and pls. 1—3, Triskaidekadische Studien Giessen 1916 pp. 1—124, 'Zwölfgötter, Zwölfzahl und Zwölfstaat' in Aus Unterricht und Forschung 1935 vii. 319—331.

[5] O. Weinreich in Roscher Lex. Myth. vi. 768 f., 771 f., 829 f.

[6] Id. ib. vi. 770, 823 ff. Cp. a weighty passage in F. Boll Sphaera Leipzig 1903 pp. 476—478.

[7] O. Weinreich loc. cit. vi. 830 ff.

[8] Id. ib. vi. 835 ff.

[9] Id. ib. vi. 837.

[10] Brunn—Bruckmann Denkm. der gr. und röm. Sculpt. pl. 660 (= my fig. 851) with text by E. Schmidt pp. 1—11, O. Weinreich in Roscher Lex. Myth. vi. 790 ff. fig. 2. Width: 1·195^{m}.

[11] E. Schmidt Archaistische Kunst in Griechenland und Rom München 1922 p. 57.

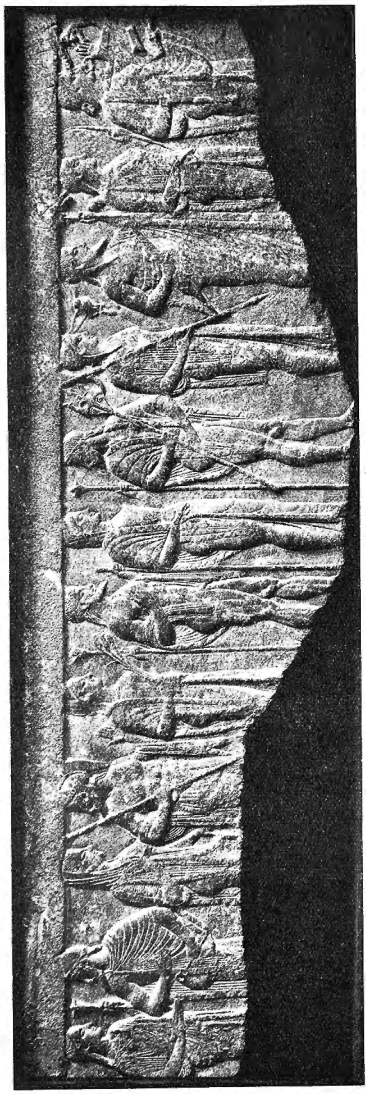

Fig. 851.

(plêktron, kithára, bay-wreath), Artemis (bow, quiver), Zeus (thunderbolt, eagle-sceptre), Athena (spear, owl, helmet, aigís); Poseidon (trident), Hera (sceptre), Hephaistos (shorter staff), Demeter (corn-ears, sceptre); Ares (spear, helmet, breastplate), Aphrodite (small oval fruit between fingers of right hand), Hermes (caduceus, pîlos), Hestia (phiále, sceptre). The twelve form three fours, the divisions between them being marked by the fact that the leader of the second and third group turns to address his immediate follower—an action repeated by the final pair. Throughout the line god alternates with goddess. But it is to be observed that Hera's place next Zeus is usurped by Athena—a variation which, as in the case of a black-figured vase already mentioned[1], points to the patriotic design of an Athenian craftsman.

The same arrangement in three fours appears five centuries later on the so-called ara Borghese in the Louvre (fig. 852, a—c)[2]. This triangular base of Pentelic marble, meant to support a candelabrum or a tripod, is embellished with two ranges of divine figures. Above we see the twelve gods grouped as follows from left to right: Zeus (thunderbolt) with Hera (sceptre, bridal veil) and Poseidon (trident) with Demeter (corn-ears?); Apollon (plêktron, kithára? —wrongly restored as a goddess[3]!) with Artemis (arrow?, quiver?, bow) and Hephaistos (pincers—again wrongly restored as a goddess!) with Athena (spear, aigís, helmet?, shield?); Ares (spear, shield, helmet?, breastplate?) with Aphrodite (dove) and Hermes (caduceus, talaria) with Hestia (veil, sceptre). Below on a larger scale are the three Charites (joining hands for the dance); the three Horai (flower, grapes, corn); the three Moirai (sceptres). The general effect is that of an archaizing santa conversazione. But it is clear that Zeus and Hera head the assembly, and that the Charites[4], the Horai[5], the Moirai[6] are all introduced in relation to Zeus.

The arrangement in fours underlies also the grouping of the twelve on the puteal Albani, a well-mouth of Roman date formerly in the Albani collection but now in the Capitoline Museum (fig. 853)[7]. This relief, of Greek marble but Roman design[8], divides the gods into two unequal companies, eight moving towards the right, four towards the left. On the one hand we have Zeus (thunderbolt, sceptre), Hera (stephánе, bridal veil), Athena (aigís, helmet, spear),

[1] Supra p. 1049 n. 1.

[2] Clarac Mus. de Sculpt. ii. 1. 170—181 pls. 172—174 figs. 11—17 = Reinach Rép. Stat. i. 65 f., Müller—Wieseler Denkm. d. alt. Kunst i. 8 pl. 12, 43 and 44, pl. 13, 45 (=my fig. 852, a, c, b), Fröhner Sculpt. du Louvre i. 3 ff. no. 1. Height: 2·089^{m}.

[3] O. Jahn in the Ber. sächs. Gesellsch. d. Wiss. Phil.-hist. Classe 1868 p. 193 pl. 5, 1—3 published sketches of the base, made by Pighius c. 1500 A.D., which show the figures without the misleading alterations. A. Baumeister in his Denkm. iii. 2137 with figs. 2394—2396 inserts the sketches of Pighius into the drawings of Müller—Wieseler.

[4] Supra i. 155, ii. 232 n. 0 fig. 160, iii. 955.

[5] Supra ii. 37 n. 1, 94 n. 2, 232 n. 0, 372 f., 1138 n. 5, iii. 955.

[6] Supra ii. 231 n. 8, 1138 n. 5.

[7] Stuart Jones Cat. Sculpt. Mus. Capit. Rome p. 106 ff. Galleria no. 31 b pl. 29 (six photographs, each showing two deities), Müller—Wieseler Denkm. d. alt. Kunst ii. 137 ff. pl. 18, 197 (=my fig. 853), W. Helbig Führer durch die öffentlichen Sammlungen klassischer Altertümer in Rom[3] Leipzig 1912 i. 431 ff. no. 783 (who notes that, according to old drawings, the present restored head of Aphrodite should have been looking backwards to link up with the other company), O. Weinreich in Roscher Lex. Myth. vi. 798 f. with fig. 4. Height: 0·493^{m}.

[8] E. Schmidt Archaistische Kunst in Griechenland und Rom München 1922 p. 25 f. ('flavische Zeit ist mir das wahrscheinlichste, hadrianische das späteste mögliche Datum').

a b c

Fig. 852.

Fig. 853.

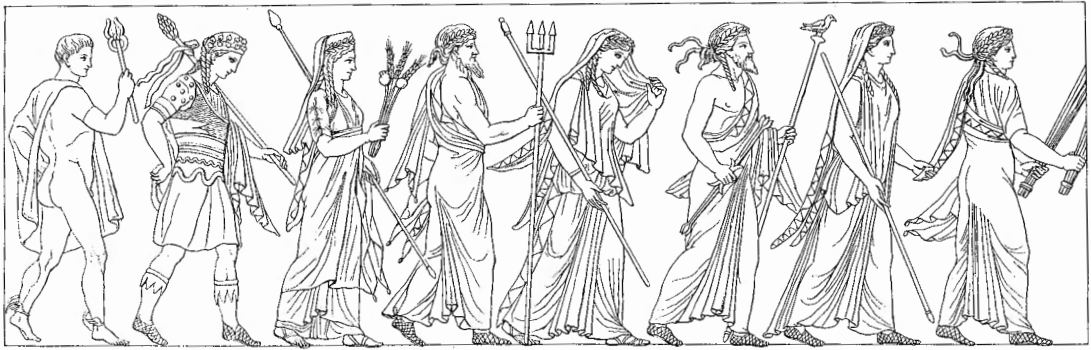

Fig. 854.

Herakles (lion-skin, club, bow), Apollon (phêktron, lyre), Artemis (bow), Ares (breastplate, helmet, shield, greaves), Aphrodite (bud, flower); on the other hand, Hephaistos (double axe), Poseidon (trident, dolphin), Hermes (pétasos, winged caduceus, goat), Hestia? (sceptre).

Not three fours, but four threes, was the distribution of the twelve on the so-called ara Albani, a quadrangular base of marble still in the Villa Albani (fig. 855)[1]. Three slabs only of this relief are extant. They represent a procession of deities passing from left to right—Artemis (torches), Leto?[2] (sceptre), Zeus (thunderbolt, eagle-sceptre), Hera (stephánе, sceptre, bridal veil), Poseidon (trident), Demeter (poppies and corn-ears, sceptre), Dionysos (nebrís restored as breastplate, thýrsos), Hermes (caduceus, talaria). But these figures were not all. A fragment of drapery to be seen in front of Artemis' right knee (fig. 855, c) makes it probable that Apollon, chanting, originally led the way. And a forearm visible behind Hermes (fig. 855, a) proves that he was followed by another deity, possibly Hestia. It seems likely that the canonical number was completed by the presence of two more gods on the missing slab.

J. G. Zoega[3] was the first to suggest that this monument showed the wedding of Zeus and Hera. His opinion was adopted by F. G. Welcker[4], who noted the wreaths worn by all the extant figures, and met P. A. Visconti's objection that Zeus and Hera appear on separate slabs by the conjecture that the procession was designed for a circular, not a quadrangular, base. K. Wernicke[5] too endorses Zoega's view, though with some hesitation. But W. Amelung[6] finds this explanation far from convincing. No doubt a well-mouth so decorated would be suitable enough in a private house: the wedding of Zeus and Hera was the prototype of all weddings[7]. Nevertheless it would be safer to conclude [1] Welcker Alt. Denkm. ii. 14—26 pl. 1, 1, Overbeck Gr. Kunstmyth. Hera p. 174 ff. Atlas pl. 10, 29 a—c, Müller—Wieseler—Wernicke Ant. Denkm. i. 18 ff. pl. 1, 9, Reinach Rép. Reliefs iii. 129 no. 1, W. Helbig op. cit.[3] ii. 458 f. no. 1930, O. Weinreich loc. cit. vi. 800. My fig. 855, a—c is from photographs of the cast at Cambridge. Height: 0·65^{m}.

The face of Hera has been retouched, that of Demeter more seriously altered. The head and right arm of Hermes, the face and right arm of Dionysos, perhaps also the legs of the latter, are modern. Hermes was originally bearded; and Dionysos wore, not a breastplate, but a nebrís over his short chitôn. The bird on the sceptre of Zeus is not a cuckoo, as G. Zoega thought, but an eagle.

[2] See, however, Müller—Wieseler—Wernicke op. cit. i. 19 'Hier, unmittelbar vor dem Brautpaar, ist die Stelle der Brautmutter; man hat daher entweder auf Rhea oder Tethys (als Pflegemutter) gedeutet; der Gedanke an Leto (weil sie den Mantelzipfel der Artemis fasst) ist entschieden zu verwerfen, solche in dieser Klasse von Reliefs typischen Züge sind inhaltlich ohne Bedeutung.'

[3] G. Zoega Li bassirilievi antichi di Roma Roma 1808 ii. 251—257 pl. 101.

[4] F. G. Welcker 'Hochzeit des Zeus und der Hera' in the Rhein. Mus. 1842 i. 420 ff. = id. Alt. Denkm. ii. 14 ff. pl. 1, 1.

[5] Müller—Wieseler—Wernicke op. cit. i. 18 ff. pl. 1, 9.

[6] W. Amelung in W. Helbig op. cit.[3] ii. 459: 'Doch ist die Deutung auf den Hochzeitzug des Zeus und der Hera keineswegs zwingend.'

[7] Diod. 5. 73 προθύουσι δὲ πρότερον ἅπαντες τῷ Διὶ τῷ Τελείῳ καὶ Ἥρᾳ Τελείᾳ διὰ τὸ τούτους ἀρχηγοὺς γεγονέναι καὶ πάντων εὑρετάς, Dion. Hal. ars rhet. 2. 2 καὶ ὅτι οὗτοι (sc. οἱ θεοί) οἱ εὑρόντες καὶ δείξαντες τοὺς γάμους τοῖς ἀνθρώποις· Ζεὺς γὰρ καὶ Ἥρα, πρῶτοι ζευγνύντες τε καὶ συνδυάζοντες· οὕτω τοι ὁ μὲν καὶ Πατὴρ καλεῖται πάντων, ἡ δὲ Ζυγία ἀπὸ τοῦ ζευγνύναι τὸ θῆλυ τῷ ἄρρενι. Cp. Aisch. Ἐπίγονοι frag. 55 Nauck[2] ap. schol. Pind. Isthm. 6. 10 and see also schol. Aristoph. thesm. 973.

a b c

Fig. 855.

that the twelve gods are here portrayed simply as a divine team arriving[1] to bless the home of their worshippers. They are the plastic counterpart of the painted twelve found more than once at Pompeii[2] (figs. 856, 857). It may be doubted whether their religious significance was much greater than that of our own Apostle-spoons.

(10) The Hierὸs Gámos in the Far West.

There is no reason to think that the myth of the hierὸs gámos was ever located at Athens[3]. Athenian poets do indeed occasionally refer to such a myth. Sophokles speaks of the Gardens of Zeus and their proverbial felicity[4], Aristophanes of the Plain of Zeus and the bridal bed towards which at the triumphant close of his great comedy the birds wing their way[5]. But the home

W. H. Roscher Juno und Hera Leipzig 1875 p. 75 n. 0 (=id. in his Lex. Myth. i. 2100) 'Nach den Worten des Lex. rhet. p. 670, 28 Pors. [on which source consult W. Christ Geschichte der griechischen Litteratur[6] München 1924 ii. 2. 876 f.] οἱ γαμοῦντες ποιοῦσι τῷ Διὶ καὶ τῇ Ἥρᾳ ἱεροὺς γάμους scheint man jede Hochzeit als eine Art Hierosgamos aufgefasst zu haben.' But?

[1] Cp. e.g. Plaut. Epid. 610 f. si undecim deos praeter sese secum adducat Iuppiter,| ita non omnes ex cruciatu poterunt eximere Epidicum.

[2] (1) On the outer wall of a corner-house, where the Vicolo dei dodici iddii runs into the Strada dell' Abbondanza (Reg. viii. 3) (E. Gerhard in the Ann. d. Inst. 1850 xxii. 206—214 pl. K, Helbig Wandgem. Camp. p. 5 f. no. 7, J. Overbeck Pompeji Leipzig 1884 p. 244, Müller—Wieseler—Wernicke Ant. Denkm. i. 62 ff. pl. 6, 2 (=my fig. 856), A. Mau Pompeii its Life and Art[2] trans. F. W. Kelsey New York 1902 p. 236, Reinach Rép. Peint. Gr. Rom. p. 5 no. 2, A. Mau Führer durch Pompeji[6] Leipzig 1928 p. 120). The gods, standing between two bay-trees, are—from left to right—Vesta (cup (not apple), sceptre, ass), Diana (spear, bow and arrows, fawn), Apollo (cithara), Ceres (corn-wreath, torch), Minerva (helmet, spear, shield), Iupiter apparently of youthful beardless type (sceptre), Iuno (sceptre), Volcanus of beardless type (pileus, hammer, tongs), Venus Pompeiana (modius, small branch?, sceptre, rudder?), Mars (helmet, breastplate, greaves, shield), Neptunus (trident), Mercurius (winged pétasos, talaria, purse, winged caduceus). Beneath the twelve and under their protection was the painting of an altar set out with various fruits and approached by two snakes (beards, crests, forked tongues) with a background of bay-bushes.

(2) On the outer wall of a house in the Strada dell' Abbondanza (Reg. ix. 11) (M. Della Corte in the Not. Scavi 1911 p. 417 ff. figs. 1, 2, 2*a*, R. Delbrueck in the Jahrb. d. kais. deutsch. arch. Inst. 1913 xxxviii Arch. Anz. p. 162 with fig. 17, Reinach Rép. Peint. Gr. Rom. p. 6 no. 2, A. Mau Führer durch Pompeji[6] Leipzig 1928 p. 133 fig. 62, F. Saxl Mithras Berlin 1931 p. 75 n. 4 with pl. 30 fig. 165 (=my fig. 857), O. Weinreich in Roscher Lex. Myth. vi. 808 with fig. 5). The gods, standing en face between two (?) Corinthian pillars, are—from left to right—Iupiter (sceptre, thunderbolt), Iuno (stephánе, veil, patera, sceptre), Mars (Oscan helmet, breastplate, spear, round shield, balteus, sword?), Minerva (crested Corinthian helmet, Gorgóneion, patera, spear, round shield), Hercules (lion-skin, balteus, skýphos, club), Venus (veil, winged Cupid), Mercurius (purse, caduceus), Proserpina (modius, sceptre), Volcanus of juvenile type (pileus, hammer), Ceres (corn-wreath, torch), Apollo (bow, quiver, plectrum, lyre), Diana (crown, bow, quiver, patera, sceptre). Adjoining this group is an altar on which were found charcoal and cinders, remains of the last offering, and above it the painting of a sacrifice by the vicomagistri.

[3] Supra p. 1047.

[4] Soph. Ion frag. 297 Nauck[2], 320 Jebb (cited supra ii. 1021).

[5] Aristoph. av. 1758 (cited supra ii. 1021, iii. 59).

Fig. 856.

Fig. 857.

of Zeus is placed in the far west—a sunset fancy, for which mortals sigh in vain. Thus Euripides in his Hippólytos makes a chorus of Troezenian women, fain to escape from the troubles of this life, exclaim:

O to win to the strand where the apples are growing
Of the Hesperid chanters kept in ward,
Where the path over Ocean purple-glowing
By the Sea's Lord is to the seafarer barred!
O to light where Atlas hath aye in his keeping
The bourn twixt earth and the heavens bestarred,
Where the fountains ambrosial sunward are leaping
By the couches where Zeus in his halls lieth sleeping,
Where the bounty of Earth the life-bestowing
The bliss of the Gods ever higher is heaping![1]

The myth here touched upon is set out more fully by Pherekydes, the logographer of Leros, who is called an Athenian[2] also, probably because he spent most of his life at Athens. When Zeus married Hera,—he says[3]—the gods brought wedding-gifts to the bride. Among them came Ge, bearing boughs of golden apples. Hera, astonished at the sight, bade plant the boughs in her garden[4] hard by Mount Atlas. But Atlas' virgin daughters, the Hesperides, kept taking of the apples; so Hera set a monstrous snake to guard the tree. This snake was slain by Herakles and translated to the stars by Hera[5].

Pherekydes' tale gives prominence to Ge; and it is to be observed that a Pindaric fragment[6], our oldest source for a marriage of Zeus in the remote west, mentions as his consort, not Hera at all, but Themis—a goddess expressly identified with Ge both in the poetry of Aischylos and in the official nomenclature of Athens[7].

(11) Inferences concerning the Hierὸs Gámos.

We have now passed in review the evidence, both literary and monumental, for the hierὸs gámos of Zeus and Hera. Two points emerge and must be emphasised.

[1] Eur. Hipp. 742—751 trans. A. S. Way.

[2] Souid. s.v. Φερεκύδης, on which see W. Christ Geschichte der griechischen Litteratur[6] München 1912 i. 454 f. and W. Schmid—O. Stählin Geschichte der griechischen Literatur München 1929 i. 1. 710 ff. Supra p. 455.

[3] Pherekyd. frag. 33 a (Frag. hist. Gr. i. 79 f. Müller)=frag. 16 c (Frag. gr. Hist. i. 65 Jacoby) ap. pseudo-Eratosth. catast. 3, Hyg. poet. astr. 2. 3, Myth. Vat. 1. 106, 2. 161, schol. Caes. Germ. Aratea p. 382, 21 ff. Eyssenhardt. Cp. the longer account in Pherekyd. frag. 33 (Frag. hist. Gr. i. 78 f. Müller)=frag. 16 a and frag. 17 (Frag. gr. Hist. i. 65 f. Jacoby). See also Athen. 83 c (supra ii. 1021).

[4] This garden is called "Ηρης λειμών (Kallim. h. Artem. 164) or θεῶν κῆπος (Pherekyd. frag. 33 a (supra n. 3)). It is identical with the Ὠκεανοῦ κῆπος, where the Clouds array their dance (Aristoph. nub. 271). Cp. τοὺς Σελήνης καὶ Ἀφροδίτης λειμῶνας (Plout. amat. 20).

Here grew the trefoil ὠκύθοον (Hesych. s.v.), used as fodder by the fawns of Artemis and the horses of Zeus (Kallim. h. Artem. 163 ff.).

[5] Supra p. 489 figs. 318 and 319.

[6] Supra ii. 37 n. 1.

[7] Supra ii. 176 n. 1.

On Themis as 'an emanation from Ge' see Farnell Cults of Gk. States iii. 12 ff. Cp. also Preller—Robert Gr. Myth. i. 475 ff., Gruppe Gr. Myth. Rel. pp. 101 n. 5 ff., 148 n. 5 f., 1066, 1080 n. 6, 1094, 1166 n. 13.

In the first place, the great bulk of the evidence is comparatively late. If we except one passage in the Iliad, neither ritual nor myth is attested before the fifth century B.C. Moreover, the single exception is itself certainly an addition, probably a late addition, to the Iliad. W. Leaf and M. A. Bayfield assigned it to the third and latest stratum of the poem, a stratum which they date between 1000 and 800 B.C.[1] Professor G. Murray, who lays stress on the 'Milesian' tone of the episode, speaks of it as 'that late Homeric story of the Outwitting of Zeus' and refers it to a period when 'the Epos as a form of living and growing poetry was doomed[2].' However that may be, not a single allusion to the sacred marriage of Zeus with Hera is forthcoming from the Homeric hymns or Hesiod, from Pindar or the other lyrical poets, one indirect reference only from Aischylos[3], none from Sophokles, none from Herodotos, Thoukydides, Demosthenes, Xenophon, Platon, none even from Pausanias. Nor is the scene represented by monuments of any kind belonging to the genuinely archaic period of Greek civilisation. This almost complete absence of early evidence raises a suspicion that the hierὸs gámos was of comparatively recent introduction.

In the second place, this suspicion is deepened by the fact that here and there, even where the hierὸs gámos is attested, Zeus seems to have had an older partner, who was not Hera, or Hera an older partner, who was not Zeus. For example, we have seen reason to think that on Mount Kithairon Leto Mychía or Nychía was paired with Zeus before the arrival of Hera[4], and that in the myth of Zeus' western marriage Themis, not Hera, was the original bride[5]. A kýlix by the painter Oltos strangely ignored Hera in favour of Hestia in a scene perhaps reminiscent of the hierὸs gámos[6]. At Argos the evidence pointed to a marriage of Hera, but did not prove that her original consort was Zeus[7]; while at Knossos it was practically certain that the ritual marriage of Zeus and Hera had been preceded by a ritual marriage of a sun-god and a moon-goddess in bovine form[8].

In short, the case for Hera as essentially and ab origine the bride of Zeus is neither proven nor probable.

[1] The Iliad of Homer ed. W. Leaf and M. A. Bayfield London 1898 ii pp. xx, xxiii, 329 ff.

[2] G. Murray The Rise of the Greek Epic Oxford 1907 p. 242 ff. Id. ib.[3] Oxford 1924 p. 275 still speaks of 'that late Homeric story of the Tricking of Zeus.'

[3] Supra p. 1060 n. 7.

[4] Supra p. 1042.

[5] Supra p. 1064.

[6] Supra p. 1049 n. 2 (2), fig. 843.

[7] Supra p. 1045.

[8] Supra i. 523, iii. 1032.

ADDENDA

i. 2 n. 2. For the blue-black eyebrows of Zeus cp. Apul. met. 6. 7 nec renuit Iovis caerulum supercilium. See also S. Marinatos in the 'Αρχ. Ἐφ. 1927—1928 p. 198 f. (Mesopotamian technique with inlay of lapis lazuli or blue paste), J. L. Myres Who were the Greeks? Berkeley, California 1930 p. 192 f. (normal colouring of Mediterranean physique).

i. 7 n. 2. Add Anth. Plan. 121. 3 ἦν ἐφορῶσιν ἀπ' αἰθέρος αἱ Διὸς αὐγαί.

i. 15 n. 6. A parallel to the line of Ennius is the fine passage in Pacuvius Chryses frag. 6 (Trag. Rom. frag. p. 99 f. Ribbeck) ap. Varr. de ling. Lat. 5. 17, Cic. de nat. deor. 2. 91, de div. 1. 131, Non. Marc. p. 209, 8 f. Lindsay.

i. 18 n. 3. See now the dissertation of H. Oppermann De Jove Panamaro Bonn 1919—1920, revised and partly rewritten in his Zeus Panamaros Giessen 1924 pp. 1—94, J. Hatzfeld 'Inscriptions de Panamara' in the Bull. Corr. Hell. 1927 li. 57—122 (text of 139 inscriptions), P. Roussel 'Les mystères de Panamara' ib. pp. 123—137 (summary by E. H. Heffner in the Am. Journ. Arch. 1928 xxxii. 517 f.). P. Roussel 'Le miracle de Zeus Panamaros' in the Bull. Corr. Hell. 1931 lv. 70—116 with pls. 5 and 6 restores a long inscription, from the wall of the temple, recording how Zeus with sudden flame and fog repulsed troops (perhaps those of Q. Labienus in 41—40 B.C. (Dion Cass. 48. 26)) attacking his sanctuary (summarised by P. Roussel in the Rev. Ét. Gr. 1932 xlv. 223 and by D. M. Robinson in the Am. Journ. Arch. 1932 xxxvi. 539). When the enemy attempted a night-surprise, 7 [---ὁ θεὸς μετὰ φω]τὸς φλόγα πολλὴν [α]ὐτοῖς ἐνεί̣νεγκεν ὥσ[τε---]. When they resumed operations the next day, 10 [---συνέβη αὐτοῖς περιχυθῆναι ὁμίχλην β]αθεῖαν ὥστε τοὺς μὲν μετὰ τοῦ θεοῦ μ[αχομένους λαθεῖν αὐτοὺς] | [---κύ]κλῳ δὲ περὶ τὸ μέρο]ς τοῦ χωρίου καθ' ὃ προ[σβάλλειν ἐπεχείρησαν] | [ἐπιγένεσθαι χειμῶνα μέγαν καὶ καταρραγῆναι βροντὰς συνεχεῖς κ]αὶ διαΐσσειν [ἀστρα]πάς· διὰ τ[αῦτα δὴ δεινῶς κατεπλάγησαν] | [οἱ πολέμιοι· καὶ κραυγὴ πολλὴ ἦν τῶν βοηθ]ούντων τῶν μὲν ΙΧΩΡΗΝ (so G. Cousin) φωνούντω[ν], ἔτι δὲ ἀναβοών[των] μεγάλῃ τῇ φωνῇ μέγαν εἶναι Δία Πανάμαρον, | κ.τ.λ. A third and final assault was defeated by the shouting of unseen helpers and the baying of supernatural hounds: 24 [---κ]ύκλῳ δὲ αὐτῶν τὸ χωρίον πολιορκούντων, ἀλαλαγμός τε ἀντήχησεν ὡς βοηθείας | [ἐκ τῆς πόλεως ἐπιγεινομένης, καίπερ οὐδε]νὸς φαινομένου, καὶ κυνῶν ὑλαγμὸς ἐγείνετο πολὺς ὡς προσπλ[ε]κομένων τοῖς προσβάλλουσιν | κ.τ.λ. A. Laumonier in the Bull. Corr. Hell. 1934 lviii. 336 f. no. 20 with fig. (Stratonikeia) Δομέστεχος | Διεὶ Παναμάρῳ | καὶ Ἑκάτῃ on a marble slab above a lion-head (fountain-jet?) in relief.

i. 23 n. 6. On hair-offering see further L. Sommer Das Haar in Religion und Aberglauben der Griechen Münster i. W. 1912 pp. 1—86, G. Wilke 'Ein altgermanisches Haaropfer' in Mannus 1924 xvi. 64 ff., G. Kossinna 'Zum Haaropfer' 112, R. Moschkau 'Nachtrag zum germanischen Haaropfer' ib. 1925 xvii. 121, H. Lewy 'Haarscheren als "rite de passage"' in the Archiv f. Rel. 1927 xxv. 203 f., H. Bächtold-Stäubli in the Handwörterbuch des deutschen Aberglaubens Berlin—Leipzig 1930/1931 iii. 1239—1288 ('Haar'), Sir A. J. Evans The Palace of Minos London 1935 iv. 2. 475 ff.

S. Aurigemma Il R. Museo di Spina Ferrara 1935 p. 116 pl. 62 publishes a fine Etruscan statuette, of bronze washed in silver, which represents a boy, clad in a chlamys, severing a long tress of his hair with his sword.

i. 26 n. 10. Eustath. in Dionys. per. epist. p. 209, 14 ff. Müller καὶ Ζεὺς μὲν ὁ παρ' Ὁμήρῳ, τοὺς περὶ Ὄλυμπον θώκους ἐμπρέπων αἰθέριος, αὐτῇ γαίῃ αὐτῇ τε θαλάσσῃ τὰ κάτω μεταστοιχεῖσαι βρενθύεται, αὐτὸς δὲ μὴ ἂν ἐκνυσθῆναι κάτω ἀλαζονεύεται· κ.τ.λ., id. in Il. p. 1057, 49 Ζεῦ ἄνα Δωδωναῖε, τουτέστιν αἰθέριε καὶ περίγειε.

i. 27. A. Plassart in the Bull. Corr. Hell. 1926 l. 408 no. 22 records a dedication from Thespiai [Κα]λλίμαχος [Διὸς?] | Αἰθρίου | [ἱ]αρεὺς Ἀθάν[αι].

i. 34 n. 3. On the pediment of the temple of Iupiter Capitolinus see now A. M. Colini in the Bull. Comm. Arch. Comun. di Roma 1925 liii. 160—200 figs. 1—8 and pl.

i. 38. The heads hanging on the palace-wall appear also on a sarcophagus-lid found in Rome and published by R. Paribeni in the Not. Scav. 1926 p. 295 f. pl. 8, a.

i. 41 ff. See further the careful dissertation of A. Schlachter Der Globus: seine Entstehung und Verwendung in der Antike (ΣΤΟΙΧΕΙΑ viii) Leipzig—Berlin 1927 pp. 1—118.

i. 46. Cp. R. Browning The Bishop orders his Tomb at Saint Praxed's Church 47 ff. 'So, let the blue lump poise between my knees, | Like God the Father's globe on both his hands | Ye worship in the Jesu Church so gay.'

i. 47. A gilded bronze statuette with eyes of silver inlay, formerly in the Somzée Collection, represented Zeus enthroned with his left foot resting on a high footstool, restored as a large globe (A. Furtwängler Sammlung Somzée Müncben 1897 p. 58 f. no. 87 pl. 34, Reinach Rép. Stat. ii. 780 no. 1).

i. 52 n. 7. R. M. Dawkins in Folk-Lore 1924 xxxv. 223 n. 29 f. deals with this apple as the 'orb of dominion.'

i. 53 with fig. 31. E. Lattes Le iscrizioni paleolatine dei fittili e dei bronzi di provenienza etrusca Milano 1892 pp. 104 f., 111, id. Saggi e appunti intorno alla iscrizione etrusca della mummia Milano 1894 p. 24 f. regards the Orvieto cone as an altar for libation to the dead, and reads Tinia. tinscvil | s. asi. sacni = Iovis diovila (haec est) super ara sancta.

i. 53 f. On the stone of Terminus see also E. Samter 'Die Entwickelung des Terminuskultes' in the Archiv f. Rel. 1913 xvi. 137—144 (with which I do not wholly agree: supra p. 441), Louise A. Holland in the Am. Journ. Arch. 1933 xxxvii. 553 n. 1, and Agnes Kirsopp Lake 'Lapis Capitolinus' in Class. Philol. 1936 xxxi. 72 f. (summarised in the Class. Quart. 1936 xxx. 219).

i. 53 n. 1 Grabphalli. Add F. Schachermeyr in the Ath. Mitth. 1916 xli. 377 (Lydia, Karia, Phrygia?), E. S. Hartland in J. Hastings Encyclopædia of Religion and Ethics Edinburgh 1917 ix. 825[b] (Scandinavia), G. W. Elderkin in the Am. Journ. Arch. 1933 xxxvii. 396 (Lydia, raising a series of interesting philological possibilities), H. Shetelig—H. Falk Scandinavian Archaeology trans. E. V. Gordon Oxford 1937 p. 247 f. (Scandinavia), A. T. Curle in Antiquity 1937 xi. 352 ff. pls. 5—8 (British Somaliland, cp. Galla provinces of southern Ethiopia).

i. 60 with fig. 36. A complete publication of this important sarcophagus is now available, F. Gerke Der Sarkophag des Iunius Bassus Berlin 1936 pp. 1—37 with 32 plates.

i. 65. S. Luria 'Asteropos' in the Berl. Philol. Woch. Juni 19, 1926 p. 701 f. makes Asteropos the ephor (Plout. v. Kleom. 10) no proper name but an old religious epithet of the ephor as such (cp. Plout. v. Agid. 11 ἔφοροι...πρὸς οὐρανὸν ἀποβλέποντες). V. Ehrenberg 'Asteropos' ib. Jan. 1, 1927 p. 27 ff. rightly demurs.

i. 66 n. 5. See further J. van der Vliet 'Quo discrimine dei et homines inter se dignoscantur' in Mnemosyne 1901 xxix. 207 f. and S. A. Naber 'Deorum coronae' ib. 1901 xxix. 304—306.

i. 67 n. 3. W. R. Halliday The Greek Questions of Plutarch Oxford 1928 p. 172 doubts my explanation of Plutarch's human δλαφοι. But such usages are very ancient and wide-spread. Engraved and painted on the rock-wall of a cave at Les Trois-Frères near S. Girons (Ariège) is a male figure of the middle Magdalenian period. He has human hands and feet, and a full beard, but hairy animal ears, stag's antlers, and an equine tail (H. Obermaier Fossil Man in Spain Yale Univ. Press 1924 p. 233 fig. 103, M. Hoernes Urgeschichte des bildenden Kunst in Europa[3] Wien 1925 p. 668 ff. fig. 1, R. de Saint-Périer L'Art préhistorique (Époque paléolithique) Paris 1932 p. 57 pl. 49, 6).

Stag-mummers in south Gaul c. 500 A.D. are attested by Caesarius of Arles and Eligius of Noyon. Caesarius serm. 130. 1 says: 'Quid enim est tam demens, quam virilem sexum in formam mulieris turpi habitu commutare? quid tam demens, quam deformare faciem et vultus induere, quos ipsi etiam daemones expavescunt? quid tam demens, quam incompositis motibus et inpudicis carminibus vitiorum laudes inverecunda delectatione cantare, indui ferino habitu et capreae aut cervo similem fieri, ut homo ad imaginem Dei et similitudinem factus sacrificium daemonum fiat?' (xxxix. 2003 Migne), id. ib. 130. 2: 'Quicumque ergo in Calendis Januariis quibuscumque miseris hominibus sacrilego ritu insanientibus potius quam ludentibus aliquam humanitatem dederint, non hominibus sed daemonibus se dedisse cognoscant. Et ideo si in peccatis eorum participes esse non vultis, cervulum sive caniculam (so E. Maass for anniculam, anulas, agniculam codd.) aut aliqua quaelibet portenta ante domos vestras venire non permittatis...' (xxxix. 2004 Migne). Eligius de rectitudine catholicae conversationis 5 follows suit: 'Nullus in Calendis Januarii nefanda et ridiculosa, vetulas aut cervulos aut <canes vena>ticos (so I would read for jocticos, jotticos, jotricos codd.), faciat,...' (xl. 1172 Migne). E. Maass in the Jahresh. d. oest. arch. Inst. 1907 x. 108 ff. infers that at Arelate on the first of January three mummers represented an old woman, a stag, and a hound—in short, the masque of Aktaion, whose story as portrayed by Polygnotos at Delphoi involved precisely these three figures (Paus. 10. 30. 5). J. A. MacCulloch The Religion of the ancient Celts Edinburgh 1911 p. 260 f.

more wisely postulates a native origin for the custom. And R. D. Barnett in Folk-Lore 1929 xl. 393 f. does good service by collecting allusions to it and by noting that a last trace of it is 'the running of the deer' in the carol The Holly and the Ivy. A. Nicoll Masks Mimes and Miracles London 1931 p. 165 fig. 115 shows a performance of such masked dancers (stag, hare, fox, old woman, etc.) from a fourteenth-century miniature in the Bodleian MS. 264 of Li Romans d'Alixandre.

J. G. McKay 'The Deer-Cult and the Deer-Goddess Cult of the Ancient Caledonians' in Folk-Lore 1932 xliii. 144—174 breaks fresh ground and raises a whole crop of important contentions (succinctly stated on pp. 167—169).

My own interpretation of the 'island stones' as representing masked dancers (Journ. Hell. Stud. 1894 xiv. 133 ff. 'The Cult of the Stag') was accepted by Sir W. Ridgeway The Early Age of Greece Cambridge 1931 ii. 484—487 and has of late been vigorously defended by E. Herkenrath 'Mykenische Kultszenen. ii. Masken' in the Am. Journ. Arch. 1937 xli. 420—422. J. L. Myres The Metropolitan Museum of Art: Handbook of the Cesnola Collection of Antiquities from Cyprus New York 1914 p. 150 f. publishes two statuettes of votaries in Assyrian style, to be dated c. 700—650 B.C.: no. 1029 wears a bull's head as a mask; no. 1030 wears a stag's head, which he is on the point of removing. Cp. Mendel Cat. Sculpt. Constantinople ii. 487 f. no. 688 a limestone slab with the barbaric relief of a [κυνο]κέφαλος or [λυκο]κέφαλος on one side, that of a bear-headed man on the other.

i. 68 n. 1. The Hesychasts of Mt Athos in the fourteenth century held that divine light shone about the summit of Mt Tabor (S. V. Troitsky in J. Hastings Encyclopædia of Religion and Ethics Edinburgh 1913 vi. 427[b]).

i. 70. C. T. Seltman Greek Coins London 1933 p. 165 pl. 35, 8 shows that Chari- and Olym- must be the names of magistrates, not engravers.

i. 70 ff. On the human sacrifice to Zeus Lýkaios see now F. Schwenn Die Menschenopfer bei den Griechen und Römern Giessen 1915 pp. 20—25 ('Der "Wolfsgott" hatte anfangs mit dem bellenischen Zeus nichts zu tun; später erst wurde Lykaios ein Beiname des Zeus; es war der—allerdings wohl noch spätere—Ausdruck dieser Vermischung, wenn der "wölfische Zeus" das Symbol des Adlers mit übernahm. Der Priester, der sich im Kindesopfer mit dem Gott selbst vereinigt hatte, war selbst wie der Gott ein "Wolf"?), O. Kern Die Religion der Griechen Berlin 1926 i. 15, 187 (follows Schwenn), Lily Weiser-Aall in the Archiv f. Rel. 1933 xxx. 224 ('Lykaios bedeutet: der Wölfische; die Ähnlichkeit mit der Erzählung der Völsungasaga [Kap. 8] fällt auf').

i. 81 n. 0. Add J. A. MacCulloch 'Lycanthropy' in J. Hastings Encyclopædia of Religion and Ethics Edinburgh 1915 viii. 206[a]—220[a], M. Schuster 'Der Werwolf und die Hexen. Zwei Schauermärchen bei Petronius' [Petron. sat. 61. 5—62. 14 and 63. 1—64. 1] in Wiener Studien 1930 xlviii. 149—178, W. Kroll 'Etwas vom Werwolf' ib. 1937 lv. 168—172.

i. 87 n. 6. The origin of the sceptre is discussed by C. F. Hermann Disputatio de sceptri regii antiquitate et origine Gottingae 1851 pp. 1—17, and more recently by A. Hug in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. ii A. 368 ff., C. Borchling in F. Saxl Vorträge der Bibliothek Warburg: Vorträge 1923—1924 Leipzig—Berlin 1926 p. 235 ff., F. J. M. de Waele The Magic Staff or Rod in Graeco-Italian Antiquity The Hague 1927 p. 117 ff.

i. 100. Ólympos, a pre-Greek word for 'mountain' (C. Theander in Eranos 1915 xv. 127—136, M. P. Nilsson Homer and Mycenae London 1933 p. 269). R. J. H. Jenkins in a valuable, but unpublished, dissertation on The Religions and Cults of Olympia during the Bronze Age Cambridge 1932 p. 71 n. 4 (MS.) conjectures that Ὄλυμπος was 'the Early Anatolian for "Mountain,"' and that at Olympia it was Early Helladic or Early Macedonian (two branches, south and north, of the same race).

i. 102 n. 4. D. M. Robinson in Transactions and Proceedings of the American Philological Association 1934 lxv. 103 ff. publishes an inscription, of 356 B.C., recording a treaty between Philip of Makedonia and the Chalcidians. This was to be set up by Philip (line 9) [ἐ]ν Διοι ἐς [τὸ] ἱερὸν τοῦ Διὸς τ[οῦ] Ὀλυμπίου, κ.τ.λ. Id. ib. p. 117 n. 26 speaks of the excavations at Dion.

i. 102 n. 5. Mt Carmel affords a good parallel to Mt Argaios (Tac. hist. 2. 78 est Iudaeam inter Syriamque Carmelus: ita vocant montem deumque. nec simulacrum deo aut templum—sic tradidere maiores—: ara tantum et reverentia). In Mexico and Peru the most prominent peaks were likewise objects of direct worship (E. J. Payne History of the New World called America Oxford 1892 i. 404).

i. 107. Professor G. Murray kindly pointed out to me that Anaktoteléstai should be rendered 'initiators,' not 'initiates.' Cp. W. K. C. Guthrie Orpheus and Greek Religion London 1935 p. 202 on the analogous Orpheoteléstai.

Fig. 858.

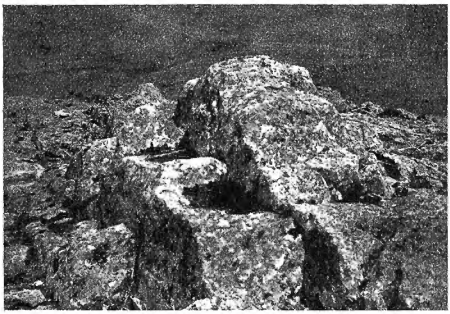

Fig. 859.

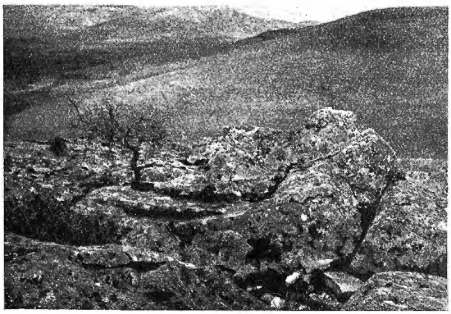

Fig. 860.

i. 107 n. 2. On the Korybantes see further J. Poerner 'De Curetibus et Corybantibus' in the Dissertationes philologicae Halenses 1913 xxii. 245—428.

i. 109. On Axieros, Axiokersa, Axiokersos consult also Margaret C. Waites 'The Deities of the Sacred Axe' in the Journ. Am. Arch. 1923 xxvii. 25—56, E. Maass in the Archiv f. Rel. 1925 xxiii. 225 f., F. W. Schelling Samothrake und Kabirische Mysterien Stuttgart 1929 pp. 1—45 ('Über die Gottheiten von Samothrake').

i. 129 n. 2. On the relief signed by Archelaos see further J. Sieveking 'Das Relief des Archelaos von Priene' in the Röm. Mitth. 1917 xxxii. 74—89, G. Lippold 'Musengruppen' ib. 1918 xxxiii. 77—80, M. Schede 'Zu Philiskos, Archelaos und den Musen' ib. 1920 xxxv. 65—82 pl. 1, G. W. Elderkin 'The Deification of Homer by Archelaos' in the Am. Journ. Arch. 1936 xl. 496—500 fig. 1.

i. 131. A. Plassart in the Bull. Corr. Hell. 1926 l. 403 f. no. 19 a base from Thespiai formerly supporting three statuettes and inscribed Ζεὺς Μνημοσύνη Ἀπόλλων.

i. 132. W. H. Roscher Omphalos Leipzig 1913 p. 48 f. argues that Archelaos was representing the omphalós of Branchidai and the Thessalian or the Mysian Olympos.

i. 134 ff. A rock-cut throne on a mountain near Temenothyrai in Lydia was taken to be that of Geryon son of Chrysaor (Paus. 1. 35. 7).

W. K. C. Guthrie in 1932 discovered, just outside a village called Selki, on Findos Tepe at the western edge of the Konieh plain, a double rock-cut throne with footstools (figs. 858, 859). Close by were two narrow rock-cut troughs, 'like couches in shape' (fig. 860). I am indebted to Mr Guthrie for the photographs here given of the thrones as seen from below and above, and of the 'couches.'

H. Lattermann and F. Hiller von Gaertringen in the Ath. Mitth. 1915 xl. 75 ff. fig. 3 and pl. 13, 2 record a rock-throne near the village of Kionia (Stymphalos). They suggest that this throne, which is cut in conglomerate over an empty grave (?)-chamber, is to be connected with the local cult of Hera Χήρα (Paus. 8. 22. 2), implying a dead Zeus as in Crete.

i. 150. The sword-dance of the Kouretes and Korybantes round the infant Zeus is discussed by L. von Schröder Mysterium und Mimus im Rigveda Leipzig 1908 p. 118, F. Kidson—M. Neal English Folk-song and Dance Cambridge 1915 p. 146 f. See, however, Gruppe Myth. Lit. 1921 p. 38: 'Es ist doch...ungleich wahrscheinlicher, dass die göttlichen Kureten und Korybanten mythische Gegenbilder zu irdischen Tänzern sind, als dass diese den Göttertanz nachahmten, wie Schröder (131 ff.) glaubt.'

i. 152. On the cult of Zeus at Synnada see also W. H. Buckler—W. M. Calder—W. K. C. Guthrie in Monumenta Asiae Minoris antiqua Manchester Univ. Press 1933 iv. 14 no. 49 pl. 19=my fig. 861 (white marble stêle of local style, c. 200 B.C., showing Zeus enthroned with thunderbolt in right hand and round object in left, votary with round object in right hand, bag or basket on left arm, and two eagles in pediment).

i. 152 fig. 125. A coin of Akmoneia with similar type is published by E. Babelon in the Rev. Num. iii Série 1891 ix. 38 f. pl. 4, 4.

i. 153 fig. 129. An interesting variant of this coin is given by C. Bosch in the Jahrb. d. Deutsch. Arch. Inst. 1931 xlvi Arch. Anz. p. 452 with fig. 11.

i. 155 n. 8. Add B. P. Grenfell—A. S. Hunt The Oxyrhynchus Papyri London 1922 xv. 105 no. 1793 col. ix, 1 f. οὐκέτι γυμνὰς | παῖδας ἐν Ἡραίῳ στήσομεν Εὐρυνόμης (sc. the Charites, cp. Paus. 2. 17. 4).

i. 157 n. 3. My friend and former pupil Mr J. D. S. Pendlebury writes to me: 'The following is the story I heard in June 1935 from an old friend Kosta Kounales of Anogeia, who really does know his mountains πατουχιὰ πατουχιά as they say. It was à-propos of a small heap of stones by the Church of Holy Cross on the Nidha Plain, called locally στοῦ Σταυροῦ τὸν Τροχάλον. "They say that in Venetian times there was a prince Erotokritos who was out hunting wild boar, and one day his foot slipped as he was about to spear the boar, and his friends shot quickly with their bows to help him, but they shot him instead and they buried him here."' In view of what A. Papadakes reports concerning the tomb of Zeus at Anogeia (supra i. 163), it seems fairly certain that we have here a local modification of the belief that Zeus was a Cretan prince killed by a wild boar and buried.

i. 162 n. 1. Cp. Sir A. J. Evans The Palace of Minos London 1921 i. 154 with fig. 113 b, 1928 ii. 1. 81 f. figs. 37 and 38.

i. 169. See further Olga Rojdestvensky Le culte de saint Michel et le moyen âge latin Paris 1922 pp. 1—72 (summarised by S. Reinach in the Rev. Arch. 1922 ii. 357).

i. 181 n. 9. On horse-sacrifice in antiquity see H. M. Hubbell in Yale Classical Studies 1928 i. 181—192.

A bust of Zeus Sarapis (supra i. 188 ff.) in lapis lazuli, presented by Sir H. Howorth in 1912 to the British Museum (Brit. Mus. Cat. Gems[2] p. 368 no. 3939 fig. 94). Height 0·131[m]. A socket worked in the top of the head implies the insertion of a kálathos. The technique points to a date c. 300 A.D.

i. 187. Cp. W. H. Buckler—W. M. Calder—W. K. C. Guthrie Monumenta Asiae Minoris antiqua Manchester Univ. Press 1933 iv. 36 no. 113 (a) an altar at Kara Adili, adorned with reliefs of eagle (front), ox-head (left side), etc. and inscribed in lettering of s. ii or iii A.D. [Καρπ]ο[φ]|[όρ]ος μ[ισ]|θωτὴς Ἡ[λι]|ω καὶ Διὶ εὐ|χήν.

i. 187 n. 4. See now E. Peterson ΕΙΣ ΘΕΟΣ Göttingen 1926 pp. 139, 241, 306.

i. 192. In Bekker anecd. i. 338, 26 Ἄγος· ὁ Ζεὺς παρὰ Κυζικηνοῖς the ordo verborum demands Ἀγνός. F. W. Hasluck Cyzicus Cambridge 1910 p. 223 held that the epithet 'referred to an Avenger of Blood.'

Fig. 861.

i. 193 n. 3. W. M. Calder in the Class. Rev. 1910 xxiv. 77 ff. no. 2 (id. ib. 1924 xxxviii. 29 n. 1) published the inscription, of c. 260—270 A.D. (not of s. i), on an oblong pillar built into a house-wall at Balük-Laou and derived from a temple of Zeus at or near Sedasa (Ak-Kilisse), where Zeus was identified with the sun-god and presented with a sun-dial: Τοὺης Μ[α]|κρεῖνος ὁ | καὶ Ἀβάσκαν|τος καὶ Βάτα|σις Βρετασί|δος Ἑρμῆν | Μέγιστον | κατὰ εὐχὴν | ἐπισκευάσαν|τες σὺν ὡρο|λογήῳι ἐκ τῶ[ν] | ἰδίων (ἀν)αλωμ|άτων ἀνέστ[η]|σαν Διὶ Ἡλ[ίῳ]. Since Sedasa lay some twenty-five miles south-west of Lystra, this association of Zeus and Hermes is rightly held to illustrate Acts 14. 12. Moreover, in 1926, at Kavak near Lystra, W. H. Buckler and W. M. Calder found an altar dedicated 'to the Epēkoos and to...and to Hermes' (Class. Rev. 1926 xl. 114) and saw a bronze statuette of Hermes with a caduceus resting on his left shoulder and an eagle beside his right foot (The Manchester Guardian for Jan. 19, 1926, S. Reinach in the Rev. Arch. 1926 ii. 281)—further proof of the same association.

i. 195. Another cult-epithet of Zeus that may be of solar significance is Hesych. Φύτιος· ἥλιος. ἢ Ζεύς.

i. 196 n. 9. Mr A. S. F. Gow in a letter dated 1 July, 1917, drew my attention to Cornut. theol. 11 p. 11, 20 Lang πάντ' ἐφορᾷ Διὸς ὀφθαλμὸς καὶ πάντ' ἐπακούει.

i. 198 on the sun conceived as a wheel. Aetios plac. 2. 20. 1 (p. 348, 3 ff. Diels) Ἀναξίμανδρος κύκλον εἶναι (sc. τὸν ἥλιον) ὀκτωκαιεικοσαπλασίονα τῆς γῆς, ἁρματείῳ τροχῷ παραπλήσιον, τὴν ἀψῖδα ἔχοντα κοίλην, πλήρη πυρός, κ.τ.λ., Achilleus Tatios isag. 19 (p. 46, 20 ff. Maass) τινὲς δέ, ὧν ἐστι καὶ Ἀναξίμανδρος, φασὶ πέμπειν αὐτὸν (sc. τὸν ἥλιον) τὸ φῶς σχῆμα ἔχοντα τροχοῦ· ὥσπερ γὰρ ἐν τῷ τροχῷ κοίλη ἐστὶν ἡ πλήμνη, ἔχει δὲ ἀπ' αὐτῆς ἀνατεταμένας τὰς κνημῖδας πρὸς τὴν ἔξωθεν τῆς ἀψῖδος περιφοράν, οὕτω καὶ αὐτὸν ἀπὸ κοίλου τὸ φῶς ἐκπέμποντα τὴν ἀνάτασιν τῶν ἀκτίνων ποιεῖσθαι καὶ ἔξωθεν αὐτὰς κύκλῳ φωτίζειν, κ.τ.λ., Ennius frag. 335 Bährens ap. Isid. orig. 18. 36. 3 inde patefecit radiis rota candida caelum, Apul. met. 9. 28 cum primum rota solis lucida diem peperit.

i. 198. E. H. Sturtevant 'Centaurs and Macedonian Kings' in Class. Philol. 1926 xxi. 235—249 takes Κένταυρος (κεντ- αυρο-) to be a Thracian term for Φίλιππος.

i. 199 ff. on representations of Ixion. I am indebted to Mr A. D. Trendall for photographs of an unpublished amphora in the Museo Campano di Capua (pl. lxxv), which shows the hero on his fiery wheel.

Dimiter P. Dimitrov in the Jahrb. d. Deutsch. Arch. Inst. 1937 lii Arch. Anz. pp. 69—75 compares the British Museum mirror (supra i. 204 pl. xvii) with a Roman relief of Ixion and Tantalos in the Museum of Stara-Zagora, Bulgaria, and with an Attic red-figured sherd from the Forum Romanum (ib. figs. 1—3).

R. von Schneider in the Serta Harteliana Wien 1896 p. 281 f. with fig. (after the Bullettino di arti e curiosità veneziane 1895 iv. 39 f. fig.) notes a relief of c. 1100 A.D., found between the Duomo and the Baptistery at Torcello near Venice, in which Ixion appears stretched, face outwards, round the external circumference of a wheel. To right and left of him stand two women, in long girded attire, one with her torch raised, the other with her torch lowered.

i. 211 on the religious origin of punishments. Cp. F. Kunze 'Der Birkenbesen ein Symbol des Donar' in the Internationales Archiv für Ethnographie 1900 xiii. 130 f. ('to kiss the rod' implies its sanctity).

i. 225 n. 4 Dryas. Another parallel is the myth of Idas ('Woodman'?) as told by schol. B.D. Il. 9. 557.

Sphairos occurs as a magistrate's name on a bronze coin of Rhodes (Brit. Mus. Cat. Coins Caria, etc. p. 261 pl. 41, 4). F. Bechtel Die historischen Personennamen des Griechischen bis zur Kaiserzeit Halle a. d. S. 1917 p. 605 notes Σφαῖρος Λάκων as an Olympic victor of 640 B.C. (Euseb. chron. 1 (i. 198, 30 Schoene)).

i. 231 n. 8. P. Couissin deals with 'casques à rouelle' in the Rev. Arch. 1923 ii. 77 ff.

i. 232. Professor S. A. Cook informs me (Oct. 1, 1929) that he regards the lettering of the Gaza coin as Aramaic rather than Phoenician, on account of the H. Id. The Religion of Ancient Palestine in the light of Archaeology London 1930 p. 147 n. 1 'The lettering resembles that on the papyri of Elephantine and is rather more archaic than the jar-handles of Jericho; it is Aramaic rather than Phoenician (note the form of the h),' cp. ib. p. 186.

E. L. Sukenik in The Journal of the Palestine Oriental Society 1934 xiv. 178 ff. pl. 2 and fig. 1 cites a fourth-century silver coin, of the same Philisto-Arabian or Egypto-Arabian series, now at Jerusalem in the collection of M. Salzberger, which reads, not Yhw, but Yhd—that is Yehūd 'Judah.' He and others following his lead (e.g. W. F. Albright in the Bulletin of the American Schools of Oriental Research 1934 liii. 20—22, R. Dussaud in Syria 1935 xvi. 211 f., D. M. Robinson in the Am. Journ. Arch. 1934 xxxviii. 451) conclude that Yhd must be the true reading of the coin in the British Museum. But Professor S. A. Cook in a further letter to me (Oct. 23, 1935) asks very pertinently 'Is it natural to put a mere place-name on a coin, like "Judah"?' Any Greek numismatist would answer 'No.'

In this connexion note also the seal of 'Elishama son of Gedaliah' published by G. Dalman in the Palaestina-Jahrbuch des deutschen evangelischen Instituts für Altertumswissenschaft des Heiligen Landes zu Jerusalem 1906 ii. 44 ff. (S. A. Cook The Religion of Ancient Palestine p. 34 f. pl. 9, 1, A. T. Olmstead History of Palestine and Syria New York—London 1931 p. 528 with fig. 177). The seal shows Jehovah as a bearded god in long robe and high crown, apparently brandishing a thunderbolt in his uplifted right hand. He is seated on a throne, with a footstool, between two stands supporting seven-branched palmettes—the whole on a boat, which at stem and stern ends in a bird's head.

i. 238 ff. On Kirke's gloriole see S. Eitrem in the Class. Rev. 1921 xxxv. 22 f. The alleged Persian lab is perhaps derived from the ἐτυμολογία τοῦ ἀλφαβήτου in the et. Gud. p. 598 λάμβδα...παρὰ τὸ λάβ· λὰβ δὲ τὸ διὰ μέσου τοῦ οὐρανοῦ καὶ τῆς γῆς χάσμα λέγεται,

a

b

Amphora in the Museo ano di Capua:
Ixion on his heel.

See page 1072.

cp. Lobeck Aglaophamus ii. 1341 Ἀάβ τὸ οὐράνιον πῦρ, and see further F. Dornseiff Das Alphabet in Mystik und Magie Leipzig—Berlin 1922 p. 30 f.

P. Wolters 'Kirke' in the Ath. Mitth. 1930 lv. 209—236 pls. 14 and 15 discusses a Boeotian skýphos at Nauplia, which represents Kirke as magician, Odysseus, and three of his sailors transformed into swine.

E. Schwyzer in Indogermanische Forschungen 1920 xxxviii. 158 f. takes Αἰαίη (νῆσος) to be for ἀαλη=αὐαλη, 'die Insel der Morgenröte.' But R. B. Onians in the Cambridge University Reporter for Nov. 30, 1926 p. 454 derives Αἰαίη and Αἰήτης from Αἶα=Αἰ'α, the Hebrew or Phoenician word for 'sparrow-hawk, falcon.' See further V. Bérard Les Phéniciens et l'Odyssée Paris 1902 i. 214, 1903 ii. 261 ff. An altar at Ptolemaïs (Menshîjeh) dedicated to Ἀρβάκτει καὶ Ἱέρακι θε[ῶι] | κ.τ.λ. (Dittenherger Orient. Gr. inscr. sel. no. 52) implies that Horos was conceived as a sparrow-hawk (O. Höfer in Roscher Lex. Myth. v. 636 f.). The hawk is also an attribute of Apollon (supra i. 626 n. 0: add J. D. Beazley The Lewes House Collection of Ancient Gems Oxford 1920 p. 41 f. no. 47 pl. 3).

E. Reiss 'Studies in Superstition and Folklore vii. Homer' in the Am. Journ. Phil. 1925 xlvi. 222 ff. discusses the magic circle (pp. 222—224) and Kirke as a witch (p. 227 f.).

i. 247 n. 2. See now A. de Ridder Les bronzes antiques du Louvre Paris 1915 ii. 45 f. no. 1699 pl. 81, W. Lamb Greek and Roman Bronzes London 1929 p. 179 fig. 1.

i. 255 f. Cp. A. S. F. Gow 'ΙΥΓΞ, ΡΟΜΒΟΣ, rhombus, turbo' in the Journ. Hell. Stud. 1934 liv. 1—13 with 11 figs.

i. 259 n. 0. The fragment of Pindar has now turned up on a papyrus of s. i A.D. (B. P. Grenfell—A. S. Hunt The Oxyrhynchus Papyri London 1922 xv. 84 ff. no. 1791 pl. 3). It confirms the conjecture of Schneidewin. See also D. S. Robertson in the Class. Rev. 1929 xliii. 218.

i. 262 ἴυγγες of gold. G. Karo 'Schatz von Tiryns' in the Ath. Mitth. 1930 lv. 127 f., 138 f., pls. 30 A and 31, publishes a pair of wheels made in gold wire with four spokes of bronze covered with amber beads, and portions of a second similar pair of wheels, dating apparently from late Mycenaean times. Karo ib. p. 128 compares the 'ear-phones' of the Lady of Elche, and ib. p. 139 conjectures a northern origin for the head-gear. Is it possible, however, that the wheels were solar ἴυγγες?

i. 269 ff. on the wheel of Nemesis. H. Volkmann 'Studien zum Nemesiskult' in the Archiv f. Rel. 1928 xxvi. 296—321 with figs. 1—4 has an important collection of texts and monuments: id. ib. p. 310 n. 2 discusses the association of Nemesis with Helios and the solar symbolism of her wheel. B. Schweitzer 'Dea Nemesis Regina' in the Jahrb. d. Deutsch. Arch. Inst. 1931 xlvi. 175—246 pl. 1 f. and figs. 1—21 publishes an interesting relief at Brindisi, in which Nemesis confronts us standing on a naked human figure (summary by D. M. Robinson in the Am. Journ. Arch. 1932 xxxvi. 533). H. Herter in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. xvi. 2338—2380 devotes a long and painstaking article to the goddess, accepting many of my results, but demurring to some.

i. 270 n. 5. But H. B. Walters in the Brit. Mus. Cat. Gems[2] p. 183 no. 1696 points out that the supposed car is merely a wheel at her feet plus a fracture of the stone!

i. 271 on the wheel of Fortuna. D. M. Robinson 'The Villa of Good Fortune at Olynthos' in the Am. Journ. Arch. 1934 xxxviii. 501 ff. describes and illustrates Hellenic pebble-mosaics from the two rooms in the north-east corner (fig. 1) showing a four-spoked wheel with quadruple rim and a smaller four-spoked wheel with double rim—the whole accompanied by the inscription ΑΓΑΘΗΤΥΧΗ (fig. 2, b), also a double axe, swastika, hand (?), etc. disposed round a Macedonian square, which is lettered ΑΦΡ|ΟΔΙ|ΤΗΚ|ΑΛΗ and accompanied by a second inscription ΕΥΤΥΧΙΑΚΑΛΗ (fig. 2, a). Id. ib. p. 505 n. 1 collects literary allusions from Pind. Ol. 2. 23 f. and Soph. frag. 787 Nauck[2]=871 Jebb ap. Plout. v. Demetr. 45 (cp. frag. 575 Jebb) onwards, adding that the wheel of Fortune appears here for the first time in art.

i. 273. For A. C. Orlandos' investigation of the site at Rhamnous see his 'Note sur le sanctuaire de Némésis à Rhamnonte' in the Bull. Corr. Hell. 1924 xlviii. 305—320 with figs. 1—11 and pls. 8—12 (summarised by E. H. Heffner in the Am. Journ. Arch. 1926 xxx. 109 f.). Further study of the site by W. Zschietzschmann in the Jahrb. d. Deutsch. Arch. Inst. 1929 xliv Arch. Anz. pp. 441—451 figs. 1—4.

i. 273 on the relation of Némesis to Nemetona etc. J. Coman L'idée de la Némésis chez Eschyle Paris 1931 p. 21 f. states and criticises the theory here advanced. He accepts the first part of it, but objects to my suggestion (i. 285) of a confusion between Νέμεσις goddess 'of the Greenwood' and νέμεσις 'righteous wrath.' On p. 22 n. 2

Coman, following Boisacq, tries to find a possible link. F. Heichelheim in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. xvi. 2385 f. inclines to my view of Nemetona as akin to Némesis.

i. 276 n. 5. On ὑπερέχειν χεῖρα or χεῖρας, Hyperdexios, Hypercheirios, etc. see J. G. Leroux in the Rev. Arch. 1935 i. 260 f.

i. 283 n. 0. See further H. Mager Water Diviners and their Methods trans. A. H. Bell London 1931.

i. 285. G. Seure in the Rev. Arch. 1929 i. 81 ff. no. 286 fig. 125 publishes a plaquette (antefix?) of black terra cotta dug up at Plovdiv (Philippopolis). On it is a relief representing a horned head (Tyche? Nemesis? Men??) surmounted by a wheel with eight projecting spokes.

i. 288 f. the Celtic god with a wheel. M. Prou in the Bulletin de la Société nationale des Antiquaires de France 1915 pp. 100—104 with 2 figs. publishes a terra-cotta statuette of this god (Taranis?) found at Néris (Allier). His head and the lower parts of his legs are missing. His right hand, which is slightly flexed, holds a wheel against his side. His left hand rests on the head of a small figure with uplifted arms.

i. 292 n. 2. The second disk from Corinth is now included in De Ridder Cat. Bronzes du Louvre ii. 44 no. 1694 pl. 76 ('Oracle d'amour(?)'). A third from Corinth is in the Brit. Mus. Cat. Bronzes p. 161 no. 878 ('Child's Toy'). Another, of somewhat simpler type, from a tomb at Vulci, is figured by E. Saglio in Daremberg—Saglio Dict. Ant. i. 1561 fig. 2064 ('Crepitaculum, Crepitacillum').

i. 292 n. 8. Strictly comparable with the great terra-cotta disk from Olympia are the fragments of two akrotéria, in terra cotta, from the older temple at Phigaleia (K. A. Rhomaios in the Ἀρχ. Ἐφ. 1933 p. 1 ff. col. pl. 2 and pl. 3). See further C. Praschniker Zur Geschichte des Akroters Brünn, Prag, Leipzig, Wien 1929 pp. 1—56 with 4 pls. and 12 figs. (reviewed by E. Douglas Van Buren in the Am. Journ. Arch. 1930 xxxiv. 520 f., by C. Picard in the Revue des études anciennes 1930 pp. 177—179, by S. C[asson] in the Journ. Hell. Stud. 1932 lii. 133).

i. 297 n. 2. See now L. B. Holland 'Mycenaean Plumes' in the Am. Journ. Arch. 1929 xxxiii. 173—205 with 11 figs. Examples could be multiplied—an ivory seal from Perachora (H. G. G. Payne in The Illustrated London News for July 8, 1933 p. 66 fig. 10), a Thasian pithos of s. vii B.C. (id. in the Journ. Hell. Stud. 1932 lii. 253 with fig. 14), etc.

i. 299 Seirios used of the sun. Cp. S. Ronzevalle 'Hélioseiros' in Aréthuse 1930 pp. 1—12 with 4 pls. and 5 figs. (an important article).

i. 299 ff. the Lycian Symbol. Cp. Anna Roes Greek Geometric Art, its Symbolism and its Origin Oxford 1933 p. 29 ff. figs. 21—23.

i. 303 the Kyklopes as builders. So B. P. Grenfell—A. S. Hunt The Oxyrhynchus Papyri London 1919 xiii. 33 no. 1604 Pind. dith. 1. 6 f. [Κυ]κλώπων πτόλις ἀρ[ά οἱ] | [ ]ν ἐν Ἄργει μεγάλῳ. . See further S. Eitrem in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. xi. 2329 f., 2342.

i. 305 n. 9 G. F. Hill on the Sicilian triskelés. But C. T. Seltman in his Greek Coins London 1933 p. 190 shows that the triskelés as symbol of Sicily occurs first on coins of Dionysios I struck shortly before 383 B.C., then on those of Timoleon, and thirdly on those of Agathokles.

i. 307. H. Mattingly in The British Museum Quarterly 1934 ix. 51 pl. 16, 9 publishes as 'probably unique' an as with rev. SICILIA S.C. and a large Gorgon's head in a triskelés.

See also J. Newton 'The armorial bearings of the Isle of Man; their origin, history and meaning' in the Proceedings of the Literary and Philosophical Society of Liverpool xxxix. 205—226.

i. 309 figs. 247 and 248. N. E. Henry 'Classic Sicily' in Art and Archaeology 1916 iii. 147 figures an 'Ancient Mosaic Symbol representing Three-Cornered Sicily'—much like the coins of Ebora Cerialis.

i. 309 on solar legs. P. Sébillot Le Folk-lore de France Paris 1904 i. 35 n. 5: 'En Haute-Bretagne, on dit que le soleil a des jambes [ou des tirants] quand il y a en dessous des rayons qui semblent toucher la terre' (id. in his Traditions et superstitions de la Haute-Bretagne Paris 1882 ii. 363).

i. 312 fig. 249. A photograph of this wall-painting is given by F. Weege Etruskische Malerei Halle (Saale) 1921 p. 28 pl. 65.

C. C. van Essen 'De Cyclope et Cuclu' in Mnemosyne 1930 lviii. 302—308 advances some venturesome views. Basing on Eva Fiesel Namen des griechischen Mythos im Etruskischen (Zeitschrift für vergleichende Sprachforschung Ergänzungsheft v) Göttingen 1928 pp. 35 and 48—56, he argues that pre-Indo-Europaean peoples of the period Helladic i knew a god of death, Cuclup* (Etruscan Cuclu), dwelling in a cave. Into this cave a sea-faring hero Uthisse* descends with followers, some of whom he is forced to leave behind. Early in the second millennium B.C. Indo-Europaeans arrive with a story involving the 'No-man' stratagem (supra ii. 989). Hence in the Mycenaean age Uthisse* develops into both Οὖτις and 'Οδυσσεύς (ὀδύσσεσθαι), while Cuclup* becomes Κύκλωψ, and in the Odyssey the original κατάβασις is attached to other adventures of Odysseus. Summary in the Class. Quart. 1931 xxv. 213.

i. 326. On the fire-boards of the Chuckchees see also Miss W. S. Blackman in Folk-Lore 1916 xxvii. 361 f.

i. 327. L. Siret 'Prométhée' in the Rev. Arch. 1921 i. 132—135 with 2 figs. attempts to show that the myth of Prometheus' offence and punishment is but an animistic interpretation of the fire-drill, the wood anthropomorphized into the hero, the bow zoomorphized into his eagle.

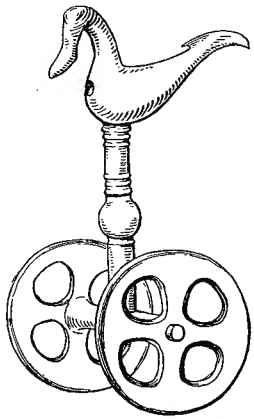

Fig. 862.

Cp. G. Vigfusson—F. York Powell Corpus Poeticum Boreale Oxford 1883 i. 64 Vafðrudnis-mál 22 'Mundilfori (Fire-auger) was the father of the Moon and also of the Sun' with note ib. ii. 468 'the Fire-Auger, the holy Drill by which some Teutonic Prometheus first woke the elemental flame.'

i. 328 Odysseus akin to Prometheus the fire-god(?). J. A. Scott 'Odysseus as a Sun-God' in Class. Philol. 1917 xii. 244—252 justly ridicules the contentions of J. Menrad Der Urmythos der Odyssee und seine dichterische Erneuerung, Des Sonnengottes Erdenfahrt München—Lindau 1910.

i. 330 n. 1. Eumath. 6. 14 τοῦτο φῆς τὸν ἀετὸν (supra ii. 1141) ὑπαινίττεσθαι τῆς τοῦ Διὸς προμηθείας plays on the connexion of Zeus with Prometheus, cp. 6. 15 τῷ γάρ τοι Ἐπιμηθεῖ τὸ μεταμέλειν ἀνωφελῶς ἀφωσίωται. κ.τ.λ., but lends no support to the assumption of a Zeus Προμηθεύς.

i. 333. In the Rigveda 10. 89. 4 heaven and earth are compared with the wheels at the two ends of an axle (A. A. Macdonell Vedic Mythology Strassburg 1897 p. 9).

A bronze amulet of the Geometric Period (W. Lamb Greek and Roman Bronzes London 1929 p. 36 ff. pl. 13), said to have come from 'Pharsalos,' but more probably from Pherai (Velestino), and now in my possession, shows a duck on a shaft which rises from the axle connecting two wheels (fig. 862: scale ½). Since the duck is pierced for suspension, it is perhaps to be regarded as perched on a celestial chariot.

i. 333 ff. the solar chariot. L. Curtius in Die Antike 1927 iii. 162 ff. deals with the cult of the horse among the Greeks and discusses the solar chariot.

Anna Roes Greek Geometric Art, its Symbolism and its Origin Oxford 1933 p. 22 f. fig. 13 (after A. Minto Marsiliana d'Albegna Firenze 1921 p. 291 fig. 30 pl. 52=F. von Duhn in Ebert Reallex. viii. 53 pl. 11, b) cites a horse with a four-spoked wheel apparently resting on its back—a motif impressed on a bucchero-jar from Marsiliana.

Cp. the combination of horse with wheel below it, which occurs frequently on Gaulish imitations of the gold coins issued by Philip of Macedon.

i. 334 fig. 265. With this pointillé design of horse+disk+bird-like man (?) cp. the pointillé design of horse+wheel+bird+man on the bronze double axe mentioned supra p. 605 n. 3 and figured infra Addenda on ii. 635 ff.

i. 334 n. 2 the Trundholm chariot. See now J. Brøndsted 'Pferd und Sonnenscheibe auf dänischen jungbronzezeitlichen Rasiermessern' in Acta Archaeologica 1931 ii. 199 ff., J. Bing Der Sonnenwagen von Trundholm Leipzig 1934 pp. 1—46 with 47 figs. and 7 pls.

i. 336 n. 0. See further W. Deonna 'À propos d'une pendeloque archaïque de Tégée' in the Bull. Corr. Hell. 1931 lv. 229—239 figs. 1—5.

i. 338 n. 1 Zeus conceived as driving a chariot. Mr C. T. Seltman notes Il. 8. 41—50.

i. 339. Cp. R. U. Sayce 'A May Day Garland from St Neots' in the Proceedings of the Cambridge Antiquarian Society 1932 xxxii. 57 f. with pl. 1.

i. 341. D. M. Robinson in the Am. Journ. Arch. 1935 xxxix. 594 reports that at Tanis (Auaris) in 1934 P. Montet and P. Bucher unearthed a granite group of a falcon with a child Pharaoh crouched at its feet. The base was inscribed: 'The good god, son of the sun, beloved of Hurun of Ramses' (i.e. of Pi-Ramses, the Deltaic capital of Ramses ii). It is argued that Hurun was the falcon-god of the Horites of Mt Seïr, who had gained a place for himself in Egypt by the end of the eighteenth dynasty.

i. 345 the Leucadian 'leap.' See further S. Eitrem 'Der Leukas-Sprung und andere rituelle Sprünge' in ΛΑΟΓΡΑΦΙΑ 1923 vii. 127—136, E. Strong—N. Jolliffe in the Journ. Hell. Stud. 1924 xliv. 103—111 ('Apotheosis by Water'), K. Kerényi 'Der Sprung vom Leukasfelsen' in the Archiv f. Rel. 1926 xxiv. 61—72. Supra p. 136 n. 3.

i. 348 Zeus Ámmon. O. Eissfeldt 'Zeus Ammon' in Forschungen und Fortschritte 1936 xii. 407 f. ('Der Gott der Oase ist also—von einer vielleicht noch älteren heimischen Vorgeschichte abgesehen—von Haus aus der phönizische Baal Hammon, der erst sekundär, vom 7. Jahrhundert v. Chr. ab, mit dem ägyptischen Amon verschmolzen worden ist').

i. 349 fig. 271. The Naples bust of Zeus Ámmon is now well published by O. Waldhauer in Archäologische Mitteilungen aus russischen Sammlungen Berlin—Leipzig 1928 i. 1. 51 ff. no. 37 pl. 20.

O. Rubensohn in the Jahrb. d. Deutsch. Arch. Inst. 1923/24 xxxviii/ix Arch. Anz. pp. 337—341 with figs. 4—6 describes a seated cult-statue of Zeus Ámmon found at el Qês near Behnessa (Oxyrynchos). The statue, of which head and torso are extant (1·20^{m} high), was made in several pieces of marble and showed the god, in chitón and himátion, enthroned with right arm raised and left lowered—Roman work much influenced by the type of Sarapis.

A terra-cotta antefix (6 inches high), formerly in the Blacas collection and now in the British Museum (Brit. Mus. Cat. Terracottas p. 420 no. D 697), has the horns coloured red (my pl. lxxvi is from an unpublished photograph).

i. 350 f. Our earliest reference to the Ammóneion occurs in a fragment of Hes. γυναικῶν κατάλογος (B. P. Grenfell—A. S. Hunt The Oxyrhynchus Papyri London 1915 xi. 44 ff. no. 1358 frag. 2 col. i, H. G. Evelyn-White in the Class. Quart. 1916 x. 69, id. in an Appendix to his Hesiod in the Loeb Classical Library p. 632 ff. frag. 40 A, 10 ff. [φῦλα τ' ἀπε]ιρεσίων Μελανο[χρώτων Λιβύων τε][τοὺς Ἐπάφῳ] τέκε Γαῖα πελώ[ρη χρησμολόγους τε]·[μαντοσύν]ας τε πανομφαίο[υ Διὸς εἰδότας αἶσ]η,][ψεύστας δ', ὅ]φρα θεοῖσιν ὑφε[ιμ]ένοι ἀτας[θῶσ]ιν | [ἀνθρωποι,] τῶν μέν τε νόος [γλ]ωσσῆς καὶ[ύπ]ερθεν.

i. 352 n. 0. A. H. Krappe 'The Karneia' in the Archiv f. Rel. 1930 xxviii. 380—384 treats Karnos as a ram-shaped deity of the grape-vine akin to Dionysos.

i. 352 Lysandros and Ámmon. Cp. Iambl. de myst. 3. 3 p. 108, 13 ff. Parthey.

i. 353 Alexander the Great and Zeus Ámmon. Recent discussions of this topic include E. Vassel 'Le bélier de Baal-Hammon' in the Rev. Arch. 1921 i. 79—107, G. Radet in the Revue des études anciennes 1925 pp. 201—208, D. Cohen 'De Alexandro Magno Ammonis oraculum consultante' in Mnemosyne 1926 liv. 83—86, V. Ehrenberg Alexander in Ägypten (Der Alte Orient Beiheft vii) Leipzig 1926 pp. 1—58, H. Berve Das Alexanderreich auf prosopographischer Grundlage München 1926 i. 1—357, ii. 1—446 ('Kultus und Religion'), U. Wilcken 'Alexanders Zug in die Oase Siwa' in the Sitzungsber. d. Akad. d. Wiss. Berlin Phil.-hist. Classe 1928 pp. 576—603, H. Berve in Gnomon 1929 v. 370 ff., Antefixal ornament from Italy, now in the British Museum : Head of Zeus Ámmon.

See page 1076.

G. Pasquali 'Alessandro all' oasi di Ammone e Callistene' in the Rivista di filologia e di istruzione classica 1929 lvii. 513—521, U. Wilcken 'Alexanders Zug zum Ammon. Ein Epilog' in the Sitzungsber. d. Akad. d. Wiss. Berlin Phil.-hist. Classe 1930 pp. 159—176, R. Vallois 'L'oracle libyen et Alexandre' in the Rev. Ét. Gr. 1931 xliv. 121—152, J. A. O. Larsen 'Alexander at the Oracle of Ammon' in Class. Philol. 1932 xxvii. 70—75, cp. id. ib. p. 274 f., G. Radet 'La consultation de l'oracle d'Ammon par Alexandre' in the Annuaire de l'Institut de Philologie et d'Histoire Orientales 1934 ii (Mélanges Bidez) pp. 779—792 (summary by H. I. B[ell] in the Journ. Hell. Stud. 1935 lv. 110).

i. 355. G. Daressy 'Une nouvelle forme d'Amon' in the Annales du service des antiquités de l'Égypte Le Caire 1908 ix. 64—69, followed by Oria Bates The Eastern Libyans London 1914 pp. 189—195 (J. E. Harrison in The Spectator Feb. 27, 1915 p. 304), identifies the image of the Libyan god with an enthroned bundle representing a dead man in the sitting posture. They appeal to two bronze plaques from Memphis, three faïence models from Karnak, and a relief of Roman date at Medinet Habu—of which evidence a different and, I think, less probable interpretation has been given by G. A. Wainwright (supra p. 882 n. 2).

Fig. 863.

For the sandstone omphalós from Napata see supra p. 882 n. 2 with fig. 719.

i. 360 n. 6. E. Bevan A History of Egypt under the Ptolemaic Dynasty London 1927 p. 10 explains the alleged guidance of the two snakes on rationalistic lines.

i. 361. On the identification of the Nile with Zeus see H. T. Deas in the Cambridge University Reporter Feb. 15, 1927 p. 758 (reading Pind. Isthm. 2. 42 Νείλου πρὸς αὐγάς, cp. schol. vet. ad loc.) and in the Class. Rev. 1927 xli. 213 ('Thus the Alexandrians may have argued that the Nile is the same as Zeus, and that if Homer can say Διὸς αὐγάς, Pindar can say Νείλου αὐγάς'). Supra p. 348 f.

i. 362 f. P. Giles in The Year's Work in Class. Stud. 1916 p. 48 summarises A. Fick's identifications of the Mediterranean tribes invading Egypt. H. R. Hall in The Cambridge Ancient History Cambridge 1924 ii. 275—283 devotes a section to them ('The Keftians and the Peoples of the Sea'). F. Hommel Ethnologie und Geographie des Alten Orients München 1926 pp. 28 f., 986 is more concise. L. B. Holland 'The Danaoi' in Harvard Studies in Classical Philology 1928 xxxix. 59—92 includes a general survey of Aegaean pre-history. Further literature in A. Götze Kulturgeschichte des Alten Orients München 1933 pp. 186—188 ('Die ägäische Wanderung').

i. 365 f. the grove of Ámmon. M. Schede in the Ath. Mitth. 1912 xxxvii. 212—215 fig. 10 publishes a votive relief of island marble (height 1·17^{m}), found in 1910 at Tigani in Samos. This represents, in the style of s. i B.C. (?), a half-length herm of Zeus Ámmon with a long sceptre in his raised right hand, a palm-tree at his left side, a shield (?) slung above his head, and an altar before him, on which stands a ram, presumably the gift of the woman suppliant. She holds a sprig of olive in her left hand and raises her right in prayer to the god. My fig. 863 is after A. de Ridder in the Rev. Ét. Gr. 1913 xxvi. 414 fig.

i. 369 K. A. Neugebauer in Gnomon 1930 vi. 268 regards the Berlin bronze statuette of 'Poseidon from Dodona' (W. Lamb Greek and Roman Bronzes London 1929 p. 172 pl. 63, c) as probably a Zeus Náios of late Hellenistic, eclectic, style.

i. 370 n. 4. The inscription may perhaps be read as ΑΙVΙΑ for Livia, who by a play on Λιβύα is linked with Ámmon.

i. 373 Apollon Karneîos. So F. Imhoof-Blumer 'Apollon Karneios auf kyrenäischen und anderen griechischen Münzen' in the Revue Suisse de Numismatique 1917 xxi. 1—17 pl. 1, followed by Sir G. Macdonald in The Year's Work in Class. Stud. 1918—1919 p. 18 f. ('convincing').

i. 376. M. Bieber Die Denkmäler zum Theaterwesen im Altertum Berlin—Leipzig 1920 p. 141 pl. 78 (=my fig. 864) publishes a phlýax-vase at Bari, which shows a visit to the oracle of Zeus Ámmon. On a wooden platform supported by Ionic pillars sits Zeus, a dismal white-haired figure, characterized as Ámmon by his ape-like features and the palm-tree at his side. He grips his eagle by the throttle, and turns to face his visitor—an old man with pointed pîlos and knotted staff, who is mounting the steps to the platform. Meantime the traveller's servant, with a stick in one hand, a basket and a pail in the other, and a bundle on his back, looks longingly at the provender.

i. 379 n. 7. To the bibliography of Siwah add the well-illustrated monograph by C. D. Belgrave Siwa: the Oasis of Jupiter Ammon London 1923 pp. 1—310 and the remarks of S. R[einach] in the Rev. Arch. 1928 ii. 334 f. on the Libyan rock-cut inscriptions and the Greek inscription found there by M. de Prorok.

i. 390. E. D. J. Dutilh in the Journ. Intern. d'Arch. Num. 1898 i. 437—440 describes a small bronze coin. found in the oasis, with obv. a ram walking to the right, rev. ΠΤΟΛΕΜΑΙΟΥ ΒΑΣΙΛΕΩΣ an eagle on a thunderbolt to the left and a six-rayed star before it ('Nous concluons ainsi qu'il s'agit, probablement, d'une pièce frappée sous un des premiers Ptolémées à l'Oasis').

i. 395 verveceus Iuppiter. Cp. Dessau Inscr. Lat. sel. no. 4477 (at Aziz ben Tellis in Numidia) d. b. s. (dis bonis sacrum?) | C. Aponius | Secundus sa|cerdos agnu do|mino, tauru domi|no, ovicula Nutri|ci, berbece Iovi, ovicu|la Teluri, agnu Herc|uli, agna Veneri, edu | Mercurio, | verbe. Testi|monio .... m.. LXV (date?) (instrumenta ad sacrificandum), no. 4477^{a} (in the same place) d. b. s. | C. C. Primus, | sac. Saturni, ag|nu tauro dom|ino, ovicla Tel|uri, berbece | Iovo, ovicla | [Nu]trici, capone | [H]erculi, edu Merc[ur.], aedua Veneri, ber[bec]e Testimonio | (duo animalia) [p]ecora | ....

i. 395 n. 2. A. H. Krappe Mythologie universelle Paris 1930 p. 45, accepting the etymology of Indra propounded by H. Güntert Der arische Weltkönig und Heiland Halle (Saale) 1923 p. 13 f., views the name as 'dérivé d'une forme indro*, apparentée au slave jedro, "testicule," tchèque jadro, "moelle," au pluriel "testicules," et dont la base commune est oid*=tumescere. Comparer aussi οἰδέω et le v. nor. eista, "testicule." Indra est donc l'homme fort, viril, comme en Scandinavie Thorr, qui était souvent appelé Thorrkarl.' The sequel in Krappe is also ad rem. But other derivations of Indra are noted by Walde—Pokorny Vergl. Wörterb. d. indogerm. Spr. ii. 332, and a timely warning is sounded by Schrader Reallex.^{2} ii. 247^{b}.

i. 395 n. 3 Ἴπταν. Better Ἴπταν, as J. Keil 'Meter Hipta' showed in the Wiener Eranos zur fünfzigsten Versammlung deutscher Philologen und Schulmänner in Graz 1909 Wien 1909 p. 102 f. (O. Kern on Orph. frag. 199).

i. 396 n. 1 on the snake as phallic. Cp. P. de Lancre Tableau de l'inconstance des mauvais Anges et Demons Paris 1612 p. 224 'Que le membre du Diable s'il estoit estendu est long enuiron d'vne aulne, mais il le tient entortillé & sinüeux en forme de serpent.' See further E. Küster Die Schlange in der griechischen Kunst und Religion Giessen 1913 p. 149 ff. and M. Oldfield Howey The Encircled Serpent London (1926) p. 126 ff. ('The Serpent as a Phallic Emblem').

a Fig. 864. b

i. 401 n. 7. Cp. Prob. in Verg. ecl. 1 prooem. (iii. 2. 329, 1 Hagen) hircus Libyca lingua tityrus appellatur.

i. 404 purple-fleeced sheep. A. D. Nock in The Year's Work in Class. Stud. 1925—1926 p. 16 n. 3 cites G. Rohde's remarks in F. Jacoby Klassisch-Philologische Studien Berlin 1925 v. 60 f.

i. 404 golden-fleeced sheep. E. L. Mijatovich Serbian Fairy Tales London 1917 pp. 141—149 ('The golden-haired Twins') tells how the Twins became successively two trees with golden leaves and golden blossoms, two boards of a bed made from these trees, two sparks from the fire that burnt the bed, 'two beautiful lambs with golden fleeces and golden horns,' two golden-haired boys. See also S. Thompson Motif-index of Folk-literature (FF Communications No. 106) Helsinki 1932 i. 296 B 105. 1 'Ram with golden fleece.'

i. 405 ff. the golden lamb of Atreus. C. A. J. Hoffmann 'Ueber den goldenen Widder des Atreus' in the Zeitschrift für die Alterthumswissenschaft 1838 v. 1122—1137, O. Immisch 'Das goldne lamm des Atreus' in the Jahrb. f. class. Philol. Suppl. 1890 xvii. 202—208, A. H. Krappe 'Atreus' Lamm' in the Rhein. Mus. 1928 lxxvii. 182—184 (citing remarkable Iranian parallels for a great ram as 'ein Symbol der Königswürde, ein Regalium' [sic!] from the 'Geschichte des Artachšir i Pâpakân,' founder of the Sassanid dynasty (T. Nöldeke in the Beiträge zur Kunde der indogermanischen Sprachen 1879 iv. 44 f., also in Firdusi Le Livre des Rois trad. J. Mohl Paris 1877 v. 230 ff.)).

Ach. Tat. isagog. 20 in schol. Arat. ed. Maass p. 48, 14 f. Ἀτρεὺς γὰρ εὖρε τῶν πλανήτων τὴν ἐναντίαν φοράν, ὥσπερ καὶ ἡλίου ἀπὸ ἀνατολῶν κυλιομένου καὶ φερομένου εἰς δυσμάς.

i. 406 the golden lamb identified with the sceptre. Cp. Sen. Thyest. 228 f. tergore ex huius novi | aurata reges sceptra Tantalei gerunt.

i. 414 ff. the golden ram of Phrixos. G. Goerres Studien zur griechischen Mythologie (Berliner Studien für classische Philologie und Archaeologie x 2) Berlin 1889 i. 72—120 ('Zeus Laphystios und die Athamassage'), A. H. Krappe 'The Story of Phrixos and Modern Folklore' in Folk-Lore 1923 xxxiv. 141—147, id. 'La légende d'Athamas et de Phrixos' in the Rev. Ét. Gr. 1924 xxxvii. 381—389 (contends that the myth arises from the fusion of two elements—the ancient custom of sacrificing the king or the king's eldest son in time of famine, and a familiar type of Märchen. Krappe attempts to reconstitute the original form of the story), J. A. Scott 'The origin of the myth of the golden fleece' in The Classical Journal 1926—1927 xxii. 541.

i. 416 a sanctuary of Leukothea. A. S. Arvanitopoullos in the Ἐφ. Ἀρχ. 1910 pp. 378—382 no. 25 fig. 9 publishes a broken stêle of white marble, found at Larissa in Thessaly, which shows Danae daughter of Aphthonetos on her knees before Leukathea. The goddess, seated on two blocks of stone, raises her left hand to adjust her himátion. In the background is seen the doorway of her circular temple. The inscription, in lettering of the early third century B.C., runs: Λευκαθέα[ι] | Δανάα | Ἀθον[ει]τεία (sc. ἀνέθεικεν or the like). See further L. R. Farnell 'Ino-Leukothea' in the Journ. Hell. Stud. 1916 xxxvi. 36—44 (a Minyan myth under Creto-Carian influence) and J. Wackernagel 'Λευκαθέα' in Glotta 1925 xiv. 44—46 (cj. λευκαθεύντων in Hes. sc. Her. 146 ὀδόντων...λευκὰ θεόντων, cp. λευκαθίζειν 'weiss glänzen').

i. 419 n. 5. But, according to O. Rossbach, the text of the cod. Vaticanus gives in qua iovis in celum ascendit (L. Deubner in J. Hastings Encyclopædia of Religion and Ethics Edinburgh 1913 vi. 51[b]). It is tempting to conjecture in qua ovis in caelum ascendit, 'wearing which the sheep (golden ram) went up to heaven.'

i. 420 n. 0. R. Dussaud 'Une épreuve subie dans un chaudron' in the Revue de l'histoire des religions 1909 lviii. 309, Gruppe Myth. Lit. 1921 p. 185.

P. Roussel in the Rev. Ét. Gr. 1932 xlv. 228 cites R. Mouterde in the Comptes rendus de l'Acad. des inscr. et belles-lettres 1931 pp. 141—147 an inscription from 'Ahiré in El Leja recording a thunderstorm and a death by lightning Ἀ(γ)αθῇ Τύχῃ. | ὅτε ἡ κερα(υ)ν|οβολία ἐγέν|ετο κα[ὶ] (ἀ)π|εθεώθη (F. Cumont would read καταπεθεώθη) | Αὔσος Ἀμ|ελάθου ἔ|τους κ΄.. (120 in the era of Bosra = 225/226 A.D.).

i. 422 human 'bears.' Cp. G. C. Moore Smith 'Straw-bear Tuesday' in Folk-Lore 1909 xx. 202 f. with two pls., V. Alford 'The Springtime Bear in the Pyrenees' ib. 1930 xli. 266—279 with pls. 9 and 10, ead. Pyrenean Festivals London 1937 pp. 16—25, 62 f., 108—111, 144, 225 f., 236 with fig. opposite p. 18 ('The Bear Hunt in French Catalonia'), Will-Erich Peuckert in the Handwörterbuch des deutschen Aberglaubens Berlin—Leipzig 1927 i. 893—896 ('Der B[är] als Vegetationsdämon').

i. 423 the 'fleece of Zeus.' W. Kroll in the Archiv f. Rel. 1905 viii Beiheft p. 39 discusses the Scythian custom recorded by Loukian. Toxar. 48 [with which cp. Aristot. hist. an. 9. 45. 630 a 22 f.]: 'So wird auch das Sitzen des Mysten auf dem Fell zu erklären sein: er schliesst einen Bund mit dem Gotte, indem er die Haut des diesem geweihten Tieres betritt.' T. Zachariae 'Auf einem Fell niedersitzen' in the Archiv f. Rel. 1912 xv. 635—638 adds Indian parallels.

Fig. 865.

i. 423 ff. figs. 305 and 306. H. Lewy in the Archiv f. Rel. 1927 xxv. 198 ff. deals with the Jewish rite of Μονοποδαρία. A. Rumpf in D. H. Haas Bilderatlas zur Religionsgeschichte Leipzig 1928 xiii—xiv p. xi with fig. 173 dates the Lambert hydria c. 470 B.C., notes that it is now in the Czartoryski collection at Goluchow near Posen, and interprets the central figure as 'der nackte bekränzte Bräutigam, neben ihm Schwamm und Waschbecken.' But W. Kroll in Glotta 1936 xxv. 154 observes that the vase is better figured by K. Bulas in the Corp. vas. ant. Pologne, Gołuchów p. 23 f. pl. 32, 3 a, 3 b, and that the queer object under the man's left foot is in reality non-existent! As Bulas remarks: 'La prétendue peau de mouton sous le genou droit de Thésée n'est que son pied gauche mal dessiné.'

i. 424. On the mouse in religion and folklore see J. V. Grohmann Apollo Smintheus und die Bedeutung der Mäuse in der Mythologie der Indogermanen Prag 1862 pp. 1—87,

W. R. Dawson in The Journal of Egyptian Archaeology 1924 x. 83—86 (the mouse as folk-medicine), id. 'The mouse in fable and folklore' in Folk-Lore 1925 xxxvi. 227—248, J. U. Powell 'Rodent-Gods in Ancient and Modern Times' ib. 1929 xl. 173—179, J. U. Powell and A. R. Wright ib. 1929 xl. 392 f., H. Mørland in the Symbolae Osloenses 1929 viii. 96 f. (sorex 'mouse'), Riegler 'Maus' in the Handwörterbuch des deutschen Aberglaubens Berlin—Leipzig 1934 vi. 31—60, Ohrt 'Mäusesegen' ib. pp. 60—62.

i. 429 n. 4. A marble purse-bearing Hermes found in a Delian shop has his phallós tipped with a ram's head (M. Bulard La Religion Domestique dans la Colonie Italienne de Délos Paris 1926 p. 261, cp. ib. p. 483).

i. 431 Mnevis. H. Bonnet in D. H. Haas Bilderatlas zur Religionsgeschichte Leipzig—Erlangen 1924 ii—iv p. ii with fig. 48 illustrates a stéle of New Kingdom date at Copenhagen (Valdemar Schmidt Choix de monuments égyptiens pl. 16) showing the worship of Mnevis, who appears a bull-headed man with solar disk and plumes.

i. 432 Apis with tokens of sun and moon. Late Egyptian terracottas represent Apis as a bovine bust with a solar disk and uraeus set between his horns and a lunar crescent slung round his neck. So e.g. on a specimen in the Whitway Collection now in the Museum of Classical Archaeology, Cambridge (fig. 865).

i. 436 f. Bouchis. After a series of newspaper notices (e.g. in The Daily Telegraph for Dec. 11, 1928, ib. Jan. 3, 1929, ib. Jan. 4, 1929 (six figs.), ib. Feb. 27, 1929 (six figs.), The Illustrated London News for Sept. 12, 1931) and at least one official report (R. Mond and W. B. Emery 'A Preliminary Report on the Excavations at Armant' in the Ann. Arch. Anthr. 1929 xvi. 3—12 with figs. 1—9 and pls. 1—20) a full account of the excavations at Hermonthis (Armant) has been put together by Sir R. Mond, O. H. Myers, and H. W. Fairman The Bucheum (Forty-first Memoir of The Egypt Exploration Society) London 1934 i The History and Archaeology of the Site (pp. 1—203), ii The Inscriptions (pp. 1—92), iii The Plates (pls. 1—173)—a work reviewed by G. Brunton in Antiquity 1935 ix. 250 f. and by A. H. M. Jones in the Journ. Rom. Stud. 1936 xxvi. 117. See also W. W. Tarn 'The Bucheum Stelae: a Note' in the Journ. Rom. Stud. 1936 xxvi. 187—189.

i. 436 n. 4. In Alkaios frag. 35. 3 Bergk[4], 158. 3 Edmonds, 91. 3 Diehl ap. Athen. 430 B—C ὦ Βύκχι and in Alkaios frag. 46 B. 10 Diehl ap. pap. Oxyrh. 1234 frag. 3 καὶ πεδὰ Βύκχιδος the ancients took Βύκχις to be an Aeolic form of Βάκχις (et. mag. p. 216, 47 ff. = Herodian. περὶ παθῶν frag. 553 (ii. 351, 9 ff. Lentz) Βύκχις ὄνομα Αἰολικόν. παρὰ τὸ Βάκχος Βάκχις καὶ Βύκχις ὡς ἵππος ἵππις καὶ οἶκος Οἶκις καὶ τροπῇ τοῦ ᾰ εἰς ῠ ὡς βάθος βύθος), cp. H. L. Ahrens De Graecae linguae dialectis Gottingae 1839 i. 78, R. Meister Die griechischen Dialekte Göttingen 1882 i. 58 (sceptical).

i. 437 ff. Recent literature on Io includes J. C. Hoppin 'Argos, Io, and the Prometheus of Aeschylus' in Harvard Studies in Classical Philology 1901 xii. 335—345 with pl. (supra p. 633 f. n. 0), G. Mellén De Ius fabula capita selecta Upsaliae 1901 pp. 1 ff., R. Engelmann 'Die Iosage' in the Jahrb. d. kais. deutsch. arch. Inst. 1903 xviii. 37—58 pl. 2 (supra p. 634 n. 1), L. Deubner 'Zur Iosage' in Philologus 1905 lxiv. 481—492 with pl., F. Jacoby 'ΙΩ ΚΑΛΛΙΘΥΕΣΣΑ' in Hermes 1922 lvii. 366—374, J. Vürtheim Aischylos' Schutzflehende Amsterdam 1928 pp. 49—53 ('Io').

C. Sourdille 'Une théorie récente sur la formation du mythe d'Épaphos' in the Revue des études anciennes 1912 pp. 267—276, J. Vürtheim op. cit. pp. 30—41 ('Epaphos').

i. 438 Bákchos in Asia Minor. A. Götze in the Kulturgeschichte des Alten Orients München 1933 iii. 1. 195 notes the existence of a Lydian deity Baki (W. H. Buckler in Sardis vi. 2. 40 ff. no. 22 (pl. 9), 9 [=J. Friedrich Kleinasiatische Sprachdenkmäler Berlin 1932 p. 117 no. 22, 9] kavek bakillis, 'priest of Bakis' (?), on a marble stéle of s. iv B.C. found in 1911 near the temple of Artemis at Sardeis), whom the Lydians themselves identified with Dionysos (see the bilingual inscription given by W. H. Buckler in Sardis vi. 2. 38 no. 20 (pl. 8) [=J. Friedrich op. cit. p. 116 no. 20] nannaś bakivalis artimuλ | Νάννας Διονυσικλέος Ἀρτέμιδι on a marble statue-base found in 1913 near the temple of Artemis at Sardeis and referred to the second half of s. iv B.C.). Cp. also Sardis vi. 2. 39 no. 21 (pl. 9) an Ionic column from the same site inscribed [?m]a[ne]ś bakivalis man[elis] r[a.a.?]=J. Friedrich op. cit. p. 116 no. 21.

i. 441 ff. priests and priestesses with animal names. O. Gruppe in the Neue Jahrb. f. klass. Altertum 1918 xli. 298 thinks that Peleiades (women dressed as doves) and Hyades (women dressed as sows) were 'alte Bezeichnungen für Zeus' Ammen.' Their καταστερισμοί came later. W. M. Ramsay 'Pisidian Wolf-priests, Phrygian Goat-priests, and the Old-Ionian Tribes' in the Journ. Hell. Stud. 1920 xl. 197—202 would interpret the Pisidian name Gagdabos Edagdabos with the help of Hesych. δάος·...καὶ ὑπὸ Φρυγῶν λύκος as 'Wolf-wolf the chief Wolf' implying 'an order of priests called Wolves,' the Phrygian Attabokaoi with the help of ἀτηγός (Dittenberger Syll. inscr. Gr.[3] no. 589, 50 f., Eustath. in Od. p. 1625, 37 f.), attagus (Arnob. adv. nat. 5. 6), and Hipponax frag. 2 Bergk[4], 46 Knox ap. Tzetz. in Lyk. Al. 425 and 741 καύης (W. H. Buckler—D. M. Robinson in the Am. Journ. Arch. 1913 xvii. 362 ff.), Hesych. κοίης· ἱερεὺς Καβείρων...οἱ δὲ κόης as 'goat-priests,' and the Old-Ionian Αἰγικορεῖς as priests wearing Athena's aigis. B. P. Grenfell—A. S. Hunt The Oxyrhynchus Papyri London 1922 xv. 155 ff. no. 1802 (a glossary of late second or early third century) frag. 3 col. ii, 29 ff. [μ]ἑ[λισσαι :]*αἱ τῆ*ς *Δ*ή*μητ*[ρος ἱέρει]αι. ἡ αὐτὴ Ἀπολλ[ωνία ?] ἐν τῇ α̅ "ἐπ[άγου]σαν δὲ τὸν κάλαθον ταῖς Νύ(ν)φαις σὺν τῷ ἱστῷ καὶ τοῖς ἔργοις τῆς Περ|σεφόνης, ἃ μὲν παραγενέσθαι εἰς Πάρον καὶ ξενισ(τ)εῖσαν παρὰ | τῷ βασιλεῖ Μελίσσῳ χαρίσασθαι ταῖς τούτου θυγατράσι οὔσαις ἐξ|κοντα τὸν τῆς Φερσεφόνης ἱστόν, καὶ πρώταις αὐταῖς ἀναδοῦναι | τὰ περὶ αὐτὴν πάθη τε καὶ μυστήρια· ὅθεν καὶ μελίσσας ἔκτοτε | κληθῆναι τὰς θεσμοφοριαζούσας (κληθῆναι) γυναῖκας." P. Clement 'New evidence for the origin of the Iphigeneia legend' in L'Antiquité Classique 1934 iii. 393—409 cites two Thessalian dedications to Artemis by devotees called νεβροί (Inscr. Gr. sept. iii. 2 no. 1123 Δυναρὶς Μελανθίου Ἀρτέμιδι Παγασίτιδι νεβευσ[α...], where F. Hiller von Gaertringen notes: 'An νεβ(ρ)εύσ[ασα] ut ἀρκτεύσασα, i.e. postquam deae νέβρου [sic] nomine inservivit?' and N. I. Giannopoulos in the Ἀρχ. Ἐφ. 1931 p. 178 f. no. 18 fig. 1 the white marble cap-stone of a statue-base from Larisa inscribed Ἀρτέμιδι Θροσίᾳ Ἱππόλοχος Ἱπολόχειος ὑπ[ὲρ] | Εὐβιοτείας Ἀλεξιπτείας νεβευσανσ[ας] | λύτρα). Clement interprets Θροσία as 'goddess of fertility' (θορ- θρω- θρο- [supra i. 681 n. 4]), derives νεβεύω from νεβ-os* a parallel of νεβ-ρός, and claims that the legend of Iphigeneia's sacrifice arose from the ritual of the νέβρεια in the cult of Artemis at Aulis—a most attractive hypothesis. F. R. Walton in Harvard Studies in Classical Philology 1935 xlvi. 167—189, discussing the Ichneutae of Sophokles, contends that the chorus of Satyrs were conceived as a pack of hunting dogs, cp. Poll. 5. 10 ἰχνευτὴς ἀνὴρ καὶ κύων and Corp. inscr. Att. iii. 3 no. 1651 an inscription from the Asklepieion in the Peiraieus which ordains 3 ff. Μαλεάτηι πόπανα τρ|ία· Ἀπόλλωνι πόπανα τ|ρία· Ἑρμῆι πόπανα τρ|ία· Ἰασοῖ πόπανα τρία· Ἀ|κεσοῖ πόπανα τρία· Πα|κείαι πόπανα τρία· Κυσὶν πόπανα τρία· Κυ|νηγέταις πόπανα τρί(α). But it is far from certain that the Kύνες and Κυνηγέται of this inscription were human beings. G. Kaibel in the Nachr. d. kön. Gesellsch. d. Wiss. Göttingen Phil.-hist. Classe 1901 p. 506 points out that in Plat. Phaon frag. 2 (Frag. com. Gr. ii. 674 ff. Meineke) ap. Athen. 441 E—442 A Orthanes, Konisalos, Lordon, Kybdasos, Keles are grouped with Κυσί τε καὶ Κυνηγέταις and infers that the latter, like the former, were Priapic deities. L. Ziehen in Leges Graecorum sacrae ii. 70 ff. no. 18 after further examination concludes: 'Itaque inferos daemonas Κύνας et Κυνηγέτας dici persuasum habeo' etc. C. M. Bowra Greek Lyric Poetry Oxford 1936 p. 43 ff. holds that Alkman's famous parthénion was sung at a joint festival of Dionysos and Helene. 'The Λευκιππίδες, led by their two leaders or πῶλοι, sing the song in competition with the Πελειάδες before the presentation of some gift to the appropriate gods and a race at the dawn' (ib. p. 54). F. Heichelheim in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. vi A. 906—910 has compiled the latest and most serviceable list of these usages. But it would be possible, and profitable, to go yet further in the same direction. Many examples of mythical metamorphosis might be explained along these lines. To give but one instance—the Κορωνίδες of the Boeotian tale told by Ant. Lib. 25 (ἱστορεῖ Νίκανδρος ἑτεροιουμένων δ' καὶ Κόρωνα γερο(ί)ων α') and retold with variations by Ov. met. 13. 685 ff.

i. 447 ff. Kleobis and Biton. See also S. Eitrem 'Kleobis und Biton' in the Christiania Videnskabs-Selskabs Forhandlinger 1905 No. 1 pp. 1—14 (criticised by L. Deubner in the Berl. philol. Woch. Nov. 4, 1905 pp. 1402—1405), L. Weber 'Tellos, Kleobis und Biton' in Philologus 1926 lxxxii. 154—166.

i. 448 Zeus at Nemea. On the American excavations of 1924—1927 see C. W. Blegen 'The American excavations at Nemea, season of 1924' in Art and Archaeology 1925 xix. 175—184, ib. 1927 xxiii. 189, id. 'Excavations at Nemea 1926' in the Am. Journ. Arch. 1927 xxxi. 421—440 figs. 1—14 (of which fig. 3=my fig. 867), cp. M. Clemmensen 'Le temple de Zeus à Némée' in the Bull. Corr. Hell. 1925 xlix. 1—12 figs. 1—9 and pls. 1—2 (=my fig. 866) plan and 3—4 details of order, R. Vallois 'Remarques sur le temple de Némée' ib. pp. 13—20 figs. 10—14, Ernst Meyer in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. xvi. 2318—2322. The scanty remains of an archaic temple on the same site include blocks of póros, some with U-shaped lifting-holes, recut for use in the later building and a fragmentary antefix of terra cotta adorned with a polychrome palmette. A deposit of votive offerings found under the plaster of the later témenos yielded proto-Corinthian and Corinthian sherds, terracottas, and small bronzes. The new temple, built c. 330 B.C., was a Doric peripteral structure with 6 × 12 columns, 2 columns in the prónaos, but no opisthódomos. Inside were two rows of 6 Corinthian columns. At the western end of the naós 2 other columns marked off an áadyton, which took the form of a sunken but unroofed crypt with a flooring of white stucco (possibly of Roman date) laid some 1·98^{m} below the level of the naós and reached by a roughish flight of five steps (fig. 867); but the precise purpose of this semi-subterranean sanctum is unknown. The temple had a marble sima carved in relief with ákanthos-work and lion-heads. Three of its lanky Doric columns are still standing. And parallel to the temple-façade are the foundations of a great sacrificial altar, prolonged at some period towards the north so that it now measures 40·58^{m} long by 2·42^{m} wide.

Fig. 866.

One or two individual finds deserve mention. A pôros base embedded in a wall at the west end of the Gymnasium was inscribed with a boustrophedón dedication in lettering of s. vi B.C.: 'Αρίστις με ἀνέθ|εκε Διὶ Φρονίοι Γά|βακτι πανκράτιο|ν νιφὸν τετράκις | ἐν Νεμέαι Φείδο|νος Γhιὸς τô Κλεο|νaίο (C. W. Blegen in the Am. Journ. Arch. 1927 xxxi. 432 f. fig. 10, W. Peek in the Ἀρχ. Ἐφ. 1931 p. 103 f. no. 1). The inscription, which appears to be our oldest example of an agonistic epigram, was conceived as an elegiac couplet eked out by an iambic pentapody. H. N. Couch 'An Inscribed Votive Bronze Bull' in the Am. Journ. Arch. 1931 xxxv. 44—47 figs. 1 and 2 publishes a solid-cast bull (0·083^{m} in length, 0·070^{m} in height) found in 1927 near the sanctuary of Zeus at Nemea and now in the Museum of Classical Archaeology and Art at the University of Illinois. The bull bears on its left side the pointillée inscription ΑΛΕΑΤΙΣ | ΑΝΕΘΕΚΕ. On artistic and epigraphical grounds it is assigned to the first half of the fourth century B.C.

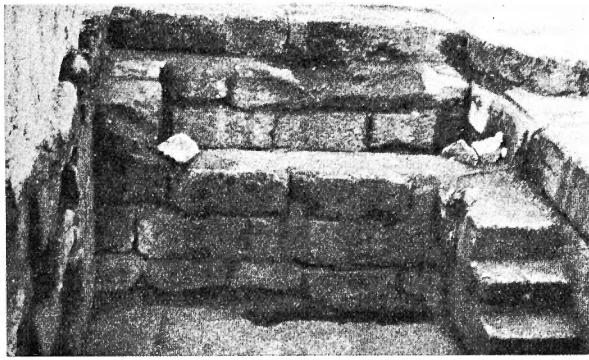

Fig. 867.

i. 450 n. 1 'Other Authors.' See Anth. Pal. 3. 18 lemma.

i. 453 Io Kallithýessa. F. Jacoby 'ΙΩ ΚΑΛΛΙΘΥΕΣΣΑ' in Hermes 1922 lvii. 366—374 supports the main contention of A. Frickenhaus in Tiryns i. 19 ff. that there was an ancient cult of Hera at Tiryns (supra i. 454 n. 0) against the criticisms of C. Robert in Hermes 1920 lv. 373 ff., but argues that the Tirynthian Io Kallithýessa (a Hesiodic, not Callimachean, tag) was split by Hellanikos Ἱέρειαι τῆς Ἥρας αἱ ἐν Ἄργει into two Argive figures—Kallithyia the first priestess and Io (cp. Frag. gr. Hist. i. 455 Jacoby).

i. 453 n. 8. On the pillar of Hera Argeía see now P. Kastriotes 'Ἥρας Ἀργείας ξόανον' in the Ἀρχ. Ἐφ. 1920 pp. 53—56 with figs. 1—3.

i. 456 Epimenides and the Nemean lion. G. W. Dyson in the Class. Quart. 1929 xxiii. 195 thinks that Epimenides perhaps claimed to be a reincarnation of the soul of the Nemean lion.

i. 457 Hera Argeía and the Moon. A late Graeco-Roman relief in reddish marble (height 2 ft 1½ ins), found at Argos and now in London, shows a facing bust of Selene in an arched niche bearing the signs of the zodiac. The goddess has a horned moon on her head and seven stars grouped round her. Below has been added the 'Gnostic' inscription Ιαια · φραινφιρι · κανωθρα · λυκυσυντα · δωδεκακιστη · Σαβαωθ · αβωθερσας (Brit. Mus. Cat. Sculpt. iii. 231 f. no. 2162 fig. 26 = my fig. 868, Reinach Rép. Reliefs ii. 489, 1).

i. 461 n. 1 Zeus Panŏptes. Anonym. enarrat. brev. chronogr. (dated c. 750 A.D. by K. Krumbacher Geschichte der byzantinischen Litteratur[2] München 1897 p. 424) 48 (in Scriptores originum Constantinopolitanarum i. 53 Preger) à propos of Julian and the bronze group at Kaisareia Paneas (supra p. 971 n. 1) says: καὶ τὸ φυτὸν δὲ κατέκαυσε, καὶ Διὸς εἴδωλον καὶ Ἀφροδίτης ἐν τῷ τόπῳ ἀνατεθεικὼς καὶ ἑαυτόν· ἐν οἷς καὶ ναὸν οἰκοδομήσας ἐπέγραψε τάδε· "θεῷ Διὶ Παντεπόπτῃ · Ἰουλιανὸς Πανεάδι εἰς δῶρον ἄγει."

i. 464 Theos Tauros. A. Plassart in the Bull. Corr. Hell. 1926 l. 393 f. nos. 9, 10, 11, 12 (my fig. 321 is his no. 11 or 12) and ib. p. 393 n. 4 is able to cite four fresh examples of the inscription Θεοῦ | Ταύρου, making a total of six, all found at Thespiai. A gold coin of the city Pushkalāvatī, with rev. Indian bull inscribed TAYPOC above and Usabhe below (E. J. Rapson in The Cambridge History of India Cambridge 1922 i. 557, 587 pl. 6, 10) represents Nandi the bull of Çiva (supra i. 637, ii. 791 n. 2). Mosch. 2. 135 πῇ με φέρεις, θεόταυρε (v.l. ὦ ταῦρε); uses the compound of Zeus.

Fig. 868.

i. 469 n. 7. A. Fick 'Asklepios und die heilschlange' in the Beiträge zur kunde der indogermanischen sprachen 1900 xxvi. 313 ff. cj. μύϊαν < χαλκῆν > διώκων, 'playing at blindman's buff.'

Fig. 325 is better published and discussed by Furtwängler Ant. Gemmen i pl. 22, 16, ii. 108. Cp. J. H. Middleton The Lewis Collection of Gems and Rings London 1892 p. 50 no. 23. See also Reinach Pierres Gravées p. 59 f. no. 43, 2 pl. 58 'Polyeidos, Glaucos et Minos' with n. 5.

i. 472 ff. The Labyrinth continues to provoke discussion—witness the following monographs: R. de Launay 'Les fallacieux détours du Labyrinthe' in the Rev. Arch. 1915 ii. 114—125, 348—363, ib. 1916 i. 295—300, 387—398, ii. 119—128, 295—300, 413—421 (takes as his starting-point the Round Building of Early Helladic date (third millennium B.C.), some 28^{m} in diameter, at Tiryns (K. Müller in Tiryns iii. 80 ff. pls. 5, 29, 30), which appears to have been the earliest palace (Müller loc. cit. p. 87, G. Karo in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. vi A. 1455)). E. Hommel 'Zur Geschichte des Labyrinths' in the Orientalistische Literatur-Zeitung 1919 xxii. 63—68 (holds that the maze-form in Crete and on Babylonian tablets represents the internal organs of man's body. On which showing the Labyrinth is 'a microcosm of the earth and a macrocosm of the human anatomy' (W. F. J. Knight in Folk-Lore 1935 xlvi. 105)). H. Diels 'Das Labyrinth' in the Festgabe A. v. Harnack Tübingen 1921 pp. 61—72. W. H. Matthews Mazes and Labyrinths London 1922 pp. 1—254 (well illustrated). A. Piganiol Recherches sur les jeux romains Strasbourg 1923 p. 103 (le ludus Troiae). Humborg in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. xii. 312—321, G. Karo ib. 321—323, H. Kees ib. 323—326. R. Winter 'Das Labyrinth in Tanz und Spiel' in the Neue Jahrbücher für Wissenschaft und Jugendbildung 1929 v. 707—720 figs. 1—6 ('Es ist hier versucht worden, Verbindungslinien zwischen dem Süden und dem Norden Europas im Altertum nachzuweisen'). W. F. J. Knight 'Vergil and the Maze' in the Class. Rev. 1929 xliii. 212 f., id. 'Maze Symbolism and the Trojan Game' in Antiquity 1932 vi. 445—458, id. 'Myth and Legend at Troy' in Folk-Lore 1935 xlvi. 98—121. R. Eilmann Labyrinthos Athen 1931 pp. 1—106 with figs. 1—25 (p. 12 criticises my contention (supra i. 476 f.) that the Cnossian coin-types originated in a swastika). C. N. Deedes The Labyrinth ed. by S. H. Hooke London 1935 pp. 1—42 (thinks that in Egypt the Labyrinth originated in the baffling defences of the royal tomb or, later, of the royal palace). J. Layard 'Maze-Dances and the Ritual of the Labyrinth in Malekula' [an island of the New Hebrides] in Folk-Lore 1936 xlvii. 123—170 (the Labyrinth provides a clue to the journey of the soul after death), id. ib. p. 170 'the horned dancers of Abbots Bromley are thus seen to be not far removed from the bull-headed Minotaur,' id. ib. 1937 xlviii. 115—182 'Labyrinth Ritual in South India: Threshold and Tattoo Designs.'

i. 481 the Labyrinth at Taormina. By a curious coincidence a square mosaic representing the Labyrinth, with battlements all round, angle-towers, and a gateway, has actually come to light at Taormina (P. Orsi in the Not. Scavi 1920 p. 340 ff. figs. 26—29).

i. 481 the Labyrinth-dance at Delos. The Delian dance had ropes (δυμοί) to guide the dancers (I. R. Arnold in the Am. Journ. Arch. 1933 xxxvii. 455 [F. Dürrbach Inscriptions de Délos Paris 1926 ii. 77 ff. no. 316, 75 ff.].

i. 482 n. 1 the altar of horns at Delos. See further É. Cahen 'L'autel de cornes et l'hymne à Dèlos de Callimaque' in the Rev. Ét. Gr. 1923 xxxvi. 14—25 ('il est peut-être difficile de voir dans le Kératôn l'autel principale du culte apollinien à Dèlos. Ce sera plutôt, à côté du βωμός centre de la liturgie officielle, comme un autel très antique, où s'attachaient les souvenirs les plus vénérables de la religion délienne, avec les rites primitifs de la γέρανος, de la διαμαστίγωσις, d'autres encore' [Kallim. h. Del. 300—324, Hesych. s.v. Δηλιακὸς βωμός]), R. Vallois 'Topographie délienne. i. L'Artémision, le Monument des Hyperboréennes, l'Olivier sacré et le Kératôn' in the Bull. Corr. Hell. 1924 xlviii. 411—445.

The archaic temple of Dreros, built for Apollon Delphínios (supra i. 729 n. 2) early in s. viii B.C., was perhaps half a century later furnished with an altar of unusual form. A hollow structure of vertical slabs set against the back wall was covered by a wooden (?) lid with a circular hole in it (0·15^{m} across), which itself was closed by a carefully rounded potsherd. On this box-altar stood three statuettes of hammered bronze (one male, two smaller female) together with two small iron knives: within it were numerous horns (mostly left horns) of young goats—clearly a keratón comparable with that of Delos (supra i. 482) (S. Marinatos in the Bull. Corr. Hell. 1936 lx. 224 f., 241—244 figs. 17, 18, pls. 26, 27, id. in the Jahrb. d. Deutsch. Arch. Inst. 1936 li Arch. Anz. pp. 215—222 and 227 with figs. 1—4).

i. 483 swastika and maeander. A. S. Georgiades in the Ἀρχ. Ἐφ. 1914 p. 195 pl. 5 figs. 1, 2, ib. 1915 p. 94 fig. 1 publishes a fine swastika-pattern, which he calls the 'Ερετρικὸς μαίανδρος,' from the monastery of S. George at Eretria.

i. 485 Theseus and the Minotaur as central panel of the Labyrinth. C. Bursian Aventicum Helvetiorum Fünftes Heft Zürich 1870 (=Mittheilungen der antiquarischen Gesellschaft in Zürich xvi. Abth. 1. Heft 5) p. 58 pl. 29 publishes a handsome mosaic, found in 1830 at Cormerod in the canton of Freiburg and now in the Freiburg Museum: the design shows a Labyrinth with towers at the angles and Theseus with the Minotaur in the centre.

i. 490 ff. the Minotaur. Materials bearing on this vexed problem may be here assembled. Sir J. Marshall Annual Report of the Archæological Survey of India Part I, 1913—14 Calcutta 1915 p. 25 f. pl. 23 fig. c publishes an enamelled terra-cotta relief, found by M. Duroiselle in the ruins of the Shwegugyi pagoda in Burma (s. v A.D.), showing among the subjects that relate to Buddha's fight with Mara two bull-headed beings with human bodies and limbs, nude except for a loin-cloth. The type is suggestive of the Greek Minotaur.

F. Quilling Minotauros. Der Veredarierstein im Saalburgmuseum Leipzig 1919 pp. 1—40 (severely criticised by E. Anthes in the Berl. philol. Woch. April 3, 1920 pp. 322—326).

Prof. Max Semper of Aachen, in a letter to me dated Dec. 14, 1926, maintains that there is no convincing representation of the Minotaur in 'Minoan' or Mycenaean art, and that the seal-impression always cited as such would never have been so understood had not the wish been father to the thought. He holds that the mixed creatures of human +animal type, which occur first in the 'Late Minoan' age, are due to the impact of Caucasian immigration and a change in the ruling race. Such Mischwesen had long been known to the peoples of the eastern Pontos and may well have been introduced as a novel motif into 'Minoan' art by the victors. Semper surmises that the Minotaur was first discovered by the Hellenes, probably to represent some traditional 'Minoan' word, whose true sound and sense remain obscure. He notes that the legend of the Minotaur is known from Greek sources only and involves an element of sex (ἱερὸς γάμος), which points to the presence of a non-'Minoan' factor in the population of Crete. This factor he regards as 'uräg äischen' and believes to have been racially connected with Asia Minor, whereas the genuine founders of the 'Minoan' civilisation were a Mediterranean folk racially akin to the Libyans.

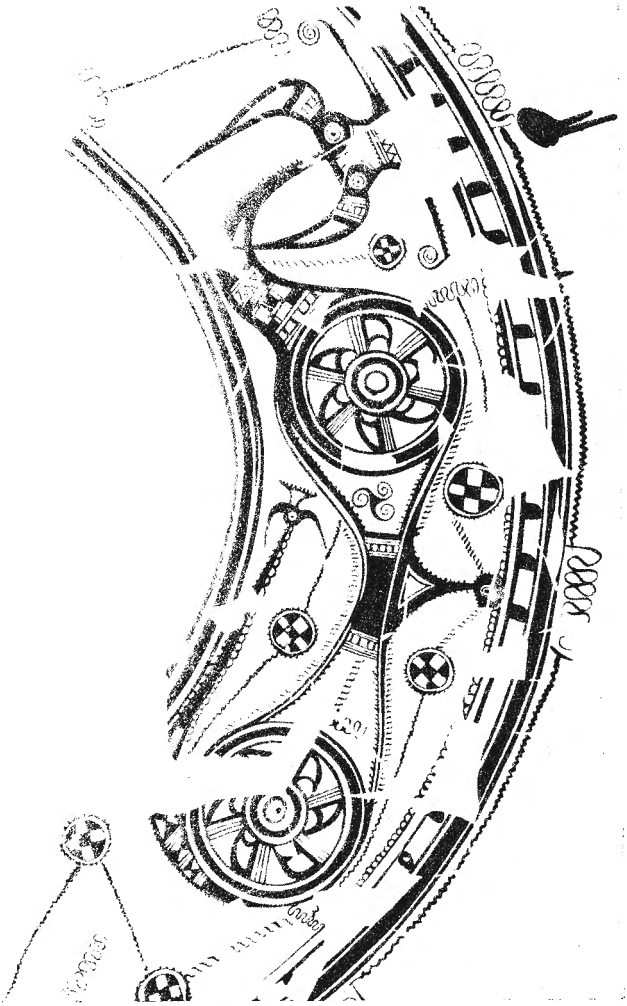

Fig. 869.

Fig. 870.

Fig. 871.

Eva Fiesel in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. vi A. 270 f. comments on a bronze Etruscan mirror (F. Borie 'La mort du Minotaure' in the École française de Rome. Mélanges d'archéologie et d'histoire 1898 xviii. 51—63 pl. 1—2), which shows not only Minos, Athena, Ariadne, and Herakles (mine, menrva, ariaθa, hercle), but also the bull-headed Minotaur (θevrumineś). P. Kretschmer in Glotta 1931 xix. 216 had pointed out that this Etruscan compound was the equivalent of [Τα]ῦρος Μινώϊος on a 'Chalcidian' hydría from Caere (Cervetri) [Louvre F 18, best published by A. Rumpf Chalkidische Vasen Berlin—Leipzig 1927 i. 13 no. 12, 175 fig. 3 pl. 26].

A. Schulten Numantia München 1931 ii. 213 notes the prevalence of the bull-cult throughout Iberia. Id. ib. ii. 262 f. pls. 24 and 25 (=my fig. 869) gives the black painted decoration of a red pottery dolium, which in a highly stylized geometric manner (A. del Castillo in Ebert Reallex. ix. 138) renders a couple of bulls. Id. ib. ii. 257 pl. 16 (=my figs. 870 and 871) shows the designs on a polychrome jug, which represents two male dancers wearing bulls' horns on their arms and bulls' hoofs (?) on their feet. The dance may be that mentioned by Strab. 164 as celebrated by night ἀνωνύμῳ τινὶ θεῷ. In any case the previous existence of such a bull-cult in Spain explains in part the age-long popularity of the Spanish bull-fights. See further V. Alford Pyrenean Festivals London 1937 p. 193 f. on the Basque Toro de Fuego or 'Fire Bull' ('probably...a form of bull devotion, separate from, though existing side by side, with the corrida or bullfight').

T. L. Shear in the Am. Journ. Arch. 1933 xxxvii. 540 fig. 1 (J. Charbonneaux in the Rev. Ét. Gr. 1935 xlviii. 83 fig. 2) publishes a gold ring from a Mycenaean tomb found near the 'Theseion' at Athens: 'The scene represented on the ring is of unusual interest. On the right a man is striding to the right. He has the head of an animal with long ears or short horns. In one hand he carries a branch or spear, and with the other holds the end of a double cord, which is attached to the waist of the foremost of two women behind him. The women have veiled heads, high ruffs around their necks, and pleated skirts. On the extreme left is a sacred pillar, and a small object resembling a bird or butterfly appears in the background above the figures. A group consisting of a bull-headed man who is leading two captive women recalls the legend of the Minotaur and the Athenian maidens. The new discovery in Athens may illustrate an early version of the later familiar myth.' But Shear's interpretation of the scene is far from certain.

E. Sjöqvist in the Archiv f. Rel. 1933 xxx. 344—347 fig. 11 gives the upper part of a terra-cotta statuette from Aija Irini in Kypros, which portrays a priest wearing a bull's mask drawn over his head. Sjöqvist cites analogous figures and concludes: 'Es scheint daher, als ob die Tiermaskenverkleidung eine rituelle Tracht wäre, besonders mit zeremoniellen Prozessionen und Tänzen verknüpft. Es ist sicher kein Zufall, dass die mit Sicherheit bestimmbaren Priestermasken Stierköpfe sind. Die Reminiszenzen in Aija Irini von einem ursprünglichen Stiergott sind sicher noch lebendig gewesen, und der Stier war sein heiliges Tier und sein Symbol, auf gleiche Art, wie es mit Hadad in Syrien und seinem Gegenstück in Anatolien der Fall war. Indem der Priester sein Bild anlegte, ging er eine greifbare Vereinigung mit der Gottheit ein, auf gleiche Art wie Demeters Priester in Pheneos bei gewissen Kultakten die Maske der Göttin anlegte [supra ii. 1136 n. 4]. Der Brauch hat bereits während der Bronzezeit eine grosse Verbreitung auf Cypern und innerhalb des syro-hettitischen Kulturgebietes gehabt und scheint sporadisch auch in dem minoisch-mykenischen Kreise spürbar zu sein.'

With this conclusion I have long been in substantial agreement (Journ. Hell. Stud. 1894 xiv. 120—132 ('The Cult of the Bull')). It would, I conceive, be true to say that all round the shores of the Mediterranean in early times the thunder-god was envisaged as a bellowing bull, whose human representative, the king or priest, identified himself with the deity by donning a bull-mask or at least by wearing bull-horns. Even Zedekiah the son of Chenaanah, when he claimed to speak in the name of the Lord, 'made him horns of iron' (1 Kings 22. 11).

i. 497 ff. 'Minoan' Bull-fights. Sir A. J. Evans in Archaeologia 1914 lxv. 90 f. fig. 96 illustrates a couple of rhytá from 'Early Minoan' ossuaries in the Messará, Crete, showing bulls with acrobatic performers ('the earliest record of these sports'). W. Crooke 'Bullbaiting, Bull-racing, Bull-fights' in Folk-Lore 1917 xxviii. 141—163 discusses the subject with many parallels from India, Nigeria, etc. Ella Bourne 'Ancient Bull-fights' in Art and Archaeology 1917 v. 142—153 cites inter alia fig. 9 a marble relief from Smyrna, now at Oxford, inscribed ΤΑΥΡΟΚΑΘΑΨΙΩΝ ΗΜΕΡΑ ϕ Β (R. Chandler Marmora Oxoniensia Oxonii 1763 ii. 105 no. 58 pl. 8, Reinach Rép. Reliefs ii. 526 no. 1, Sir A. J. Evans in the Journ. Hell. Stud. 1921 xli. 257 f. fig. 9, Corp. inscr. Gr. ii no. 3212) and a similar marble relief from Sardeis inscribed [ΤΑΥΡΟΚΑΘΑΨΙΩΝ ΚΑΙ ΚΥΝΗΓΙΩΝ?] ΗΜΕΡΑΣ Γ (H. C. Butler in Sardis i. 1. 95 fig. 96, W. H. Buckler—D. M. Robinson ib. vii. 1. 88 f. no. 82 fig. 69), with which cp. a relief found west of the theatre at Ephesos (R. Heberdey in the Jahresh. d. oest. arch. Inst. 1899 ii Beiblatt p. 46 fig. 12) and an inscription from the Ephesian stage Μ[η]νόφιλος Μηνοφίλου τὸ κλισίον | *καὶ τὸ π*ε[ρ]ὶ αὐτὸ τοῖς Ταυρεασταῖς τοῖς Κρεοντείοις (id. in Forschungen in Ephesos Wien 1912 ii. 182 no. 75). Sir A. J. Evans 'On a Minoan Bronze Group of a Galloping Bull and Acrobatic Figure from Crete' in the Journ. Hell. Stud. 1921 xli. 247—259 figs. 1—12. Id. The Palace of Minos London 1936 Index p. 21 s.v. 'Bull-sports.' Ziehen in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. v A. 24—27 (concluding with some friendly criticism of my own views).

i. 500. On the horn-bearing woman of Laussel see now M. Hoernes Urgeschichte der bildenden Kunst in Europa[3] Wien 1925 p. 166 fig. 2, p. 167 fig. 1, p. 601 ff., R. de Saint-Périer L'art préhistorique (Époque paléolithique) Paris 1932 p. 29 pl. 8, 4.

i. 500. On the significance of the drinking-horn see H. Thiersch 'Kretische Hornbecher' in the Jahresh. d. oest. arch. Inst. 1913 xvi. 78—85 figs. 30—45 (p. 83 f. 'Die Vorstellung, dass das Trinken aus solchem Horne überirdische Kräfte verleihe, ist ja nur die weitere Konsequenz des ganz allgemein verbreiteten Gedankens, dass die Kraft des Tieres auch noch in dem von ihm abgetrennten Horne weiterlebe, dass dieses darum auch zur Abwehr allerlei dämonischer Angriffe in hohem Masse geeignet sei').

i. 503 f. bull-carrying. Cp. L. Ziehen in Leges Graecorum sacrae ii. 49 ff. no. 12, 30 ff. = Inscr. Gr. ed. min. i no. 84, 30 ff. (an Athenian decree of 421/0 B.C.) τὸς δ[ὲ β]οῦ[ς ἐχσέναι αὐτοῖς σ]|φίνγοσ[ιν αἰρεσθαι πρὸς τ]ὸν βομόν· hοίτω[ι]ς δὲ ἀρῦνται [τὸς βοῦς ἐφέβος hοι] | hιεροποιο[ὶ hαιρέσθον] διακοσίος ἐχς Ἀθε[ν]αίον and Corp. inscr. Att. ii. 1 no. 467, 10 f. = Inscr. Gr. ed. min. ii—iii. 1 no. 1028, 10 f. = Michel Recueil d'Inscr. gr. no. 610, 10 f. = Dittenberger Syll. inscr. Gr.[3] no. 717, 10 f. (an Athenian decree of 100/99 B.C.) ἤρατο δὲ καὶ τοῖς μυστηριοις τοὺς βοῦς | ἐν Ἐλευσῖνι τῆι θυσίαι καὶ αὐτοὶ ἐβουθύτησαν ἐν τῶι περιβόλωι τοῦ Ἰεροῦ with the notes of Ziehen and Dittenberger ad locc. See also E. Maass s.v. βοάρσαι in the Archiv f. Rel. 1925 xxiii. 222 f., L. Ziehen 'Zum Opferritus' in Hermes 1931 lxvi. 227—234, and F. Cumont in the Journ. Rom. Stud. 1937 xxvii. 67 n. 20.

R. C. Bosanquet drew my attention (7 June 1915) to Hesych. Γάνδαρος· ὁ ταυροκράτης, παρ' Ἰνδοῖς. The reference is apparently to the Graeco-Buddhist art of ancient Gandhara in north-western India.

i. 506 ff. Ritual Horns. In addition to the important articles of I. Scheftelowitz 'Das Hörnermotiv in den Religionen' in the Archiv f. Rel. 1912 xv. 451—487 (ib. p. 473 f. 'Hörner am Altar als Symbol der Heiligkeit') and J. A. MacCulloch 'Horns' in J. Hastings Encyclopædia of Religion and Ethics Edinburgh 1913 vi. 791[b]—796[a] (p. 794[b] 'conventional representations of an earlier βουκράνιον') consult W. Gaerte 'Die Bedeutung der kretisch-minoischen Horns of Consecration' in the Archiv f. Rel. 1922 xxi. 72—98 (starting from P. E. Newberry's Egyptian hieroglyph of a desert mountain (supra ii. 555 n. 0, cp. 545 n. 0), Gaerte p. 82 takes the Cretan horns to be 'die Kultsymbole der in Kreta zu jener Zeit verehrten grossen Erdgöttin, einer der kleinasiatischen Magna Mater und der griechischen Rhea verwandten Gestalt') and H. Sjövall 'Zur Bedeutung der altkretischen Horns of Consecration' ib. 1925 xxiii. 185—192 pls. 1 and 2 (Sjövall connects the Cretan horns with the 'Mondbilder' of north-European art (supra i. 507), which he regards as andirons). See also G. Karo in Ehert Reallex. v. 392 ('eine reine Schmuckform'), A. E. Napp Bukranion und Guirlande. Beiträge zur Entwicklungsgeschichte der hellenistischen und römischen Dekorationskunst Wertheim a. M. 1933 pp. 1—49, W. Deonna 'Mobilier délien ii ΒΩΜΟΙ ΚΕΡΑΟΪΧΟΙ' in the Bull. Corr. Hell. 1934 pp. 381—447 figs. 1—53.

i. 514 bees from bulls. A. E. Shipley 'The "Bugonia" myth' in the Journal of Philology 1915 xxxiv. 97—105 endorses the view of C. R. Osten Sacken On the Oxen-born bees of the Ancients Heidelberg 1894 pp. 1—80 that the honey-bee (apis mellifica) was confused with the drone-fly (eristalis tenax), which superficially resembles the honey-bee and is often found in a stray carcase or in rotting vegetation.

i. 518 ff. the altar as object of cult. See further E. Maass 'Bomos und Verwandtes' in the Archiv f. Rel. 1925 xxiii. 227 n. 4, and cp. the mediaeval use of Deus 'pro ipso altari ubi Dominicum Corpus asservatur' (Ducange Gloss. med. et inf. Lat. ii. 829 s.v. 'DEVS').

R. Kittel in the Journal of Biblical Literature 1925 xliv. 123—153 deals at large with the transformation of sacred places or objects into deities (Qadesh 'sanctuary,' Ashera 'sacred post,' Hamman 'pillar')—summarised by E. H. Heffner in the Am. Journ. Arch. 1926 xxx. 487.

i. 521 ff. The Marriage of the Sun and the Moon in Crete. S. Eitrem 'Zur Apotheose iv. Die heilige Ehe' in Symbolae Osloenses 1932 xi. 11—21 deals with 'Die Theogamie des Herrscherkultus,' points out that Caligula as ὁ νέος Ἥλιος (Dittenberger Syll. inscr. Gr.[3] no. 798, 3 Kyzikos) married the Moon (Suet. Calig. 22, Dion Cass. 59. 27), and does not scout the hypothesis of 'eine althellenische Theogamie, zwischen Sonne und Mond vollzogen' (p. 18 n. 1).

i. 522 f. the wooden cow. Suet. Ner. 12 inter pyrricharum argumenta taurus Pasiphaam ligneo iuvencae simulacro abditam iniit, ut multi spectantium crediderunt.

Frazer Golden Bough[3]: Taboo p. 113 (Hindus born again by being enclosed in the golden image of a cow and dragged through the usual channel or, failing that, through an image of the sacred Yoni).

Lady Sterry, wife of Sir Wasey Sterry, kindly sent me the following note (Aug. 21, 1931): 'According to the Christians of the Lebanon, the Druses have a sacred calf used in their worship. The calf is said to be made of wood hollowed out inside, and at one of their feasts cakes and sweetmeats are passed through the calf, which are considered blessed and are distributed to their friends, not necessarily only to Druses. The calf is said to be kept in their place of worship, which is open only to the initiated, and women are not allowed to be initiated.'

i. 525 the cult of Hellotis. C. W. Vollgraff in Mnemosyne N.S. 1919 xlvii. 162 no. 7 publishes a squared block of limestone, found at Argos, which is inscribed in lettering of s. V B.C. oρος : hε|λλοτιο, that is ὅρος Ἑλλωτίου, and infers that the Cretan goddess Ἑλλωτίς must have had a shrine Ἑλλώτιον near the road to Mantineia.

A. Lesky 'Hellos—Hellotis' in the Wiener Studien 1926/27 xlv. 152—173, ib. 1928 xlvi. 48—67 and 107—129 would recognise a ἱερὸς γάμος between the earth-goddess Europa, who in Crete was originally named Hellotis, and the sky-god Zeus, who in pre-Greek times had the form of a bull. Lesky finds traces of the same beliefs at Dodona in the Helloi and their eponym Hellos (cp. Hellas, Hellenes, etc.), also at Corinth and Marathon in Athena Hellotis, and less certainly in Helle of the Hellespont.

i. 530 n. 2. O. Könnecke in the Rhein. Mus. 1914 lxix. 547—551 discusses the golden basket of Europe (Moscb. 2. 37 ff.) viewing it as Moschos' attempt to outshine the wooden bowl of Thyrsis (Theokr. 1. 27 ff.).

i. 531 n. 3. On the name Εὐρώπη see also W. Aly in Glotta 1913 v. 63—74, who connects it with εὐρώς, εὐρώεις, εὐρώδης, εὐρωπός (e.g. Eur. I. T. 626, Opp. de pisc. 3. 20) in the sense of 'dark' (Hesych. s.vv. εὐρώεντα, εὐρωπόν, Souid. s.v. εὐρώεις, schol. Od. 23. 322, schol. Soph. Ai. 1190), and concludes: 'so stammt der Name, wie seine Bildung zeigt, aus jener Schicht, die zutage tritt, wenn wir Thessalien mit Arkadien vergleichen, ein Resultat, das für die Einordnung der Göttin zeitlich und räumlich bedeutsam sein dürfte. Neben Europe in Böotien und Europe in Sekyon finden wir nun erstere auch in Kreta und zwar genau in dem Teil der Insel, wo in Gortyn neben peloponnesischem Einfluss auch unmittelbar thessalischer bereits anderweitig nachgewiesen ist.'

i. 534 n. 2. A. von Sallet 'Die Umschrift der Europa auf Silbermünzen von Gortyna' in the Zeitschr. f. Num. 1879 vi. 263 ff. (Mt Tityron), J. N. Svoronos 'The inscription Τίσυροι on coins of Gortyna' in the Num. Chron. Third Series 1887 vii. 126 ff. (an ethnic =Γορτύνιοι, cp. Καρτεμπίδες (supra i. 471) and Κορύστιοι (Hesych. Κορύστιοι· οἱ Γορτύνιοι)), A. Skias 'Τίσυρος, Κρητικὴ πόλις' in the Ἐφ. Ἀρχ. 1891 p. 191 f. (citing schol. Theokr. 3. 2 (supra i. 534 n. 2)).

i. 536 fig. 407. With the type of Epiktesis in the relief from Loukou cp. that of Salus on a sestertius struck by Commodus in 184 A.D. (H. Mattingly—E. A. Sydenham The Roman Imperial Coinage London 1930 iii. 416 no. 439 pl. 16, 328: Stevenson—Smith—Madden Dict. Rom. Coins p. 713, Roscher Lex. Myth. iv. 300 fig. 3).

i. 542 n. 5. See now Babelon Monn. gr. rom. ii. 3. 921 ff. no. 1478 pl. 246, 22 London and no. 1479 pl. 246, 23. The reverse of the latter is inscribed ΧΕΡΣΟΝΑΣΙ[ΟΝ]. Babelon comments: 'La belle tête de Zeus Κρηταγενής...est inspirée de celle du Zeus 'Olympie sur les statères d'Elis....'

i. 549 ff. Ba'albek and its cults. The official record of the German excavations has now been published in three stately volumes—T. Wiegand Baalbek. Ergebnisse der Ausgrabungen und Untersuchungen in den Jahren 1878 bis 1905. Vol. i by B. Schulz and H. Winnefeld with the assistance of O. Puchstein, D. Krencker, H. Kohl, G. Schumacher. Berlin—Leipzig 1921. Vol. ii by D. Krencker, T. von Lüpke, and H. Winnefeld with the assistance of O. Puchstein, B. Schulz. Berlin—Leipzig 1923. Vol. iii by H. Kohl, D. Krencker, O. Reuther, F. Sarre, and M. Sobernheim. Berlin—Leipzig 1925.

See also Gruppe Myth. Lit. 1921 p. 396 f., F. Cumont 'Le Jupiter héliopolitain et les divinités des planètes' in Syria 1921 ii. 40—46, id. 'À quels dieux étaient consacrés les temples de Baalbek?' ib. 1925 vi. 202, H. Thiersch 'Zu den Tempeln und zur Basilika von Baalbek' in the Nachr. d. kön. Gesellsch. d. Wiss. Göttingen Phil.-hist. Classe 1925 p. 1 ff. (assigns the smaller temple to the Syrian Magna Mater), U. Wilcken 'Zu den

Fig. 872.

Fig. 873.

"Syrischen Göttern"' in the Festgabe für Adolf Deissmann zum 60. Geburtstag 7. November 1926 Tübingen 1927 pp. 1—19, H. Seyrig in Litteris 1928 pp. 165—179 (assigns the smaller temple to Hermes assimilated to the Semitic Gennaios), id. 'La Triade Héliopolitaine et les Temples de Baalbek' in Syria 1929 x. 314—356 with pls. 82—86 (p. 346 n. 6 denies the solarity of Iupiter Heliopolitanus), D. Krencker in the Jahrb. d. Deutsch. Arch. Inst. 1929 xliv Arch. Anz. pp. 169—181 figs. 1—7 (discusses the successive phases in the construction of the temple of Zeus), and cp. M. Rostovtzeff 'Hadad and Atargatis at Palmyra' in the Am. Journ. Arch. 1933 xxxvii. 58—63 with pl. 9, 1—10 (clay tesserae etc.).

i. 551 n. 2. Corp. inscr. Lat. vi. 4 no. 36803.

i. 567 ff. Iupiter Heliopolitanus and the Bull. R. Dussaud 'Heliopolitanus' in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. viii. 50—57. Mendel Cat. Sculpt. Constantinople iii. 31 ff. no. 829 fig. (=my fig. 872) publishes a small altar (height 0·65^{m}), of local limestone, from Niha a village of Lebanon at the foot of Djebel Sannin, which shows the god holding whip and corn-ears, with a pólos on his head, a necklace with central medallion on his chest, and stiff drapery with six four-leaved rosettes arranged in panels. He stands on a pedestal, the front of which has a goddess in a niche. And he is flanked by two bulls. Mendel ib. iii. 613 ff. no. 1404 fig. (=my fig. 873) adds a statuette (height 0·76^{m}), of local limestone, from Soukhné to the north-east of Palmyra, which shows a similar type with even richer decoration. On the breast is engraved the god himself, flanked by Helios and Men: on the abdomen, Hera or Demeter, flanked by Athena and Hermes(?). On the base is inscribed in lettering of s. ii—iii A.D. I(ovi) · O(ptimo) · M(aximo) · H(eliopolitano) | Sex(tus) · Rasius · Proculus · praef(ectus) · coh(ortis) · II · Thrac(um) · v(otum) p(osuit). But the most important monument of the cult yet found is the idol of gilded bronze (height 0·384m) from Ba'albek itself, slashed and broken by some fanatic but skilfully repaired by M. André for the Charles Sursock collection and admirably published by R. Dussaud in Syria 1920 i. 3—15 pls. 1—4 (of which 1 and 2=my figs. 874 and 875), S. N. Deane in the Am. Journ. Arch. 1921 xxv. 94 fig. 2, Reinach Rép. Stat. v. 10 no. 5, The Illustrated London News for May 2, 1931 p. 743. The bronze, which may be dated c. 150 A.D., represents the god as he stood with his usual attributes, wearing a kálathos (of interlaced reeds(?) decked with four corn-ears and a disk between globules perhaps meant for schematized uraei), a long chitón with short sleeves, and a cuirass-like sheath with numerous reliefs (on the chest, a winged disk; below, seven busts—Helios and Selene, Athena and Hermes, Zeus and Hera, Kronos; and above the feet a lion-head for Gennaios (supra p. 888): behind, another winged disk, an eagle, two rams'-heads to suggest Zeus Ammon, six four-leaved rosettes or stars of diminishing size: at the sides, two elongated thunderbolts). The whole figure is erect on a cubical plinth adorned with a relief of Tyche (turreted crown, rudder, cornu copiae). And the plinth, flanked by a pair of young bulls, rests on a larger base, which is pierced with a circular opening (c. 0·073m across)—possibly a letter-box for the codicilli of persons consulting the god (Macrob. Sat. i. 23. 14 ff. (supra i. 552 f.)). See further R. Cagnat in Syria 1924 v. 108 ff. and S. A. Cook The Religion of Ancient Palestine in the light of Archaeology London 1930 pp. 15, 141 n. 4, 187, 218—222 pl. 39, 1.

Fig. 874.

Fig. 875.

The biggest harvest of fresh facts bearing on the Ba'albek cults is, however, that garnered in the posthumous work of Sébastien Ronzevalle Jupiter Héliopolitain, Nova et Vetera (Notes et Études d'Archéologie Orientale. Troisième Série, ii) in the Mélanges de l'Université Saint-Joseph xxi, i Beyrouth 1937 pp. 1—181 with 17 figs. and 51 pls. (reviewed by F. R. Walton in the Am. Journ. Arch. 1938 xlii. 435 f.). This monograph publishes a mass of new or little known material, including altars, stêlai, engraved gems, lead seals, bronze rings, etc. In particular it furnishes a full account of the rock-cut relief in the quarry at Ferzol (pp. 29—71) and of the carved octagonal altar at Fîkî or Fâkyé on the west slope of Antilibanos (pp. 87—129). Incidentally it discusses many, if not most, of the associated deities of Koile Syria. And it ends (p. 138 f.) by laying stress on the symbolic corn-ears of Ba'albek (supra i. 558, 569, 572, iii. 1093): 'C'est dans cet épi que se concentre finalement toute l'essence de la religion héliopolitaine sous l'empire romain. Issue de la triade familiale [supra i. 553 f. Hadad, Atargatis, Seimios] groupée autour du grand dieu syrien du tonnerre et de la pluie, Hadad, cette religion devint progressivement celle du dieu du Ciel, B'el-Šamîn, embrassant dans ses flancs les traits qui, dès l'époque hellénistique, méritèrent à Ba'albek la dénomination d'Héliopolis, et firent d'elle avec le temps le centre cœlésyrien de tous les cultes solaires de l'époque romaine. Tout se résolvait pratiquement dans l'adoration de l'astre brillant du jour, dans ses fonctions de dispensateur de vie et de prospérité agraire, telles qu'elles nous sont résumées dans l'image récemment découverte à Doura du B'el-Šamîn—Zeὺs θεός, image par laquelle je mets fin à toute cette étude (pl. XLII)' [M. Rostovtzeff Dura-Europos and its Art Oxford 1938 p. 63 f. pl. 11, 1 'Bas-relief of Zeus Kyrios,' p. 68 ff. pl. 13 'Painted decoration of the cella of the temple of Zeus Theos. (Restoration by F. Brown);' The Excavations at Dura-Europos Prelim. Report vii—viii. Yale Univ. Press 1939, pp. 180 ff. (The Temple of Zeus Theos), 284 ff. (The Temple of Zeus Kyrios)].

i. 571 n. 2 leonine gods. At Bir-Derbal near Ghardimaou in Tunisia a Punico-Roman sanctuary containing a dedicatory inscription to Saturn was found; also other rustic sanctuaries of s. ii A.D., which could boast life-size statues of terracotta and many statuettes. One life-size head had the face of a lioness wearing fillets and is thought to have represented the Genius Terrae Africae (L. Carton 'Note sur des édicules renfermant des statues en terre cuite, découverts dans la région de Ghardimaou (Tunisie)' in the Comptes rendus de l'Acad. des inscr. et belles-lettres 1918 pp. 338—347, W. N. Bates in the Am. Journ. Arch. 1919 xxiii. 320), because a denarius issued by Q. Caecilius Metellus Pius Scipio in 47—46 B.C. shows Sekhet with leonine head, disk, and ankh accompanied by the legend Γ·Τ·Α (Babelon Monn. rép. rom. i. 280 no. 51 fig., Brit. Mus. Cat. Rom. Coins Rep. ii. 572 no. 8 pl. 121, 4 and no. 9 (Genius Tutelaris Africae or Genius Totius Africae?).

i. 581 the golden thunderbolt of Adad. Cp. Liv. 22. 1 (when prodigies occurred in 217 B.C.) decemvirorum monitu decretum est, Iovi primum donum fulmen aureum pondo quinquaginta fieret, etc. Aristoph. av. 1750 (supra p. 59).

A magnificent relief in basalt from Arslan-Tash, dating from the reign of Tiglath-pileser iii (746—727 B.C.), shows Adad, with a double three-pronged thunderbolt in either hand, standing on the back and head of a bull as he advances rapidly from left to right (L'art de la Mésopotamie ancienne au Musée du Louvre Paris 1936 v. 300 fig. A).

i. 586 Atargatis with her lions. R. Dussaud 'Patère de bronze de Tafas' in Syria 1924 v. 212—215 with pl. 54, 1 and 2 (E. H. Heffner in the Am. Journ. Arch. 1926 xxx. 342) describes a bronze patera of Roman date, found at Tafas in the Hauran but later stolen from the Mohammedan Museum at Damaskos. The central relief shows a lion standing in front of a column on which is an image of Priapos. The lion rests his forepaw on a scabellum (?). At the left is a musician playing the double flutes; at the right, a woman with a timbrel, towards whom the lion turns his head. Dussaud thinks that the lion of Atargatis prefers the native timbrel to the foreign flutes!

Fig. 876.

i. 586 figs. 448 and 449. See further A. L. Frothingham in the Am. Journ. Arch. 1916 xx. 204—211 fig. 40.

i. 590 fig. 450. See now Brit. Mus. Cat. Coins Arabia etc. pp. xxxii, 28 pl. 4, 15 and 16.

N. Glueck in The Illustrated London News for Aug. 21, 1937 p. 298 ff. publishes finds from a Nabataean temple known as Khirbet et-Tannur and situated on a hill in southern Transjordania, directly south of the Wadi el-Hesa (the 'brook Zered' of Deut. 2. 13, cp. Num. 21. 12). Excavations in March 1937 yielded bearded heads probably representing Zeus (Adad) (p. 298 fig. 3, p. 299 fig. 11); a relief of Zeus (Adad) enthroned between two young bulls, his neck encircled by a lion-headed torque, his right hand raised perhaps to hold a double axe, his left hand grasping the bull's ear and partly concealed by a conspicuous thunderbolt (p. 299 fig. 15 = my fig. 876 from a photograph kindly supplied by Mr Glueck); an incense-altar with reliefs of Zeus (Adad) and Tyche (p. 298 figs. 7—9); the bust of Atargatis in relief with leaf-like decoration (fish-scales? A. B. C.) on forehead, cheeks, and chest (p. 299 fig. 6); the bust of Atargatis in relief with head-dress formed of two fishes (p. 299 fig. 5); a snake-entwined eagle standing on a wreath with a plaster basin below (p. 300 fig. 18); etc. For a fuller account of these important finds see N. Glueck 'The Nabataean Temple of Khirbet et-Tannûr' in the Bulletin of the American School of Oriental Research for October 1937 No. 67 pp. 6—16 figs. 2—8, id. 'A newly discovered Nabataean temple of Atargatis and Hadad at Khirbet et-Tannûr, Transjordania' in the Am. Journ. Arch. 1937 xli. 361—376 figs. 1—15, C. Picard 'Les sculptures nabatéennes de Khirbet-et-Tannour et l'Hadad de Pouzzoles' in the Rev. Arch. 1937 ii. 244—249 figs. 1—4.

i. 592 n. 0 the sacred 'cock.' H. Gressmann 'Der heilige Hahn zu Hieropolis in Syrien' in the Zeitschrift für die Alttestamentliche Wissenschaft Giessen 1925 Beiheft xli. 88—95 (cp. Corp. inscr. Gr. iii no. 4000, 5 (Ikonion) as read by Sir W. M. Ramsay in the Journ. Hell. Stud. 1918 xxxviii. 157 φαιὸλευκον ἀλέκτορ[α], and modern Palestinian customs (J. A. Jaussen 'Le coq et la pluie dans la tradition palestinienne' in the Revue biblique internationale 1924 xxxiii. 574—582)).

i. 598 n. 1 Zeus at the Italian Lokroi. S. Mirone 'Copies de statues sur les monnaies de la Grande Grèce' in the Rev. Num. iv Série 1926 xxix. 134—138 deals with Zeus Ἐλευθέριος at Tarentum, Metapontum, and Lokroi Epizephyrioi.

i. 602 eagle on pyramidal structures at Tarsos and Seleukeia Pieria. F. Cumont 'L'aigle funéraire des Syriens et l'apothéose des empereurs' in the Revue de l'histoire des religions 1910 lxii. 119—164 with figs. 1—22 and pl. 1, id. (citing A. H. Gardiner) 'A propos de l'aigle funéraire des Syriens' ib. 1911 lxiii. 208—214, S. Ronzevalle 'L'aigle funéraire en Syrie' in the Mélanges de la Faculté orientale: Université Saint-Joseph, Beyrouth 1912 v. 2. 1*—62* with 9 figs., 105*—115* with 4 figs., L. Deubner 'Die Apotheose des Antoninus Pius' in the Röm. Mitth. 1912 xxvii. 1—20 figs. 1—4, F. Cumont Études Syriennes Paris 1917 pp. 35—118 ('L'aigle funéraire d'Hiérapolis et l'apothéose des empereurs') with figs. 9—43.

i. 602. For ∇ as the womb of a mother-goddess see the evidence collected by F. Dornseiff Das Alphabet in Mystik und Magie Leipzig—Berlin 1922 p. 21 f., M. Mayer 'Delta praehistoricum' in the Berl. philol. Woch. Jan. 19, 1929 pp. 91—94, E. Wüst in the Jahresbericht über die Fortschritte der klassischen Altertumswissenschaft 1932 lviii. 1. 142.

i. 603 n. 5 Di-Sandas. R. Rochette in the Mémoires de l'Institut National de France (Académie des Inscriptions et Belles-Lettres) Paris 1848 xvii. 161 insists 'qu'il faut certainement lire de cette manière: Δι-Σανδάν.'

604 the rock-carvings near Boghaz-keui. These are now well published by K. Bittel Die Felsbilder von Yazilikaya Bamberg 1934 with bibliography, map, plan, 28 photographic pls., and panoramic drawing. id. Die Ruinen von Boğazköy Berlin—Leipzig 1937 pp. 1—107 with 63 figs., chronological table, and 3 plans. It appears that the great procession of Iasily Kaya may be dated between 1350 and 1330 B.C. (C. Picard in the Rev. Arch. 1937 ii. 256).

i. 604 ff. Zeus Dolichaîos and Iupiter Dolichenus. To the bibliography given on p. 604 n. 8 should be added F. Cumont Études Syriennes Paris 1917 pp. 173—202 ('Dolichè et le Zeus Dolichènos') with figs. 55—70, id. 'Groupe de marbre du Zeus Dolichénos' in Syria 1920 i. 183—189 pl. 17 (found 'entre Marash et Biredjik': Zeus stands on bull supported by altar with base inscribed Κρίσπος καὶ Σιλβα[ν]ὸς), K. A. Neugebauer Antike Bronzestatuetten Berlin 1921 p. 118 f. fig. 65 (Genius of Iupiter Dolichenus from Mar'ash, now in the Antiquarium at Berlin), p. 120 fig. 63 (Iupiter Dolichenus from Berlin—Lichtenberg, now in the Antiquarium at Berlin), id. in Gnomon 1930 vi. 269, J. Leipoldt in H. Haas Bilderatlas zur Religionsgeschichte Leipzig—Erlangen 1926 ix—

xi. 15 f. figs. 116—122, W. Lamb Greek and Roman Bronzes London 1929 p. 227 f., S. B. Platner—T. Ashby A Topographical Dictionary of Ancient Rome Oxford 1929 p. 292 (temple at the western corner of the Aventine, shrine on the Esquiline, shrine in Reg. xiv), The Illustrated London News for Aug. 17, 1935 p. 290 (recent finds on the Aventine, including a photograph of the sanctuary, a marble statue of the god holding a double axe in his right hand and a thunderbolt in his left, an inscription mentioning Commodus, etc.), G. I. Kazarow 'Denkmäler des Dolichenus-Kultes' in the Jahresh. d. oest. arch. Inst. 1932 xxvii. 168—173 figs. 105—108 (finds made in 1930 at Jassen near Widin (Bononia) in Bulgaria, including a triangular bronze plate with well-preserved reliefs of the god on his bull and his partner on her hind, a bronze tablet inscribed I. O. M. Dol. | Aur. Bas|sus sac. | servus eius, and the left half of another bronze tablet with the pointillé inscription I. O. [M. Dol.] | Fl. Sabin[us...] | Valeria V[...] | Tin-sadno... | suo ex iusso [dei]).

i. 611 f. eagle between horns of bull and on short column beneath hull. Perhaps cp. the terra-cotta group published in pl. lxxvii, a and b.

i. 619 n. 4. A rosette on the forehead of a bull is a commonplace in ancient art: see J. Déchelette Manuel d'archéologie Paris 1910 ii. 1. 480, 1914 ii. 3. 1310. A couple of examples will suffice. A gold earring of Greek work (s. iv—iii B.C.), found in Palestine and now in my possession, shows a bull's head with a spiral rosette on the forehead. A gold strap-buckle of the La Tène period, found in the tomb of Chilperich I at Tournai in 1653 and stolen from the Cabinet des Médailles in 1831, had also a spiral rosette on the forehead (F. Dahn Urgeschichte der germanischen und romanischen Völker Berlin 1883 iii. 480 fig. 18 f., J. Déchelette op. cit. ii. 3. 1308 fig. 570, 2). Both are possibly symbolic.

S. Ronzevalle Jupiter Héliopolitain Beyrouth 1937 p. 51 ff. publishes a pair of monuments from the Ḥaurân. A basalt stèle (0·875^{m} high) from Tell Aš'ari near Tafas, now in the Museum at Damaskos, shows a bull-headed god en face. His horns make a large crescent enclosing a rosette. Under his left arm is a smaller rosette. And across his body is a sword (pl. 14 bis, 51 and 52). An almost exact replica of this relief (0·80^{m} high) is to be seen in a niche at 'Âwas south of Salḫad (fig. 12). Ronzevalle cp. a square altar of basalt (0·88^{m} high) from Salḫad, on which a bull's head appears in relief between the two parts of a Greek dedication to Ζεὺς μέγας ὁ κύριος (M. Dunand Le Musée de Soueïda: Inscriptions et monuments figurés Paris 1934 p. 99 no. 200 Διὶ μεγά|λῳ τῷ κυρίῳ | ὑπὲρ σωτηρίας | Μονίμου Βα|σιλίσκου Κ[ύρ]|ου ‖ Ἄνος οἰκοδό|μος εὐσεβῶν ἐπό|ησε).

i. 624 the Milky Way and Hera. So in Siberian mythology a Buriat tale explains the Milky Way as the overflow from the breasts of the Heaven-goddess Manzan Görmö (U. Holmberg Finno-Ugric, Siberian Mythology Boston 1927 pp. 414, 434).

i. 625 n. 1 the stars as flowers. Cp. Basil. hom. in hexaem. 6. 1 (xxix. 117 C Migne) τίς ὁ τοῖς ἄνθεσι τούτοις διαποικίλας τὸν οὐρανόν and the remarks of A. von Humboldt Cosmos trans. E. C. Otté London 1849 ii. 395.

i. 626 the Byzantine list of planets, metals, plants, and animals. S. Langdon in the Museum Journal: University of Pennsylvania 1918 ix. 151—156 with fig. describes a Babylonian tablet of c. 1600 B.C. dealing with symbolism in the Cassite period. W. N. Bates in the Am. Journ. Arch. 1919 xxiii. 179 summarises: 'The text explains the divine powers which are controlled or symbolized by various substances and utensils employed in the rituals. Thus the jar of holy water signifies Ninhabursildu, queen of incantations; the tamerisk signifies the god of the heavens; the head of the date palm, Tammuz; the cypress, the aid of Adad; the censer invokes the god of the spring sun, Urasha, etc. It also gives the only information yet recovered about the mystic meanings of metals. Silver is the god of the heavens, gold the earth god, copper the god of the sea, lead the great mother goddess.' Prof. Langdon adds in a letter of Oct. 31, 1919: 'the sky god is symbolized by silver...because for astronomical reasons the Moon (or the silver god) was identified with the sky god at the summer solstice.' See further C. O. Zuretti Alchemistica signa (Catalogue des manuscrits alchimiques grecs viii) Bruxelles 1932 p. 1 ff.

i. 626 ff. Akin to the silvered or gilded plates of Iupiter Dolichenus is one of repoussé bronze, found by E. Cunnington in 1882 at the Romano-Celtic temple in Maiden Castle and now in the Museum at Dorchester (fig. 877, a front, b back, from the official photographs). It represents Minerva standing en face with helmet, spear, Gorgon's head, and shield, the whole on a raised oblong surrounded by the usual spear-head and lily-work (R. E. M. Wheeler in The Antiquaries Journal 1935 xv. 272). At the bottom edge are the remains of one or two letters, part of a lost inscription (Lt.-Col. C. D. Drew in a communication dated March 20, 1938). Minerva is known elsewhere on the plates of Dolichenus (supra i. 616 fig. 487, 619 with fig. 490), and it is conceivable that the cult of this maiden goddess, domiciled in the fourth-century temple (for which see R. E. M.

a

b

Terra-cotta group in the British Museum, p[r]obably connected with the cult of Iupiter Dolichenus (?).

See page 1098.

I am indebted to Mr C. M. Robertson for the following official d[e]scription: '1907. 5—20. 69 Terracotta eagle with wreath in beak standing on bull's head, all on a flat square base. This now stands on a t[e]rra-cotta column, but it is not certain that they originally belonged together, though both are no doubt antique. They were acquired among a collection formed at Odessa from excavations of tombs at Olbia.'

A bronze mace from Willingham Fen, now in the Museum of Archaeology and of Ethnology, Cambridge.

See page 1099 f.

Wheeler loc. cit. p. 270 ff. pls. 33, 34, 2, 37, 38, 2, Miss M. V. Taylor in the Journ. Rom. Stud. 1935 xxv. 220 f. pls. 40 and 41, 1, ead. ib. 1937 xxvii. 242 f.), contributed something to the popular etymology of Maiden (properly Mai-Dun) Castle. The temple itself may have been that of Dolichenus, a Celtic form of whom is suggested by a votive offering found in 1934 just outside the south-east corner of the building, viz. a three-horned bull (supra i. 639) made of tinned bronze and bearing a triad of busts, one minus its head (R. E. M. Wheeler loc. cit. p. 272 pl. 39 (=my fig. 878), Miss M. V. Taylor loc. cit. p. 220 pl. 41, 2).

a b

Fig. 877.

Another power associated with Dolichenus in the Celtic area as a pendant to Minerva with her spear was Hercules with his club (supra i. 616 fig. 487). And here we must take into account the interesting bronze mace found in 1857 by a ploughman on Willingham Fen, ten miles north-west of Cambridge (M. Rostovtseff—M. V. Taylor 'Commodus-Hercules in Britain' in the Journ. Rom. Stud. 1923 xiii. 91 ff. pl. 3 (inadequate), L. C. G. Clarke in The Antiquaries Journal 1926 vi. 178 f. pl. 31, F. M. Heichelheim in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. vi A. 925 f., id. in Proceedings of the Cambridge Antiquarian Society 1935—1936 xxxvii. 56 ff. pl. 4, b). The mace had been deliberately broken, perhaps by way of damnatio memoriae after Commodus' assassination in 192 A.D., and enclosed in a wooden chest along with a number of votive bronzes—soldiers on horseback, a bull's head, an eagle, an owl, etc. The three fragments of the mace, which together measure c. 0·345^{m} in height and had once a wooden core, are decorated as follows (pl. lxxviii): (1) A bust of Commodus, wearing the paludamentum, forms the handle. (2) On the shaft is a nude beardless god with right hand uplifted (as if to brandish a bolt) and left hand raised (as if to hold a sceptre or spear). He sets his left foot on the bearded (?) head of a giant emerging from the ground. To the left an eagle, now headless, is perched on a globe, which rests on a six-spoked wheel marked with rays. To the right projects the head of a bull with three horns, one of which is now broken off. At the back plunges a dolphin. (3) The mace terminates as a knotted club. It is clear that the artist was primarily concerned to identify Commodus with Hercules (supra ii. 255 n. 0, 903 n. 2). But, since Commodus also posed as a youthful Iupiter holding thunderbolt and sceptre (supra i. 276 n. 5 fig. 202, ii. 1185 figs. 987, 988), a corresponding figure appears on the shaft. Further syncretism equates this Iupiter with the Germanic Ziu, the victorious rider of the Iupiter-columns, who tramples his giant under foot (supra ii. 74 ff.). It equips him also with the eagle-on-globe and the radiate wheel as a sky-god, with the three-horned bull perhaps as an earth-god (?Dis pater. But F. M. Heichelheim in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. iv A. 2281 f., 2453 ff. stresses 'Beziehungen zur Wassertiefe' and suspects connexion with Tarvos Trigaranus (supra i. 482 n. 0)), and even with the dolphin as a sea-god—thereby completing his claim to universal dominion.

Fig. 878.

i. 630 ff. 'where iron is born.' M. P. Charlesworth in a note to me (Oct. 29, 1934) cp. Plin. nat. hist. 33. 118 Iuba minium nasci et in Carmania tradit, Timagenes et in Aethiopia, etc. But a closer parallel is furnished by the Kalevala runo 9. 25 ff. Kirby, where Väinämöinen says 'Well I know the birth of Iron, | And how steel was first created.' He goes on to tell how—

Ukko, God of realms supernal,
Rubbed his mighty hands together.
Both his hands he rubbed together,
On his left knee then he pressed them,
And three maidens were created,
Three fair Daughters of Creation,
Mothers of the rust of Iron,
And of blue-mouthed steel the fosterers.
Strolled the maids with faltering footsteps
On the borders of the cloudlets,
And their full breasts were o'erflowing,
And their nipples pained them sorely.
Down on earth their milk ran over,
From their breasts' o'erflowing fulness,
Milk on land, and milk on marshes,
Milk upon the peaceful waters.
Black milk from the first was flowing,
From the eldest of the maidens,
White milk issued from another,
From the second of the maidens,
Red milk by the third was yielded,
By the youngest of the maidens.
Where the black milk had been dropping,
There was found the softest Iron,
Where the white milk had been flowing,
There the hardest steel was fashioned,
Where the red milk had been trickling,
There was undeveloped Iron.

i. 631 n. 8. A. H. Sayce in the Journ. Hell. Stud. 1910 xxx. 315 notes: "Αλύβη, or rather 'Αλύβη, corresponds with a Hittite Khaly-wa, "the land of the Halys," just as 'Αρζύβ[η] corresponds with Arzawa. The Halizonians are the Khalitu of a (cuneiform) inscription of the proto-Armenian king Rusas II. (B.C. 680),...who says that he had made a campaign against "the Moschians, the Hittites, and the Khalitu." The silver-mines of the Taurus, which were worked by the Hittites, were the chief source of the silver supplied to the early oriental world: hence the metal was a special favourite with the Hittites, from whom the rest of the world obtained it.' Cp. Sir A. Evans The Palace of Minos London 1928 ii. 1. 169 n. 2. More hazardous conjectures in J. Karst Die vorgeschichtlichen Mittelmeervölker Heidelberg 1931 pp. 71 f., 254, 348.

i. 632 n. 5. Add Iul. Obs. 39 (Lycosthenes) mures in aede Iovis aurum roserunt.

i. 633 ff. The monograph of L. Malten 'Der Stier in Kult und mythischem Bild' in the Jahrb. d. Deutsch. Arch. Inst. 1928 xliii. 90—139 has a useful collection of evidence from Egypt (pp. 92—98 figs. 1—11), Mesopotamia (pp. 98—107 figs. 12—27), Asia Minor (pp. 107—114 figs. 28—41), Syria (pp. 114—117 figs. 42—51), Palestine (pp. 117—119 figs. 52—54), Phoinike (p. 120 fig. 55), Crete (pp. 121—137 figs. 56—89), a brief notice of survivals in classical cults and myths (p. 137 f.), and some consideration of the Bull's significance from first to last (p. 138 f.).

i. 636 bull with body-marks. The best example is one from Ur published by C. L. Woolley in The Antiquaries Journal 1923 iii. 331 pl. 34 fig. 1, a: 'U 239 is a part of a shallow bowl of steatite originally surrounded by four bulls, of which one is preserved intact. The carving is remarkably good; the ground is inlaid in ivory with designs of sun, moon and stars; on the bull's body are trefoil marks resembling those on the Hathor cows of Egypt, on its shoulder and leg round spots arranged in the order of the stars of the Great Wain; it is the "great Bull of Heaven." A fragmentary inscription assigns it to the Third Dynasty.' Mr Sidney Smith kindly informs me (March 24, 1938) that the original is in the Baghdad Museum and should be dated c. 2200 B.C. or a little earlier: he adds that there is a poor cast of it in the British Museum. P. S. Bartoli Museum Odescalchum Romæ 1752 ii. 99 ff. pl. 42 shows a marble base with relief of a bull walking to the right. On his side is a crescent moon ☽, and above him the inscription BVE API. Id. ib. ii. 122 pl. 53 shows a similar (?other surface of same) base with relief of a bull walking to the right. On his side is a six-rayed star.

i. 638 bull in bowl surrounded by millet. Cp. perhaps the seated goddesses (of fertility?) and other discoid figures in clay found along with grains of barley, beans, and peas in urns of the Bronze Age at Tarxien, Malta (Sir T. Zammit Prehistoric Malta Oxford 1930 p. 48 ff. pls. 15, 1, 16 and figs. 3—10, G. W. Elderkin in the Am. Journ. Arch. 1931 xxxv. 366).

i. 638 f. H. Frankfort in The Illustrated London News for Sept. 14, 1935 p. 430 fig. 6 publishes the ornament from a Sumerian harp of c. 3000 B.C., which was found at Khafaje, Iraq. It is a bull's head in copper with inlaid eyes and forehead. The white of the eyes is shell, the iris lapis lazuli, and the triangle on the forehead mother-of-pearl.

i. 639 n. 2 the Celtic cult of bulls. See now an important paper by A. D. Lacaille 'The Bull in Scottish Folklore, Place-names, and Archaeology' in Folk-Lore 1930 xli. 221—248 pls. 3—8, F. M. Heichelheim s.v. 'Tarvos Trigaranus' in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. iv A. 2453—2457, Wirth s.v. 'Stier' in the Handwörterbuch des deutschen Aberglaubens Berlin—Leipzig 1936 viii. 482—486.

i. 639 n. 4. Cp. A. Fick in the Zeitschrift für vergleichende Sprachforschung 1911 xliv. 4.

i. 642 n. 4. On Zeus as 'tyrant' in Aisch. P. v. see G. Thomson 'Ζεὺς Τύραννος' in the Class. Rev. 1929 xliii. 3—5.

i. 643 Mount Tâbôr. See further J. Boehmer 'Der Name Tabor' in the Zeitschrift für Semitistik und verwandte Gebiete 1929 vii. 161—169, O. Eissfeldt in the Archiv f. Rel. 1930 xxviii. 25 n. 3.

i. 643. Soph. frag. 348 Dindorf (assigned to the Αημνίαι), 708 Nauck², 776 Jebb ap. schol. vet. Theokr. 7. 76/77 d. and ap. et. mag. p. 26, 16 ff. Ἄθως σκιάζει νῶτα Αημνίας βοός (so, without Sophokles' name, Cramer anecd. Paris. iv. 96, 17 ff., Zonar. lex. s.v. Ἄθως, Eustath. in Il. p. 980, 45 f. Schol. B. L. V. Il. 14. 229 ὦτα for νῶτα!) already implies the proverb which later writers commonly quote as Ἄθως καλύπτει πλευρὰ Αημνίας βοός (Greg. Kypr. 1. 73, alii. A Latin form of it perhaps in Varr. de ling. Lat. 7. 25 'cornu<t>a taurum umbram iaci', which O. Ribbeck Trag. Rom. frag. p. 311 would restore as '<Atós> in cornuátam taurum umbrám iacit'). Paroemiographers etc. explain that the allusion is to the shadow of Mt Athos which touched a white marble cow on Lemnos (Makar. 1. 46, Apostol. 1. 57, Arsen. viol. p. 25 Walz, Souid. s.v. Ἄθως). Plout. de fac. in orb. lun. 22 and et. mag. p. 26, 17 f. state, with greater probability, that the cow was of bronze. Others add that the shadow at the solstice reached the marketplace of Myrina (Ap. Rhod. 1. 601 ff. with schol. ad loc., Plin. nat. hist. 4. 73, Solin. 11. 33, cp. Stat. Theb. 5. 49 ff.). The fullest discussion of the facts is that of A. C. Pearson in his edition of The Fragments of Sophocles Cambridge 1917 iii. 26 f. It is tempting to conjecture that the bronze cow of Lemnos, thus associated with sun and shadow, was akin to the bronze cattle of Mt Atabyron. If so, it had a Hittite ancestry.

i. 643 the bull of Perillos. On the bull-headed furnace at Byzantion, known as ὁ Βοῦς and used for the burning of criminals, see E. Oberhummer in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. iii. 1072. The principal text is Kodinos de signis Constantinopolitanis 25 D—26 A (p. 46 Bekker) = Anonymos πάτρια 2. 53 (p. 180, 8 ff. Preger) περὶ τοῦ Βοός. εἰς δὲ τὸν καλούμενον Βοῦν κάμνος ἦν ἐκεῖσε παμμεγέθης ἐκτισμένη βοὸς ἔχουσα κεφαλήν· ἔνθα καὶ οἱ κακοῦργοι ἐτιμωροῦντο· ὅθεν καὶ ὁ Ἰουλιανὸς προφάσει τῶν καταδίκων πολλοὺς ἐν αὐτῷ κατέκαυσεν Χριστιανούς. ἦν δὲ ἡ κάμινος βοὸς τύπος παμμεγεθεστάτου θεάματος· οὗ κατὰ μίμησιν καὶ ἐν τῷ Νεωρίῳ βοῦς ἀπετυπώθη. ἦν δὲ ἡ κάμινος ἕως Φωκᾶ (602—610 A.D.), ἀλλ' ὑπὸ Ἡρακλείου (610—641 A.D.) ἐχωνεύθη λόγῳ φόλλεων. This bronze Bull is said to have been brought from Pergamon, where it had been used for the martyrdom of Antipas (Kedren. hist. comp. 323 B (i. 566 Bekker) ὅτι ὁ χαλκοῦς βοῦς ἐκ Περγάμου ἦλθε, κάμινος δὲ ἦν ἐν ᾗ πέφληκται ὁ ἅγιος μάρτυς Ἀντίπας, Zonar. 14. 14 (iii. 304, 11 ff. Dindorf) τὸ δὲ δύστηνον σῶμα (sc. of Phokas) καυθῆναι κατὰ τὸν Βοῦν, ἔνθα κάμινος ἦν, ὡς λέγεται, ἐκ χαλκοῦ κατεσκευασμένη, σχῆμα βοὸς ἔχουσα, ἥπερ ἐκ Περγάμου κεκόμιστο, ἐξ ἧς καὶ ὁ τόπος ὠνόμαστο). A. G. Sofiano Pergame Moderne et Antique Athènes 1930 p. 111 figures St Antipas being burnt in the copper bull, and ib. p. 112 observes: 'Ce bœuf avait été élevé par Attale I^er^ en mémoire de sa victoire sur les Galates; plus tard, il fut transporté à Constantinople où on le fit servir à diverses éxécutions: y furent brûlés, entre autres, Théodore et Stéphane, ministres de Justinien.' See further S. Baring-Gould The Lives of the Saints Edinburgh 1914 iv. 136 S. Antipas (April 11), 304 S. George of Cappadocia (April 23), v. 66 S. Pelagia (May 4), x. 319 SS. Eustathius, Theopista, Agapius, Theopistus (Sept. 20). The last-mentioned holocaust is figured in the Ecclesiae militantis triumphi Paris s.a. pl. 9.

A final trace of the Hittite bull-cult, drawn from some classical source and modified by mediaeval imagination, may be detected in Perceval le Gallois ou le conte du Graal trans. S. Evans London 1903 p. 214 ff. Branch 18 Title 9 '...he came to the Castle of Copper. Within the castle were a number of folk that worshipped the bull of copper and believed not in any other God. The bull of copper was in the midst of the castle upon four columns of copper, and bellowed so loud at all hours of the day that it was heard for a league round about, and there was an evil spirit within that gave answers...' with the sequel.

i. 645 n. 4 on the 'shields' of the Idaean Cave see also F. W. von Bissing in the Jahrb. d. Deutsch. Arch. Inst. 1923/24 xxxviii/ix. 211 ff.

i. 648 Orphism in Crete. Cp. O. Kern 'Orphiker auf Kreta' in Hermes 1916 li. 554—567 and the satisfactory handling of the whole matter by W. K. C. Guthrie Orpheus and Greek Religion London 1935 pp. 108 ff., 146 f.

i. 650 n. 1 the ῥόμβος or 'bull-roarer.' See further R. Battaglia 'Sopravvivenze del rombo nelle Provincie Venete' in the Studi e Materiali di Storia delle Religioni 1925 i. 3. 190—217 with 7 figs., A. S. F. Gow 'ΙΥΓΞ, ΡΟΜΒΟΣ, RHOMBUS, TURBO' in the Journ. Hell. Stud. 1934 liv. 1—13 with figs. 1—11.

i. 651 n. 1 Zagreús as the god 'of Mt Zágros.' The same derivation is propounded independently by F. Hommel Ethnologie und Geographie des alten Orients München 1926 p. 721 n. 3.

i. 653 the Praisians sacrifice to a pig. Cp. Loukian. Iup. trag. 42 'Ασσύριοι περιστερᾷ (sc. θύοντες).

i. 655 on the etymology of Τῑτάν. A. Nehring 'Griechisch τῑταξ, τῑτήνη und ein vorgriechisches k-Suffix' in Glotta 1925 xiv. 153—192 discussing inter alia the word Τῑτάν, Τῑτήν (p. 167 ff.) postulates an original Τῑτάν as a 'Lallwort' meaning 'Vater' 'Väterchen,' cp. τῑταξ, τῑταξ (Hesych. s.v. τῑταξ cited supra i. 655 n. 2) and relates the whole group to Etruscan and the languages of Asia Minor.

i. 657 n. 2 Minos ὀλοόφρων. K. Marót '"Ατλας ὀλοόφρων' in the Berl. philol. Woch. Mai 22, 1926 pp. 585—590 concludes 'dass sich das Epitheton des Atlas ὀλοόφρων nicht auf eine moralische Schuld, sondern bloss auf die Boshaftigkeit eines "Täters," d. h. auf ein mythisch-vorethisches "Verderbensinnen" beziehen kann.'

i. 662. W. K. C. Guthrie Orpheus and Greek Religion London 1935 p. 109 would amend my rendering of Firm. Mat. 6. 4 and 5 pro tumulo extruit templum and deus factus est qui habere non potuit sepulturam by translating 'he built a temple in place of a tomb' and 'has made a god out of one who was not able to find burial.'

i. 664 n. 1 on Epimenides περὶ Μίνω καὶ Ῥαδαμάνθυος. Further discussion by H. Gressmann in the Berl. philol. Woch. Juli 26, 1913 pp. 935—938, J. Rendel Harris in the Expositor 1915 pp. 29—35, T. Nicklin in the Class. Rev. 1916 xxx. 33—37, Sir W. M. Ramsay Asianic Elements in Greek Civilisation London 1927 pp. 32—39.

i. 665 ff. on the origin of tragedy. My hypothesis is dismissed with little argument but much contumely by K. Ziegler in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. vi A. 1952 f. Greater weight attaches to the courteous and clear-headed critique of A. W. Pickard-Cambridge Dithyramb Tragedy and Comedy Oxford 1927 pp. 208—220—in a context neatly summarised by Pfister Rel. Gr. Röm. 1930 p. 229: 'Bei der Behandlung der Tragödie schätzt er (m. E. mit Recht) gegen v. Wilamowitz und Kranz das Zeugnis des Aristoteles sehr gering ein und verwirft die Hypothesen von der Entstehung der Tragödie, die Ridgeway (aus dem Heroenkult), Murray (aus δρώμενα zu Ehren des Dionysos) und Cook (aus dem kretischen Ritual der Dionysos-Zagreus) aufgestellt haben, und ist selbst der Ansicht, dass die Tragödie nicht aus dem Satyrspiel stammt, dass τραγῳδός "singer at the goat-sacrifice" oder "singer for the goat-prize" bedeutet. Bei Behandlung der Komödie wird der κῶμος, aus dem sie entstand, ausführlich besprochen und Cornfords Hypothese (Entstehung aus einem Ritual, das dem Jahresdämon galt) widerlegt.'

i. 671 pillar with Dionysiac mask or masks. See now W. Wrede 'Der Maskengott' in the Ath. Mitth. 1928 liii. 66—95 with pls. 1—4, supplementary pls. 21—28, and figs. 1—4 (E. H. Heffner in the Am. Journ. Arch. 1929 xxxiii. 554 f.).

An oracle (Cougny Anth. Pal. Append. 6. 243) ap. Clem. Al. strom. 1. 24 p. 102, 11 f. Stählin has στῦλος Θηβαίοισι Διώνυσος πολυγηθής, cp. Eur. Antiope frag. 203 Nauck[2] ap. Clem. Al. loc. cit. p. 102, 13 ff. Stählin ἔνδον δὲ θαλάμοις βουκόλων | κομῶντα κισσῷ στῦλον Εὐίου θεοῦ.

i. 674. Apollodoros of Athens no doubt lived in 'The second century B.C.' and wrote his great work περὶ θεῶν in 24 books (R. Münzel De Apollodori περὶ θεῶν libris Bonnae 1883 pp. 1—35, W. von Christ Geschichte der griechischen Litteratur München 1920 ii. 1. 395 f.). But the extant βιβλιοθήκη, long attributed to him, is now believed to be a work of Hadrianic date based on a handbook of mythology compiled between 100 and 55 B.C. (C. Robert De Apollodori Bibliotheca Berolini 1873 pp. 1—91, E. Schwartz in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. i. 2875 ff., Sir J. E. Sandys A History of Classical Scholarship[2] Cambridge 1906 i. 137, Sir J. G. Frazer Apollodorus New York i p. ix ff.).

i. 675 the caldron of divinisation in the cult of Leukothea. See further L. R. Farnell 'Ino-Leukothea' in the Journ. Hell. Stud. 1916 xxxvi. 36—44, especially p. 42 f.

i. 675 Dionysos done to death as a kid by worshippers who took the name of 'kids'? An interesting Scandinavian parallel is the Bukkevise described by B. S. Phillpotts The Elder Edda and Ancient Scandinavian Drama Cambridge 1920 p. 125 f.: 'The performers are three boys, two of whom personate "father and son," while the third is dressed up as a goat. The doggerel recited by the "father and son" is corrupt, but it recounts the slaughter of the goat and its resurrection, and this is accompanied by appropriate action on the part of the third performer. The Norwegian verses appear to retain a memory of the partition of the goat-skin: "how much wilt thou give for the goat its skin?—wool?" We have here another case of the actual performances of a slaying and resurrection, with the additional primitive feature of a beast-skin disguise shed by the victim and at one time apparently allotted to one of the persons present.' Cp. E. K. Chambers The English Folk-play Oxford 1933 p. 211: 'Perhaps, therefore, we may go a step further, and guess at the existence...of some original European ludus, with just this Mock Death and Revival as its central point and with men dressed as animals for its performers.'

i. 677 n. o. K. Buresch Aus Lydien Leipzig 1898 p. 160 found at Kaleh near Temenothyrai 'ein marmornes, dem Ζεὺς Γαλάκτιος geweihtes Altärchen' and inferred that the site bore the name Galaktion—an inference accepted by L. Bürchner in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. vii. 514. See also J. Keil in Anatolian Studies presented to Sir W. M. Ramsay Manchester 1923 p. 260 no. 8, E. Fehrle in Roscher Lex. Myth. vi. 615.

i. 677 n. 4 the Lupercalia. See further G. F. Unger 'Die Lupercalien' in the Rhein. Mus. 1881 xxxvi. 50—86, W. Mannhardt Mythologische Forschungen Strasshurg 1884 pp. 72—155 ('Die Lupercalien'), J. A. Hild in Daremberg—Saglio Dict. Ant. iii. 1398—1402 s.vv. 'Lupercalia, Lupercal, Luperci,' E. Lefébure 'Le bouc des Lupercales' in the Revue de l'histoire des religions 1909 lix. 73—81, W. F. Otto 'Die Luperci und die Feier der Lupercalien' in Philologus 1913 N.F. xxvi. 161—195, Alberta Mildred Franklin The Lupercalia New York: Columbia University 1921 pp. 1—106, A. Marbach in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. xiii. 1815 f. s.v. 'Lupercal,' 1816—1830 s.v. 'Lupercalia,' 1830—1834 s.v. 'Luperci,' 1834—1839 s.v. 'Lupercus,' F. Altheim A History of Roman Religion trans. H. Mattingly London 1938 pp. 206—217.

No ancient representation of the Lupercalia is known. Reinach Pierres Gravées p. 77 no. 77 pl. 77 'Sacrifice des Lupercales,' a stone published at Paris in 1732 by Lévesque de Gravelle, is an obvious forgery.

i. 679. W. K. C. Guthrie Orpheus and Greek Religion London 1935 p. 132 adds 'the Bassarids of Aeschylus which told of the dismemberment of Orpheus.'

A doublet of the myth of Pelias may perhaps be seen in that of Minos done to death in a hot bath at Kamikos by Kokalos or his daughters (Gruppe Gr. Myth. Rel. p. 360, Poland in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. xv. 1918 f.).

i. 681 n. 4 Διθύραμβος. The suffix is discussed by H. Petersson 'Die altindischen Wörter auf -amba' in the Indogermanische Forschungen 1924 xxxiv. 222—249.

Zacher 'Die Ursprünge und der Name des Iambus' in the Jahres-Bericht der Schlesischen Gesellschaft für vaterländische Cultur 1904 lxxxii Abteilung iv. 3 f. hit upon a derivation of Διθύραμβος near akin to mine: 'Endlich müsste διθύραμβος sein = ὁ διθυράζων, d. h. wohl den Δίθυρος besingend. Δίθυρος könnte eine Nebenform von Διόνυσος sein, und wie dieses bedeuten "Sohn des Zeus" (θυρος von θορεῖν? θύρσος die Zeugungsrute?).' This acute conjecture is too summarily dismissed by Boisacq Dict. étym. de la Langue Gr. p. 188.

W. M. Calder 'The Dithyramb—an Anatolian Dirge' in the Class. Rev. 1922 xxxvi. 11—14, dissatisfied with all previous views, mine included, proposed to connect διθύραμβος with two Phrygian words or loan-words διθρερα and διθρεψα. The first of these occurs in an inscription from Tyriaion (J. G. C. Anderson in the Journ. Hell. Stud. 1898 xviii. 121 f. no. 67 = J. Friedrich Kleinasiatische Sprachdenkmäler Berlin 1932 p. 132 f. no. 31), the second in another from Ikonion (W. M. Calder in the Journ. Hell. Stud. 1911 xxxi. 188 ff. no. 49 = J. Friedrich op. cit. p. 135 no. 49). It is claimed that 'διθρερα must be a noun, and διθρεψα must be either a noun or an adjective...meaning "monument" or some sepulchral attribute or characteristic,' possibly the "double door" (δι + θρερα = dhvara, θύρα, fores) of the Phrygian family-tomb 'symbolically leading in two directions—outwards to the world of life, inwards to the world of death.' On this showing διθύραμβος means "grave-song" or "dirge," and we must regard the θρήνων ἐξάρχους of Il. 24. 721 as the counterpart of τῶν ἐξαρχόντων τὸν διθύραμβον in Aristot. poet. 4 1449 a 11.

Calder's explanation, though ingenious and attractive, is however—as he frankly admits—beset by difficulties and uncertainties. Moreover it seems hard to reconcile with the Platonic equation διθύραμβος=Διονύσου γένεσις (supra i. 682 n. 1). Are we to assume that the 'dirge' dealt with Dionysos' birth, and compare the funereal character of the Attic Γενέσια (P. Stengel in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. vii. 1131, id. Die griechischen Kultusaltertümer[3] München 1920 p. 227 f.)? Or to argue with J. A. K. Thomson (in a letter to Jane Harrison dated March 31, 1921) 'that the Dithyramb celebrated the γενέσια of Dionysos, his grave-ritual.... The Early Christians celebrated the γενέσια or γενέθλια, "birth-day," of a martyr on the day of his martyrdom, because he was then truly born—"born again"'?

Calder returns to the charge in the Class. Rev. 1929 xliii. 214 with a shrewd emendation of Glaukos Rheg. frag. 4 (Frag. hist. Gr. ii. 24 Müller) ap. [Plout.] de musica 10 ἠρωικῶν γὰρ ὑποθέσεων σπαράγματα (for πράγματα codd.) ἐχουσῶν κ.τ.λ. 'For such was the theme of the dithyramb (διασπασμόν τινα καὶ διαμελισμόν) according to Plutarch de Ei apud Delphos 389 A.'

W. Brandenstein in the Indogermanische Forschungen 1936 liv. 34—38 would interpret ἴαμβος, θρίαμβος, διθύραμβος as 'Zweischritt, Dreischritt, Vierschritt.'

i. 682 n. 1. Of the three Pindaric dithyrambs published by B. P. Grenfell—A. S. Hunt The Oxyrhynchus Papyri London 1919 xiii. 27 ff. no. 1604 one (O. Schroeder Supplementum Pindaricum Berolini 1923 p. 5 f. frag. 70[a]) describes a festival of Dionysos held by the gods in heaven, another (Schroeder op. cit. p. 7 frag. 70[b]) speaks of a Dionysiac banquet, and the third (Schroeder op. cit. p. 7 f. frag. 70[c]) must also be concerned with the same deity since it mentions wreaths of ivy. See further J. U. Powell New Chapters in the History of Greek Literature Third Series Oxford 1933 pp. 48—51.

Cp. Anth. Pal. 9. 524. 5 Διογενῆ, δίγονον, διθυραμβογενῆ, Διόνυσον, ib. 19 Σεμελη-γενέτην, Σεμελῆα.

i. 684 n. 11. L. Deubner Attische Feste Berlin 1932 p. 65 f. pl. 3, 1 and 3, thinks that this vase represents the Haloia and cites modern usage in Herzegovina ('hier stellt man, wenn die Wintersaat aufgeht, auf dem Felde durch eine tiefe Furche den Umriss eines erigierten Phallos mit Hoden her. Diese Form des Fruchtbarkeitszaubers wurde früher auf dem Balkan allgemein angewandt[4] ([4]Vgl. R. N. Salaman, Man 30, 1930, 48)').

i. 684 date of the ritual marriage unknown. L. Deubner in the Jahrb. d. Deutsch. Arch. Inst. 1927 xlii. 177 ff. argues that the marriage of Dionysos and the Basilinna is both represented (figs. 4, 5, 7, 8, 9, 16) and parodied (fig. 6, cp. fig. 19) on the 'Choenkännchen' and must therefore have taken place 'am Choentage' (Anthesterion 12). But the argument is insecure, for—as Deubner himself admits (Attische Feste p. 97)—'Nicht alle Bilder, mit denen die grossen oder kleinen Kannen der typischen Choenform geschmückt sind (es sind jetzt 300—400 bekannt), brauchen sich auf das Choenfest zu beziehen.' And it remains possible to urge that these little vases are simply children's toys, often decorated with Dionysiac scenes, but not necessarily illustrative of the Chóes.

i. 687 n. 3 trees planted on graves as a vehicle for the soul. Gruppe Gr. Myth. Rel. p. 790 n. 1 gives further references for this folk-belief. See also H. Marzell in the Handwörterbuch des deutschen Aberglaubens Berlin—Leipzig 1927 i. 955 'Der B[aum], der aus der Erde hervorspriesst, und besonders der aus den Gräbern Verstorbener hervorwachsende B[aum] soll die Seele beherbergen.'

i. 689 n. 5 the Boeotian Xanthos or Xanthios slain by the Neleid Melanthos with the aid of Dionysos Melánaigis. A doublet in Plout. quaestt. Gr. 13 ἐκ δὲ τούτου μονομαχοῦσιν οἱ βασιλεῖς, καὶ τὸν τῶν Ἰναχιέων Ὑπέροχον ὁ τῶν Αἰνιάνων Φήμιος ὀρῶν μετὰ κυνὸς αὐτῷ προσφερόμενον οὐκ ἔφη δίκαια ποιεῖν, δεύτερον ἐπάγοντα μαχόμενον· ἀπελαύνοντος δὲ τοῦ Ὑπερόχου τὸν κύνα καὶ μεταστρεφομένου, λίθῳ βαλὼν ὁ Φήμιος αὐτὸν ἀναιρεῖ. κτησάμενοι δὲ τὴν χώραν, τοὺς Ἰναχιεῖς μετὰ τῶν Ἀχαιῶν ἐκβαλόντες, τὸν μὲν λίθον ἐκεῖνον ὡς ἱερὸν σέβονται καὶ θύουσιν αὐτῷ καὶ τοῦ ἱερείου τῷ δημῷ περικαλύπτουσιν. W. R. Halliday 'Xanthos—Melanthos and the Origin of Tragedy' in the Class. Rev. 1926 xl. 179—181 and in his note on Plout. loc. cit. thinks that both the Attic and the Boeotian tale were 'a purely secular traditional legend to which no esoteric meaning need be attached.'

i. 694. A. J. B. Wace 'More Mumming Plays' in the Ann. Brit. Sch. Ath. 1912—1913 xix. 248—265 figs. 1—6 concludes 'That the festival is really a winter festival and has in different places been transferred to a different season. Secondly, that it is by no means a typically Greek festival, for it occurs only in North Greece where there is much mixed blood, and is known to almost all the other South Balkan races.'

i. 695 Athenian substitute for dramatic omophagy. W. M. Lindsay in the Class. Quart. 1916 x. 108 cites a newly discovered note of Fest. in Isid. orig. 8. 7. 6 Hos

Hyginus (eginus cod.) primum frusta[m] hircinae carnis praemium accepisse dicit et inde nomen traxisse, scilicet a trago quem Latini hircum vocant.

i. 697 n. 4. P. Kretschmer comments on Σιληνός again in Glotta 1915 vi. 308. But F. Solmsen 'Σιληνὸς Σάτυρος Τίτυρος' in the Indogermanische Forschungen 1912 xxx. 1—47 connects the word with *σιλός, silus, a by-form of σιμός, 'snub-nosed.'

i. 698 n. 1. No. (10) is now in the Museum of Fine Arts, Boston: see Miss M. H. Swindler in the Am. Journ. Arch. 1915 xix. 412 ff. figs. 8 and 9, L. D. Caskey ib. 1918 xxii. 110 f. fig. 3, J. D. Beazley Attic red-figured Vases in American Museums Cambridge Mass. 1918 p. 130 f. fig. 81 (the 'Penthesilea Painter'), Hoppin Red-fig. Vases ii. 339 no. 10, J. D. Beazley Attische Vasenmaler des rotfigurigen Stils Tübingen 1925 p. 276 no. 52. Add no. (16) Red-figured kýlix in the Museo Villa Giulia at Rome (E. Boehringer in the Jahrb. d. Deutsch. Arch. Inst. 1928 xliii Arch. Anz. p. 166 with fig. 29)=nude human figure with goatish head, horns, and tail dancing before Persephone, whose head emerges from the ground.

In the fourth century these goatish dancers were assimilated to the south-Italian Pan, e.g. on an 'Apulian' vase published by T. Panofka Musée Blacas Paris 1829 pl. 23 (F. Weege Der Tanz in der Antike Halle/Saale 1926 p. 3 fig. 2) or on an Italiote bell-krátēr at Lecce published by Furtwängler—Reichhold Gr. Vasenmalerei ii. 106 pl. 80, 3 (F. Weege op. cit. p. 106 fig. 144, L. Séchan in Daremberg—Saglio Dict. Ant. iv. 1044 fig. 6069). Yet A. Hartmann certainly goes too far when he says at the end of his article on 'Silenos und Satyros' in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. iii A. 53: 'So bleibt es dabei, dass die bocksartige Bildung von Satyrn erst ein Erzeugnis der in der hellenistischen Zeit aufkommenden Einmischung des Pantypus in den Satyr- und Silentypus ist.'

i. 700 n. 4. E. M. W. Tillyard has since discovered the faint inscription ΚΑΛΟΣ ΗΦΑΡΣΤΟΣ (sic), which makes it probable that the central figure is Hephaistos carrying his axe. If so, the scene shows Dionysos persuading Hephaistos to accompany him to Olympos—a scene perhaps drawn from Achaios' satyr-play "Ηφαιστος (Trag. Gr. frag. p. 750 f. Nauck²) (E. M. W. Tillyard The Hope Vases Cambridge 1923 p. 79 ff. no. 136 pl. 23).

i. 704 early seal-stones portraying human goats etc. Any serious attempt to discuss these much-disputed figures must nowadays take into account analogous types found over a wide area of the ancient world. A sample or two will suffice to show the sort of data required. A whorl of green steatite from Hagios Onuphrios near Phaistos shows a horned figure with human legs (A. J. Evans Scripta Minoa Oxford 1909 i. 118 fig. 52, a, id. The Palace of Minos at Knossos Oxford 1921 i. 69 fig. 38 A). A prism-seal in black steatite from Karnak shows a human figure with bovine head running (id. Scripta Minoa i. 123 fig. 58, c, Palace of Minos i. 69 fig. 38 B, c). Both these are assigned to the 'Early Minoan i' period (3400—2800 B.C.). Sir J. Marshall Mohenjo-daro and the Indus Civilization London 1931 ii. 389 fig. 356 on pl. 111 notes two human figures (from seals no. 227 and no. 230) with the hoofs, horns, and tail of a bison. Id. ib. ii. 389 fig. 357 on pl. 111 gives a seal on which a similar figure is seen struggling with a fabulous horned tiger. Sir John compares the type with that of Enkidu the companion of Gilgameš. H. R. Hall, lecturing at Cambridge on Oct. 31, 1928, quoted an 'ibex-headed man on a proto-Elamite tablet' and an 'animal-headed man on a seal from South Caucasus' as evidence of Mesopotamian priority to the fantastic sealings from Zakro (supra p. 845 n. 3). See also Addenda to i. 67 n. 3.

i. 705. R. C. Flickinger 'Tragedy and the Satyric Drama' in Class. Philol. 1913 viii. 261—283 (especially pp. 269—272) discusses the derivation of τραγῳδία, defending the goat-prize tradition and rejecting the goat-men conjectures. Id. The Greek Theater and its Drama Chicago 1918 pp. 13—15, *ib.*⁴ 1936 pp. 13—15, maintains the same standpoint. E. Rostrup Attic Tragedy in the light of Theatrical History trans. I. Andersen Kjøbenhavn—Kristiania—London—Berlin 1923 p. 64 ff. denies the dancers 'costumed as he-goats' and holds, on anthropological grounds, that the τράγοι were young men who had undergone puberty-rites and were known by an animal name—the χοροὶ παιδῶν, χοροὶ τραγῳδῶν, and χοροὶ ἀνδρῶν representing successive age-groups. A. W. Pickard-Cambridge Dithyramb Tragedy and Comedy Oxford 1927 pp. 149—166, after a careful discussion of all the possibilities, reverts to the view that τραγῳδός may well mean 'singer at the goat-sacrifice' or 'singer for the goat-prize.' 'The two may even be reconciled, if the goat was first won and then sacrificed' (p. 165).

i. 706 Zeus Aseès. W. M. Calder in the Journ. Hell. Stud. 1913 xxxiii. 103 compares this appellative with an Old Phrygian text from Euyuk in Kappadokia (J. Friedrich Kleinasiatische Sprachdenkmäler Berlin 1932 p. 127 no. 15 a, 3 τερκοσασιεκμορ), of which he says: 'it can hardly be doubted that terkos is the "Hittite" tarku meaning "god" or a particular god, and it is very tempting to read the name of the god in the following letters. Whether we read Asie kmor... or Asi ekmor..., we appear to be dealing with the dative of the divine name Asis, which is attested elsewhere, and may be not unconnected with the name which the Greeks gave to the lands east of the Aegean.... Ramsay is probably right in taking ACEIC [supra i. 706 fig. 521] as a non-Phrygian name; if our interpretation of the Euyuk inscription is correct, Asis is the name of a god who belonged to the religion which the Phrygians found in the country when they entered it, and who was worshipped at the old Hittite centre of Euyuk at the date to which this inscription belongs.... The name Ἀσιοκώμη expresses the proprietorship of the god Asis in a village on his estate, just as the village-name Ἀτυοχωρίον in Phrygia indicates that the village belongs to Atys. In the Lydian genealogies Asies figures as the nephew or as the brother of Atys [E. Meyer in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. ii. 1579 f., 2262]. The name Atios occurs on an Old-Phrygian inscription (if Phrygian it be) found by Garstang at Tyana [J. Friedrich op. cit. p. 127 no. 19 a, 3 αtιονι, 5 αtιος].... The name is written with the symbol ϯ, which suggests that the names Attis and Asis were originally identical.' Not impossibly, then (cp. supra ii. 293), Zeus ACEIC meant ab origine 'Father' Zeus, while Ἀσία was the 'Fatherland.'

i. 707 n. 2 with fig. 524. This red-figured hydría from Girgenti is attributed to 'the Syleus Painter' (c. 480 B.C.) and perhaps shows Zeus bringing the infant Dionysos to the Nymphs. To the bibliography add J. de Witte in the Nouv. Ann. 1836—1837 i. 357—372 pl. 9, Reinach Rép. Vases i. 237, 1 and ii. 260, 1, H. Heydemann Dionysos' Geburt und Kindheit (Winckelmannsfest-Progr. Halle 1885) p. 18 f., id. in the Jahrb. d. kais. deutsch. arch. Inst. 1891 vi. 47, J. D. Beazley Attic red-figured Vases in American Museums Cambridge Mass. 1918 p. 66 no. 1, Hoppin Red-fig. Vases ii. 438 no. 9, J. D. Beazley Attische Vasenmaler des rotfigurigen Stils Tübingen 1925 p. 162 no. 23.

i. 708 ff. E. Fiechter—R. Herbig Das Dionysos-Theater in Athen Stuttgart 1935 ii (Die Skulpturen vom Bühnenhaus). 36 pls. 9—16 accept my interpretation of the reliefs from the stage of Phaidros, but regard my restorations as 'keineswegs immer glücklich.'

i. 709 n. 1 no distinctive art-type for Hestia. Yet see Porph. ap. Euseb. praep. ev. 3. 11. 7 = Lyd. de mens. 4. 94 p. 139, 2 ff. Wünsch καὶ τὸ μὲν ἡγεμονικὸν τῆς θείας δυνάμεως Ἑστία κέκληται, ἧς ἄγαλμα παρθενικὸν ἐφ' ἑστίας ἵδρυται· καθ' ὃ δὲ γόνιμος ἡ δύναμις, σημαίνουσιν αὐτὴν γυναικὸς εἴδει προμάστου.

i. 710 Aigeira. This town possessed a notable sanctuary of Zeus with a seated image of the god wrought in Pentelic marble by Eukleides of Athens (Paus. 7. 26. 4). Local coins issued by Septimius Severus and Plautilla show Zeus seated on a high-backed throne in the attitude of Zeus Olympios with Nike on his right hand and a long sceptre in his left (Brit. Mus. Cat. Coins Peloponnesus p. 17 no. 5 pl. 4, 10 Plautilla (my fig. 879 is from a cast), Imhoof-Blumer and P. Gardner Num. Comm. Paus. ii. 90 pl. S, 6 Plautilla, Head Hist. num.[2] p. 412). Portions of this cult-statue are still extant. O. Walter 'Ein Kolossalkopf des Zeus aus Aigeira' in the Jahresh. d. oest. arch. Inst. 1919 xix—xx. 1—14 figs. 1—9 pls. 1 (=my fig. 880) and 2 published the large head (height 0·87[m]) which he had found on Aug. 31, 1916, inside the temple. The marble is hollowed at the back and, as the dowel-holes prove, was eked out before and behind with adjusted pieces. The eyes were inlaid. Id. 'Der Arm der Zeusstatue von Eukleides' ib. 1932 xxvii. 146—152 figs. 94—97 was able to add the left arm, found by the villagers of Vlowoka in 1920 close to the same building, and one finger of the right hand, found in 1925 inside it. The fragments (now in the National Museum at Athens, nos. 3377 and 3481) are all of Pentelic marble, imply a figure about thrice life-size, and suit the pose of the god as shown on the coins. See further D. M. Robinson in the Am. Journ. Arch. 1933 xxxvii. 480. O. Walter 'Eine archäologische Voruntersuchung in Aigeira' in the Jahresh. d. oest. arch. Inst. 1919 xix—xx Beiblatt pp. 5—42 figs. 1—26 and 'Versuchsgrabung in Aigeira' ib. 1932 xxvii Beiblatt pp. 223—234 figs. 109—115 gives a good account of the town and temple, from which it appears that a large podium at the west end of the cella bore a base designed for a much smaller statue. It seems likely that, at some date later than Pausanias' visit, the big Zeus was damaged and replaced by a life-sized figure, perhaps that of a Roman emperor. Otherwise we should have to conclude that the temple to which the big Zeus belonged is still to seek. Eukleides, to judge from the style and technique of this statue, may be regarded as a contemporary of Damophon and dated c. 200 B.C. (A. Hekler 'Eukleides' ib. 1922 xxi—xxii. 120—122), though O. Walter and G. Lippold would place him in the middle of the fourth century B.C. or a little later (Lippold in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. Suppl. v. 220).

Fig. 879.

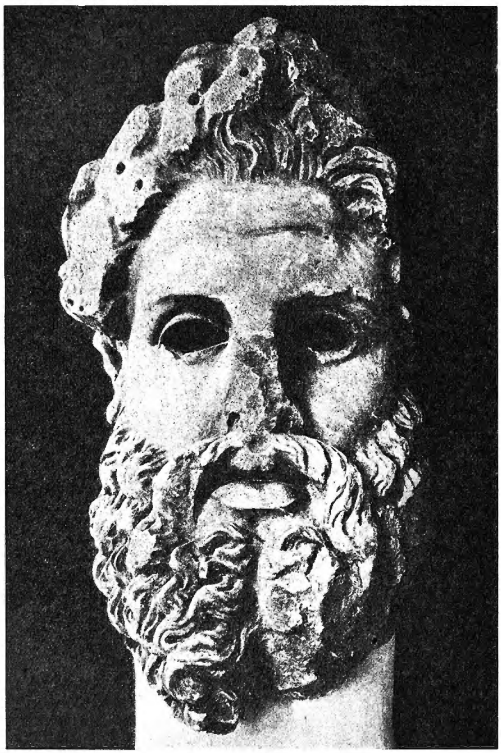

Fig. 880.

i. 710 Eros with crossed legs. On this attitude see W. Deonna 'Croiser les jambes' in the Rev. Arch. 1913 ii. 344—352, W. N. Bates in the Am. Journ. Arch. 1914 xviii. 502 f.

i. 710 Theseus. M. Bieber Die Denkmäler zum Theaterwesen im Altertum Berlin—Leipzig 1920 p. 18 f. pl. 7, 2 takes this figure to be Nero (cp. E. Strong in the Rev. Arch. 1913 ii. 327 n. 2). In any case see Svoronos Ath. Nationalmus. no. 3078 pl. 200.

i. 711 Vediovis. See further L. Preller 'Studien zur römischen Mythologie. 2. Vejovis und Dijovis' in the Ber. sächs. Gesellsch. d. Wiss. Phil.-hist. Classe 1855 pp. 202—215, J. A. Hild in Daremberg—Saglio Dict. Ant. v. 669 f. s.v. 'Veiovis,' A. L. Frothingham 'Vediovis, the Volcanic God: a Reconstruction' in the Am. Journ. Phil. 1917 xxxviii. 370—391, G. Wissowa in Roscher Lex. Myth. vi. 174—176 s.v. 'Veiovis,' F. Altheim A History of Roman Religion trans. H. Mattingly London 1938 pp. 262 f., 352.

Fig. 881.

i. 713. A figure-oinochóe (Pfuhl Malerei u. Zeichnung d. Gr. i. 408 f.) in my collection shows the infant Dionysos, with a kántharos in his right hand, mounted on a vigorous goat (fig. 881). The vase, which was polychrome, has traces of pink (flesh), red (cloak), yellow (hair, kántharos), and blue (wreath) on a white ground. Height, exclusive of the handle which is in part restored, 5¼ ins.

i. 713 n. 0. On the cult-statue of Apollon see a mutilated relief from the Amyklaion published by B. Schröder in the Ath. Mitth. 1904 xxix. 24—31 fig. 2, also E. R. Fiechter 'der Amykläische Thron, Bericht über die Untersuchungen im Amyklaion 1907' in the Jahrb. d. kais. deutsch. arch. Inst. 1910 xxv Arch. Anz. pp. 66—70, id. 'Amyklae.

Der Thron des Apollon' ib. 1918 xxxiii. 107—245 figs. 1—90 pls. 4—20, P. Bersakes 'Ὁ θρόνος τοῦ Ἀμυκλαίου Ἀπόλλωνος' in the 'Ἀρχ. Ἐφ. 1912 pp. 183—192 figs. 1—26, W. Klein 'Zum Thron des Apollo von Amyklae' in the Jahrb. d. Deutsch. Arch. Inst. 1922 xxxvii Arch. Anz. pp. 6—13, E. Buschor—W. von Massow 'Vom Amyklaion' in the Ath. Mitth. 1927 lii. 1—85 (especially p. 19) figs. 1—40 pls. 1—23 supplementary pls. 1—12.

i. 717 n. 2 bulls sacrificed to Zeus. Add Xen. Cyrop. 8. 3. 11 πρῶτον μὲν ἤγοντο τῷ Διὶ ταῦροι πάγκαλοι εἰς τέτταρας καὶ οἷς τῶν ἄλλων θεῶν οἱ μάγοι ἐξηγοῦντο. Also the Ταυροφόνια at Mylasa (supra ii. 582 n. 5, iii. 570). See, however, Serv. in Verg. Aen. 12. 120 sic in Thracia civitatem condens Aeneas, quam mox fuerat relicturus, contra morem Iovi de tauro sacrificavit (Aen. 3. 20 f.), Isid. orig. 12. 1. 28 iuvencus dictus eo quod iuvare incipiat hominum usus in terra colenda (supra p. 591 n. 1), vel quia apud gentiles Iovi semper ubique iuvencus immolabatur et nunquam taurus. nam in victimis etiam aetas considerabatur.

i. 717 n. 3 goats sacrificed to Zeus. W. M. Lindsay in the Class. Quart. 1916 x. 109 cites Fest. in Isid. orig. 8. 11. 84 Ioui Cretenses capram immolabant.

i. 720 the golden hound of Crete. An Attic black-figured skýphos found at Kameiros and now in the Louvre (A 478) (Pottier Cat. Vases du Louvre i. 171, id. Vases antiques du Louvre Paris 1897 p. 20 pl. 17) is interpreted by L. D. Barnett in Hermes 1898 xxxiii. 638 ff. as illustrating the discovery by Iris and Hermes of the golden hound in the house of Pandareos—an interpretation now commonly accepted (H. N. Fowler in the Am. Journ. Arch. 1899 iii. 304, W. H. Roscher in his Lex. Myth. iii. 1502 n. , Pfuhl Malerei u. Zeichnung d. Gr. i. 328).

i. 723 the cire perdue method of hollow-casting in bronze. Miss van der Kolf in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. iv A. 2084 is disposed to adopt my explanation of the Talos-myth ('eine ansprechende Vermutung'), but regards both myth and method as 'ziemlich jung.' S. Casson The Technique of Early Greek Sculpture Oxford 1933 is more precise: 'One thing is certain—that the Minoans had no knowledge at all of hollow casting by the cire-perdue process' (cp. L. R. Farnell supra ii. 644 n. 1). But is that so certain? K. Kluge, our greatest authority on Greek bronzes, in his Die antiken Grossbronzen Berlin—Leipzig 1927 i. 91—102 ('Der antike Wachserzguss') cites the pottery mould for an axe to be cast by the cire perdue process, which was found in the seventh stratum at Troy and is now in the Berlin Museum (W. Dörpfeld Troja und Ilion Athen 1902 i. 405 fig. 404, 408 f. supplementary pl. 46, VIII a, VIII b). Again, Kluge 'Die Gestaltung des Erzes in der archaisch-griechischen Kunst' in the Jahrb. d. Deutsch. Arch. Inst. 1929 xliv. 1—30 (summarised by E. H. Heffner in the Am. Journ. Arch. 1931 xxxv. 456 f.) says (p. 6): 'Bereits in primitiven Kulturlagen—es sei an die Güsse von Benin erinnert—wird diese Methode des Wachserzgusses beherrscht, und in der ägyptischen Kunst können wir den steilen Anstieg dieses Könnens verfolgen....' Indeed, Mr H. Frankfort in The Illustrated London News Oct. 8, 1932 p. 528 figs. 7—9 shows a statuette from Khafaje in Iraq representing a bearded priest cast in bronze by the cire perdue process c. 3000 B.C. Mr Sidney Smith (Jan. 1, 1926) refers me further to F. Thureau-Dangin in the Revue d'assyriologie et d'archéologie orientale 1924 xxi. 26 n. 3 and 155, who cites A. Ungnad in the Vorderasiatische Schriftdenkmäler der königlichen Museen zu Berlin Leipzig 1909 Heft viii. 51 no. 103 ('un qurqurru reçoit 2/3 de mine de cire pour la fabrication d'une clé en métal; c'est le procédé de la cire perdue'). For modern cire perdue casting see A. Toft Modelling and Sculpture London 1911 pp. 187—191.

i. 723 n. 3. For proof that the Sardinians of the Bronze Age worshipped a bull-god in their subterranean temples see R. Pettazzoni 'Le antichità protosarde di Santa Vittoria' in the Bullettino di paletnologia italiana 1910 xxxv. 159—177, A. Taramelli in the Mon. d. Linc. 1915 xxiii. 313—436 (especially p. 352 ff.), T. Ashby in The Times Literary Supplement for Jan. 22, 1920 p. 50, H. Philipp in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. i A. 2488, J. Whatmough The Foundations of Roman Italy London 1937 p. 373 ('Of especial interest are the temples discovered in recent years by Taramelli. These are circular in construction and were regularly built over a sacred spring or well. With them is associated the cult of the sacred pillar and also of a deity who took the form of a bull, as the large stone bulls' heads from the front of the temples show. It is difficult not to admit in these the evidence of oriental influence, as also in the indications of ordeal by water, and of "incubation"...').

i. 725 Talos, nephew of Daidalos, and the saw. G. M. A. Hanfmann in the Am. Journ. Arch. 1935 xxxix. 189—194 figs. 1—5 pl. 25, A, B publishes a magnificent gold bulla of Etruscan workmanship, found near Ferrara (?) and now in the Walters Art Gallery, Baltimore. Two archaic winged figures in relief, with incised retrograde inscriptions, show Daidalos (ƎИTIAT) and Ikaros (ƎƆAƆIIƆ), the former holding a saw in his left hand and an adze in his right, the latter a double axe and a square. E. Fiesel loc. cit. pp. 195—197 thinks that the inscription originated in Central Etruria, probably in the fifth century B.C. Taitle and Vikare are correct Etruscan forms of Δαίδαλος and Ἴκαρος, the one being Greek, the other—to judge from the suffix -αρ-—pre-Greek or Aegean. A cornelian scarab, from the Hamilton collection, now in London, again represents Daidalos, Taitle (?), as a beardless winged figure, flying above waves, with an adze in his right hand, a saw in his left (Brit. Mus. Cat. Gems p. 67 no. 329 pl. E, ib.[2] p. 82 no. 663 pl. 11). A second cornelian scarab, from the Blacas collection, also in London, has a somewhat similar, but uninscribed, Daidalos flying with saw in right hand and adze (?) in left (Brit. Mus. Cat. Gems p. 68 no. 330 pl. E, ib.[2] p. 89 f. no. 727 pl. 12, cp. Furtwängler Ant. Gemmen i pl. 19, 28, ii. 93 ('Geflügelter Dämon'), Lippold Gemmen pl. 25, 7 p. 171 ('Eros')). Lastly, a stèle from Bologna, assigned to the date 390—360 B.C., includes among its reliefs the same beardless Daidalos flying through the air with square and double axe in his right hand and saw in his left (E. Brizio in the Not. Scavi 1890 pp. 139—142 pl. 1, 3).

The art-type of the winged male figure posting through the sky with a double axe may be traced back to a very early date (sub-'Minoan'?) in the Archipelago: see the Melian (?) gem supra ii. 544 fig. 419. From Melos to Ikaros (Ikaria) is a bare hundred miles. Talos, Daidalos, and Ikaros were perhaps all originally independent but analogous figures (Gruppe Gr. Myth. Rel. p. 250 n. 2; Heeg in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. ix. 986, G. M. A. Hanfmann loc. cit. p. 194), various forms taken by the winged sun-god.

i. 726 ff. Talos, nephew of Daidalos, and the partridge. L. Mercklin Die Talos-Sage und das sardonische Lachen in the Mémoires présentés à l'Académie impériale des sciences de St-Pétersbourg par divers savants Saint-Pétersbourg 1854 vii. 110 (74) n. 203 cp. the romantic tale of Meles and Timagoras (Paus. 1. 30. 1) or Timagoras and Meletos (Souid. s.v. Μέλητος ter), on which see W. Drexler in Roscher Lex. Myth. ii. 2626 and Scherling in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. xv. 491 f. But this has been adequately explained on other lines by C. T. Seltman in the Ann. Brit. Sch. Ath. 1923—1925 xxvi. 101—104.

J. D. Beazley 'Icarus' in the Journ. Hell. Stud. 1927 xlvii. 222—233 illustrates inter alia (p. 231 fig. 6) a small red-figured lékythos of c. 470 B.C., in New York, on which a winged youth sinking into the sea (?) has above his head a bird 'flying almost straight down'....'The bird acts as the directional arrow in cartography.' H. J. Rose 'Ikaros and Perdix on a Fifth-century Vase?' ib. 1928 xlviii. 9 f. acutely conjectures that the painter 'had in his mind the mythical Perdix.'

On περδίκιον see R. M. Dawkins ib. 1936 lvi. 8 (botanical identifications).

i. 732 Zeus paired with Selene. Cp. S. Eitrem 'Die heilige Ehe' in Symbolae Osloenses 1932 xi. 18 n. 1.

i. 733 n. 6. On Zeus Νόσιος of Miletos see now gr. Kruse in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. xvii. 1053, who, after mentioning the late sixth-century offering Διὶ Νοσίῳ (in inscription no. 31, 9 a sacrificial calendar on the wall of the old hall in the Delphinion), adds: 'Νόσιε findet sich dann noch in einer Inschrift nr. 186, einer "Schreibübung eines Steinmetzen," aus der Zeit vor der Perserkatastrophe.... Auch v. Wilamowitz G G A 1914, 100 hält Διὶ Νοσίῳ für gesichert, fügt aber mit Recht hinzu: "es kann wohl nur ein νούσιος sein, so sehr es befremdet."'

i. 735 f. Zeus as a Satyr. Titian's 'Jupiter and Antiope' in the Louvre shows the lustful god, with the ears and legs of a goat, just twitching the last garment off a recumbent and sleeping Antiope (Sir J. A. Crowe—G. B. Cavalcaselle The Life and Times of Titian[2] London 1881 ii. 317 with pl., J. Addison Classic Myths in Art London 1904 p. 57 f. with pl.).

H. W. Stoll in Roscher Lex. Myth. ii. 3309 takes Sil. It. 3. 103 ff. (lascivo genitus Satyro nymphaque Myrice | Milichus indigenis late regnarat in oris | cornigeram attollens genitoris imagine frontem) to mean that Meilichos the horned king of Spain was the son of the nymph Myrike by Zeus in the form of a Satyr.

Zeus Πειώλης is attested by Schöll—Studemund anecd. i. 264 f. Ἐπίθετα Διός... 86 πειώλους, 266 Ἐπίθετα Διός... 74 πειώλους. The epithet, a derivative of πέος (Stephanus Thes. Gr. Ling. vi. 743 D—744 A), would suit a god of Satyr-like propensities, 'soll also wohl den Zeus als Gott der Fruchtbarkeit bezeichnen, wenn es nicht christlich-apologetischen Ursprunges ist' (O. Höfer in Roscher Lex. Myth. iii. 1752).

i. 735 n. 3 Lykourgos. Bronze coins of Alexandreia struck by Antoninus Pius represent Lykourgos with his double axe attacking Ambrosia, who according to Nonn. Dion.

21. 17 ff. was transformed by Gaia into a vine (K. D. Mylonas in the Journ. Intern. d'Arch. Num. 1898 i. 233 ff. (wrongly numbered 153 ff.) and J. N. Svoronos ib. p. 466 ff.).

i. 737 Epopeus as an embodiment of Zeus. To the same effect A. W. Pickard-Cambridge in J. U. Powell New Chapters in the History of Greek Literature Third Series Oxford 1933 p. 106 n. 1.

i. 741 Aphrodite and her dove in Kypros. W. N. Bates 'Aphrodite's Doves at Paphos in 1932' in the Am. Journ. Philol. 1932 liii. 260 f. notes that the church of St George at New Paphos, built over a temple of Aphrodite (?), has in front of its iconostasis five white doves, which hold in their beaks cords supporting lamps. A larger church recently erected in the neighbourhood again has the same arrangement of five white doves holding lamp-cords. Finally the twelfth-century monastery of St Neophytus, some seven miles from Ktima, can boast the bones of the saint kept in a wooden box made by himself. 'Above them is a sort of canopy surmounted by two rude wooden doves gilded.' Bates rightly concludes that 'Aphrodite's doves still have a place in their ancient home.'

i. 741 n. 4 Zeus Μαζεύς. Cp. F. Solmsen in the Zeitschrift für vergleichende Sprachforschung 1897 xxxiv. 49 n. 2: 'Auch in Μαζεύς· ὁ Ζεὺς παρὰ Φρυξί Hes. wird wohl nur der pers. Aura-mazdā zu erkennen sein, wie schon de Lagarde annahm.'

i. 744 n. 3. On the inscription here cited see further A. Brinkmann in the Rhein. Mus. 1914 lxix. 585 f., M. N. Tod in the Journ. Hell. Stud. 1915 xxxv. 269.

i. 750. For the star on the shoulder of a lion cp. a basalt relief from the level of Thutmose iii (B.C. 1501—1447 Breasted) at Beïsan, which shows two scenes of a lion attacked by a Molossian mastiff (G. Contenau Manuel d'archéologie orientale Paris 1931 ii. 1047 with fig. 727: 'Nous noterons sur ce bas-relief une particularité de facture: à l'épaule du lion, les poils forment une sorte de rosace en étoile à raies courbes; on la retrouvera plus tard sur un lion d'Arslan-Tash; à Zendjirli la plupart des lions portent au même endroit du corps deux traits croisés en X').

i. 751 Zeus conceived as dwelling in the starry sky. Cp. Soph. Trach. 1106 ὁ τοῦ κατ' ἄστρα Ζηνὸς αὐδηθεὶς γόνος.

i. 753 Tios or Tion in Bithynia. L. Robert in the Rev. Arch. 1934 i. 93 f. figs. 1—5 gives an account of his visit to the place with views of its akrópolis etc.

i. 754 Zeus ringed with the zodiac. R. Wood The Ruins of Palmyra, otherwise Tedmor of the Desart London (1753) p. 45 pl. 19, A publishes the circular medallion of a ceiling, which shows Zeus surrounded by six deities and a zodiacal ring. The spandrils are occupied by four eagles. The whole decorates the soffit of the temple of Sol at its southern end—a temple restored by Aurelian (see his letter to Cerronius Bassus in Vopisc. v. Aurelian. 31. 7 ff.).

i. 754 traces of astrology in early Greece. See A. Engelbrecht 'Vermeintliche Spuren altgriechischer Astrologie' in the Eranos Vindobonensis Wien 1893 pp. 125—130, who argues that there are 'von einer eigentlichen Astrologie mindestens bis zum vierten vorchristlichen Jahrhundert keine positiven, wohl aber negative Spuren in den Schriftwerken,' and W. Capelle 'Älteste Spuren der Astrologie bei den Griechen' in Hermes 1925 lx. 373—395, who claims to find such traces in the Hippocratic περὶ διαίτης 4. 89 Littré (iv. 426 ff. Jones) at the end of s. v B.C. and probably also in Demokrit. ap. Aët. 2. 15. 3 (H. Diels Die Fragmente der Vorsokratiker[3] Berlin 1912 ii. 32).

i. 754 ff. Zeus as lord of the constellations. G. Thiele Antike Himmelsbilder Berlin 1898 p. 90 fig. 17 (=my fig. 882) reproduces the fine illustration of Arat. phaen. 1 given in cod. Bonon. 188 fol. 20^{v}. An eagle with spread wings carries a thunderbolt in his claws and Zeus recumbent, with globe, sceptre, and rayed nimbus, on his back. Background blue, framework vermilion, eagle brownish yellow, flesh dark brown, nimbus and globe silver, diadem yellow, himátion rose.

i. 756 n. 6 Zeus Βῆλος. J. Cantineau 'Textes palmyréniens provenant de la fouille du temple de Bêl' in Syria 1931 xii. 119 f. no. 3 publishes a bilingual inscription of the year 504=193 A.D., which (Greek 4 ff.) mentions an ἀρχιερεὺς κ[αὶ] | [σ]υμποσιάρχ[ης ἱερέων] μεγίστου θεοῦ | Διὸς Βήλ[ου]. See further P. Roussel in the Rev. Ét. Gr. 1932 xlv. 227.

i. 766 the Dioskouroi on Etruscan mirrors. C. Brakman 'De Iuturna et Dioscuris' in Mnemosyne N.S. 1931 lix. 427—430, following up the trail blazed by F. Altheim Griechische Götter im alten Rom Giessen 1930 pp. 4—39 ('Juturna und die Dioskuren') [cp. F. Altheim A History of Roman Religion trans. H. Mattingly London 1938 pp. 243—245], claims that the Etruscans when in Asia had taken over from Greeks or pre-Greeks the cult of the Dioskouroi. These they would have called Diutures*, 'sons of Zeus,' cp. Diuturna [Dessau Inscr. Lat. sel. no. 3856]>Iuturna, 'daughter of Zeus,' hybrid formations. 'A stirpe Diu* (Iove) per suffixum patronymicum -ður vel -tur derivatum est Diutur, unde per Etruscum formans -na formatur Diuturna....Diutures responderet igitur *Τινδαρσις, quod per prae-Graecum suffixum -δαρ- eandem vim habens atque Etruscum -θur vel -tur derivatum est a Τυ, quod idem est in lingua Etrusca valens Δία. Itaque Τινδαρσι vel amplior forma Laconica Τινδαρίδαι synonymum est Dioscurorum.'

But, if Brakman is indebted to Altheim, Altheim in turn owes much to others. G. Maresch 'Der Name der Tyndariden' in Glotta 1925 xiv. 298 f. had already suggested that Τινδαρίδαι or Τινδαρίδαι was simply the Etruscan name for Zeus—tin, tins, tinia—with an Asia-Minor patronymic suffix -δαρ- and a Greek patronymic suffix -ιδ- ('so hätten wir denn das spätere Διόσκουροι für eine griechische Übersetzung des vorhellenischen Namens Τινδαρίδαι anzusehen'). And P. Kretschmer in an article of cardinal importance had proposed ib. p. 303 ff. Τινδαρίδαι = Etruscan Tin- (Zeus) + Etruscan patronymic -θur or -tur (cp. tinθur as a personal name in a tomb-inscription at Naples). He supposes that the θ or t of the Etruscan suffix became δ under the influence of a personal name *Τίνδαρος related to the place-name Τίνδη as Πίνδαρος to Πίνδος or Μίνδαρος to Μίνδη. These northern names carry with them the northern suffix -αρ- [cp. Addenda to i. 725]. Kretschmer concludes ib. p. 308: 'Die vorgriechische Bevölkerung, in der die unidg. Urbevölkerung und die protidg. Zuwanderer verschmolzen waren, nannte also die mit Zeus gepaarte Göttin einfach mit dem Appellativum für Frau. Der Gott hiess Tin-, woneben vermutlich unter dem Einfluss einer jüngeren Schicht Taus*, Teus* trat; ihm stand eine Göttin als seine Frau, lada [supra i. 763 n. 4], zur Seite. Ihre Zwillingssöhne hiessen Tintor-* oder ähnl. Wenn wir zu dem Ergebnis kommen, dass diese Tyrrheno-Pelasger bereits den idg. Zeus-Kult nach Hellas gebracht hatten, so wird damit zugleich das Rätsel der berühmten Iliasstelle Π 233 gelöst: Ζεῦ ἄνα Δωδωναῖε, Πελασγικέ, ...'

Fig. 882.

i. 768 n. o. See now O. Huth 'Die Kulttore der Indogermanen' in the Archiv f. Rel. 1937 xxxiv. 371—377 (in continuation of id. 'Der Durchzug des Wilden Heeres' ib. 1935 xxxii. 193—210).

i. 776 Zeus Amários. A. Aymard 'Le Zeus fédéral achaïen Hamarios—Homarios' in the Mélanges offerts à M. Octave Navarre par ses élèves et ses amis Toulouse 1935 pp. 453—470 (defends the form Ἁμάριος, cp. the summary in the Rev. Ét. Gr. 1936 xlix. 349). Id. 'Le rôle politique du sanctuaire fédéral achaïen' in the Mélanges Franz Cumont (Annuaire de l'Institut de philologie et d'histoire orientales et slaves iv) Bruxelles 1936 i. 1—26.

i. 781. A. D. Knox in the Cambridge University Reporter 1915 xlv. 695 (Cambridge Philological Society, Feb. 25, 1915) suggested that in Phoinix of Kolophon frag. 2. 4 ὃς οὐκ ἴδ' ἀστέρ' οὐ Δίϝαν ἐδίζητο the word 'Δίϝαν or the like is Persian for heaven, taken with vv. 5, 6 from (Ktesias) ap. Strab. p. 733, following or correcting Hdt. i. 132.' But the text as given in cod. A of Athen. 530 E ὃς οὐκί δ' ἀστερ' ὀνδιζωνεδιζητο is very corrupt. Emendations are numerous (see the note of J. U. Powell Collectanea Alexandrina Oxonii 1925 p. 232), Knox himself in the Loeb edition (London 1929) frag. 1. 4 now prints ὃς οὐκ ἴδ' ἀστέρ' οὐ [δίζ]ων ἐδίζητο, and E. Diehl Anthologia Lyrica Graeca[2] Lipsiae 1936 i. 3. 10*frag.* 3. 4 is still content with Naeke's ὃς οὐκ ἴδ' ἀστέρ' οὐδ' ἰ<δ>ὼν ἐδίζητο.

i. 782 on Saint George as dragon-slayer. Add S. A. Matson St. George and the Dragon[2] London 1893 pp. 1—222 (popular), M. Oldfield Howey The Encircled Serpent London (1926) pp. 174 ff. ('St. Michael and the Dragon'), 177 ff. ('St. George and the Dragon').

i. 784 bull-carrying on a coin of Nysa. Brüder Egger Auktions-Katalog xlvi Griechische Münzen (Sammlung des Herrn Theodor Prowe, Moskau, u. a.) Wien 1914 p. 70 no. 1511 pl. 24 ('Stier auf den Schultern von sechs nackten Epheben getragen, davor schreitender Flötenspieler') Maximus. See also K. Kourouniotes in the Ἀρχ. Δελτ. 1921—1922 vii. 4 fig. 2 (enlarged).

i. 784 Syro-Hittite bulls enclosing human victims. We may perhaps compare the hollow bronze horse containing the body of a man, found by Gyges in Lydia (Plat. rep. 359 D, Apostol. 15. 85).

i. 785 statuette of gilded bronze from the Syrian sanctuary on the Ianiculum. Reinach Rép. Stat. iv. 293 no. 2 'Atergatis?', H. Gressmann in the Vorträge der Bibliothek Warburg 1923—1924 Leipzig—Berlin 1926 p. 186 pl. 5, 10 'Atargatis.' But the statuette, which is now in the Museo delle Terme, has been cleaned and proves to be a male figure, possibly that of Adad (T. Ashby in The Year's Work in Class. Stud. 1914 p. 14) or Chronos (R. Paribeni Le Terme di Diocleziano e il Museo Nazionale Romano[4] Roma 1922 p. 120 f. no. 188). J. Leipoldt in D. Hans Haas Bilderatlas zur Religionsgeschichte Leipzig—Erlangen 1926 ix—xi p. xiv f. fig. 109 is content to say 'Syrischer Gott vom Janiculus.'

ii. 3 n. o pot-Zeuses. Cp. Aristoph. ran. 22 Διόνυσος, υἱὸς Σταμνίου with schol. δέον εἰπεῖν υἱὸς Διός, κ.τ.λ. H. J. Rose in the Class. Quart. 1932 xxvi. 58 aptly explains Hesych. Ἐγχώ· ἡ Σεμέλη οὕτως ἐκαλεῖτο as a comic formation from ἐγχεῖν.

ii. 6 n. 3. So Plout. v. C. Gracch. 14 καὶ τότε μὲν ὄμβρου γενομένου διελύθησαν· κ.τ.λ.

ii. 7 n. 1. See also O. Casel 'Vom heiligen Schweigen' in the Benedictiner Monatsschrift 1921 p. 417 ff., and G. Mensching Das heilige Schweigen Giessen 1926 pp. 1—162 (reviewed by O. Casel in Gnomon 1928 iv. 142—149).

ii. 8 n. 7. G. H. Macurdy in the Class. Quart. 1926 xx. 179 f. treats Ἕκτωρ as a short form of Ἐχέλαος (Attic Ἔχελος).

ii. 9 apotheosis by lightning. See now H. J. Rose in the Class. Quart. 1924 xviii. 15 f.

ii. 12 Keraunos. R. Güntert Über Reimwortbildungen im arischen und altgriechischen Heidelberg 1914 p. 215 f. regards the god Κεραυνός as a rime-word to the Slavonic Peraunos.*

R. Ganszyniec 'Zeus Keraunos' in Eos 1930/1931 xxxiii. 66 cp. 'Schiblé, der Gott des Donners, des Krieges und der Gerechtigkeit' worshipped by the Adighe or Circassians, who treat as sacrosanct any tree or man struck by lightning (F. Bodenstedt Die Völker des Kaukasus und ihre Freiheitskämpfe gegen die Russen Frankfurt 1848 p. 201).

ii. 13 ff. Zeus Kataibátes. See now H. Sjövall Zeus im altgriechischen Hauskult Lund 1931 pp. 108—114 ('Zeus Kataibates'). A. S. Arvanitopoulos in the Ἐφ. Ἀρχ. 1924 p. 146 f. no. 389 fig. 3 publishes a stéle of blackish marble found in the wall of the church of Ilagia Kyriake at Selos near Pythion in Thessaly. The stéle has an aétoma with akrotéria above, below which is a smooth space originally occupied by a painting, and below that an inscription in letters of c. the beginning of s. iii B.C. Διὶ Καταιβάτηι· ἥρως

Ἐπ[ι]κράτει. This Epikrates was either a chthonian hero or, more probably, a man killed by lightning and worshipped as a hero. On the Thessalian festival Καταιβάσια see Adler in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. x. 2461 f. C. Picard in the Revue de l'histoire des religions 1926 xciii. 71 n. 4 adds the base of a bronze statue found in Thasos, which bears a dedication of Roman date to Zeus Kataibátes (Bull. Corr. Hell. 1923 xlvii. 537). And G. Daux in the Bull. Corr. Hell. 1926 l. 245 f. no. 25 records an inscription from Thasos (on a block of local marble, once a statue-base, to be dated c. the beginning of our era) Διὸς Καταιβάτου.

ii. 19 n. o ἀλευρομάντεις, ἀλφιτομάντεις, κριθομάντεις. See now Boehm 'Aleuromantie' in the Handwörterbuch des deutschen Aberglaubens Berlin—Leipzig 1927 i. 258—260, 'Alphitomantie' ib. i. 310 f., 'Krithomantie' ib. 1933 v. 594—596, and Eckstein 'Mehl' ib. 1934 vi. 89—110.

ii. 21 n. 5. G. W. Elderkin in the Am. Journ. Arch. 1934 xxxviii. 32 conjectures that this ábaton of Zeus Kataibátes marks the spot on which Demetrios Poliorketes [supra i. 58, cp. K. Scott 'The Deification of Demetrius Poliorcetes' in the Am. Journ. Phil. 1928 xlix. 217—239 summarised by P. Cloché in the Rev. Ét. Gr. 1930 xliii. 228] 'descended in a blaze of glory' from his chariot—a descent parodied by Plaut. Curc. 413 ff. where Curculio announces himself as Summanus, the god who sends nocturnal lightnings, and explains that at night he sometimes 'descends in a shower' (summano)!

ii. 23 n. 2 Numa's law about the man struck by lightning. E. Bickel in the Rhein. Mus. 1931 lxxx. 279—298 cj. hominem fulmine (or fulmini) Iovos occisit, and examines in detail relevant religious and linguistic usage.

ii. 24 Orpheus slain by a thunderbolt. Paus. 9. 30. 5 εἰσὶ δὲ οἱ φασι κεραυνωθέντι ὑπὸ τοῦ θεοῦ συμβῆναι τὴν τελευτὴν Ὀρφεῖ· κεραυνωθῆναι δὲ αὐτὸν τῶν λόγων ἕνεκα ὧν ἐδίδασκεν ἐν τοῖς μυστηρίοις οὐ πρότερον ἀκηκοόσας ἀνθρώπους, Diog. Laert. prooem. 5 τὸ δ' ἐν Δίῳ τῆς Μακεδονίας ἐπίγραμμα, κεραυνωθῆναι αὐτόν, λέγων οὕτως· Ὀρφῆϊκα χρυσολύρην τῆδ' Ὀρφέα Μοῦσαι ἔθαψαν, | ὃν κτάνεν ὑψιμέδων Ζεὺς ψολόεντι βέλει' = Anth. Pal. 7. 617. 1 f., cp. Cougny Anth. Pal. Append. 2. 99. 1 f.

ii. 30 n. 3 etymology of Brundisium. P. Skok 'Brendisium und Verwandtes' in the Zeitschrift für Ortsnamenforschung 1925/26 i. 81—90.

ii. 31 téras. See further P. Stein ΤΕΡΑΣ Marpurgi Cattorum 1909 pp. 1—66. He classifies the uses of the word and connects Τειρεσίας with it, but does not elucidate its etymology. Schrader Reallex.[2] ii. 143[b], 481[a–b] and H. Lewy in the Zeitschrift für vergleichende Sprachforschung 1930 lviii. 30 f. connect téras, teírea, Τειρεσίας and suppose that the word, which originally meant 'star,' was widened to include omens in general.

ii. 32 the Tarentum at Rome. P. Boyancé in the Mélanges d'archéologie et d'histoire de l'École Française de Rome 1925 xlii. 135—146 discusses the site of the ara Ditis in Tarento and concludes that it was in low ground near the Tiber, probably in the Ghetto (summarised by E. H. Heffner in the Am. Journ. Arch. 1926 xxx. 221). But see the criticisms of S. B. Platner—T. Ashby A Topographical Dictionary of Ancient Rome Oxford 1929 p. 508 f.

ii. 33 ff. Zoroastres. A masterly exposition of Zoroaster's life, teaching, and works will be found in J. Bidez—F. Cumont Les Mages hellénisés: Zoroastre Ostanès et Hystaspe d'après la tradition grecque Paris 1938 i. 1—297 ('Introduction'), ii. 1—241 ('Les Textes').

ii. 36 ff. the Elysian Way. See now P. Capelle 'Elysium und Inseln der Seligen' in the Archiv f. Rel. 1927 xxv. 244—264, ib. 1928 xxvi. 17—40 (the etymology is dealt with on p. 32 f.), J. Charpentier 'Νυκτὸς ἀμολγῷ' in Symbolae philologicae O. A. Danielsson octogenario dicatae Upsaliae 1932 p. 27 ff., Stegemann 'Milchstrasse' in the Handwörterbuch des deutschen Aberglaubens 1934 vi. 367—374.

ii. 44 the 'straight light like a pillar' (Plat. rep. 616 B) without a counterpart in astronomical fact or fancy. But what of the zodiacal light (J. F. Julius Schmidt Das Zodiacallicht Braunschweig 1856 pp. 1—110)? J. Helmbold Der Allasmythus und Verwandtes Mülhausen i. E. 1906 (Beilage zum Jahresbericht des Gymnasiums zu Mülhausen i. E.) p. 5 fig. shows the zodiacal light looking much like an obelisk with rounded top. He thinks that the pillars of Atlas (Od. 1. 52 ff.), the pillar of Prometheus, the Elysian Way, the tower of Kronos, etc. were all zodiacal myths. Prof. R. A. S. Macalister subsequently, but independently, hit upon the same explanation. In a letter to me, dated Jan. 19, 1929, he says: 'Apropos of the Sky-pillar...I have been wondering if you considered the possibility that it might have been suggested by the Zodiacal Light. This soft beam of light, which rises vertically from the evening horizon in Spring and the morning horizon in Summer, is not often to be seen in our latitudes: I have often looked for it, in vain. But I have seen it in Palestine, where it looked just like a faintly luminous pillar with tapering point.... I never saw it as a complete belt across the sky, as some have seen it in high tropic latitudes.'

ii. 45 the 'spindle of Ananke.' P. M. Schuhl in the Rev. Arch. 1930 ii. 58—64 pls. 6 and 7 and fig. 1 holds that the spindle of Ananke may be derived from the ancient oriental theme of a spindle-holding goddess, 'la Dame au fuseau' [for which see U. Holmberg 'Der Baum des Lebens' in the Annales Academiæ Scientiarum Fennicæ ser. B 1922—1923 xvi. 3. 106 ff.].

ii. 52 n. 2 Iringes wec. Add Stegemann in the Handwörterbuch des deutschen Aberglaubens 1934 vi. 373 n. 36.

ii. 52 ff. (cp. iii. 418 n. 0) the Irminsúl as a sky-prop. G. Dottin in J. Hastings Encyclopædia of Religion and Ethics Edinburgh 1911 iv. 138: 'This belief in the fall of the sky is seen frequently in the oaths of Irish epic poetry.' Frazer Worship of Nature i. 148 notes that, according to the Upotos of the Upper Congo, 'The day will come when the sky will collapse and flatten us all out, blacks and whites alike' (a reference that I owe to my friend Dr J. Rendel Harris). H. J. Rose in The Hibbert Journal 1927 xxv. 381 n. 1 cp. our own proverb 'If the sky should fall, we should all catch larks' [W. G. Smith The Oxford Dictionary of English Proverbs Oxford 1935 p. 210 f.], but refuses to believe that this ever expressed a real fear. Weiser-Aall in the Handwörterbuch des deutschen Aberglaubens 1930 ii. 1527: 'Das Weltgebäude ist nach der Vorstellung vieler Völker wie das Wohnhaus aufgebaut. So muss der Himmel wie das Dach durch eine Säule bzw. durch den Weltbaum gestützt werden' etc. (Scandinavians, Lapps, Celts, Germans). A. H. Krappe Mythologie universelle Paris 1930 p. 130 f. defends my view against criticism and supplies a parallel from the Veda (H. Oldenberg La religion du Véda Paris 1903 p. 60 n. 2 "Pourquoi le ciel ne tombe-t-il pas sur la terre?—Parce qu'un grand bouc à une seule patte lui sert de pilier" [cp. A. A. Macdonell Vedic Mythology Strassburg 1897 p. 73 f.]). J. Erdödi in the Indogermanische Forschungen 1932 l. 214—219 discusses the Sanskrit Skambha, 'himmelstützender Baum' (Atharva-Veda 10. 8. 2 'Vom Skambha wird der Himmel und die Erde | Ewig gehalten auseinander, | Auf Skambha (ruht) dies beseelte All, | Was atmet, was die Augen schliesst'), as source of the Finnish Sampo, which in the Kalevala denotes 'eine wunderbare Mühle, Glücksmühle,' but is akin to the Wotyak sammas, 'Säule, Wetterhahn,' and Esthonian sammas, 'Säule, Pfosten.'

Further evidence for the sky-prop in belief and practice is collected by U. Holmberg in the Annales Academiæ Scientiarum Fennicæ ser. B. 1922—1923 xvi. 3. 9—33 figs. 2—15 ('Die Weltsäule'). Id. in J. A. MacCulloch The Mythology of all Races Boston 1927 iv (Finno-Ugric, Siberian). 221 f. says: 'the Samoyeds (Turuhansk District) call the North Star the "nail of the sky," "round which the heavens revolve." The ancient Finns had also a corresponding but now forgotten term, as proved by the name of the North Star, borrowed by the Lapps from the Finns, Bohi-navlle ("the nail of the north"); its counterpart among the Esthonians being the Põhjanael.... This nail is, at the same time, regarded as supporting the sky.... Missionaries relate that the Lapps sacrificed to their highest god Veralden rade ("Ruler of the world") so that "he should not let fall the sky," erecting at the altars a tree either split in two or forked naturally, or also, at times, a high pillar, called the "pillar of the world" (Veralden tshuold) for the god to "support the world with, and keep it in its present form and condition, that it might not grow old and fall from its former nature." The tree was besmeared with blood from the sacrifice. A "pillar of the world" of this description was seen by Leem in the vicinity of the Porsanger Fjord [supra ii. 423 n. 3 with fig. 329].... That these pillars of the Lapps had a heavenly counterpart is shown by the fact that, in some places, the name of the North Star is "pillar of the world" (Veralden tshuold). It is probable that the Lapps obtained both their ideas and their sacrificial customs from the Scandinavians...; the "nail" may be compared with the Scandinavian Veraldar nagli, the "world-nail."' Id. ib. p. 333 ff.: 'From this belief spring the curious names given by the Altaic stocks to the North Star. The Mongols, Buriats, Kalmucks, and the Altai Tatars and Uigurs call the star in question "The golden pillar"; the Kirghis, Bashkirs and certain other Siberian Tatar tribes call it "The iron pillar"; the Teleuts "The lone post," and the Tungus-Orotshons "The golden post." From the similarity of the names given it by these widely separated peoples we may conclude that the conception of a sky-supporting pillar reaches back among the Altaic race to a comparatively early period.... Although none of the available sources mention directly that the peoples of the Altaic race made images of this great world-pillar, we can still be reasonably certain that they did so from the fact that several of the more northern peoples have kept up this custom even to our days.... The Ostiaks call these wooden images of the pillar, "town-pillars" or "the strong pillars of the town's centre." Those more simple in construction are erected by being slightly sunk into the earth, and are hardly ever observed to be shaped at all in any way. The pillar of the village of Tsingala is about two fathoms in height, a squared, slender log, not very old.... This pillar of Tsingala, which the Ostiaks of that place regard as a deity, is called by them "The iron pillar man," a similar name being given to the post of another village of Irtysh, resembling greatly the afore-mentioned "Iron pillar" of the Tatars.... Some peoples in North-West Siberia, who have a similar custom, place on the world-pillar a wooden figure of a bird, which sometimes has two heads.... The pillars, on which these birds are placed and which have sometimes cross-pieces like branches, are, according to the Dolgans, a symbol of the "never falling props" before the dwelling of the Supreme God. On the cross-pieces, so it is said, dwell the sons of God.'

a

b

Marble head of Iuno Lucina (?), now at Queens' College, Cambridge.

E. Jung 'Irminsul und Rolandsäule' in Mannus 1925 xvii. 1—34 figs. 1—14, taking a hint from J. Grimm Teutonic Mythology trans. J. S. Stallybrass London 1882 i. 119 and 394, claims that the Rolandsäule of Niedersachsen, Westfalen, Obersachsen, and Thüringen has a Christianised survival of the pre-Christian Irminsûl (summary by E. H. Heffner in the Am. Journ. Arch. 1926 xxx. 502). See further P. J. Hamilton-Grierson in J. Hastings Encyclopædia of Religion and Ethics Edinburgh 1915 viii. 420[a] ('Irminsäulen, Rolandsäulen, perrons, and many of the market-crosses of Scotland').

ii. 57 ff. Iupiter-Columns. These are now published and illustrated in detail by Espérandieu Bas-reliefs de la Gaule Rom. (Index in x. 253 'Chapiteau,' 266 'Restes de colonnes,' 275 f. 'Quatre divinités') and Bas-reliefs de la Germanie Rom. (Index p. 480 'Cavalier et anguipède,' 'Colonne votive,' p. 484 'Quatre divinités'). Add R. L[antier] in the Rev. Arch. 1939 i. 276—278 fig. 1 (group from Neschers).

ii. 61 n. 0 Iuno Lucina. In 1934 on the dispersal of the Harland-Peck collection I acquired a fine marble head (Sotheby's Sale Catalogue 1934 p. 11 no. 48: height 22 inches), which represents Iuno wearing a stephánē adorned with nine crescents (pl. lxxix). I take her to be Iuno Lucina as goddess of childbirth—the Roman copy of a Greek type resembling Hera Ludovisi.

ii. 62 f. the Wild Hunt or Furious Host. See further F. Liebrecht Des Gervasius von Tilbury Otia Imperialia Hannover 1856 pp. 173—211 ('La Mesnie furieuse, ou la Chasse sauvage'), K. Meisen Die Sagen vom Wütenden Heer und Wilden Jäger Münster 1935 pp. 1—144.

ii. 63 Wodan. Cp. G. Neckel 'Regnator omnium deus' [Tac. Germ. 39] in the Neue Jahrbücher für Wissenschaft und Jugendbildung 1926 ii. 139—150.

ii. 69 ff. the octagonal Wochengötterstein. F. Cumont in the Journ. Rom. Stud. 1938 xxviii. 88 suggests that the influence of Syrian religious art may account for these eight-sided blocks, mounted on a square plinth and supporting a cylindrical column with its crowning group of cavalier and anguiped.

ii. 86 n. 3. L. Barbedette 'Le symbolisme des tombeaux gallo-romains' in the Rev. Arch. 1926 i. 273—277 deals with Lussoius and Bricia, deities of the hot springs at Luxovium. Numerous local reliefs show persons holding a bottle or box in the left hand, a glass or cup in the right. Several such cippi bear the sepulchral dedication D·M.

ii. 88 the world-pillar in Rhenic Germany. Miss J. R. Bacon in 1929 kindly drew my attention to Skymn. Chi. per. 188 ff. τούτων δὲ (sc. τῶν Κελτῶν) κεῖται λεγομένη τις ἐσχάτη | στήλη βόρειος· ἔστι δ' ὑψηλὴ πάνυ | εἰς κυματῶδες πέλαγος ἀνατείνουσ' ἄκραν. | οἰκοῦσι τῆς στήλης δὲ τοὺς ἐγγὺς τόπους | Κελτῶν ὅσοι λήγουσιν ὄντες ἔσχατοι | Ἕνετοί τε καὶ τῶν ἐντὸς εἰς τὸν Ἀδρίαν | Ἴστρων καθηκόντων· λέγουσι δ' αὐτόθεν | τὸν Ἴστρον ἀρχὴν λαμβάνειν τοῦ ῥεύματος.

ii. 88 n. 3 Jack and the Beanstalk. On which see L. Mackensen 'Bohnenranke zum Himmel' in the Handwörterbuch des deutschen Märchens Berlin—Leipzig 1930/1933 i. 299—301.

ii. 97 n. 0 Nero as Zeus. A. D. Nock in the Class. Rev. 1926 xl. 18 notes Brit. Mus. Cat. Coins Lydia p. 75 no. 7 (Dioshieron) obv. ΣΕΥΣ | ΝΕΡΩΝ ΚΑΙΣΑΡ heads of Zeus to left and Nero to right, face to face. Nock cites Calp. Sic. 4. 142 f. tu quoque mutata seu Iuppiter ipse figura, | Caesar, ades etc.

ii. 107 n. 4. For the spiral column see also the materials collected by M. Avi-Yonah in the Journ. Hell. Stud. 1930 l. 303—309.

ii. 111 n. 0 Zeus Tropaiophóros. A. M. Woodward in the Ann. Brit. Sch. Ath. 1926—1927 xxviii. 117 no. 1 publishes an inscription from Klazomenai [Διὰ τροπ]αιοφόρον | [------]ς ἀνέθηκεν | [ἐπιμελη]θέντος Τιβερίου | [Κλαυδίου] Θεοδώρου.

ii. 111 n. 1 La Turbie. See now A. Blanchet Forma orbis Romani: carte archéologique de la Gaule romaine Fasc. 1 Alpes-Maritimes by P. Couissin sections 4—6 pls. 1—3 Paris 1931 (noticed by W. W. Hyde in the Am. Journ. Arch. 1933 xxxvii. 520), P. Casimir Le trophée d'Auguste à la Turbie Marseille 1932 pp. 1—168, S. F. Gimenez 'Ce que j'ai vu à la Turbie' in the Revue des études anciennes 1933 pp. 165—168 (built round a pre-existing monument, perhaps several centuries older).

ii. 114 ff. the Pillar of Light. Kallisthenes of Olynthos frag. 8 (Script. hist. Alex. Mag. p. 13 f. Müller)=frag. 20 (Frag. gr. Hist. ii. 646 f. Jacoby) ap. Sen. nat. quaestt. 6. 26. 4 (cp. ib. 7. 5. 3—5) inter multa...prodigia, quibus denuntiata est duarum urbium Helices et Buris eversio, fuere maxime notabilia columna ignis immensi et Delos agitata. But this fiery pillar was presumably a species of comet (O. Gilbert Die meteorologischen Theorien des griechischen Altertums Leipzig 1907 p. 656 n. 1). The Jewish tragedian Ezekiel (s. ii. B.C. : see A. Jacoby in the Archiv f. Rel. 1927 xxv. 278 n. 1) ap. Euseb. praep. ev. 9. 29. 16 locates Moses' rock at Elim and says τόθεν δὲ φέγγος ἐξέλαμψέ νιν, | κατ' εὐφρόνην σημεῖον ὡς στῦλος πυρός—apparently combining the 'pillar of fire' (Ex. 13. 21 f., alib.) with the 'rock in Horeb' (Ex. 17. 6, cp. Num. 20. 8), if not with the 'rock that followed them' (1 Cor. 10. 4).

R. Vallois in the Bull. Corr. Hell. 1931 lv. 327 f. regards the blaze in Krastonia as a ritual epiphany of Dionysos, citing Suet. Aug. 94 Octavio postea, cum per secreta Thraciae exercitum duceret, in Liberi patris luco barbara caerimonia de filio consulenti, idem affirmatum est a sacerdotibus, quod infuso super altaria mero tantum flammae emicuisset, ut supergressa fastigium templi ad caelum usque ferretur, unique omnino Magno Alexandro apud easdem aras sacrificanti simile provenisset ostentum. Vallois compares the Theban myth of Dionysos πυριγενής [Eustath. in Il. p. 346, 32] and the nativity of the Cretan Zeus (Ant. Lib. 19 : supra ii. 928 n. 0).

ii. 117 n. 7 Quint. Smyrn. 14. 223 ff. H. J. Rose in The Hibbert Journal 1927 xxv. 380 remarks that Quint. Smyrn. is here imitating Ap. Rhod. 3. 160 f.

ii. 119 'star-flung Thunderbolt.' K. Kerényi ''Αστεροβλῆτα κεραυνός' in the Egyetemes Philologiai Közlöny Budapest 1927 li. 81—87=id. 'ΑΣΤΕΡΟΒΛΗΤΑ ΚΕΡΑΥΝΟΣ' in the Archiv f. Rel. 1928 xxvi. 322—330, cp. id. ib. 1933 xxx. 288 n. 1.

ii. 121 'I have fallen as a kid into milk.' C. W. Vollgraff ΕΡΙΦΟΣ ΕΣ ΓΑΛ' ΕΠΕΤΟΝ (Mededeelingen der Koninklijke Akademie van Wetenschappen, Afdeeling Letterkunde Deel 57, Serie A, N°. 2) Amsterdam 1924 pp. 1—35 (in Dutch, with summary in French) holds that the formula means 'I, become a kid, flung myself upon the milk,' i.e. upon the breast of the deity. Cp. the Villa Item fresco, where a Satyress suckles a kid [A. Maiuri La Villa dei Misteri Roma 1931 p. 140 ff. fig. 53 and col. pl. 5 f.].

ii. 121 n. 3 vases showing Thracian women tattooed. To the six examples listed add : (7) A kotýle from Caere, now at Schwerin, signed by the potter Pistoxenos (Hoppin Red-fig. Vases ii. 372 f. no. 3 fig., J. D. Beazley Attische Vasenmaler des rotfigurigen Stils Tübingen 1925 p. 259 no. 1) shows young Herakles followed by an old crone Geropso, who is tattooed in the Thracian manner with parallel strokes on neck, forearms, and feet (the best publication is that of J. Maybaum in the Jahrb. d. kais. deutsch. arch. Inst. 1912 xxvii. 24—37 fig. 1 pls. 5—8). (8) A fragmentary kályx-kratér from Tarentum, now at the Hague (C. Watzinger in Furtwängler—Reichhold Gr. Vasenmalerei iii. 355—361 pl. 178), represents the assailants of Orpheus with numerous tattoo-marks on arms, legs, and necks. 'Dieser Körperschmuck besteht nicht nur aus geometrischen Mustern, senkrechten und wagrechten Strichen, Zickzack- und Mäanderbändern und puntierten Sternen [on which solar symbol see supra i. 296 fig. 219, C. T. Seltman Athens its History and Coinage before the Persian Invasion Cambridge 1924 p. 55 ff., id. Greek Coins London 1933 p. 51 pl. 4, 1, and S. Casson in the Am. Journ. Arch. 1935 xxxix. 514 ff.], sondern an Armen und Beinen sehen wir auch sich emporringelnde Schlangen und hochbeinige Vierfüssler, Rehe und Hirsche und einmal am Arm wohl eher ein springendes Reh als einen Hasen' (p. 359).

ii. 123 n. 0 ritual tattooing. See further F. J. Dölger Antike und Christentum Münster in Westfalen 1930 ii. 100 ff. ('Die Gottesweihe durch Brandmarkung oder Tätowierung in ägyptischen Dionysoskult der Ptolemäerzeit'), 107 ff. ('Zur Frage der religiösen Tätowierung im thrakischen Dionysoskult...'), 297 ff. ('Religiöse Tätowierung im Atargatiskult von Hierapolis in Syrien'), 1932 iii. 257 ff. ('Der Sinn der sakralen Tätowierung und Brandmarkung in der antiken Kultur').

ii. 124 ladder as soul-path. Hence perhaps that favourite motif in Pompeian art—Eros on a ladder (e.g. Reinach Rép. Peint. Gr. Rom. p. 85, 3—5, p. 91, 4).

ii. 124 n. 2 pl. vi. J. D. Beazley in the Journ. Hell. Stud. 1927 xlvii. 230 n. 29 justly objects that I have ignored the explanation of the scene offered by F. Hauser in the Jahresh. d. oest. arch. Inst. 1909 xii. 96 fig. 56 ('Αδωνιάζουσαι : the woman on the ladder personates Aphrodite).

ii. 128 Jacob's ladder. C. F. Coxwell Siberian and other Folk-Tales London 1933

p. 988 (in Little Russia the staircase seen by Jacob is formed of seven heavens—blue, green, violet, yellow, white, pink, and fiery red).

ii. 128 n. 2. See now T. Dombart Der babylonische Turm Leipzig 1930 pp. 1—36 with 9 figs. in text and 4 pls.

ii. 129 n. 2. Prof. Max Semper of Aachen, in a letter dated Dec. 14, 1926, kindly points out to me that in Chwolsohn's translation from Makrisi 'Leiter' means, not 'ladder,' but 'leader' ('etwa die Bedeutung von "spiritus rector"').

ii. 130 votive ladders. W. Deonna 'Ex-voto déliens' in the Bull. Corr. Hell. 1932 lvi. 410—420 ('L'échelle aux serpents') observes that, from the year 364 B.C. onwards, the official inventories of the Artemision at Delos mention a small ladder in gilded wood round which a couple of silver snakes were twined (T. Homolle in the Bull. Corr. Hell. 1886 x. 461 ff. line 102 ff. = Michel Recueil d'Inscr. gr. no. 815, 102 ff. (364 B.C.) κ]λιμάκιον ξύλινον περικεχρυσωμένον ὄφεσιν ἀργυροῖς διεζωμένον | ἄστατον, T. Homolle in the Bull. Corr. Hell. 1890 xiv. 389 ff. (B) 35 f. = Michel Recueil d'Inscr. gr. no. 833, 35 f. = Inscr. Gr. Deli ii no. 161 B 35 f. (279 B.C.) κλιμάκιον ξύλινομ περίχρυσον ὄφεσιν ἀργυροῖς δ[ιεζ]ω|μένον, ἄστατον, ib. ii no. 162 B 28 f. (278 B.C.) κλιμάκιον ξύλινον περ[ί]|[χρυσον ὄφεσιν ἀργυροῖς διεζωσμένον, ἄστατον], ib. ii no. 203 b 86 (269 B.C.) κλιμάκιον [ξ]ύλινον ἐπίχρυσον ὄφεις δύο ἔχον ἀργυροῦς, E. Schulhof in the Bull. Corr. Hell. 1908 xxxii. 64 ff. no. 12, 23 f. = Inscr. Gr. Deli ii no. 208, 23 f. κλιμάκιον ξ[ύ]|[λινον ἐπίχρυσον ὄφεις δύο ἔχον ἀργυροῦς]). For the snakes of the ladder Deonna cp. the vision of St Perpetua (supra ii. 133), a fresco of c. 300—350 A.D. from the crypt of St Marcus and St Marcellianus in the Cemetery of St Balbina (H. Leclercq in F. Cabrol Dictionnaire d'archéologie chrétienne et de liturgie Paris 1910 ii. 149 f. with fig. 1229, cp. id. ib. 1921 iv. 1718 fig. 3900), and the twelfth-century Hortus Deliciarum by Herrade de Landsberg (supra ii. 136 n. 3). Does the same symbolism survive in the modern game of 'Snakes and Ladders'?

ii. 131 the terra-cotta disks from Tarentum. See now P. Wuilleumier 'Les disques de Tarente' in the Rev. Arch. 1932 i. 26—64 with 4 pls. and 2 figs. K. Kerényi in the Archiv f. Rel. 1933 xxx. 271—307 with fig. on p. 270 adds an interesting example in the Museum at Brindisi ("Ἀνοδος-Darstellung...mit einem Zodiakus von 11 Zeichen").

ii. 131 f. with fig. 79 Baubo. This terra cotta is now in the Antiquarium at Berlin: a photograph of it is given by H. Licht Sittengeschichte Griechenlands Dresden—Zürich 1926 ii. 16, also by O. Rubensohn in the Jahrb. d. Deutsch. Arch. Inst. 1929 xliv Arch. Anz. p. 199 with fig. 2 ('Die Frau ist ganz nackt...und berührt mit der rechten Hand die Scham. In Ägypten kennen wir die Gestalt dieser Frau in derselben Haltung und mit derselben Geste in zahlreichen Wiederholungen, nur mit dem Unterschied, dass sie nicht auf dem Schwein sitzt. Es sind kleine Figürchen, die gewöhnlich unter dem Namen Baubo gehen, ohne dass sie irgendwelches Recht auf diesen Namen haben. Sie tragen meist reichen Schmuck an Armen und Beinen, Kränze auf dem Kopf, und als Attribut kommt neben Sistren und Flaschen einmal auch eine Leier vor, nie die Scala').

See further S. Reinach 'Un mime byzantin' in the Rev. Ét. Gr. 1919 xxxii. 433—442 (= id. 'Un mime byzantin ou Baubo à Byzance' in Cultes, Mythes et Religions Paris 1923 v. 103—113), C. Picard 'L'épisode de Baubô dans les mystères d'Éleusis' in the Revue de l'histoire des religions 1927 xcv. 220—254, G. Pansa Miti, leggende e superstizioni dell' Abruzzo Sulmona 1927 ii. 91 ff. ('Il mito Eleusimio (sic) di Baubo ed il simbolo talismanico della ranocchia') with 11 figs., S. Reinach 'Baubô japonaise' in the Rev. Arch. 1929 ii. 337, U. Pestalozza in the Studi e Materiali di Storia delle Religioni 1931 vii. 64 ff. (Baubo etc.), P. Demargne 'Deux représentations de la déesse minoenne dans la nécropole de Mallia (Crète)' in the Mélanges Gustave Glotz Paris 1932 i. 305—314 with pls. 1—3 and fig. 1 (a painted anthropomorphic rhytón of 'Early Minoan iii' date and an incised oinochóe of 'Middle Minoan i'—both showing a goddess comparable with Baubo), H. Vorwahl 'Ein apotropäischer Kriegsbrauch' in the Archiv f. Rel. 1933 xxx. 395—397 ('so wird eindeutig, dass es sich hier um dynamistische Vorstellungen handelt, die Ausstrahlung von Kraft im apotropäischen Sinne'). An external corbel on the apse of the Norman church at Kilpeck, Monmouthshire, is sufficient proof that Baubo is with us yet.

ii. 142 n. 1. Cp. also A. Taramelli 'Chiaramonti.—Navicella votiva protosarda rinvenuta a Nuraghe Spiena' in the Not. Scavi 1925 pp. 322—327 fig. 1 (bronze boat with stag-head prow), F. Behn in Ebert Reallex. xi. 248 with pl. 64, a.

ii. 143 Sardus Pater. C. Alhizzati 'Sardus Pater' in Historia 1927 i. 56—65 with 14 figs., L. B. Holland 'Mycenaean plumes' in the Am. Journ. Arch. 1929 xxxiii. 198.

ii. 146 Diana-Pillars. Cp. a fresco from Pompeii which shows Mercury facing Venus and, between them, a Diana-pillar with crown-shaped top, a pair of ox-horns (?) attached to the shaft, and a small ithyphallic ex-voto at the base—the whole erected on a rock (B. Quaranta in the Real Museo Borbonico Napoli 1824 i pl. 32 with pp. 1—9, Helbig Wandgem. Camp. p. 8 no. 20, Reinach Rép. Peint. Gr. Rom. p. 97 no. 3).

ii. 150 n. 2. On the Jains see J. Hastings Encyclopædia of Religion and Ethics Edinburgh 1926 xiii (Index). 288, also A. Guérinot La religion Djaïna Paris 1926 pp. 1—350 with 25 pls. (pt 2. 11 'Cosmologie,' pt 3. 1 'Les sanctuaires et les temples').

ii. 157 n. 0. E. Babelon Guide illustré au Cabinet des Médailles Paris 1900 p. 211 f. fig. 83 'Vase de Bérénice,' H. B. Walters in the Brit. Mus. Cat. Rom. Pottery p. 11 no. K 76 pl. 5 (βασιλέως Πτολεμαίου | Φιλοπάτορος.....), p. 12 no. K 77 pl. 5 (ἀγαθῆς τύχης | Ἀρσινόης Φιλαδέλφου).

ii. 160 ff. Agyieús-Pillars. With figs. 104—106 cp. a square bronze weight in the British Museum (1930. 4—17. 2) with an Agyieús-pillar in relief surrounded by the letters A M B P.

C. A. Rhomaios in the Bull. Corr. Hell. 1925 xlix. 211 ff. fig. 1 publishes as an "Ἀγυιεύς d'Apollon' a limestone pillar (1·44^{m} high) of cylindrical shape and tapering towards the top, which was found in Korkyra and bears the inscription [·] ΡΣΟΞΓΥΧΒΑΙΟΣ, that is [ὅ]ρος Πυθαῖος = τοῦ Πυθίου or τοῦ Πυθαέος, cp. ib. fig. 6 a tapering limestone cylinder (0·90^{m} high) hollowed at the upper end to serve as an altar, likewise found in Korkyra and inscribed ΟΡΣΟΞΗΙΑΡΟΣ | ΤΑΞΑΚΡΙΑΣ, that is ὅρ̣ος ἱαρὸς | τᾶς Ἀκρίας = of Hera Ἀκρία. Rhomaios is followed by C. Picard La sculpture Paris 1935 i. 82 fig. 1. W. Dittenberger in Inscr. Gr. sept. iii. 1 nos. 699 (misread) and 698 had included both pillars in his list of local boundary-stones. Id. ib. iii. 1 no. 704 accepted as 'Apollinis Agyiei simulacrum' the stone of Mys (supra ii. 161 n. 3). So does A. Rumpf in D. H. Haas Bilderatlas zur Religionsgeschichte Leipzig 1928 xiii/xiv p. iii fig. 11.

At Hephaistia in Lemnos the Italians have found a village of the Geometric Age with a sanctuary comprising three large chambers. That to the south has in the centre a small octagonal pointed column, and yielded sherds of Ionic and black-figured Attic wares together with a rich deposit of terra-cotta figurines and local pots (E. P. B[legen] in the Am. Journ. Arch. 1931 xxxv. 196 f., D. Levi in The Illustrated London News for Feb. 28, 1931 p. 328 with a view of the sanctuary).

C. Bonner has suggested to me in conversation (July 10, 1931) that even in Homer there may be traces of sacred stones comparable with the Agyieús. Thus in Il. 12. 445 ff. Hektor caught up λᾶαν..., ὅς ῥα πυλάων | ἑστήκει πρόσθε, πρυμνὸς παχύς, αὐτὰρ ὕπερθεν | ὀξὺς ἦεν. Also in Od. 3. 406 ff. Nestor sat ἐπί ('at' rather than 'on') ξεστοῖσι λίθοισιν, | οἳ οἱ ἔσαν προπάροιθε θυράων ὑψηλάων | λευκοί, ἀποστίλβοντες ἁλείφατος (libations of fat, not polish)· οἳς ἔπι μὲν πρῶν | Νηλεὺς ἵζεσκεν, κ.τ.λ. Again, elders in the market-place sat ἐπὶ ξεστοῖσι λίθοις ἱερῷ ἐνὶ κύκλῳ (Il. 18. 504, cp. Od. 8. 6). I suggested to Bonner that perhaps to sit on the sacred stone was to be filled with the wisdom of the immanent deity. Hence the Agyieús-block might serve as a seat (cp. Priamos on his ΦΑΚΟΣ at the gate of Troy as shown on the François-vase (Furtwängler—Reichhold Gr. Vasenmalerei i. 58 pl. 11—12)), and the elders in council might actually sit on a sepulchral stone-circle to acquire the wisdom of the buried chieftain. Much relevant evidence will be found in a book of intense interest by A. H. Allcroft The Circle and the Cross London 1927 i. 80 ff. ('The Achean Moot' and successive chapters).

ii. 167 fig. 111. Cp. a copper drachmá of Byzantion cited by F. Lenormant in Daremberg—Saglio Dict. Ant. i. 1094 fig. 1355: obv. ΒΥΖ head of Apollon, laureate, to right; rev. ΔΡΑ||ΧΜΑ pillar with finial, set on a broad base (?).

ii. 169 ff. the Delphic omphalós. Sir A. Evans The Palace of Minos London 1928 ii. 2. 839 ff. with fig. 555 publishes a plaster-fragment from Knossos, found near the 'Cow-boy Fresco' on the east slope of the palace, which shows a pale blue omphalós (?) with a deep red band twined about it in an irregular net-like fashion.

L. B. Holland 'The Mantic Mechanism at Delphi' in the Am. Journ. Arch. 1933 xxxvii. 201—214 argues that the omphalós shown in my pl. ix, a—c with fig. 119 stood on a low square plinth beside a circular base supporting the tripod. Omphalós and plinth were alike pierced by a square hole. There was probably a tube of bronze in the hole. The knife was inserted to extract this metal lining, but got stuck in the hole. The nails were used in a vain attempt to pry it out. The purpose of the pipe was to convey the inspiring fumes from the crypt below to the feet of the Pythoness, who sat on the tripod. This ingenious view, though largely hypothetical, is deserving of careful consideration.

H. Lacoste in the Fouilles de Delphes ii I.a Terrasse du Temple 1 pl. 4 gives a restored ground-plan of the fourth-century temple of Apollon, on which is marked the exact position of the side-chapel. Id. ib. 'Addenda et Corrigenda' p. (2) amends the facsimile of the inscription on the omphalós (my fig. 120) by prolonging the first stroke of the alpha so that it crosses the second. But there is no doubt that the letter intended was Λ.

F. Chapouthier in the Rev. Ét. Gr. 1929 xlii. 336 draws attention to the curious resemblance of the inscription engraved on an amphora from Mykenai (A. J. Evans Scripta Minoa Oxford 1909 i. 58 fig. 33).

P. de la Coste-Messelière—R. Flacelière 'Une statue de la Terre à Delphes' in the Bull. Corr. Hell. 1930 liv. 283—295 figs. 1, 2 and pl. 14 publish a limestone base inscribed retrograde ΑΛ=Γᾶ on its upper surface and ΓΑ in later lettering on its front. The base shows four holes for the two feet of a bronze statue. It was found near Kastalia just opposite the big plane-tree, which local tradition identifies with that of Agamemnon. With this base were found five other blocks which may have come from the same monument (?), one inscribed retrograde ϟΙΜΞΘ=Θέμις on its upper surface and ΘΕΜΙΣ in fourth-century letters on its front, another with nothing above but ΚΑΛΛΙΣΤΩ in fourth-century style in front, a third with the artist's signature \. ΑΘΩΝ followed by ΕΡΓΟΝ (F. Courby in the Fouilles de Delphes ii La Terrasse du Temple 2. 163—165). On the whole it seems clear that the bases of Ge and Themis must be connected and prove a joint cult at Kastalia. A deep cavity between the two statues was meant for a large bronze tree-trunk, perhaps a bay (cp. Paus. 10. 5. 9).

ii. 176 n. 2 the Delphic E. This famous symbol continues to provoke lively discussion. H. Diels Die Fragmente der Vorsokratiker[3] Berlin 1912 ii. 214 n. regards it as 'vermuthlich eine κλεὶς κρυπτή, die zunächst als eine Erfindung geweiht, dann symbolisch gefasst und endlich als E gedeutet wurde. Denn das Balanosschlüssel sieht einem archaischen E sehr ähnlich.' F. Dornseiff Das Alphabet in Mystik und Magie (ΣΤΟΙΧΕΙΑ vii) Leipzig—Berlin 1922 p. 23 cites with approval Diels' explanation, but notes as an alternative possibility R. Eisler's suggestion that we have here to do with 'kleine Tempelmodellchen: im Sohar wird der Buchstabe ה hejkal=babyl. E-GAL=ēkallu Tempel genannt,' etc. W. H. Roscher in the Berl. philol. Woch. Dez. 23, 1922 pp. 1209—1211 still insists that E is εἶ=ἴσθι 'komm, tritt ein!' (id. 'Neue Beiträge zur Deutung des delphischen E' in Hermes 1901 xxxvi. 470—489). W. N. Bates 'The E of the Temple at Delphi' in the Am. Journ. Arch. 1925 xxix. 239—246 takes it to be a Cretan character, which on a gem in New York is associated with two bulls and two double axes and hence is probably to be read as a symbol of the Cretan Zeus or of the Cretan goddess, at Delphi called Gaia. Sir T. Zammit Prehistoric Malta Oxford 1930 p. 92 f. with pl. 23, 7 publishes an oval stone pebble, bored as a pendant and incised with ΠΠ, from a neolithic site in Malta: significance unknown. C. Fries 'De E Delphico' in the Rhein. Mus. 1930 lxxix. 343 f. claims that the symbol derives from Sumer: 'Jeremias...interroganti mihi scribit, E in Sumerorum lingua idem esse quod aedem vel cameram vel domum id quod sescenties in Sumerorum inscriptionibus inveniatur.' Finally, R. Demangel 'Triglyphes bas' in the Bull. Corr. Hell. 1937 lxi. 421—438 with 17 figs. (especially pp. 426—428 fig. 9 f.) reverts to my explanation, and extends it in some directions beyond my purview.

ii. 183 n. 3 Rhapso. See U. von Wilamowitz-Moellendorff in Hermes 1926 lxi. 281 (cp. ῥαψωιδοί).

ii. 187 the omphalós as a mound (?). S. H. Hooke in Folk-Lore 1936 xlvii. 24 f. derives the omphalós and its agrenón from 'early Sumerian seals of the "mountain" in which the dead god is imprisoned.'

ii. 187 n. 8 Zeus and Aigina. Zeus in pursuit of a young woman, a not infrequent scene on red-figured Attic vases, is often by a process of elimination labelled 'Zeus pursuing Aegina' (e.g. L. D. Caskey—J. D. Beazley Attic Vase Paintings in the Museum of Fine Arts, Boston Oxford 1931 i. 13 ff. no. 17 pl. 6, 43 no. 48 pls. 22 and 26, 45 no. 50 pl. 23). That is very possibly right, but the interpretation is secure only when accompanied by names, or at least by one name—that of the heroine. Thus a stámnos from Vulci, now in the Vatican (H 504), attributed to the painter Hermonax (c. 470—455 B.C.), shows ΞΕVS with sceptre held horizontally just overtaking ΑΙΑΙΝΑ, whose sisters hasten to tell their father ΑSΟΠΟS (Mus. Etr. Gregor. ii. 5 pl. 20, 1 and 1 a, Overbeck Gr. Kunstmyth. Zeus p. 400 f. no. 4. Atlas pl. 6, 1, Müller—Wieseler—Wernicke Ant. Denkm. i. 65 f. pl. 6, 4, Hoppin Red-fig. Vases ii. 36 no. 37, J. D. Beazley Attische Vasenmaler des rotfigurigen Stils Tübingen 1925 p. 300 no. 8), while a columnkratér in New York, attributed to the 'Boreas Painter' (c. 460 B.C.), shows Zeus with uplifted bolt catching ΑΙΛιφα. She turns to touch his chin in supplication. Her sisters flee in alarm. The reverse perhaps depicts Asopos, at home, receiving the news from his other daughters (Hoppin op. cit. i. 81 no. 8 bis, Beazley op. cit. p. 305 no. 3 'Semele verfolgend' (?), G. M. A. Richter Red-figured Athenian Vases in the Metropolitan Museum of Art Yale Univ. Press 1936 i. 116 f. no. 86 pls. 94 (=my fig. 883) and 170). On the ethnic implications of the myth see J. P. Harland Prehistoric Aigina Paris 1925 pp. 59—63.

ii. 189 antithetic grouping. H. R. Hall, lecturing at Cambridge (Oct. 31, 1928) on recent finds at Ur, showed that 'the antithetic arrangement of animal figures' long before its appearance on Cretan seals etc. occurs in Mesopotamian art, and in Babylonia can be traced back to a period c. 3000 B.C. See further F. A. v. Scheltema, G. Roeder, and E. Unger 'Wappen (und Wappenstil)' in Ebert Reallex. xiv. 250—254, W. Deonna 'Animaux à deux corps et une tête' in the Rev. Arch. 1930 i. 47—73 figs. 6—12, A. Roes Greek Geometric Art its Symbolism and its Origin Haarlem—Oxford 1933 pp. 16 ff., 93 ff., 99 ff., 115 ff., J. Baltrušaitis Art sumérien art roman Paris 1934 pp. 17 ff., 31 ff., 56 f., 64 ff., 83 ff.

ii. 189 n. 0. Dr A. H. Lloyd pointed out to me (Dec. 24, 1926) that on certain tetradrachms of Gela (c. 466—415 B.C.) a flying eagle is attached by two reins to Nike's quadriga. He suggested that this implied Zeus in eagle form. But E. S. G. Robinson in Syll. num. Gr. ii pl. 34, 986 says: 'The lines which run down on the obverse from eagle to chariot rail and goad and at first sight seem to be intended to connect the bird to the car appear to be in fact die-flaws.' It must, however, be admitted that on a duplicate given to me by Dr Lloyd the alleged 'die-flaws' are in exactly the same condition (cp. supra ii. 657 n. 3).

ii. 191 original character of the Delphic omphalós. C. Picard in the Revue de l'histoire des religions 1926 xciii. 85 n. 2 is more disposed to accept the view that the omphalós was the tomb of Dionysos as advocated by T. Homolle 'Ressemblance de l'omphalos delphique avec quelques représentations égyptiennes' in the Rev. Ét. Gr. 1919 xxxii. 338—358. Picard thinks the analogies with modern Greek custom 'fort superficielles.' K. Schwendemann 'Omphalos, Pythongrab und Drachenkampf' in the Archiv f. Rel. 1920—1921 xx. 481—484 rejects the 'τύμβος-Theorie' and reverts to the older 'Erdnabeltheorie.'

V. Nordström Poseidon och hans σκηπάνιον Helsingfors 1931 pp. 1—40 and Om Hermes χρυσόῤῥαπις Helsingfors 1932 pp. 1—30 contends that Poseidon's staff (Il. 13. 59), Poseidon's trident, and Hermes' rod were all modifications of the umbilical cord! H. J. Rose in the Class. Rev. 1932 xlvi. 182 deals faithfully with such vagaries.

ii. 193 ff. the Delphic tripod. C. Clemen Religionsgeschichte Heidelberg 1926 i. 247 fig. 100 (after Springer Kunst des Altertums[10] fig. 433) restores the Plataean tripod much as I do, but with legs contracted at the base.

K. Kluge in the Jahrb. d. Deutsch. Arch. Inst. 1929 xliv. 23 ff. discusses the technique of the serpent-column (summary by E. H. Heffner in the Am. Journ. Arch. 1931 xxxv. 456 f.).

ii. 199 n. 2 with pl. xii the Chigi base. A marble replica of (a) and (c), dredged up in the harbour at the Peiraieus and referred to a date c. 100 B.C., is figured in The Illustrated London News for Jan. 31, 1931 p. 164 f. A full account of the find is given by E. P. B[legen] in the Am. Journ. Arch. 1931 xxxv. 91.

ii. 201 n. 1. J. D. S. Pendlebury tells me (March 2, 1927) that at Delphoi the plane-tree of Agamemnon is still shown, below Kastalia, at the outlet of the gorge.

ii. 205 n. 1 dolphins. See Biedermann Der Delphin in der dichtenden und bildenden Phantasie der Griechen und Römer Halle a. S. 1881 pp. 1—26, E. B. Stebbins The Dolphin in the Literature and Art of Greece and Rome Benasha, Wisconsin 1929 pp. 1—136 (reviewed by A. M. Duff in the Class. Rev. 1930 xliv. 185 f.).

ii. 206 n. 1 divining-glass. A. Delatte La catoptromancie grecque et ses dérivés (Bibliothèque de la Faculté de Philosophie et Lettres de l'Université de Liége xlviii) Liège 1932 pp. 1—221 pls. 1—12, T. Hopfner 'Mittel- und neugriechische Lekano-, Lychno-, Katoptro- und Onychomantien' in Studies presented to F. Ll. Griffith London 1932 pp. 218—232.

ii. 209. On the Pythía as a case of artificial and voluntary possession see T. K. Oesterreich Possession demoniacal and other among primitive races, in antiquity, the middle ages, and modern times London 1930 pp. 311—331.

ii. 212 n. 0 the Peliades. Cp. also Sogliano Pitt. mur. Camp. p. 103 f. nos. 553, 554.

ii. 212 n. 3. An almost exact replica of the black-figured lékythos at Leyden is published by R. B. Bandinelli in the Mon. d. Linc. 1925 xxx. 534 f. no. 201 fig. 5. Another black-figured lēkythos of similar style and period, found at Gela, was discussed by P. Orsi ib. 1906 xvii. 120 ff. fig. 88. It shows the youthful figure emerging from the cauldron, which is surrounded by roaring flames and flanked by two scared women (Peliades?).

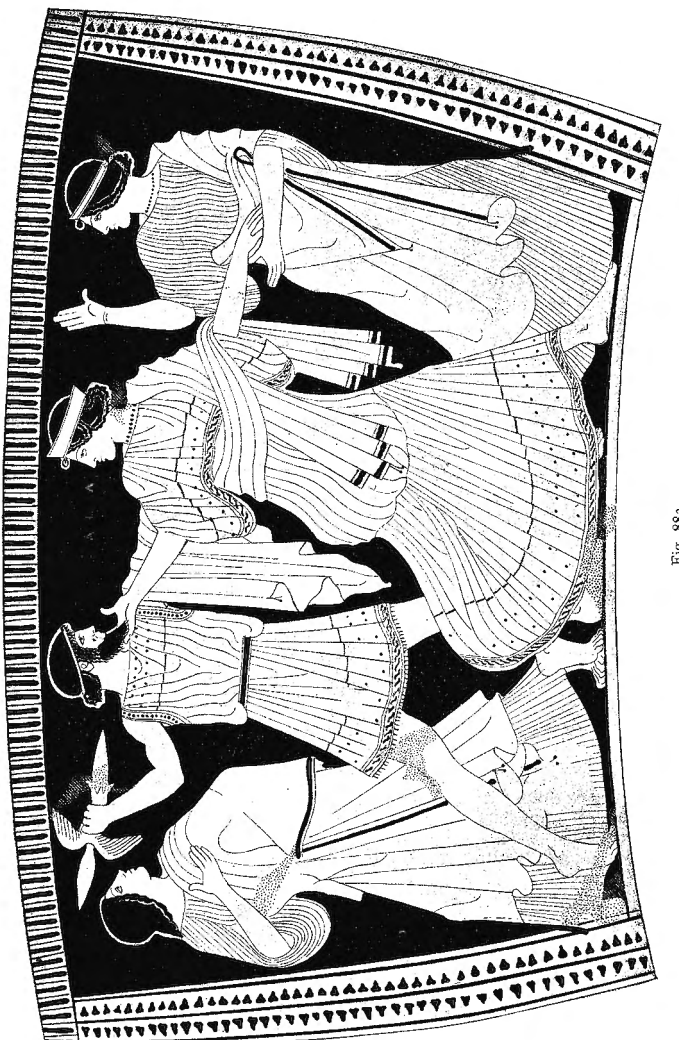

Fig. 883.

ii. 222 n. 4. Iambl. v. Pyth. 4 ff. possibly 'geht...durch Apollonios auf Timaios zurück, vgl. G. Bertermann, De Iamblichi vit. Pyth. fontibus, Diss. Königsberg 1913, S. 37' (O. Weinreich in the Sitzungsber. d. Heidelb. Akad. d. Wiss. Phil.-hist. Classe 1924/25 Abh. vii. 11 Nachtrag).

ii. 224 the ivory shoulder of Pelops. H. W. Parke 'The Bones of Pelops and the Siege of Troy' in Hermathena 1933 xxiii. 153—162 discussing Paus. 5. 13. 4 ff. holds that the shoulder-blade of Pelops there mentioned as brought from Pisa to Troy and later lost off Euboia in a storm, but recovered from the sea by the fisherman Damarmenos and at the bidding of the Delphic oracle restored by him to the Eleans, was identified in s. vi B.C. with Pelops' ivory shoulder—a highly primitive feature of sacrificial or cannibalistic origin, being in reality the scapula of some cetacean!

I suspect that Eur. Bacch. 1300 (Agaue asks of her son's scattered limbs) ἦ πᾶν ἐν ἄρθροις συγκεκλημένον καλῶς; points to an original form of the myth in which Pentheus was recalled to life. This may have been detailed in the lacuna immediately following line 1300.

Cp. the shepherds' treatment of the boy killed by a bear in Apul. met. 7. 26 nec uspiam ruris aperitur ille sed plane corpus eius membratim laceratum multisque dispersum locis conspicitur...et cadaver quidem disiectis partibus <collectis> tandem totum repertum aegreque concinnatum ibidem terrae dedere. Note also the queer story of Domitia Longina, who collected the flesh of her butchered husband Domitian, put the pieces accurately together, sewed up the whole body, and had a bronze statue of it made and set up at Rome (Prokop. anecdota 8. 15—21).

ii. 224 n. 1 the golden breast. J. A. MacCulloch in J. Hastings Encyclopædia of Religion and Ethics Edinburgh 1920 xi. 410[b]: 'The story of Caradoc, which forms part of the French Perceval cycle [ed. Potvin ii. 191 ff.], relates how a serpent fastened on his arm and sucked away his life. He was saved by a young maiden presenting her breast to the serpent, which took the nipple in its mouth. Cador then cut off its head, but with that also the nipple, which was magically replaced by one of gold. A close parallel exists in a Gaelic folk-tale ['Sheen Billy' in Campbell i. xcv f.], and less close in a Scots ballad ['The Queen of Scotland' in Child no. 301], but it is probable that the source is Celtic, as the name of the wife of the Welsh Karadawe is Tegau Eurfron, Tegau "with the golden breast".' For a full discussion of the tale and its variants see C. A. Harper 'Caradoc and the Serpent' in Modern Language Notes 1898 xiii. 417—431, G. Paris 'Caradoc et le serpent' in Romania 1899 xxviii. 214—231.

ii. 228 n. 4. On the sanctuary of Artemis Kallíste see now A. Philadelpheus in the Bull. Corr. Hell. 1927 li. 155—163 with pl 8 and 4 figs., P. Roussel ib. 1927 li. 164—169 (summaries by E. H. Heffner in the Am. Journ. Arch. 1928 xxxii. 360).

ii. 230 ability to stare at the sun. On this Sonnenmotiv see E. Norden Die Geburt des Kindes Leipzig—Berlin p. 160 n. 2.

ii. 232 n. 0. A convex sardonyx (owner unknown) shows the Delian Apollon, a nude standing figure with the three Charites on his outstretched right hand and a bow in his left (Furtwängler Ant. Gemmen i pl. 40, 7, ii. 191, Lippold Gemmen pl. 7, 8 (enlarged)). C. Picard La sculpture Paris 1935 i. 573 fig. 199 illustrates a relief at Munich on which the upper part of the Delian Charites is shown—profile to left, full-face, profile to right—perhaps after the cult-statue.

ii. 243 n. 3. On the paián of Philodamos see now W. Vollgraff 'Le péan delphique à Dionysos' in the Bull. Corr. Hell. 1924 xlviii. 97—208, 1925 xlix. 104—142, 1926 l. 263—304, 1927 li. 423—468 (text reconstituted on p. 465 ff.).

ii. 258 n. 3 Zeus Bouleús. O. Broneer in the Am. Journ. Arch. 1933 xxxvii. 564 with fig. 8 publishes a white marble slab—part of a gaming board—found in the well of a shop at Corinth, which is inscribed ΔΙΟΣ ΒΟΥΛΕΟΣ and ΔΑΜ[---]ΙΗ(?Ν)Ν again associating Zeus Bouleús with Demeter.

ii. 258 n. 3 Zeus Bouleús or Eubouleús grouped with Demeter and Kore. With this chthonian triad M. P. Nilsson in the Archiv f. Rel. 1935 xxxii. 87 justly cp. the Damateres and Zeus Damátrios of two Rhodian dedications ((1) found by the Danish excavators on the akrópolis of Lindos [Ἀ]λιαδᾶν. Δαματέρων καὶ Διὸς Δαματρίου. (2) found at Siana in Rhodes Ζωινθίων τετράδι ἱσταμένου Δαμάτερσι ὃν κνεῦσαν. Both inscriptions are of late Hellenistic date). Nilsson comments: 'Die Bezeichnung der beiden Göttinnen als Δαμάτερες, die m. W. sonst nicht in Griechenland vorkommt und an das Lateinische Cereres [Thes. Ling. Lat. Suppl. i. 341, 57 ff.] erinnert, lässt sich nur durch ihre Wesensidentität erklären; sie sind sozusagen die ältere und die jüngere Auflage derselben Gottheit' [supra i. 396 f.].

ii. 259 n. o Zeus Boulaîos. His cult at Thasos (noted in the Comptes rendus de l'Acad. des inscr. et belles-lettres 1914 p. 288, Bull. Corr. Hell. 1923 xlvii. 537 n. 3) is attested by a couple of dedications (G. Daux in the Bull. Corr. Hell. 1928 lii. 57 f. no. 9 fig. 4 a rectangular base of Thasian marble, from the prytaneîon, with oval sinking, inscribed c. 250 B.C. ἀπόλογοι 'Εστίηι | Βουλαίηι καὶ Διὶ | Βουλαίωι, no. 10 fig. 4 a rectangular base of Thasian marble, from the theórion, with rectangular sinking, inscribed c. 250 B.C. ἀπόλογοι 'Ιστίηι Βουλαίηι [καὶ Διὶ Βουλαίωι] | Στράτων Νεομάν[δρου] | Πολύτιμος 'Ορθομέ[νους] | 'Αριστείδης 'Αλκ[- - -]).

ii. 260 n. o. On the identification of Augustus with Zeus Patrôios as evidenced by Pergamene inscriptions see W. H. Buckler 'Auguste, Zeus Patroos' in the Rev. Philol. Troisième Série 1935 ix. 177—188.

ii. 260 n. o Zeus in connexion with mills. W. Schultz Rätsel aus dem hellenischen Kulturkreise Leipzig 1912 ii. 109 with n. 2, Keyssner in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. xvi. 1044 f., gr. Kruse ib. xvi. 1073, E. Fehrle in Roscher Lex. Myth. vi. 643.

ii. 264 Dionysos displaced by Apollon. C. Watzinger in Furtwängler—Reichhold Gr. Vasenmalerei iii. 340 ff. pl. 174, 1 discusses the fragment of a kályx-kratér from Tarentum, now at the Hague, which shows a Doric temple (at Delphoi?) containing a cult-statue of Apollon with bow and phiále. Before the temple are seated Apollon (lyre) and Artemis (spears), while beyond the tripod the reverse scene comprises Dionysos (ivy-wreath, nárthex), a Maenad (timbrel), and a Silenos (kántharos).

ii. 268 n. o the earth-goddess riding on a bull. See W. Technau 'Die Göttin auf dem Stier' in the Jahrb. d. Deutsch. Arch. Inst. 1937 lii. 76—103 figs. 1—14 (especially p. 95 f.).

ii. 268 n. 4. C. Picard in the Revue de l'histoire des religions 1926 xciii. 91 n. 1 notes that C. W. Vollgraff ΕΡΙΦΟΣ ΕΣ ΓΑΙ' ΕΠΕΤΟΝ [Supra Addenda to ii. 121] p. 19 ff. 'suggère un rapport entre Dionysos et le sumérien Domouzi, plus tard appelé Tamouz.'

ii. 270 n. 3. L. Weber in the Archiv f. Rel. 1934 xxxi. 174 cites two reliefs published by G. I. Kazarow ('Zum Kultus des thrakischen Reiters in Bulgarien' in the Jahrb. d. Deutsch. Arch. Inst. 1926 xli Arch. Anz. p. 6 ff. fig. 3 and 'Ein neues Relief des dreiköpfigen Reiters' ib. 1929 xliv Arch. Anz. p. 232 ff. fig. 1) in which the rider-god is three-headed and followed by a male figure grasping his horse's tail. The first, from the district of Plovdiv, is inscribed κυρίω θεῶ || Αὐλουζένις Δονγίνου, | Αὐλουζένις Διουζήνου (O. Weinreich ib. 1927 xlii Arch. Anz. p. 20 n. 4). The second, from Komatevo a village near Philippopolis, is inscribed [θε]ῶ Πανθο[πιο]ῶ || ['Α]λέξανδρος ὑπὲρ αὐτοῦ | [κα]ὶ τῆς γ[υναικ]ὸς εὐχαριστήριον (Kazarow loc. cit. p. 234), or possibly [θε]ῶ Πανθό[πτ]ω (Weber loc. cit.), with Thracian θ for τ.

ii. 270 n. 5. G. Kazarow in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. vi A. 490 records the proper name Βαζό-βαλις (Bulletin de la Société Archéologique de Bordeaux iv. 93).

ii. 278 n. 2 the Phrygian formula of execration. W. M. Calder 'Corpus inscriptionum Neo-Phrygiarum iii' in the Journ. Hell. Stud. 1926 xlvi. 22—28 adds fresh examples, and contends 'that they all belong to the latter half of the third century [A.D.], and represent an artificial revival of the epigraphical use of the Phrygian language by the Tekmoreian Association' [on which see now the useful article of W. Ruge 'Xenoi Tekmoreioi' in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. v A. 158—169, also Canon E. C. Hudson 'Pisidian Antioch and the Xenoi Tekmoreioi' in Theology 1938 xxxvi. 230—236]. A. H. Sayce in the Journ. Hell. Stud. 1926 xlvi. 29 ff. appends a few notes. He objects to Calder's acceptance of Kretschmer's rendering δεως κε ζεμελως 'heavenly and chthonian gods': 'This...does not take account of the very definite statement in Hesychius: ζεμελεν· βάρβαρον ἀνδράποδον· φρύγες. The Boghaz Keui texts clear up the difficulty. The Phrygian phrase corresponds with the Hittite "the gods and the dead" (akandus). The dead were deified, and ζεμελεν must have literally signified "ghost" or "devil"[2a] ([2a]Cp. "printer's devil" in English).' J. Friedrich Kleinasiatische Sprachdenkmäler Berlin 1932 pp. 128—140 has a handy collection of all the texts. On the Phrygian language in general and its grave-formula in particular see N. Jokl in Ebert Reallex. x. 141—153.

ii. 281 Zeus Dtos with grape-bunches and a plough. R. Vallois in the Rev. Ét. Gr. 1929 xlii. 453 cites W. M. Calder Monumenta Asiae Minoris antigua Manchester Univ. Press 1928 i p. xiii for 'le Zeus aux épis et Dionysis (=Dionysos) gardien de la tombe.'

The reference is to Calder op. cit. i. 4 no. 5 an altar of bluish limestone at Shahr Ören in Eastern Phrygia inscribed Μεῖρος Ναν|α ἀνέστη|σεν κατὰ ‖ κέλευ|σιν τοῦ Διός. On the shaft are three reliefs: (a) in front, a pedestal supporting a bust of Zeus, who holds a bunch of grapes and an ear of wheat; (b) to the left, two wheat-ears planted in round bowls (?); (c) to the right, a pedestal supporting a bust of Helios, radiate. Ib. i. 5 no. 7 an altar of bluish limestone at Kadyn Khan in Eastern Phrygia inscribed Εὐ[.....] | οἰκονόμος Διὶ | Φατνίω κατὰ | κέλευσιν. On the shaft in relief is a pedestal supporting a bust of Zeus, who holds a bunch of grapes and corn-ears. W. M. Ramsay in the Journ. Hell. Stud. 1918 xxxviii. 135 no. 2 restored Εὐ[δαίμων?] and added: 'Eu[daimon?] was the steward in charge of this department on the imperial estates at Zizyma....About this time another oikonomos, Ca[ndidus?] the younger, made a dedication to Jove Dionysos[20] ([20]The dedication is to ΙΥΩ ΔΙΟΝΥCΩ... which halts between Jove and Jehovah...) at Zizyma.' Calder op. cit. i. 216 f. no. 413, 5 a sculptured stèle from Baghlija in Eastern Phrygia, which names Διουνσω as guardian of the grave.

ii. 282 Zeus Diónysos. D. Detschew in the Jahresh. d. oest. arch. Inst. 1934 xxix Beiblatt p. 165 f. fig. 60 (=my fig. 884) publishes a square altar of grey marble, still used to support the table-top in the church of the village Sarmadžik (Bezirk Malko-Tirnovo, Regierungskreis Burgas) in Bulgaria. On the altar is inscribed in would-be hexameters: Βῶμὸν τόνδ' ἀνέ|θηκα θεῷ Διὶ τῷ Δ[ι]|ονύσω Λυκομήδης | Χρήστου ἱερεὺς Βακ|χείου μεγάλοιο | ὑπὲρ ἐμῶν παίδων | καὶ τειμῆς, ἣς λάχον | αὐτός, καὶ μυστῶν ἰδίων, οὓς σῶζε μάκαρ | Διόνυσε. Detschew ib. p. 166 collects evidence for the identification of Zeus with Dionysos (for Orph. frag. 235 Abel, 236 Kern ἀγλαὲ Ζεῦ Διόνυσε κ.τ.λ. see supra i. 187 n. 10). W. H. Buckler—W. M. Calder in Monumenta Asiae Minoris antiqua Manchester Univ. Press 1939 vi. 123 no. 360 pl. 62 (=my fig. 885) publish an altar of bluish limestone from Haci Beili in the Upper Tembris Valley (front relief, krατήr with ivy-sprays; back, snake biting grape-vine) inscribed [ὑπὲρ τῆς τοῦ κυρίου (?) Καί]σαρος νείκης καὶ δια|μονῆς Ταναιτηνῶν | νεανία(ι) Διὶ Διονύσω ἀνέστησαν.

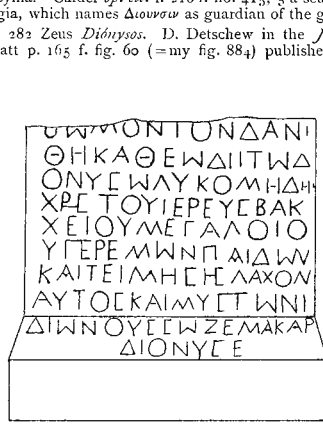

Fig. 884.

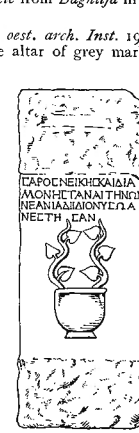

Fig. 885.

ii. 285 n. o (2). Sir W. M. Ramsay Asianic Elements in Greek Civilisation London 1927 p. 212 ff. fig. 4 gives a drawing (inexact) of this relief and its inscription made in 1884.

ii. 285 n. o (4). M. V. Taylor and R. G. Collingwood in the Journ. Rom. Stud. 1929 xix. 199 pl. 9 publish a similar plaque of base silver, with figures of the three Mother Goddesses in repoussé work, found in London, and note other examples from Barkway in Hertfordshire. See also supra p. 1100 fig. 878.

ii. 290 n. o the tombstone of Abirkios and Theuprepia. Sir W. M. Ramsay op. cit. p. 240 ff. fig. 5.

ii. 290 n. o the head as the seat of the soul. See further G. A. Grierson 'The Headless Horseman' (an Indian ballad) in Folk-Lore 1914 xxv. 382, H. A. Rose 'Sacrifices of the Head to the Hindu Goddess' (Devi) ib. 1926 xxxvii. 90—92, Bargheer s.v. 'Kopf' in the Handwörterbuch des deutschen Aberglaubens Berlin—Leipzig 1932 v. 203 ff. Cp. A. Delatte 'ΑΚΕΦΑΛΟΣ ΘΕΟΣ' in the Bull. Corr. Hell. 1914 xxxviii. 189—249, id. in the Musée Belge 1922 xxvi. 255—259, K. Preisendanz Akephalos der kopflose Gott Leipzig 1926 pp. 1—80, Pfister Rel. Gr. Röm. 1930 p. 325 f.

ii. 291 n. 2 συκοφάντης. K. Latte in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. iv A. 1028—1031 demurs to my explanation ('wobei nicht zu sehen ist, wie aus der Abwehr drohenden Unheils der verleumderische Angriff geworden sein soll') and falls back on that of A. Boeckh Die Staatshaushaltung der Athener[3] Berlin 1886 i. 56 ('σ. bezeichne jemand, der um einer Sache von geringem Wert willen eine Anzeige erstattet (vgl. etwa ital. ammazzar qualcuno per uno fico "jemand um nichts ermorden")...Andererseits ist die Beziehung auf die Phasis in dem zweiten Teil des Wortes offenkundig und gibt ihm erst seinen Inhalt, denn bei der Phasis erhielt der obsiegende Kläger die Hälfte der Strafsumme oder des eingezogenen Vermögens').

Fig. 886.

ii. 295 n. 2. A. Carnoy 'Les noms de Déméter et de Coré' in the Annuaire de l'Institut de Philologie et d'Histoire Orientales 1934 ii (Mélanges Bidez) pp. 71—77 would connect Δημήτηρ with γῆ and derive Περσεφόνη from φερσι-φόνη*, 'qui apporte l'abondance.'

ii. 296 Attis and the Kouretes. O. Brendel in the Jahrb. d. Deutsch. Arch. Inst. 1935 l Arch. Anz. pp. 521—524 fig. 1 (=my fig. 886) gives a preliminary publication of a silver patera rescued from oblivion by Miss A. Levi and now in the Brera at Milan. When found at Parabiago in Lombardy it was serving as the lid of a grave-amphora. It shows in fine relief of c. 150—200 A.D. the triumph of Attis. He is seated with Kybele in a car drawn by four lions and accompanied by three dancing Kouretes. Above are the rising Sun and setting Moon with Morning and Evening Stars. Below, Okeanos and a Nereid, with fish showing their heads above water. On the left, two Fresh Water Nymphs with reeds. On the right, Earth with cornu copiae, various animals, and a pair of infants. Between, the four Seasons as children. Higher up, Atlas carrying Aion in a zodiacal ring, and an Obelisk twined about with a snake. This cosmic design on a concave circular field is a magnificent specimen of symbolic art, and is to be published with full commentary by Miss Levi in Opere d' Arte del R. Istituto di Archeologia e Storia dell' Arte (Roma).

ii. 297 fig. 189. See now J. Leipoldt 'Eine römische Attisfigur' in Ἄγγελος 1926 ii. 51 f. with a good photographic pl., and cp. Attis as a recumbent figure on coins of Kyzikos (C. Bosch in the Jahrb. d. Deutsch. Arch. Inst. 1931 xlvi Arch. Anz. p. 443 f. fig. 10).

ii. 298 fig. 190. F. J. Dölger ΙΧΘΥC Münster in Westf. 1927 iv pl. 168 gives a photograph of this singular modius.

ii. 300. W. Technau in the Jahrb. d. Deutsch. Arch. Inst. 1931 xlvi Arch. Anz. pp. 655—657 with figs. 10—14 publishes the sarcophagus of a priest of Kybele and Attis, found in a large columbarium at Porto. The lid shows the priest recumbent, his left hand with five thick rings supporting his head, his right with δκκαβος or 'arm-band' holding pine-sprig and rosary. The arm-band is decorated with reliefs of Kybele seated between two standing figures, Attis and Hermes. And at the priest's feet is the usual kiste. Two oblong reliefs from the same find-spot represent the same priest with his insignia offering fruit before a seated Kybele and holding torches before a standing Attis.

ii. 300 n. 3. Photographs in Stuart Jones Cat. Sculpt. Pal. d. Conserv. Rome p. 254 ff. Scala v no. 2 pl. 100, F. J. Dölger Antike und Christentum Münster in Westfalen 1933 iv. 1 pl. 4 (Moscioni no. 20 947).

ii. 305 n. 0 the Gosforth Cross. See now R. Reitzenstein Weltuntergangs-vorstellungen (Sonderabdruck aus Kyrko-historisk Årsskrift 1924) Uppsala 1924 p. 41 ff. figs. 2—7, id. 'Die nordischen, persischen und christlichen Vorstellungen vom Weltuntergang' in the Vorträge der Bibliothek Warburg 1923—1924 Leipzig—Berlin 1926 p. 160 ff. pls. 2—4 figs. 3—10.

ii. 307 n. 1 the epitaph of Aberkios. See further A. Abel 'Étude sur l'inscription d'Abercius' in Byzantion 1926 iii. 321—411.

ii. 312 n. 5 παρὰ δὲ Λυδοῖς ὁ Ζεὺς Ζεῦσις. A. Nehring in Gnomon 1929 v. 588 supports Ζεῦ-σ-ις as a Lydianised form of Ζεύς by quoting ibšim-s-is and the like from Lydian inscriptions.

ii. 313 ff. the Kábeiroi. The fullest survey of the facts is that given by O. Kern 'Kabeiros...und Kabeiroi' in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. x. 1399—1450, with supplementary notes by the same author 'Καβιριακά' in the Archiv f. Rel. 1916—1919 xix. 551—553 and 'Noch einmal Karkinos' ib. 1920—1921 xx. 236.

G. Pansa 'La leggenda di traslazione di S. Tommaso apostolo ad Ortona a mare e la tradizione del culto cabirico' in the Mélanges d'archéologie et d'histoire (École française de Rome) 1920 xxxviii. 29—62, carrying further the contention of J. Rendel Harris' The Dioscuri in the Christian Legends London 1903 pp. 20—41 that S. Thomas as 'twin' brother of Jesus was essentially Dioscuric.

A. H. Sayce in the Journ. Hell. Stud. 1925 xlv. 163 would identify Kábeiroi with Khabiriyas the body-guard of the Hittite kings, and so derive them ultimately from the Khabiri or 'Comrades' of Babylonia. He notes an early deified Hittite king Khasamilis as = Κασμείλος.

ii. 314 f. Axiokersa, Axiokersos, Axieros. O. Montelius La Grèce préclassique Stockholm 1924 i. 121 with figs. 349 and 351 regarded as sacred axes the tapering stone heads (in two cases painted) stuck into terra-cotta bodies, which Wace found at Rakhmani in Thessaly [A. J. B. Wace—M. S. Thompson Prehistoric Thessaly Cambridge 1912 p. 41 with fig. 25, a, b, c].

E. Maass in the Archiv f. Rel. 1926 xxiii. 225 is content to explain 'Αξιόκερσος and 'Αξιοκέρσα as deities (Hades and Kore) 'who slay valuable beasts (ἄξια) with the sickle-knife' and 'Ἄξιερος as the goddess (Demeter) 'who receives valuable victims.'

A. H. Sayce in the Class. Rev. 1928 xlii. 162 connects 'Αξιό-κερσος, 'Αξιο-κέρσα with Hesych. κέρνα· ἄξινη and in the other Hesychian glosses (quoted supra ii. 315 n. 1) cj. ἀμῆσαι or ϝαμῆσαι for γαμῆσαι cod. and γάλλος for γάμος cod.

G. Seure in the Rev. Arch. 1929 i. 60 n. 0 discusses coins of Odessos with legend θεοῦ μεγάλου ΚΥΡΣΑ (supra ii. 1126 figs. 952, 953) and the possibility that Κύρσα = Κέρσα was the name of an indigenous deity akin to 'Αξιοκέρσης (sic). Id. in the Rev. Ét. Gr. 1929 xlii. 249 is even more venturesome (κύρ(ιος) Σά(ρατις) or Σα(βάσιος)!). But A. Salač 'Le grand dieu d'Odessos-Varna et les mystères de Samothrace' in the Bull. Corr. Hell. 1928 liii. 395—398 had already argued that the Theos Megas at Odessos was *Δαρζάλας or Δερξέλας, one form of the chief male divinity of the ancient Thracians.

For 'Αξί-eros as the 'Axe-Eros' cp. Anakr. frag. 47 Bergk[4], 48 Edmonds, 45 Diehl ap. Hephaist. 12. 4 p. 39, 5 f. Consbruch μεγάλῳ δηὖτέ μ' Ἔρως ἔκοψεν ὥστε χαλκεύς | πελέκει with the comments of E. Schwyzer 'Axt und Hammer' in the Rhein. Mus. 1930 lxxix. 314—318 (πέλεκυς = σφυροπέλεκυς, a smith's axe serving also as a hammer).

Fig. 887.

Fig. 888.

ii. 316 Zeus transformed into Eros. Such a concept provides a partial justification for the late syncretistic figures of Zeus Pántheos (L. Robert in the Rev. Arch. 1933 ii. 141 no. 176 cites a dedication from Carthage, now in the Louvre, Διὶ Ἡλίῳ Μεγάλῳ Πανθέῳ Σαράπιδι = Corp. inscr. Lat. viii no 12493) or Iupiter Pantheus (Dessau Inscr. Lat. sel. no. 5423 (Nescania Baeticae) Iovem Pantheum Aug. | cum aede et tetrastylo solo [p]ub. | etc.). A bronze from the Gréau collection, obtained from Greece in 1885 and now in Paris (Reinach Rép. Stat. ii. 17 no. 4 'Zeus panthée?,' De Ridder Cat. Bronzes du Louvre i. 71 no. 482 pl. 36 (= my fig. 887): height 0·192[m]), shows a nude Zeus with the wings of Eros, the greaves of Ares, and a stephánē surmounted by three 'fleurons.' Another, from Cahon (Somme), now at Abbeville (C. Louandre in the Revue des Sociétés Savantes des Départements Cinquième Série 1873 v. 322—327, Reinach Rép. Stat. iii. 8 no. 2 'Zeus Panthée') shows a nude Iupiter holding thunderbolt and eagle, with the wings of Victory, the rayed crown of Apollo (Sun), the disk and horns of Isis (Moon), the cock of Mercury, the fawn-skin of Bacchus, the cornu copiae of Ceres or Fortuna or Abundantia, and a Gaulish armilla on his right arm (my fig. 888 is from a photograph kindly supplied by M. Richard, Conservateur des Musées, Abbeville).

ii. 321 n. 1. A votive inscription to Zeus Ἐπιδώτας in Messenia is noted by M. N. Tod in the Class. Rev. 1930 xliv. 89 and by P. Roussel in the Rev. Ét. Gr. 1930 xliii. 196 after N. S. Valmin in the Bulletin de la Société Royale des Lettres de Lund 1928—1929 iv. 1 ff. no. 22 (at Grizokampos) Διὶ Ἐπιδώται.

ii. 322 ff. Janiform deities. C. N. Deedes 'The Double-headed God' in Folk-Lore 1935 xlvi. 194—243 with 30 figs. attempts a conspectus of the evidence (Sumerian, Syro-Hittite, Greek, Etruscan, Italian, Celtic, mediaeval).

ii. 326, 374 f., 377 f. Janiform masks. V. Alford 'The Springtime Bear in the Pyrenees' in Folk-Lore 1930 xli. 275 reports that two-faced masks are worn by men on Feb. 2 at Arles-sur-Tech in the French Catalan Pyrenees. Ead. 'The Candlemas Bear' in The National Review 1931 xcvi. 235—244 gives further details. The same observer and R. Gallop in their joint article in Folk-Lore 1935 xlvi. 352 f. state that at Arles-sur-Tech the Candlemas Bear is escorted by from four to twelve two-faced attendants, who wear women's cotton dresses, leathern belts with eight or ten cow-bells attached, and small barrels painted with a face fore and aft by way of head-dress.

ii. 328 ff. the Salian Hymn. On Italian and Dutch reconstructions of the carmen Saliare by E. Cocchia (1917), F. Ribezzo (1917—1918), and P. J. Enk (1921) see M. Bacherler in the Jahresbericht über die Fortschritte der klassischen Altertumswissenschaft 1925 ccv. 84.

ii. 335 Ianus. O. Huth Janus Bonn 1932 pp. 1—96 is adversely criticised by H. J. Rose in Gnomon 1933 ix. 329—331. Huth finds the essence of Ianus to consist in a certain 'polarity,' the contrast of birth-death, summer-winter, fire-water, entry-exit symbolised in Italy by a god with double face, in Germany by the runic sign ᛜ. But the early Italians were no philosophers, and the sign ᛜ was not runic (? cp. H. Arntz Die Runenschrift Ihre Geschichte und ihre Denkmäler Halle/Saale 1938 p. 98).

ii. 337 n. 4 divom deo. Cp. Tertull. ad Scap. 4 (i. 782 A Migne) tunc et populus adclamans deo deorum, qui solus potens, in Iovis nomine deo nostro testimonium reddidit. Supra p. 327.

ii. 339 n. 0 tivs = 'lunae.' See further C. Pauli in Roscher Lex. Myth. v. 1056 f.

ii. 340 n. 0 Dæmonium, quod rustici Dianam appellant. Lobeck Aglaophamus ii. 1092 f. 'Acta Symphoriani Ruinart. Act. Mart. p. 70 [*ib.*² Amstelaedami 1713 p. 82]. Dianam quoque daemonium esse meridianum sanctorum industria investigavit, quae per compita currens et silvarum secreta perlustrans incredulis hominum mentibus vizaniae tribulos sceleris sui arte disseminat, Triviae sibi cognomen dum triviis insidiatur obtinuit.' Cp. S. Eitrem in the Symbolae Osloenses 1929 viii. 32 n. 1 'das daemonium meridianum, das die Christen Diana nannten.' It is tempting to suppose a mere confusion between meri*dianum* and Diana. But see V. Alford—R. Gallop 'Traces of a Dianic Cult from Catalonia to Portugal' in Folk-Lore 1935 xlvi. 350—361 (p. 358 f. 'Immediately to the west of the Basque lands we find the word Jana in all its purity... In Sardinia Jana means witch. In the old Neapolitan dialect Janara means nymph... The old Spanish form was Jana. In the Montaña de Santander we find Janassana... In Asturias...Dianu means Devil, and the Diano Burlón is a kind of faun. In Galicia...the Devil is again o Diano... In Portugal...Diânho. In the Algarve...women called Jas or Jans for whom it used to be customary to leave a skein of flax and a cake of bread on the hearth.' Etc.).

ii. 343 Ζανὶ Ἐλευθερίοι = Antoninus Pius. W. Peck in the Ἀρχ. Ἐφ. 1931 p. 114 quotes O. Puchstein Epigrammata Graeca in Aegypto reperta Strassburg 1881 no. 56 = F. Hiller von Gaertringen Historische griechische Epigramme Bonn 1926 no. 118 Καίσαρι παντομέδοντι καὶ ἀπείρων κρατέοντι | Ζανὶ τῶι ἐκ Ζανὸς πατρὸς Ἐλευθερίωι..

ii. 343 Ζᾶνες. Cp. Epiphan. ancor. 106 (i. 208 Dindorf) Ζῆνες δέ οὐχ εἷς ἢ δύο, ἀλλὰ καὶ τρεῖς καὶ τέσσαρες γεγόνασι τὸν ἀριθμόν. κ.τ.λ.

ii. 344 n. 0 Δεύς. This form of the name occurs also on a two-handled Rhodian jar of c. 400 B.C., now in the Metropolitan Museum of Art, New York (T. L. Spear in the Am. Journ. Phil. 1908 xxix. 461—466 with pl., C. D. Buck Introduction to the Study of the Greek Dialects Boston 1910 pp. 67, 293), which bears the painted inscriptions ΚΑΛΛΙΣΤΑ ΓΑΣ ΗΑ ΒΡΑΣΙΑ | ΗΩΣ ΕΜΙΝ ΔΟΚΕΙ (would-be iambic) and ΔΕΥΣ ΗΕΡΜΑΣ | ΑΡΤΑΜΙΣ ΑΘΑΝΑΙΑ.

a b

Marble head of Pan from Greece, now in the British Museum.

ii. 347 ff. Πὰν ὁ μέγας τέθνηκεν. The literature of this famous episode (supra ii. 349 n. 20) should include I. Nyman De magno Pane Plutarchi Upsaliae 1734, W. H. Roscher 'Die Legende vom Tode des groszen Pan' in the Jahrb. f. Philol. u. Pädag. 1892 cxlv. 465—477, E. Nestle 'Zum Tod des grossen Pan' in the Archiv f. Rel. 1909 xii. 156—158, O. Weinreich 'Zum Tod des grossen Pan' ib. 1910 xiii. 467—473, A. Taylor 'Northern Parallels to the Death of Pan' in Washington University Studies Series iv 1922 (Humanistic Series x. 1) pp. 3—102 (discusses 246 variants and concludes that 'the voice of loud lament is an hallucination, an auditory illusion, and not a myth relating to the spirits of vegetation'), A. D. Nock in the Class. Rev. 1923 xxxvii. 164 (cp. Hdt. 6. 105), O. Weinreich in the Archiv f. Rel. 1923—1924 xxii. 328—330, G. Méautis 'Le grand Pan est mort' in the Musée Belge 1927 xxxi. 51—53 (cp. Plout. de Is. et Os. 12 ἑνίοι δὲ Παμύλην τινὰ λέγουσιν ἐν Θήβαις ὑδρευόμενον ἐκ τοῦ ἱεροῦ τοῦ Διὸς φωνὴν ἀκοῦσαι διακελευομένην ἀνειπεῖν μετὰ βοῆς ὅτι ΜΕΓΑΣ ΒΑΣΙΛΕΥΣ ΕΤΕΡΓΕΤΗΣ ΟΣΙΡΙΣ ΓΕΓΟΝΕ).

Fresh light has been thrown upon the whole business by a simple but convincing discovery of A. Fick Vorgriechische Ortsnamen Göttingen 1905 p. 147 'Πάν ist nicht "der Hirte," sondern der "Papa," gehört zu den "Lallnamen" Kretschmers 334 f. [P. Kretschmer Einleitung in die Geschichte der Griechischen Sprache Göttingen 1896 p. 334 ff.] Das weibliche Gegenstück zu Πα ist Μα, in Arkadien als Μαῖα, Mutter des Hermes Μαιαδεύς erhalten.' If so, Pan was in effect another Zan, and I had no need to postulate that the former had stepped into the shoes of the latter. Pan the Great was all along a parallel figure to Zan the Great. Pan the goatherds' god took the form of a goat just as Zan the oxherds' god took that of an ox (supra ii. 345). And the ritual of the dead Pan, implied by Plutarch's narrative, may well have resembled the ritual of the dead Zan.

On this showing Pan was a more dignified deity than advancing civilisation was prepared to admit. He had some reason to complain of his neglect by the Athenians on the eve of Marathon (Hdt. 6. 105). But before the close of that century, or very soon afterwards, Attic sculptors had made the amende honorable by devising a type which gave the god an almost Zeus-like majesty and yet by retaining curved horns and prick ears, a shag of hair and a twist of lip, contrived to remind men that after all he was but a glorified goat. H. B. W[alters] in the Brit. Mus. Quart. 1931—1932 vi. 33 f. pl. 16 was able to publish a head in Pentelic marble (beight $8\frac{3}{4}$ inches) recently acquired in Greece. Relying presumably on the proportions of the eye, the absence of overlapping lids, etc. he ventures to say: 'the style recalls some of the heads on the Parthenon metopes. It certainly cannot be dated later than the latter part of the fifth century.' My pl. lxxx is from the official photographs.

ii. 347 n. 0 Hipta. P. Kretschmer in Glotta 1926 xv. 76 ff. takes Hipta to be an Asiatic mother-goddess = the Hittite Hepit.

ii. 350 Dodona. For the recent excavations at Dodona see G. Sotiriadis 'Fouilles de Dodone' in the Rev. Ét. Gr. 1921 xxxiv. 384—387 and D. Euangelides in the Πρακτ. ἀρχ. ἑτ. 1930 pp. 52—68, ib. 1931 pp. 83—91, ib. 1932 pp. 47—52 and as reported by E. P. B[legen] in the Am. Journ. Arch. 1930 xxxiv. 220 f., by D. M. Robinson ib. 1933 xxxvii. 128, by H. G. G. Payne in the Journ. Hell. Stud. 1930 l. 242, ib. 1931 li. 194 f., ib. 1932 lii. 245, ib. 1933 liii. 182, by H. Megaw ib. 1936 lvi. 147.

ii. 359 ff. the Triumphal Arch. On distyle bases at Delphoi see É. Bourguet in the Bull. Corr. Hell. 1911 xxxv. 472—481, id. Les ruines de Delphes Paris 1914 pp. 148 f., 164—168, 202—205, F. Courby in Fouilles de Delphes ii. i. 44, M. P. Nilsson 'Les bases votives à double colonne et l'arc de triomphe' in the Bull. Corr. Hell. 1925 xlix. 143—157. The origin of the Triumphal Arch is still a bone of contention, not to say a body of Euphorbos: e.g. G. Patroni 'L'origine degli archi trionfali' in Historia 1927 i. 3. 3—30 with 3 figs. (criticises G. Spano, E. Löwy, etc. and stresses Etruscan influence), E. Löwy Die Anfänge des Triumphbogens Wien 1928 pp. 1—40 with 3 pls. and 89 figs. (summarised in the Rev. Arch. 1928 ii. 170 and in the Journ. Rom. Stud. 1927 xvii. 249), M. P. Nilsson 'The Origin of the Triumphal Arch' in Skrifter utgivna av Svenska Institutet i Rom 1932 ii. 132—139, I. A. Richmond 'Commemorative Arches and City Gates in the Augustan Age' in the Journ. Rom. Stud. 1933 xxiii. 149—174 with pls. 15—19 and 11 figs. (follows Nilsson and urges that the main purpose of the Arch was to serve as a base for statues), H. Petrikovits 'Die Porta triumphalis' in the Jahresh. d. oest. arch. Inst. 1933 xxviii. 187—196 (insists on the religious significance of the victors returning under this Arch, compares the passage of the vanquished sub iugum, and the sale of prisoners sub hasta, ending with a bibliography of 45 items). Much that is relevant had already been said by A. von Domaszewski 'Die Triumphstrasse auf dem Marsfelde' in the Archiv f. Rel. 1909 xii. 67—82 (=id. Abhandlungen zur römischen Religion Leipzig und Berlin 1909 pp. 217—233 with additional n. by B. Kahle).

ii. 361 with fig. 254. H. Mattingly in the Brit. Mus. Quart. 1934 ix. 51 pl. 16, 7, Brit. Mus. Cat. Rom. Coins Emp. iii. pp. ci, 177 f. pl. 31, 6—9.

ii. 364 the 'yoke' of spears. M. Cary—A. D. Nock 'Magic Spears' in the Class. Quart. 1927 xxi. 122—127 (sub iugum, sub hasta, etc.).

ii. 373 Ianus Quadrifrons. A late Etruscan scarab of cornelian, mounted on a gold swivel, shows a bearded head of Ianus Quadrifrons wearing a pétasos (Brit. Mus. Cat. Finger Rings p. 59 no. 327 pl. 9, Brit. Mus. Cat. Gems[2] p. 88 no. 714 pl. 12: from the Castellani collection).

ii. 381 ff. double herms. R. Lullies Die Typen der griechischen Herme Königsberg Pr. 1931 pp. 66—69 ('Doppelhermen mit nach entgegengesetzten Seiten blickenden Köpfen') argues that this type was originally intended to represent 'Hermes als Totengott' (ib. p. 86)—a view questioned by S. Reinach in the Rev. Arch. 1931 ii. 330.

ii. 382 n. 1 double bust of Dionysos. Cp. a fine archaistic double bust at Ny Carlsberg (Ny Carlsberg Glyptotek Billedtavler no. 151 Dionysos pl. 11).

a b c

Fig. 889.

ii. 385 n. 0 Ἀργειφόντης. Earlier interpretations in O. Neckel Ἀργειφόντης Progr. des Gymn. Friedland 1886 pp. 10—12, Sven Linde 'Über Ἀργειφόντης, dessen Form und Bedeutung' in Skandinavisches Archiv 1892 i. 394—414.

ii. 386 Odhin's broad hat. H. Naumann 'Breithut' in the Handwörterbuch des deutschen Aberglaubens Berlin—Leipzig 1927 i. 1550—1552 (cp. id. ib. i. 1386 f. 'Blauhütel').

ii. 388 double busts of Hermes and Herakles. P. E. Visconti 'Ermeracle' in the Bull. Comm. Arch. Comun. di Roma 1872—1873 pp. 97—102 pl. 1. Another of Hermes (pétasos) and Herakles (lion-skin) at Ny Carlsberg (Ny Carlsberg Glyptotek Billedtavler no. 267 pl. 19).

ii. 390 with pl. xxi Janiform aryballos of male and female Dionysiac heads. See now J. D. Beazley 'Charinos' in the Journ. Hell. Stud. 1929 xlix. 61 (Group N, no. 1 'head of Herakles and woman's head' [?]).

ii. 392 with fig. 300 double bust of Apis and Isis. H. Gressmann in the Vorträge der Bibliothek Warburg 1923—1924 Berlin—Leipzig 1926 p. 183 pl. 3 fig. 6 assigns this bust to the time of Hadrian and regards it as combining the human and animal forms of Hathor. J. Leipoldt in D. H. Haas Bilderatlas zur Religionsgeschichte Leipzig—Erlangen 1926 ix—xi p. vi with fig. 25 ('Die Büste 25 ist insofern altägyptisch empfunden, als Isis auch mit einem Kuhkopfe ausgestattet ist (allerdings handelt sichs um eine künstliche Ägyptisierung; es fehlen altägyptische Analogien einer derartigen Isis).' Etc.).

ii. 392 ff. double herms at Nemi. On Feb. 10, 1930, during the excavation of Caligula's second galley, a double herm of bronze was found, representing the conjoined heads of a bearded and a beardless Satyr. The former is wreathed with vine-leaves and grapes, the latter with pine and cones: both wear a nebrís (W. Technau in the Jahrb. d. Deutsch. Arch. Inst. 1930 xlv Arch. Anz. p. 351 with fig. 13). In the summer of 1931 further work on the second galley brought to light another double herm of bronze, the exact counterpart of the first, and a third combining two youthful female heads wreathed with ivy and draped. There can be no doubt that all these herms served as decorative posts of the ship's rail (id. ib. 1931 xlvi Arch. Anz. p. 648 with figs. 4 and 5). In the spring of 1932 yet another bronze double herm from the rail was found (id. ib. 1932 xlvii Arch. Anz. p. 479). See also The Daily Telegraph for June 18, 1931 p. 9 and The Illustrated London News for July 4, 1931 p. 19.

I take this opportunity of publishing (fig. 889, a—c) a small double bust of white marble in my collection (height $3\frac{3}{4}$ inches), which represents adossés a bearded and a beardless Satyr, wreathed with ivy. It probably topped a slender pillar in somebody's peristyle in s. i A.D.

a Fig. 890. b

ii. 394 foliate faces. T. Tindall Wildridge The Grotesque in Church Art[2] London s.a. p. 112 ff. ('Masks and Faces') gives examples of foliate masks at Beverley Minster (Yorkshire), Dorchester (Oxfordshire), St Mary's Minster (Isle of Thanet), Westminster Abbey, Ewelme (Oxfordshire), Lincoln Cathedral, etc. C. J. P. Cave 'The Roof Bosses in Ely Cathedral' in the Proceedings of the Cambridge Antiquarian Society Cambridge 1932 xxxii. 35 f. with pl. 2 shows bosses representing heads with oak-leaves coming out of mouth and nostril. Cave acutely conjectures 'some survival from pre-Christian times.' Finally Lady Raglan 'The "Green Man" in Church Architecture' in Folk-Lore 1939 l. 45—57 figs. 1—17 concludes that classical and quasi-classical types (figs. 10—13) were from s. xiii. onwards influenced by 'the figure variously known as the Green Man, Jack-in-the-Green, Robin Hood, the King of May, and the Garland.' In 1934 I acquired from Mr J. Sinclair of Swanage a limestone corbel (height $7\frac{1}{4}$ inches) said to have come from a fourteenth-century continental church. It represents (fig. 890, a, b) a male head with oak-leaves springing from eyes, nose, and ears, and bears traces of yellow priming and red paint.

ii. 405 ff. Artemis Ephesia. On all the types of this goddess see now the excellent monograph by H. Thiersch Artemis Ephesia (Abh. d. gött. Gesellsch. d. Wiss. Phil.-hist. Classe 1935 Folge iii Nr. 12) Teil i Katalog der erhaltenen Denkmäler. Mit 76 Tafeln u. 4 Textabbildungen.

ii. 407 n. 0. On stags in relation to Artemis (Ma, Anaïtis, etc.) see S. Reinach in the Rev. Arch. 1932 i. 151 f., who cites F. Cumont 'L'archevêché de Pédachtoé et le sacrifice du Faon' in Byzantion 1931 vi. 521—533 ('Voilà bien un banquet rituel, tradition païenne christianisée').

ii. 410 n. 0 'Εφέσια γράμματα. See further A. Deissmann 'Ephesia Grammata' in the Abhandlungen zur semitischen Religionskunde und Sprachwissenschaft (Baudissin-Festschrift) ed. W. Frankenberg—F. Küchler (Beihefte zur Zeitschrift für die Alttestamentliche Wissenschaft 1918 xxxiii. 121—124).

ii. 410 n. 0. On the occurrence of Zeus-emblems (thunderbolt and bay-wreath) in relation to Artemis Ephesia see H. Tbiersch op. cit. i. 46 ff., 65 ff., who notes a statue of s. ii A.D. in the Museum at Tripolis (no. 29 pl. 27, 1, 3, 4) and a mosaic from Poggio Mirteto in the Vatican (no. 56 pl. 46).

ii. 411 Bendis. C. Picard in the Revue de l'histoire des religions 1926 xciii. 87 n. 3 draws attention to the numerous representations of Bendis on the rocks of Philippoi (ib. 1922 lxxxvi. 117 ff.).

ii. 411 n. 6. C. Picard—C. Avezou 'Le testament de la prêtresse thessalonicienne' in the Bull. Corr. Hell. 1914 xxxviii. 38 ff. correct P. Perdrizet's reading ἱέρεια θύσα | εὐεία Πριν|φόρου to ἱέρεια οὖσα | Εὐεία Πριν|φόρου, 'Eueia daughter of Prinophoros,' and show that the remainder of this much-misunderstood inscription refers to the ἀπόκαυσις or ritual burning of roses on the tomb—a very different story.

ii. 419 n. 2. A writer in the Times Literary Supplement for June 17, 1926 p. 413 justly objects that scomparse means 'vanished,' not 'scattered.'

ii. 421 Artemis Orthia. H. Licht Sittengeschichte Griechenlands Zürich 1928 Ergänzungsband p. 110: 'In Wirklichkeit ist Orthia, was freilich noch niemand gesehen hat, von ὀρθός, "aufrechtstehend," abzuleiten, und der Beiname der Göttin erklärt sich aus den Erektionen der an ihrem Altar gepeitschten nackten Jünglinge und der Zuschauer.' But such ultra-Aristophanic grossness is quite gratuitous.

ii. 422 the divine Sky as a double-faced god. K. F. Johansson Über die altindische Göttin Dhiṣáṇā und Verwandtes Uppsala 1919 p. 136 ff. argues for a proethnic Indogermanic 'zwei-aspektig gedachten herrn gott' with dark and light sides, viz. Varuṇa (also Vṛtra) and Dyāuṣ (also Mitra). So in Scandinavia we have Ullr and Týr (also Frøyr), cp. the Van pair of gods Ullin and Fillin (ib. pp. 33, 139).

ii. 424 the temple of Aphrodite Paphia. See further R. Dussaud—P. Alphandéry 'Le sanctuaire primitif d'Aphrodite paphienne' in the Revue de l'histoire des religions 1911 lxiii. 114, 'Fouilles de Rantidi (Chypre)' ib. 1911 lxiii. 376 f., 'Les divinités de Rantidi (Chypre)' ib. 1911 lxiv. 133, C. Blinkenberg Le temple de Paphos (Det Kgl. Danske Videnskabernes Selskab. Historisk-filologiske Meddelelser ix, 2) København 1924 pp. 1—40 figs. 1—9, S. Casson Ancient Cyprus Its Art and Archaeology London 1937 pp. 163 n. 1, 178.

ii. 427 fig. 331. A somewhat clearer illustration of this gilded glass is given by I. Benzinger Hebräische Archäologie[3] Leipzig 1927 p. 218 with fig. 224.

ii. 434 ff. the Twins. In addition to the monographs of S. Eitrem (supra ii. 451 n. 1) and J. Rendel Harris (supra i. 760 n. 7) see the contributions of E. S. Hartland 'Twins' in J. Hastings Encyclopædia of Religion and Ethics 1921 xii. 491[a]—500[b], Schrader Reallex.[2] i. 588[b], A. H. Krappe Les dieux jumeaux dans la religion germanique (extr. from the Acta philologica Scandinavica) København 1930 pp. 1—25, Frazer Golden Bough[3]: Aftermath pp. 82, 154.

ii. 436 ff. Kastor and Polydeukes. A. Döhring 'Kastors und Balders Tod' in the Archiv f. Rel. 1902 v. 38—63, 97—104, A. H. Krappe 'Herakles and Greek Dioskouroi Legends' in The Classical Journal 1923 xviii. 502—504, G. Maresch 'Der Name der Tyndariden' in Glotta 1925 xiv. 298 f. (supra on i. 766), A. Puech 'La mort de Castor dans la x[e] Néméenne' in the Rev. Ét. Gr. 1930 xliii. 398—403.

H. J. M. Milne in the Class. Rev. 1933 xlvii. 62 edits a fresh fragment of Bakchylides (?) which tells how one of the Dioskouroi (or possibly Kabeiroi) lives on earth, the other in Hades (A. Vogliano in Papiri greci e latini (Pubblicazioni della Società Italiana) Firenze 1932 x. 169 ff. no. 1181 Oxyrhynchos s. ii—iii A.D.): 21 ff. μάλ' ἐγγ[υᾶτο] | το[α]ὐτα φάτις | ἐπεὶ δόκ[ιμο]ς κἰα[θε]ν | ἐπ{ε}ὶ πολυ[δεν]δρέων ἀκτῶν | κῦμα πε[ρῶν] | ἀπ' Ἰλίου | θεῶν τι[ς, ἀ]μ[φανδὸν [δ' ἀπέδειξεν] | αὖθι μένε[ιν τὸν μὲν π]αρ' Ἄιδι | τὸν δ' οὐλόμε[νον κατὰ κ]όσμον | πρυφυγεῖν θά[νατον].

ii. 440 ff. Romulus and Remus. A. H. Krappe 'Notes sur la légende de la fondation de Rome' in the Revue des études anciennes 1933 pp. 146—152.

K. Scott 'Drusus, nicknamed "Castor"' in Class. Philol. 1930 xxv. 155—161 thinks that Germanicus and the younger Drusus, like Tiberius and the elder Drusus, may have been associated ὸr even identified with Castor and Pollux—a view confirmed by a recently found inscription from Ephesos (Class. Quart. 1931 xxv. 58).

E. Kornemann Doppelprinzipat und Reichsteilung im Imperium Romanum Leipzig—Berlin 1930 pp. 1—210 is reviewed by M. P. Charlesworth in the Class. Rev. 1933 xlvii. 143—146.

J. Carcopino 'La louve du Capitole' in the Bulletin de l'Association Guillaume Budé Juillet 1924 pp. 3—19 and Octobre 1924 pp. 16—49.

R. P. Eckels Greek Wolf-lore Philadelphia 1937 pp. 1—88 concludes with a discussion of wolf-nurses.

ii. 445 Zethos and Amphion. J. Rendel Harris in the Bulletin of the John Rylands Library 1926 x. 345 observes that the Egyptian twins Set and Horos were the architects of Thebes in Egypt just as Zethos and Amphion were the architects of Thebes in Greece. He suggests that the name Ζῆθος may be simply Set, whom Plutarch actually transcribes as Σῆθ [Where? Plout. de Is. et Os. 41, 49, 62 says Σήθ without variants. A.B.C.]. A. H. Krappe in the Archiv f. Rel. 1933 xxx. 240 f. repeats and reinforces the conclusions of Rendel Harris.

ii. 445 ff. double-headed deities in Asia Minor etc. G. Contenau 'Idoles en pierre provenant de l'Asie Mineure' in Syria 1927 viii. 193 ff. pls. 44—48 publishes six idols in the Louvre, probably found at Kül-Tépé ('La colline des cendres') near Kaisareia in Kappadokia, close to Mt Argaios, where a Semitic colony had long been established—witness numerous tablets in cuneiform from the same site. All the six idols are in alabaster, with a reddish patina. They represent deities with one (pl. 44, a), two (pls. 44, b, 45), and three heads (pls. 46, 47, 4), but only a single rounded body. Id. ib. p. 200 compares Syrian bronzes in the Louvre, which represent a god embracing a goddess attached to his right leg at the knee, or again four deities arranged fan-wise. Id. Manuel d'archéologie orientale Paris 1931 ii. 824 f. figs. 593 and 594 dates the Cappadocian idols c. 2000 B.C. and the Syrian bronzes c. 1000 B.C. A better illustration of a two-headed Cappadocian goddess is given in the Encyclopédie photographique de l'Art L'Art de Mésopotamie ancienne au Musée du Louvre Paris 1936 i. 284 f. fig. A, and of a Syrian group ib. Canaan, Phénicie Paris 1937 ii. 109 fig. G. On the significance of polycephalic gods in general see L. Weber in the Archiv f. Rel. 1934 xxxi. 172—175.

ii. 448 n. 0 the sickle of Kronos. See now Oxyrhynchus Papyri London 1927 xvii. 65 no. 2080, 71—73 (=Kallim. frags. 502+172 Schneider) with A. S. Hunt ad loc.

ii. 448 n. 2 the sickle of Zeus. See F. Dornseiff 'Die Sichel des Zeus und Typhon' in the Jahrb. d. Deutsch. Arch. Inst. 1933 xlviii Arch. Anz. pp. 754—757 fig. 1. Id. Die archaische Mythenerzählung Berlin—Leipzig 1933 p. 24 ff. cites inter alia a Hittite parallel noted by W. Porzig—'Illujankas und Typhon.' Cp. G. Furlani La religione degli Hittiti Bologna 1936 pp. 87—91 ('Il Mito del dio della tempesta e del serpente Illuyankaš').

ii. 453 ff. the original home of Apollon. Wilamowitz' view that Apollon came from Lykia is energetically attacked also by E. Bethe 'Apollon der Hellene' in ΑΝΤΙΔΩΡΟΝ Festschrift Jacob Wackernagel...gewidmet Göttingen 1923 pp. 14—21.

F. Poulsen Delphische Studien (Det Kgl. Danske Videnskabernes Selskab. Historisk-filologiske Meddelelser viii, 5) København 1924 pp. 3—40 ('Apollon und Asien') suggests that the name Apóllon is to be explained by the Babylonian terms aplu 'the Firstborn' and aplu ašaridu 'the Firstborn Son,' a fixed epithet of kings in honorific inscriptions. Poulsen sees in Apollon a blend of Šamaš, god of the sun, of wisdom, of law, with Marduk, who as symbolising sunlight fought Tiâmat the dragon of darkness. Hence the lunisolar calendar, the ritual number seven, the omphalós (cp. the Babylonian kudurru), etc.

C. Picard in the Revue de l'histoire des religions 1926 xciii. 90 f. thinks it possible that the Hellenic Apollon was a blend of (a) a Creto-Anatolian god and (b) a Hyperborean god—each called Apóllon.

L. Weber 'Apollon' in the Rhein. Mus. 1933 lxxxii. 165—191, 193—229 contends that Apollon, originating in Crete as an archer-god (cp. Nilsson Min.-Myc. Rel. p. 296 f. fig. 85, where note eye and ear), passed thence viâ Delos and Lykia to the Troad, was carried across the Bosporos by the Mysians and Teucrians some time before the Trojan War, and made his way southward through Thrace, Makedonia, and Thessaly to Delphoi. Homeric epos represents him as a foe of the Greeks because it was a product of the Aeolians in Thessaly, who were naturally hostile to the god of their northern neighbours. Delos as his cult-centre was prior to Delphoi.

ii. 460 n. 2 (b) Apollon riding on a swan. A rock-crystal scarab of early archaic style shows him thus crossing the sea (waves below, dolphin behind). He guides the swan by the beak with his right hand and holds a leafy branch in his left (Furtwängler Ant. Gemmen iii. 96 f. fig. 66, Brit. Mus. Cat. Gems[2] p. 55 no. 460 pl. 8).

ii. 462 n. 0 fig. 362 Zeus drawn by eagles on a disk from Tarentum. Other examples at Trieste and Berlin (P. Wuilleumier in the Rev. Arch. 1932 i. 43 no. 78).

ii. 464. C. Picard 'La Crète et les légendes Hyperboréennes' in the Rev. Arch. 1927 i. 349—360 holds that the sacrifice of asses and other 'Hyperborean' tales belonged originally to Crete, and were transferred to the north only when Crete had been captured by northern invaders. Unconvincing.

ii. 469 n. 1 huius folia noctis et lucis inaginem declarant. Miss G. R. Levy 'The Oriental Origin of Herakles' in the Journ. Hell. Stud. 1934 liv. 44 well compares Orph. h. Herakl. 12. 11 ὃς περὶ κραὶ φορεῖς ἠῶ καὶ νύκτα μέλαιναν.

ii. 475 Zeus seated, yet hurling a thunderbolt. A silver statêr of Corinth, struck c. 338—300 B.C., has for symbol Zeus enthroned with thunderbolt in raised right hand and eagle on outstretched left (Brit. Mus. Cat. Coins Corinth, etc. p. 33 no. 308 pl. 12, 19. There is a second specimen of the type in Hunter Cat. Coins ii. 96 no. 72. I have a third).

ii. 477 n. 0. G. A. Snyder 'De symbolica Phaethontis fabulae interpretatione apud Romanos' in Mnemosyne N.S. 1927 lv. 401—409 claims that in Roman times the myth was interpreted as a Mithraic expression for the ascent of the soul to heaven (Class. Quart. 1928 xxii. 210, cp. S. Reinach in the Rev. Arch. 1928 i. 218). A. Lesky 'Zum Phaethon des Euripides' in Wiener Studien 1932 l. 1—25 puts the play late in Euripides' career and attempts to reconstruct the plot. M. F. Scalvizzari Il Mito nel ΦΑΕΘΩΝ di Euripide Napoli 1937 pp. 1—80 includes a pl. of the Ostia sarcophagus.

ii. 483 the kiškanû-tree. F. P. Dhorme 'L'arbre de vérité et l'arbre de vie' in the Revue biblique internationale Nouvelle série 1907 iv. 272 ff. shows that in the time of Gudea (c. 2600 B.C.) the Babylonians believed in two trees planted at the entry of heaven, giš-ti the 'tree of life' and giš-kâ-an-na the 'tree of the gate of heaven.' He says: 'Le giš-ti ou "arbre de vie" ne sera autre que le kiškanû, connu sous le nom de giš-gan-abzu.' Dhorme is followed by A. J. Wensinck Tree and Bird as cosmological symbols in Western Asia Amsterdam 1921 p. 4. See now S. Langdon 'The Legend of the kiškanu' in The Journal of the Royal Asiatic Society of Great Britain and Ireland 1928 pp. 843—848. Miss N. Perrot Les représentations de l'arbre sacré sur les monuments de Mésopotamie et d'Élam Paris 1937 pp. 1—143 with 32 pls., G. Lechler in the Am. Journ. Arch. 1939 xliii. 352 f.

ii. 484 n. 6. The etymology of ἀπελλόν is discussed by F. Muller Jzn Altitalisches Wörterbuch Göttingen 1926 p. 348.

ii. 487 n. 3 Apollon as an 'apple'-god. Rendel Harris' view is adversely criticised by J. Toutain in the Revue de l'histoire des religions 1921 lxxxiii. 196—200. But there is far more to be said for it than the critics will allow. Rira bien qui rira le dernier.

On Demeter Μαλοφόρος at Megara see K. Hanell Megarische Studien Lund (1934) p. 174 ff. Terracottas from her sanctuary at Selinous were published by E. Gàbrici in the Not. Scavi 1920 pp. 67—91 figs. 1—33, and we have now the same author's sumptuous monograph 'Il Santuario della Malophoros a Selinunte' in the Mon. d. Linc. 1928 xxxii. 1—419 with 97 pls. and 192 figs. (reviewed by F. von Duhn in Gnomon 1929 v. 529—539).

The Times for Oct. 8, 1926 p. 11 in a report by J. Borozdin on 'Excavations in South Russia' notes the discovery by Prof. Farmakovsky in 1924 of Apollon's temple at Olbia. Its ruins stand in the centre of the old town at the outlet of the river Bug. See further E. Diehl in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. xvii. 2417, 2421.

ii. 493 n. 2 amber routes. The most thorough and authoritative investigation of the subject is that of J. M. de Navarro 'Prehistoric Routes between Northern Europe and Italy defined by the Amber Trade' in The Geographical Journal 1925 lxvi. 481—507 with distribution-maps of Bronze Age Amber Finds in Central Europe and Early Iron Age Amber Finds in Central Europe, also a map of Trans-continental Amber Routes distinguishing Central Routes (opened Early Bronze Age), Western Routes (opened Middle Bronze Age), and Eastern Routes (opened Early Iron Age), and two plans of Bronze Age Amber Finds in Italy and Early Iron Age Amber Finds in Italy. Mr de Navarro does not deal with the amber trade to Greece and the East Mediterranean area, remarking only 'The Baltic-Black Sea route is, in my opinion, a late development.'

ii. 493 ff. the Hyperboreans. Rendel Harris 'Apollo at the back of the North Wind' in the Journ. Hell. Stud. 1925 xlv. 229—242 includes chapters on 'The prehistoric amber routes,' 'Apollo and the Hyperboreans,' 'The Apollo stations,' and 'a possible third amber route from the land of the Hyperboreans into Greece.' G. H. Macurdy Troy and Paeonia New York 1925 pp. 196—210 returns to the subject with a further section on 'The Hyperboreans.' C. T. Seltman in the Cambridge University Reporter 1928 lviii. 685 argues thus: 'It seems improbable that barbarians devoid of all Hellenic connections would have troubled to keep in touch with Delian Apollo. The chief Istrian cult was Apolline. Istrus, like other Milesian Pontic Colonies, was populated by Mix-hellenes and monopolized Danubian trade, having factories far up the river....Perhaps these barbarized descendants of Istrian, i.e. Milesian, stock sent the offerings. If so, the Herodotean Adriatic route employed about 450 B.C. would have been closed by the Celtic invasions of the early fourth century B.C. and the later Istrus, Sinope, Prasiae-route, of (?) Phanodemus, would have been used subsequently. The fourth century B.C. coins of Istrus and Sinope with identical reverse types point to close connections between these States....Accordingly, if the people who sent offerings to Delos were geographically "Hyperborean," but not racial or mythical Hyperboreans; if they are less likely to have been the barbarian Proto-Hellenic parent-stock left behind in Central Europe than the semi-barbarized descendants of Ionian traders located in the south of Central Europe, then there is no longer any need to seek for a partially northern origin for Apollo merely on the grounds of his supposed Hyperborean connections.' This acute hypothesis is welcomed by A. D. Nock in the Class. Rev. 1929 xliii. 126 and by M. Cary ib. 1929 xliii. 214. The latter, quoting Kallim. h. Del. 283 f. οἱ μέν τοι καλάμην τε καὶ ἱερὰ δράγματα πρῶτοι | ἀσταχύων φορέουσιν, adds: 'Surely, then, they were the ears of wheat whose haulms served as packing.' Yet the actual custom of packing an egg (Osterei) in the first or last sheaf, cited by Mannhardt (supra ii. 498 n. 2), tempts us to conjecture that the offerings in question were swans' eggs similarly packed: this would at least suit both their Hyperborean starting-point and their Delian destination, and might further be supported by the ritual preservation of Leda's egg (supra ii. 1015 n. 7). A more remote parallel may be found in a former (c. 1860 A.D.) usage of the Easter Islanders: the man that brought in the first tern's egg of the year, which his servant had procured from a neighbouring islet, swimming across with it in a small basket tied on his head, was saluted as Tangata-Manu, 'Man-Bird,' and chosen as chief for the year (S. Chauvet L'île de Pâques et ses mystères Paris 1935 pp. 35—37).

ii. 496 n. 0 fin. C. Picard in the Rev. Arch. 1935 i. 285 n. 1: 'Pour le nom des Perphérées d'Hérodote (IV, 32), compagnons des Vierges hyperboréennes, on comparera maintenant l'Hermès Perphéræos d'Ainos, sculpté par le Dédalide Épeios, constructeur du Cheval de Troie: un papyrus récent l'a révélé.' Mr H. J. M. Milne kindly refers me to M. Norsa—G. Vitelli ΔΙΗΓΗΣΕΙΣ di poemi di Callimaco in un papiro di Tebtynis Firenze 1934 p. 45 f. col. vii, 32 ff. Ἑρμᾶς ὁ Περφεραῖος Αἰνείων θεός Περφεραῖος Ἑρμῆς ἐν Αἴνωι τῆι πόλει τῆς Θράικης τιμᾶται. ἐντεῦθεν Ἐπειὸς πρὸ τοῦ δουρείου ὑπ̣ου ἐδημιούργησεν Ἑρμῆν, ὃν ὁ Σκάμανδρος πολὺς ἐνεχθεὶς κατέσυρεν· ὁ δ' ἐντεῦθεν προσηνέχθη εἰς τὴν πρὸς Αἶνωι θάλασσαν, ἀφ' ἧς ἀλιευόμενοί τινες ἀνείλκυσαν αὐτὸν τῆι σαγήνηι. ὅτε <δὲ> ἐθεάσαντο αὐτόν, καταμεμψάμενοι τὸν βόλον πρῶτον μὲν σχίζειν τε αὐτὸν <—> καὶ παρακαίειν αὐτοῖς ἐπεχείρουν, οὐδὲν δὲ ἧττον ἐφθασαν ἢ τὸν ὦμον παίσαντες τραύματος τύπον ἐργάσασθαι, διαμπερὲς δὲ ἠσθένησαν· καὶ ὅλον αὐτὸν καίειν ἐπεχείρουν, τὸ δὲ πῦρ αὐτῶι περιέρρει. ἀπειπόντες <οὖν> κατέρριψαν αὐτὸν εἰς τὴν θάλασσαν. ἐπεὶ δ' αὖθις ἐδικτυούλκησαν, θεὸν νομίσαντες εἶναι ἢ θεῶι προσήκοντα καθιδρύσαντο ἐπὶ τοῦ αἰγιαλοῦ ἱερὸν αὐτοῦ, ἀπήρξαντό τε τῆς ἄγρας ἄλλος παρ' ἄλλου αὐτῶι π[* * * * * ] (π[οσελθών?). τοῦ δὲ Ἀπόλλωνος χρήσαντος εἱ[σεδέξαν]ρο τῆι πόλει καὶ παραπλησίως τ[οῖς θεοῖς] ἐτίμων.* Cp. R. Pfeiffer 'Die neuen ΔΙΗΓΗΣΕΙΣ zu Kallimachosgedichten' in the Sitzungsber. d. bayer. Akad. d. Wiss. Phil.-hist. Classe 1934 x. 29 f.

ii. 500 Phoibos. W. Schmid Φοῖβος Ἀπόλλων in the Archiv f. Rel. 1923—1924 xxii. 217—223 tries to persuade us that Φοῖβος is a metrical substitute for Φόβος!

ii. 505 ff. lightning as a weapon. H. Balfour 'Concerning Thunderbolts' in Folk-Lore 1929 xl. 37—49, 168—172 with 23 figs. on 2 pls. surveys and illustrates popular beliefs about 'thunderbolts,' prophylactic or otherwise.

ii. 510 ff. inscribed neolithic celts. The best parallel to figs. 390 and 391 is the implement published by my friend and former pupil J. H. Iliffe 'A neolithic celt with Gnostic inscriptions at Toronto' in the Am. Journ. Arch. 1931 xxxv. 304—309 with 2 figs. It is a polished celt of hard brown stone, acquired in Smyrna but said to have been found at Ephesos, and bears on one side a well-cut design with lettering of s. iv—v A.D. Enclosed by a snake biting its own tail, stands a nude winged and tailed figure holding a whip with double lash in his right hand, a short rod in his left. A bunch of leaves springs from his head, which bears some resemblance to a winged Gorgóneion (?). He is flanked by two tall sceptres with animal-headed (?) tops, and surrounded by words of power: AIAOYAHA TTAI ZHΘ | ΦΘΛΘШZA | IAѠOYHE ΣABAѠΘ | AΔѠNAIE || AkPAMMA | XAMAPEI || ΣΕΣΕNΓΕN | ΦAPANΓHΣ || ABΛANAΘANAΛBA | ΔAMNAMENEY.

ii. 512 sliced neolithic celts with added inscriptions. A large oblong axe (?) of brownish green jade, formerly in the collection of J. Martinek, Shanghai, and now in my possession, has been sawn lengthwise and bears on the exposed surface an inscription in archaistic Chinese characters, which—Mr A. Waley kindly informs me—are an extract from the Analects of Confucius reading: 'Gentlemen use tê (inner power, "virtue" in the sense "potency"). Small men use force.' The Martinek Sale Catalogue (Messrs. Puttick and Simpson Dec. 13, 1929) p. 8 no. 67 refers this piece to the Han period.

ii. 513 ff. The double axe in 'Minoan' cult. M. E. L. Mallowan in The Illustrated London News for Sept. 16, 1933 p. 436 f. fig. 7 publishes beads or amulets in the shape of the double axe, which were found in Iraq at Arpachiyah, a prehistoric mound four miles east of Nineveh, and are attributed to a period earlier than 4000 B.C. These he claims as prototypes of the 'Minoan' symbol.

B. Schweitzer Herakles Tübingen 1922 pp. 21—58 ('Die Doppelaxt in nachkretischer Zeit') adduces a mass of miscellaneous evidence, not always judiciously handled.

ii. 516 n. 6 the sarcophagus of Hagia Triada. To the bibliography add R. Vallois 'Autels et culte de l'arbre sacré en Crète' in the Revue des études anciennes 1926 pp. 121—132. Id. in the Mélanges Gustave Glotz Paris 1932 ii. 839—847 cp. a similar arrangement of altar and base in the earliest Artemision at Ephesos.

ii. 518 n. 3 the magpie. R. Riegler 'Die Elster im Mythus' in the Archiv f. Rel. 1926 xxiii. 349—353, Taylor 'Elster' in the Handwörterbuch des deutschen Aberglaubens Berlin—Leipzig 1929/1930 ii. 796—802.

ii. 519 n. 0 the crow. Euphorion frag. 65 Meineke, ap. schol. Nik. ther. 406, Peuckert 'Krähe' in the Handwörterbuch des deutschen Aberglaubens Berlin—Leipzig 1932 v. 352—370.

ii. 522 n. 2 the colour red. See now the careful compilation of Eva Wunderlich Die Bedeutung des roten Farbe im Kultus der Griechen und Römer Giessen 1925 pp. 1—116 (reviewed by S. Eitrem in Gnomon 1926 ii. 95—102 and by E. Fehrle in the Berl. philol. Woch. Mai 15, 1926 pp. 520—525).

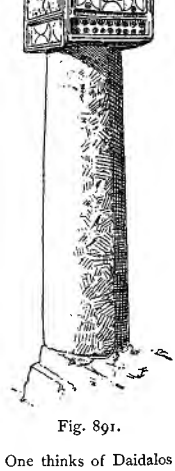

Fig. 891.

ii. 528 ff. double axes imbedded in columns. H. Sandars in the Rev. Arch. 1926 i. 259 f. fig. 2 (=my fig. 891) publishes an Iberian column from the Mina de la Plata between Baeza and Jaen. Its square stone capital is decorated with double axes on all four faces.

ii. 536 hands raised, one palm outwards, the other in profile. The same peculiar and at present unexplained gesture may be seen in a seated terra-cotta goddess of the 'Geometric' period (height: 4¾ inches), from northern Greece, now in my collection (fig. 892 a, b).

ii. 543 the 'hour-glass' ornament on the indigenous pottery of Apulia perhaps derived from the double axe. This is doubtful. Paintings from the rock-shelters of southern Spain, belonging to the Copper Age, show ⧖ or the like as the stylised form of a woman (H. Breuil—M. C. Burkitt Rock Paintings of Southern Andalusia Oxford 1929 p. 84 'Spanish Art Group III').

ii. 544 fig. 419 gem from Melos. C. Picard in the Revue de l'histoire des religions 1926 xciii. 70 objects that 'Minoan' deities are wingless and cj. 'plutôt un génie ptérophore.' Nilsson Min.-Myc. Rel. p. 187 n. 1 adds: 'upward curved wings do not occur in this age' (cp. V. Müller 'Minoisches Nachleben oder orientalischer Einfluss in der frühkretischen Kunst?' in the Ath. Mitth. 1925 l. 54 f. with fig. 1). Lastly, the attitude of Knielauf (supra i. 296 n. 6) also points to a post-'Minoan' though still archaic period. Probably the term 'sub-"Minoan"' or 'sub-Mycenaean' would best fit the case. One thinks of Daidalos (supra on i. 725).

ii. 544 n. 3 the Egyptian neter. Miss M. A. Murray 'The sign ⌐ in Studies presented to F. Ll. Griffith London 1932 pp. 312—315 pl. 49 argues that this sign represents a pole with votive streamers and is descended from an early cult of the poplar or willow.

ii. 547 n. 2 the sacrificial table. H. Mischkowski Die heiligen Tische im Götterkultus der Griechen und Römer Königsberg i. Pr. 1917 p. 32 f.

ii. 548 n. 0 sword-worship. Among the Quadi (Amm. Marc. 17. 12. 21 quorum regalis Vitrodorus, Viduari filius regis, et Agilimundus subregulus, aliique optimates et iudices, variis populis praesidentes,...eductis...mucronibus, quos pro numinibus colunt, iuravere se permansuros in fide). In the south-east of Sweden (A. Nordén Östergötlands Bronsålder Linköping 1925 pp. 1—407 is summarised by A. J. Uppvall in the Am. Journ. Arch. 1927 xxxi. 394—397, who notes among the rock-carvings in the region of Bråviken 'gigantic swords...now carried by one man, now by two, and found in processions where one being—a giant—towers above the rest.' Cp. O. Almgren in Ebert Reallex. iii. 216 with pl. 51, i, H. Shetelig—H. Falk Scandinavian Archaeology trans. E. V. Gordon Oxford 1937 p. 167 ff.).

a b

Fig. 892.

ii. 549 Kronos swallowing his own children. See now M. Pohlenz in Pauly—Wissowa Real. Enc. xi. 1991 ff.

ii. 549 Krónos as 'Chopper.' R. Eisler Weltenmantel und Himmelszelt München 1910 ii. 385 n. 0 attempts to combine two incompatibles: 'Kronos als Κόρ-νος = Κείρων ="Schnitter" und κρουνός "Brunnen".' G. A. Wainwright in The Journal of Egyptian Archaeology 1933 xix. 51 quotes parallels e.g. Κάσιος, which 'probably originated in the Semitic root ḳāṣaṣ, ḳāṣah, ... "The Cutter, Breaker",' and Mḳôlnir the 'Crusher.'

ii. 550 fig. 426. F. Imhoof-Blumer in the Journ. Hell. Stud. 1898 xviii. 178 f. no. 51 pl. 13, 18 observes that on this coin there is drapery over the back of Kronos' head and a small crown with three peaks, also some object in his left hand.

ii. 550 ff. fig. 428 the dagger-god of Iasily Kaya. See further P. Couissin 'Le dieu-épée de Iasili-Kaïa et le culte de l'épée dans l'antiquité' in the Rev. Arch. 1927 i. 107—135 with 21 figs.—an important article on hoplolatry summarised by E. H. Heffner in the Am. Journ. Arch. 1928 xxxii. 509, G. Contenau Manuel d'archéologie orientale Paris 1931 ii. 970 f. fig. 672, G. Furlani La religione degli Hittiti Bologna 1936 p. 59 f. Good photographs taken in two different lights are supplied by K. Bittel Die Felsbilder von Yazilikaya Bamberg 1934 p. 11 no. 82 pl. 30.

ii. 561 Tyrimnos. A. H. Sayce 'The Phrygian hero Tyris' in the Class. Rev. 1932 xlvi. 11.

ii. 569 Zeus Asbamaïos. E. Kalinka in the Jahresh. d. oest. arch. Inst. 1933 xxviii Beiblatt p. 61 no. 8 figures a marble altar at Amasra in Bithynia inscribed Θεῷ | ἀνεικ-ήτῳ | Ἀσβαμεῖ κα[ὶ] | Γῇ (?) κυρίᾳ κ.τ.λ. E. Fehrle in Roscher Lex. Myth. vi. 605 treats Ἀσβαμαῖος as the equivalent of ὅρκιος.

ii. 570 n. o. À propos of Celtic divinities Prof. F. E. Adcock draws my attention to Zeus Βουσσουρίγιος, who is mentioned in two inscriptions of s. iii A.D. from Galatia (J. G. C. Anderson in the Journ. Hell. Stud. 1910 xxx. 163 ff. no. 1 at Aktche Tash on a block rectangular in section Αὐρήλιος Ἥλιος | Δόμνου | κώμης Κλωσ|σαμηρῶν | νεωκόρος | τοῦ Διὸς Βουσ|σουριγ(ι)ου | ζῶν ἑαυτῷ | κατεσκεύασεν τὸ | μνημεῖον = Corp. inscr. Gr. iii no. 4102. No. 2 at Karayuk on a stèle surmounted by a fragmentary wreath Αὐρ. Φιλώτας | Σπατειλίου | κώμης Ἰκο|ταρίου ἱκέτης | καὶ ὑπηρετῶν | Διὶ Βουσσου|ριγίῳ ζῶν| φρονῶν ἑαυτῷ τὸ μνημεῖον κατεσκεύασεν. Anderson loc. cit. p. 165 adds: 'The epithet Bussurigios is undoubtedly Celtic, as is clear from a comparison with Bussumarus or Bussumarius, a Celtic god identified with Jupiter Optimus Maximus in two inscriptions of the Dacian Apulum and probably in an inscription of Moesia Inferior [Dessau Inscr. Lat. sel. no. 4621 with n.]. The termination -mārus, 'great,' is common in Celtic personal names.... As Bussumarus is Bussu magnus, so Bussurigios is Bussu regius. The Celtic equivalent of rex (O. Irish rí, gen. rígi) is one of the commonest terminations of Gallic personal names...').

ii. 578 n. 4. A. W. Persson in the Bull. Corr. Hell. 1922 xlvi. 399 ff. adds two more inscriptions from Mylasa: no. 4, 15 f. [ἀναγράψαι δὲ τόδε τὸ] | [ψήφισ]μα ἐν τῶι ἱερῶι τοῦ [Διὸς Ὀ]σογῶ κατὰ τ[ὸν νόμον] and no. 5, C 3 f. [ἀν]αγράψαι δὲ τόδε τὸ ψήφ[ισμα ἐν τῶι] | [ἱερῶι τοῦ Διὸς Ὀσογῶ κατὰ τὸν νόμ]ον. See further an important paper by A. Laumonier 'Notes sur un voyage en Carie' in the Rev. Arch. 1933 ii. 31—55 figs. 1—20.

ii. 582 Poseidon originally a specialised form of Zeus. C. Picard in the Revue de l'histoire des religions 1926 xciii. 72 n. 2 pronounces this view to be 'fort vraisemblable.'

ii. 583 ff. the name Poseidôn. A. Mommsen Delphika Leipzig 1878 p. 3 ff. regards Poseidon as 'ostgriechischer Obergott' and id. p. 7 f. already advances the true derivation of his name: 'Das Wort Poseidon bedeutet vielleicht Ζεὺς δεσπότης. Man kann von der äolischen Form Ποτειδάν oder Ποτιδάν (vgl. Ποτιδανία, lokr. Stadtname) ausgehn. Dan ist Zeus. Die beiden ersten Silben gehen auf skt. patis Herr zurück, welchem Stamme auch griech. πότνια δεσπότης δέσποινα angehören. Danach ist Poseidon ursprünglich ein modificierter Zeus, der Wortsinn: Gott der Herr, Herrgott.'

A. Carnoy 'Étymologie du nom du dieu de la mer Poseidon' in the Revue belge de Philologie et d'Histoire 1924 iii. 390 f.: 'Ποτίς signifiant "maître" (mis au vocatif donne ποτεῖ) et un mot δᾶϝον signifiant "eau" et qu'on retrouve dans diverses langues indo-européennes avec le sens de corps liquide.'

G. H. Macurdy 'The Name Ποσειδάων and Other Names Ending in -αων in the Iliad' in the Am. Journ. Philol. 1930 li. 286—288 argues that all such names are either Trojan or Northern and postulates a Northern origin for Poseidon.

ii. 587 Zeus Pálaxos or Spálaxos. W. H. Buckler—W. M. Calder—C. W. M. Cox in the Journ. Rom. Stud. 1924 xiv. 71 f. no. 105 pl. 16, 105 a, b publish the back of a limestone seat found at Ak Kilisse in Isauria bearing a dedicatory inscription Ποδαδίβιον Πολωξου ἔδραν | καὶ ἡ κώμη αὐτοῦ κα[τ' ὄναρ· (?)] | ἐκάθισεν αὐτὸς καὶ Τ[.....] | Ἄττου, which probably means 'Podadbiou (an indeclinable personal name) dedicated this seat of Póloxos and so did the god's village in accordance with a dream: Podadbiou himself and T..... son of Attes set it up.' See further T. Klauser Die Cathedra im Totenkult der heidnischen und christlichen Antike Münster in Westf. 1927 p. 49 n. 21.

ii. 587 n. 7. C. Picard in the Revue de l'histoire des religions 1926 xciii. 73 n. 2 doubts the equation πέλεκυς=balag, citing C. Autran 'La Grèce et l'Orient ancien' in Babyloniaca 1924 viii. 185 n. 1 ('balag dont le sens probable est bien plutôt de lyre, ou harpe'), id. Sumérien et Indo-européen Paris 1925 p. iv n. 1. Further literature on this disputed question is noted by A. Nehring 'Studien zur indogermanischen Kultur und Urheimat' in the Wiener Beiträge zur Kulturgeschichte und Linguistik 1936 iv. 31 n. 11.

ii. 594 pectoral ornament (?). In favour of such a προστηθίδιον see also W. Müller in the Röm. Mitth. 1919 xxxiv. 93 ff., C. Picard Éphèse et Claros Paris 1922 p. 529 ff., id. in the Revue de l'histoire des religions 1926 xciii. 73 n. 1, and especially G. Furlani 'Ornamenti astrali e corazze di dei dell' Asia anteriore antica' in Studi e materiali di storia delle religioni 1931 vii. 43 ff.

ii. 594 the temple of Athena Aléa. C. Dugas--J. Berchmans—M. Clemmensen Le sanctuaire d'Aléa Athéna à Tégée au iv^e siècle Paris 1924 i. 1—144 with 41 figs. and ii Atlas of 116 pls.

ii. 600 f. The double axe and the Labyrinth. R. Ganszyniec 'Labrys' in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. xii. 286—307 gives a well-arranged and interesting survey of the facts. Humborg ib. xii. 314 f. and G. Karo ib. xii. 321 deal with λάβρυς and Λαβύρινθος. G. Dumézil 'ΛΑΒΡΤΣ' in the Journal asiatique 1929 ccxv. 237—252 derives λάβρυς and its congeners ('l'asianique et égéen λαβρυ-, λάβυρ-, λαβρ-') from a pre-Greek word which he connects with the classical and modern Georgian labvari, 'lance.' Early Georgian lances, preserved in churches and museums, have a bifurcated blade. In Mingrelia they are regularly taken to be the arms of St George, who mounted on horseback attacks evil spirits issuing from the sea with his double lance ('il leur porte des coups avec sa lance; chacun de ces coups s'accompagne du tonnerre que nous entendons, et fait jaillir des étincelles, qui sont l'éclair'). Dumézil views the double lance labvari as the lineal successor of the double axe λάβρυς, the essential point being its twofold blade ('force redoublée? perfection? union des sexes?')—a convincing conclusion. H. Güntert 'Labyrinth. Eine sprachwissenschaftliche Untersuchung' in the Sitzungsber. d. Heidelb. Akad. d. Wiss. Phil.-hist. Classe 1932/3 Abh. i. 1—49 would relate Λαβύρινθος to λᾶας 'stone,' and takes λάβρυς as 'Steinbeil.' But his contentions are traversed by P. Kretschmer in Glotta 1934 xxii. 252 f. ('Diese Etymologie scheitert daran, dass Λαβύρινθος, λάβρυς, Λάβρανδος immer nur mit β, λᾶας dagegen nur mit v bezeugt ist, die Bed. "Stein" an die Form mit v geknüpft ist'). See further C. Picard 'Les origines du Labyrinthe' in the Rev. Arch. 1939 i. 264 f.

ii. 601. H. J. Rose in The Hibbert Journal 1927 xxv. 380 thinks that I am here confusing the Quinquennalia of Maxentius, i.e. the celebration of the fifth year of his reign, with the quinquennial agon Capitolinus of Domitian, which had ceased to exist centuries before Maxentius was born. But the Quinquennalia of Maxentius would have fallen in 311, not 312. Also, Lactantius states that the Quinquennalia in question were ending and that Maxentius' day had not yet come. He is probably alluding to the ludi Capitolini, which were still being held (G. Wissowa in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. iii. 1528, L. C. Purser in Smith—Wayte—Marindin Dict. Ant. ii. 86). I adhere therefore to my view as expressed in the text.

ii. 607 E. Conybeare's suggestion that the labarum was derived from the lábrys. The same solution of the problem was reached independently by E. Harrison, who however—so far as I know—did not publish it.

H. Grégoire 'L'étymologie de "Labarum"' in Byzantion 1927—1928 iv. 477—482 comes to the following conclusion: 'La laurea en or qui enferme le Chrisme est l'élément caractéristique du sublime étendard décoré en outre des images laurées des pieux empereurs. De même qu'on disait le dragon ou l'aigle, draco, aquila, pour l'étendard surmonté du dragon ou de l'aigle, on a dû qualifier le nouveau vexillum à la couronne d'un nom dérivé de laurea. Et, de même que le labarum n'est qu'une variante du lauratum, laureum n'est qu'une variante de laureatum.'

ii. 613 the hidden meaning of knife or double axe. R. Eisler drew my attention (Oct. 14, 1908) to the small axe received by the Essenes when admitted to the order (Ioseph. de bell. Iud. 2. 8. 9 ταῖς δ' ἄλλαις ἡμέραις βόθρον ὀρύσσοντες βάθος ποδιαῖον τῇ σκαλίδι, τοιοῦτον γάρ ἐστι τὸ διδόμενον ὑπ' αὐτῶν ἀξινίδιον τοῖς νεοσυστάτοις, καὶ περικαλύψαντες θοιμάτιον, ὡς μὴ τὰς αὐγὰς ὑβρίζοιεν τοῦ θεοῦ, θακεύουσιν εἰς αὐτόν. κ.τ.λ.).

ii. 613 Simias' poem on the axe of Epeios. W. Deonna 'Les "poèmes figurés"' in the Revue de philologie de littérature et d'histoire anciennes 1926 l. 187—193 ('Il s'agit d'un procédé instinctif et universel, ancien et moderne, européen ou oriental, qui n'a qu'une intention: résumer en quelque sorte par une image le sens du texte écrit, donner de celui-ci une transposition figurée. On constate de plus que certains de ces arrangements ont un sens religieux ou magique').

ii. 614 ff. Zeus (?) and the Centaur. J. C. Hoppin in the Am. Journ. Arch. 1900 iv. 443 ff. pl. 6 (part of which=my fig. 893) published a proto-Corinthian lêkythos of the early seventh century at Boston (inv. no. 6508), interpreting the main scene as a Centaur attacked by Herakles (sheathed sword, branch, tree-root). K. F. Johansen Les vases sicyoniens Paris—Copenhague 1923 p. 146 f. fig. 109 pl. 22, 2 d thinks that we have here an early version of the Lapith v. Centaur myth. E. Buschor 'Kentauren' in the Am. Journ. Arch. 1934 xxxviii. 128 f. fig. 1 rightly recognises Zeus with a sword at his side, a sceptre in his right hand, and a thunderbolt in his left, but would have us believe that the horse-monster is Typhon. To my thinking, this thunderbolt-bearing figure strongly supports our explanation of the axe-bearing figure as Zeus.

ii. 620 Sucaelus the mallet-god. For a Cornish counterpart of Sucaelus see 'Jack of the Hammer,' whose exploits are told by W. Bottrell Traditions and Hearthside Stories of West Cornwall Penzance 1870 p. 10 ff. He passed as 'a travelling tinkard... hammer in hand,' but proved more than a match for Tom the eight-foot giant-killer. 'The tinkard, taking his black-thorn stick in the middle, made it spin so fast that it looked like a wheel flying round Tom's head and ears.... Tom didn't know the play;—though the few downright blows he gave came down with the force of a sledge hammer, they had no effect on the tinkard, because he wore a leather coat, the like of which was never seen in the west country before. This coat, made of a black bull's hide, left almost whole, was without a seam, and dressed with the curly hair on it. On the breast, back, and shoulders it was as hard as iron, and roared like thunder whenever Tom struck it, which made him think he had to deal with the devil.' Etc. See further Keune 'Sucellus' in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. iv A. 515—540.

Fig. 893.

ii. 620. Thor's hammer used as a pendant or amulet is well illustrated by J. J. A. Worsaae Nordiske Oldsager i Det Kongelige Museum i Kjöbenhavn Kjöbenhavn 1859 p. 113 fig. 469 and P. Paulsen Der Goldschatz von Hiddensee Leipzig 1936 p. 65 ff. figs. 24—26 pls. 17, 2 and 23, (3).

ii. 630. Mrs A. Strong 'Sepulchral Relief of a Priest of Bellona' in Papers of the British School at Rome 1920 ix. 205—213 pl. 26 discusses an inscribed tombstone from the Via Triumphalis, now in the Biblioteca Vallicelliana at Rome (Corp. inscr. Lat. vi no. 2233=Dessau Inscr. Lat. sel. no. 4182, Matz—Duhn Ant. Bildw. in Rom iii. 173 f. no. 3876). The relief shows L. Lartius Anthus, a cistophorus and priest of Bellona Pulvinensis wearing a bay-wreath with three medallions (Mars, Bellona, Minerva?) and carrying in his right hand a bay-branch, in his left two small double axes.

ii. 632 n. 6 axes with animal heads. Other examples are collected by P. Couissin in the Rev. Arch. 1928 i. 261 ff. figs. 6, 7, 8, 9, 15.

ii. 633 fig. 542 f. axes backed by a bull. Cp. G. A. Wainwright in The Journal of Egyptian Archaeology 1933 xix. 43 (supra p. 884 n. 0).

ii. 635 f. Trojan axe-hammers of blue or green stone. H. Schmidt 'Zu den trojanischen Prachtbeilen' in the Jahrb. d. Deutsch. Arch. Inst. 1923/24 xxxviii/ix Arch. Anz. pp. 123—125 (summarised by R. Vallois in the Rev. Ét. Gr. 1925 xxxviii. 214 f.), A. M. Tallgren in Ebert Reallex. ii. 121 pl. 62, a, b, S. Casson 'Battle-axes from Troy' in Antiquity 1933 vii. 337—339 pls. 1 ('nephrite, almost indigo in colour') and 2 ('rich blue lapis lazuli flecked with brown spots and striated').

ii. 637 amber axes. An amber axe from Birka in Sweden is published by P. Paulsen Der Goldschatz von Hiddensee Leipzig 1936 p. 73 fig. 30, a.

ii. 637 Cretan double axes. S. Marinatos in the Jahrb. d. Deutsch. Arch. Inst. 1934 xlix Arch. Anz. pp. 251—254 records important finds made at the cave of Arkalochori in a hill 1⅛ hours from Lyktos. First children and then adults of the neighbourhood discovered in one corner of the cave a mass of bronzes and a pair of small double axes in gold. The authorities hearing of it intervened and appropriated some twenty gold double axes, leaving perhaps another ten in the hands of the rustics. Bronze double axes, knives, and swords were found in considerable numbers, all heaped together in a space of two or three square metres. The small double axes of gold (ib. fig. 3 shows four) are decorated with a leaf-pattern which points to the beginning of the 'Late Minoan ii' period (1450—1400 B.C.) or else with engraved lines of a more usual type. A few axes are of silver. The whole treasure had been sealed up by a fall of rock, probably occasioned by an earthquake. But votive offerings continued to be made at the mouth of the cave down to the end of the 'Minoan' age and even later (a few proto-geometric finds?). Marinatos concludes: 'Es erhebt sich die Frage nach der Gottheit dieser an Funden bisher reichsten Kulthöhle Kretas. Sollte sie nicht die berühmte Höhle des Zeus und der Rhea sein [supra ii. 925 n. 1], die manche in Psychrò zu finden glaubten?' Reports in The Times of June 29, 1935 p. 13 and in Antiquity 1935 ix. 354 mention that the recent excavations in the Arkalochori district have found hundreds of copper 'Minoan' axes (one with three lines of hieroglyphic inscription (c. 1600 B.C.)), a number of silver axes, and twenty-seven gold double axes with golden shafts. These finds have been taken to the Candia Museum for cleaning. See further Sir A. Evans The Palace of Minos London 1935 iv. 1. 346 f. fig. 290 (three gold axes, enlarged) and 378 fig. 315 bis (four miniature bronze axes). S. Marinatos in the Jahrb. d. Deutsch. Arch. Inst. 1935 l Arch. Anz. pp. 248—254 figs. 3 (gold model of mountain?), 4 (bronze double axe), 6 (the ten hieroglyphic characters of the inscribed double axe) now concludes: 'Da sich aber nach Abschluss der Grabung ergab, dass die Höhle nichts Jüngeres als SM.I enthielt, gehören m.E. auch die goldenen Beile in diese Zeit,' etc. J. D. S. Pendlebury The Archaeology of Crete London 1939 pp. 212, 232, 236 pl. 36, 3 (three gold axes).

ii. 641 n. 2. Recent writers on Charon are B. Schmidt 'Charon' in the Archiv f. Rel. 1927 xxv. 79—82, F. de Ruyt Charun démon étrusque de la mort Bruxelles 1934 pp. 1—305 with 58 pls. (reviewed by A. Grenier in the Rev. Arch. 1935 ii. 128—131, by F. Pfister in the Berl. philol. Woch. Sept. 28, 1935 p. 1092 f., by H. J. Rose in the Class. Rev. 1935 xlix. 24 f. and in Gnomon 1935 xi. 278 f.). Schmidt holds that the Etruscans, originally dwellers in Asia Minor, owe their conception of Charon to the influence of Assyrian demons. Rose makes the further helpful suggestion that Charon's mallet or hammer on Asiatic soil was the double axe of a thunder-god, which might well be used by an underground power to produce the subterranean thunders that portended death (cp. Plin. nat. hist. 2. 138)—a view anticipated by me supra ii. 641.

ii. 642 n. 2 fig. 559. With the upper end cp. the votive terra-cotta ktels in the Berlin Antiquarium (H. Licht Sittengeschichte Griechenlands Dresden—Zürich 1926 ii. 76 fig., also the votive marbles in Svoronos Ath. Nationalmus. pl. 164 nos. 1594 ff., 1821, 2730.

ii. 643 n. 7 designs incised on neolithic celts. O. Tafrali in the Rev. Arch. 1931 i. 26—28 figures a flat celt of smooth stone bearing an incised quadruped and inscription. This suspicious-looking object is said to have been found at Rădăşani, near Folticeni, in Moldavia. Prof. Tafrali deems it to be of neolithic date and comparable with finds at Glozel!

ii. 643 ff. designs incised on double axes of bronze. In a small collection of 'Minoan' double axes I have two which, on account of their decoration, are deserving of special notice.

One is an almost oblong axe of bronze (fig. 894 a, b, c. Length 7⅞ inches) with dark green patina. On either side of it is incised a lion recumbent on rough or rocky ground with whisking tail. I obtained this axe from a Cretan vendor with no indication of its provenance. But Mr J. D. S. Pendlebury tells me that he had already seen it at Mokhos, 1½ hours south of Mallia. He adds: 'It comes from a place called Μουρί (the "meeting place"), where are MM and LM sherds, close by a small lake ¼ hour east of the village. There is an EM site on a hill 25 minutes to the north-east called 'Εβίχτης or 'Ανεμοσκιά, and from somewhere not far off come Neolithic sherds. Classical-Roman, near Μουρί.'

The rocky ground is characteristic. Sir A. Evans The Palace of Minos London 1928 ii. 2. 450—454 dilates on the 'Minoan passion for rock scenery': cp. e.g. Perrot—Chipiez Hist. de l'Art vi. 848 pl. 16, 12 and 840 fig. 424 = Furtwängler Ant. Gemmen i pl. 3, 2 and 46, ii. 14 and 16 = H. T. Bossert The Art of Ancient Crete[2] London 1937 p. 36 pl. 231

a b c

Fig. 894.

fig. 394, a and p. 37 pl. 235 fig. 398, g. The same feature recurs on occasion in later Cretan art (supra i. 528 fig. 394).

The second axe (fig. 895 a, b. Length $7\frac{3}{4}$ inches) was found near Athens. It is of yellow bronze with blackish patination, in part scrubbed off by sand-paper. Its outline is of a later type with more pronounced curves, and it is decorated on both sides with pointillé patterning. Within a border of chevrons are a man, a waterfowl, a horse, and a wheel. I have suggested (supra p. 605 n. 3) that these are the constituents of a solar equipage as rendered in the Hallstatt period. If so, the axe was presumably in some sense a sacred object.

a b

Fig. 895.

ii. 645 n. 4 the soul as a butterfly. The Copenhagen gem (fig. 563) is now included in P. Fossing The Thorvaldsen Museum: Catalogue of the antique engraved gems and cameos Copenhagen 1929 p. 91 no. 504 pl. 7. The Berlin amphora (no. 1684) is figured by H. Licht Sittengeschichte Griechenlands Zürich 1928 Ergänzungsband p. 73.

ii. 648 n. 1 axe-pendants from Benin. P. Amaury Talbot Some Nigerian Fertility Cults Oxford 1927 p. 8 'A considerable number of examples of the old Minoan double-headed axe cult were found in other parts of West and Central Africa' (criticised by A. R. Wright in Folk-Lore 1930 xli. 215 f.).

ii. 656 n. 0 ingots. C. T. Seltman Athens its History and Coinage before the Persian Invasion Cambridge 1924 p. 1 ff. figs. 1—4 points out that these ingots were cast in the shape of an ox-hide dried and stretched, one side rough and hairy, the other raw with inward curling edges, just because they were an ox-unit, the price of an ox in base metal. Cp. id. Greek Coins London 1933 p. 7 f. with figs. 1 and 2. K. Regling in Ebert Reallex. iv. 1. 223 with pl. 100, a—d still (1926) speaks of them as 'die doppelbeilförmigen Kupferbarren des Mittelmeergebietes.' H. T. Bossert The Art of Ancient Crete[3] London 1937 p. 43 pl. 277 fig. 525, a—c is non-committal. But Seltman is clearly right.

ii. 663. W. R. Halliday 'Tenes' in the Class. Quart. 1927 xxi. 36—44 insists on 'the absolute unanimity of tradition which associates Tenes with Apollo,' not with Zeus or Dionysos. Id. ib. p. 39 quotes Aristeides of Miletos frag. 32 (Frag. hist. Gr. iv. 327 Müller) ap. Steph. Byz. s.v. Τένεδος·...τὸν ἐν Τενέδῳ Ἀπόλλωνα πέλεκυν κρατεῖν, but questions its reliability.

ii. 664 fig. 603. This bronze plaque is now at Berlin (photograph in F. J. Dölger ΙΧΘΥC Münster in Westf. 1922 iii pl. 33). A marble altar of s. iii(?) A.D. from Ineunu, Phrygia (Mendel Cat. Sculpt. Constantinople iii. 52 ff. no. 846 with 4 figs.), has reliefs on its front, back, left, and right sides. (a) On the front, a rider-god on horse-back, brandishing a double axe, gallops uphill: above him is inscribed ἀγαθῇ τύχῃ· Θεοῖς Ὁσίοις καὶ Δ[ι]|καίοις Ἡρόφιλ[ος] | Παπᾶ εὐχήν. (b) On the back, a draped goddess holding grape-bunch and cornu copiae stands on a small plinth beside a fruitful vine-branch and a large krater. (c) On the left side, Asklepios with oval object (fruit? egg?) and serpent-staff stands on a small plinth: above him is inscribed Ἀσκλᾶς καὶ Ἀσκληπᾶς,| οἱ Ἀσκληπᾶ, λατύποι | Κουρναιτηνοί. (d) On the right side, Nemesis draped and veiled holding scales(?) and cubit-rule stands on a small plinth between two thick garlands terminated at either end by three ivy-leaves.

ii. 665 n. 1. See further K. Tümpel 'Der Karabos des Perseus' in Philologus 1894 liii. 544—553.

ii. 666 n. 1 Cancer, 'the Crab.' D'Arcy W. Thompson 'The Emblem of the Crab in relation to the sign Cancer' in Transactions of the Royal Society of Edinburgh 1899 xxxix. 603—611 maintains that the crab as divine attribute or emblem regularly presupposes the constellation Cancer, which was domus Lunae, exaltatio Jovis, sedes Mercurii, etc.

ii. 667 n. 3 fig. 606. Cp. Babelon Monn. gr. rom. ii. 1. 1547 f. no. 2328 pl. 78, 12, McClean Cat. Coins i. 238 no. 2032 pl. 65, 3, Syll. num. Gr. ii pl. 26, 794 f. Lloyd. Since on a later tetradrachm of Kamarina ∃ + ∃ is the beginning of an artist's name (Syll. num. Gr. ii pl. 29, 868 Lloyd), presumably that of Exakestidas (ib. pl. 29, 871 Lloyd), Ionice Exekestides, it is probable that A + ∃ on the Agrigentine coin stands for the name of a magistrate or artist Exakestidas, grandfather of the later engraver. For + instead of ⧺ see W. Larfeld Handbuch der griechischen Epigraphik Leipzig 1907 i pl. 3 ('Westliche Alphabete').

ii. 673. A bronze coin of Chersonesos Taurike, struck c. 300—200 B.C., copies the Tenedian combination of god and goddess (Ant. Münz. Berlin Taurische Chersonesus, etc. i. 3 pl. 1, 7 Artemis and Herakles, Head Hist. num.[2] p. 279 young Dionysos(?) and Zeus(?), E. H. Minns Scythians and Greeks Cambridge 1913 pl. 4, 7 Artemis and bearded Dionysus(?). I have another specimen of this scarce coin, and I incline to agree with Head that the type represents Dionysos and Zeus).

ii. 675 androgynous deities. See now the important study of J. Halley des Fontaines La notion d'androgynie dans quelques mythes et quelques rites Paris 1938 with 16 figs. pp. 1—231 (pp. 216—219 'Résumé et conclusions').

ii. 681 figs. 621—624. C. Picard in the Revue de l'histoire des religions 1926 xciii. 75 observes that in the tree-cutting scene on the coins of Aphrodisias the second man averts his face owing to a sort of visual taboo, for which parallels are cited.

ii. 687 rock-carvings of the hafted axe. At the base of Ben Voirlich, not far from the shore of Loch Lomond, a great rock called in Gaelic Clach nan Tairbh, 'The Rock of the Bulls,' bears the rough outline of a hafted axe (A. D. Lacaille in Folk-Lore 1930 xli. 233 ff. pls. 4 and 5).

ii. 688 ff. n. 0. M. C. Burkitt 'Rock Carvings in the Italian Alps' in Antiquity 1929 iii. 155—164 with map and pls. 1—7 discusses the designs pock-marked on the red rock-surfaces of Monte Bego and attributes them to seasonal pilgrimages of a neighbouring agricultural population made during the Bronze Age at different dates but in all cases prior to c. 300 A.D. (absence of Christian symbols). P. Reinecke in Germania 1934 xviii. 46—48 reports on two sandstone blocks in the Val Camonica and would date their drawings to the pre-Roman Iron Age or more probably to the Bronze Age. P. Jacobsthal 'Celtic Rock-Carvings in Northern Italy and Yorkshire' in the Journ. Rom. Stud. 1938 xxviii. 65—69 accepts the contention of F. Altheim and E. Trautmann 'Nordische und italische Felsbildkunst' in Die Welt als Geschichte 1937 iii. 83—113 that the largest of all rock-carvings in the Val Camonica (fig. 3 = Jacobsthal pl. 9, 1) represents the Celtic stag-god Cernunnos with a small-scale worshipper. See further eid. 'Neue Felsbilder aus der Val Camonica: Die Sonne in Kult und Mythos' in Wörter und Sachen N.F. 1938 i. 12—45 pls. 1—32.

ii. 690 Penelope's marriage-test. E. Westermarck The History of Human Marriage[6] London 1921 ii. 490 notes that among the Mundas of Chota Nagpur the bridegroom shoots an arrow through the loophole formed by the bride's uplifted arm, and suggests that this was a magical means of securing the bride's safe delivery. I suspect that we have here the ultimate explanation of the marriage-test proposed by Penelope.

ii. 692 ff. Tereus. M. Bieber 'Tereus' in the Ath. Mitth. 1925 l. 11—18 pl. 2 publishes a sherd from Paestum, now at Dresden, which shows Tereus pursuing Prokne and Philomela with a double axe in his hand (A. D. Trendall Paestan Pottery London 1936 p. 127 no. 290 'Tereus (?)'). O. Schroeder 'ΠΡΟΚΝΗ' in Hermes 1926 lxi. 423—436 discusses the development of the myth.

ii. 699 "wine-skin" and "hatchet." 'V.' in The Cambridge Review 1926 xlvii. 268 draws attention to a better solution of this long-standing problem propounded by S. Koujeas 'ΑΣΚΟΣ-ΠΕΛΕΚΥΣ' in Hermes 1906 xli. 478—480, who remarks that at Abia in Lakonike words meaning 'wine-skin' and 'hatchet' are used in popular speech to denote the contrast of light and heavy: thus πλέχει 'σὰν ἀσκί 'he swims like a wine-skin,' πλέχει 'σὰν τσηκούρι 'he swims like an axe.' The visitor bouncing the baby says the tactful thing.

ii. 699 small bronze axes. F. Haverfield in The Victoria History of the Counties of England: Norfolk London s.a. i. 292 fig. 9 illustrates a tiny bronze axe found at Caister-by-Norwich (Venta Icenorum).

ii. 699 n. 7. On Osthanes see now J. Bidez—F. Cumont Les Mages hellénisés: Zoroastre Ostanès et Hystaspe d'après la tradition grecque Paris 1938 i. 165—212, ii. 265—356.

ii. 703 n. 2 a hammer thrown to ratify the acquisition of property. K. Künstle Ikonographie der Heiligen Freiburg im Breisgau 1926 p. 597 f. says of St Wolfgang (Oct. 31): 'Auf den Wolfgangsbildern, die vom Kloster Mondsee ausgehen, trägt der Heilige fast regelmässig ein Beil oder eine Axt als Attribut. Dies ist aus dem langen Kampfe herausgewachsen, den das Kloster um den Besitz der Gegend am Abersee, die man das "Wolfgangsland" nannte, gegen Salzburg und das Hochstift Regensburg führte. Die spätere Legende erzählt nämlich, Wolfgang habe, als er im Aberseeforst ein Einsiedlerleben führte, mittelst des Werfens eines Beiles, das in dem später nach ihm benannten Orte niederfiel, den Platz gesucht, wo er eine Zelle und eine Kirche mit eigenen Händen erbauen wollte. Durch diese Handlung hat er für sein Eigenkloster Mondsee von dieser Gegend Besitz genommen. Der Beilwurf ist nämlich ein altgermanischer Rechtsbrauch; er diente zur Ermittlung des Verlaufs einer Grenze und bestimmte die jeweilige Erstreckung des Rechtes auf Grund und Boden. Das Beil wurde so Sinnbild der Besitzergreifung.' Etc.

ii. 704 the spear of Zeus. L. Malten in the Jahrb. d. Deutsch. Arch. Inst. 1925 xl. 155 cp. Pind. Pyth. 1. 5 τὸν αἰχματὰν κεραυνόν.

ii. 707 n. 1. E. Kalinka in the Jahresh. d. oest. arch. Inst. 1933 xxviii Beiblatt p. 69 f. no. 17 gives a facsimile of this inscription, and dates it in 68 A.D.

ii. 722 Zeus Hórkios at Olympia. On the exact site of this statue see E. N. Gardiner Olympia Its History & Remains Oxford 1925 p. 274.

ii. 723 n. 0 Zeus Skýlios. An inscription of 120 A.D., found at Rhotàsi (Rhytion) and now in the Museum at Candia, speaks of a letter restored by a priest of Zeus Skýlios and of an imperial rescript, relating to Gortynian trespassers on his sacred domains, which had been engraved on a stéle kept in his sanctuary (Inscr. Cret. i. 303 ff. Rhytion no. 1, 6 ff. Ἄμβρος ὁ [κατασ]ταθεὶς | ἱερεὺς Διὸς [Σκυλίο]υ τῆς | Ῥυτιασίων κώ[μης καὶ Πό]ργου | κ.τ.λ., ib. 16 ff. [ἰσχ]υροποίαν | προήγεγ[καν - - - - -] καθ' ἣν | φαίνεται [- - - - - -]ι Διὸς Σκυ|λίου κ.τ.λ. with the remarks of M. N. Tod in the Journ. Hell. Stud. 1931 li. 243 and A. M. W[oodward] ib. 1936 lvi. 97). B. Kock in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. iii A. 647 s.v. 'Skylios' and 660 s.v. 'Skyllios.' Further literature cited by E. Fehrle in Roscher Lex. Myth. vi. 659 f., including the view of W. Aly in Klio 1911 xi. 15 and Philologus 1912 lxxi. 473 that Zeus Σκύλλιος was a sea-god akin to Skylla the sea-monster and Skyllies the diver (supra p. 414).

ii. 724 n. 0. On oaths that must be taken in the open, not under a roof, see P. Sartori 'Das Dach im Volksglauben' in the Zeitschrift des Vereins für Volkskunde 1915 xxv. 234 f., Weiser in the Handwörterbuch des deutschen Aberglaubens Berlin—Leipzig 1929/1930 ii. 124.

ii. 725 fig. 660 f. A. Della Seta Italia Antica Bergamo 1922 p. 252 fig. 281 has a photograph of this statue with the arms restored as holding a bow in the right hand, a hawk (?) in the left.

Fig. 896.

ii. 727 Zeus and the boar. The stéle of Zeus Karaiós at Thespiai (infra on ii. 874 n. 2) has three reliefs—a filleted bucranium, a boar's skull, and a boar's jaw (?) (P. Jamot in the Bull. Corr. Hell. 1922 xlvi. 262 with fig. 37).

ii. 727 n. 3 Zeus in relation to oaths. An engraved gem of pink jasper (?), found in Makedonia and now in my collection (fig. 896: scale $\frac{2}{1}$), shows Sarapis (kálathos, wreath) standing before Zeus (sceptre, thunderbolt) and between them the word ΩΜΟ|CA. Fairly good Hellenistic work. Possibly the seal of some public functionary.

ii. 731 fig. 663 Zeus wielding thunderbolt. A. Rumpf Chalkidische Vasen Berlin—Leipzig 1927 i. 12 f. no. 10 pls. 23—25.

ii. 731 Zeus wielding thunderbolt and sceptre. Among the scenes represented on the great kályx-kratér in New York by 'the Nekyia Painter' c. 450—440 B.C. (P. Jacobsthal 'The Nekyia Krater in New York' in the Metropolitan Museum Studies 1934—1936 v. 117—145 with 21 figs., P. Friedländer in the Jahrb. d. Deutsch. Arch. Inst. 1935 l Arch. Anz. pp. 20—33 figs. 1—4, G. M. A. Richter Red-figured Athenian Vases in the Metropolitan Museum of Art Yale Univ. Press 1936 i. 168—171 no. 135 pls. 135—137 and 170 (of which pl. 137 = my fig. 897)) is one—lower frieze B—in which Zeus, supported by Hermes, blasts a Giant, presumably Porphyrion (supra p. 55 ff. n. 5).

ii. 733 ff. fig. 665 psychostasía. The Paris fragment is re-published by J. D. Beazley Der Kleophrades-Maler Berlin 1933 p. 26 no. 37 pl. 2 and pl. 30, 6. The subject in general is handled by E. Wüst 'Psychostasie' in the Blätter für das Bayerische Gymnasial-Schulwesen 1929 lxv. 201—211. See also W. Deonna 'Ex-voto déliens' in the Bull. Corr. Hell. 1932 lvi. 478 ff. with figs. 15 and 16, M. P. Perry 'On the psychostasis in Christian art' in The Burlington Magazine for Connoisseurs 1912/13 xxii. 94—105 and 208—218 with 4 pls., W. L. Nash 'The origin of the mediaeval representations of the weighing of the soul after death' in Proceedings of the Society of Biblical Archæology 1918 xl. 19—29 pl. 1.

Fig. 897.

ii. 734 n. 3 the scales of Zeus. Add Kerkidas meliamb. 4. 24 ff. Powell = 2. 24 ff. Knox = 1. 16 ff. Diehl καὶ μὰν τὸ τάλαντον ὁ σεμνὸς | ἀστεροπαγερέτας | μέσσον τὸν Ὄλυμπον . . . . . | ὀρθὸν [τιταίνει] | [κ]αὶ νένευκεν οὐδαμᾷ. | καὶ τοῦθ' Ὅμηρος | εἶπεν ἐν Ἰλιάδι· | 'ῥέπει δ', ὅταν αἰσιμον ἄμαρ, | ἀνδράσι κυδαλίμοις [[ην]].' | πῶς οὖν ἐμὶν οὔποτ' ἔρεψεν | ὀρθὸς ὢν ζυγοστάτας; | τὰ δ' ἔσχατα Βρύγια Μυσῶν, | ἃξομαι δέ θην λέγειν, | ὅσον [πατα]γεῖ τὸ παρ' αὐτοῖς | τῶ Διὸς πλα[στ]ίγγιον with the notes of the three successive editors (I. U. Powell Collectanea Alexandrina Oxonii 1925 p. 204 ff., A. D. Knox in the Loeb ed. London 1929 p. 196 ff., E. Diehl Anthologia lyrica Graeca[2] Lipsiae 1936 i. 3. 123. Cp. E. A. Barber in New Chapters in the History of Greek Literature Oxford 1921 p. 6).

M. P. Nilsson Homer and Mycenae London 1933 p. 267 with fig. 56 claims that a Cypro-Mycenaean vase of c. 1300 B.C., found during the Swedish excavations in the upper burial stratum of chamber tomb no. 17 at Enkomi, represents 'Zeus taking the scales of destiny in order to determine the fate of the combatants, a famous scene of the Iliad,' etc. But Sir A. Evans The Palace of Minos London 1935 iv. 2. 659 n. 2 fig. 646 justly demurs. The scene is merely commercial, or at most a matter of ransom.

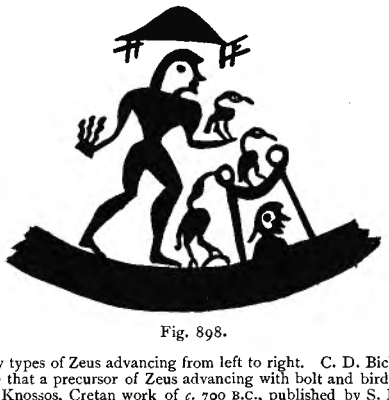

Fig. 898.

ii. 739 ff. early types of Zeus advancing from left to right. C. D. Bicknell suggests to me (Jan. 3, 1934) that a precursor of Zeus advancing with bolt and bird may be seen on a pithos-lid from Knossos, Cretan work of c. 700 B.C., published by S. Marinatos in the Jahrb. d. Deutsch. Arch. Inst. 1933 xlviii Arch. Anz. p. 311 figs. 20 and 21 (=my fig. 898), cp. T. B. L. Webster in the Journ. Hell. Stud. 1939 lix. 103 fig. 1. Pl. lxxxi is from a photograph procured for me from H. G. G. Payne through the kind offices of my old pupil Mr E. J. P. Raven. The lid shows a nude male figure advancing to the right with a triple lightning-fork in his right hand, a bird on his left. Before him is a tripod, on which is another bird with a third on a stone beside it. Beneath the tripod a human head rises from the ground (? as central support of the tripod: supra ii. 193). Marinatos comments: 'Es handelt sich wohl um eine mythologische Szene.' But it is possible that the 'tripod' was meant for an altar, and that the head seen on the face of it marks it as the altar of the advancing god. The interpretation is very uncertain.

A bronze statuette (height 0·165[m]: bright green patina), found near Epidauros (?), later in the Tyskiewicz and Dutuit collections, and now in the Petit Palais at Paris, represents a nude bearded male figure advancing to the right with his right arm raised and his left thrown forward—the whole on a bronze base inscribed HVBRI[S]STAS | EПOIESE. Peloponnesian work of 600—550 B.C. K. Wernicke in the Röm. Mitth. 1889 iv. 167 f., cp. p. 339 took the subject to be a young warrior with spear and shield. But most critics have assumed Zeus fulminant (W. Fröhner La collection Tyskiewicz Munich 1892 p. 18 pl. 21 (=my fig. 899) ('Un aigle perchait sur le revers de la main gauche du dieu; cette main est d'ailleurs perforée'), Reinach Rép. Stat. ii. 1 no. 2, A. Furtwängler Kleine Schriften München 1913 ii. 467 fig. 9, G. Lippold in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. ix. 33, A. Rumpf in D. H. Haas Bilderatlas zur Religionsgeschichte Leipzig 1928 xiii./xiv. p. ix fig. 116 ('um 460 v. Chr.'), W. Lamb Greek and Roman Bronzes London 1929 pp. 95 (c. 550 B.C.), 148 f., 153 pl. 32, a. Fröhner's facsimile of the inscription is repeated in Inscr. Gr. Pelop. i no. 1476).

Pithos-lid from Knossos, Cretan work of c. 700 B.C.:
Zeus advancing with triple lightning-fork and bird.

See page 1148 and page 1150 fig. 898.

Between April 1926 and September 1928 a magnificent bronze god was fished up piecemeal from a depth of more than 25 fathoms in the sea off Artemision. It seems to have formed part of the cargo on board a ship, which was carrying barrels of late

Fig. 899.

Hellenistic style from northern Greece towards Rome, but foundered in a gale off the upper end of Euboia. If so, the statue had probably been pillaged from some temple in Thessaly or Chalkidike or even Thrace. After careful cleaning from accretions and corrosions, the whole figure (c. 2·10^{m} high) proved to be a nude bearded god striding forwards with right arm drawn back and left arm outstretched—one of the most impressive of all Greek statues (Ch. Karouzos 'The Find from the Sea off Artemision' in the Journ. Hell. Stud. 1929 xlix. 141—144 figs. 1 and 2 pls. 7 and 8, id. ''Ο Ποσειδῶν τοῦ 'Αρτεμισίου' in the 'Αρχ. Δελτ. 1930—31 xiii. 41—104 figs. 1—42 pls. 1 (=my fig. 900)—5, H. G. Beyen La statue d'Artémision La Haye 1930 pp. 1—55 pls. 1—13 with further bibliography p. 1 n. 1). Several problems arise: (1) To what period, school, and sculptor should it be assigned? It belongs clearly to the later part of the transitional period when fighting-man developed into fighting-god (supra ii. 739 ff., 1222 f.) and may be dated c. 460 B.C. Beyen attributes it, on rather insufficient grounds, to the Sicyonian school; Karouzos, more explicitly, to the Sicyonian-Boeotian school of Kalamis. (2) Votive figure or cult-image? Hardly the latter. A cult-image should be strictly frontal: the worshipper expects to find a propitious and friendly presence, not to be met by a tremendous antagonist in the act of hurling a missile! (3) Zeus or Poseidon? The attitude would suit either, according as we assume thunderbolt or trident in the right hand. Karouzos and Beyen think that the fingers imply a cylindrical trident loosely held rather than a tightly grasped thunderbolt: yet we must remember that the Greek thunderbolt often had a rounded handle in the middle, to prevent the god burning himself. They note further that there is no trace of an eagle on the extended left hand, and that there is a marked resemblance to the head of Poseidon (certified as such by the trident over his shoulder) in a terra-cotta relief at Munich (Furtwängler Glyptothek zu München[2] p. 74 f. no. 62). On the other hand it must be admitted that the striding-warrior type points primarily to Zeus fulminant and only secondarily to Poseidon.

Fig. 900.

Indeed, Poseidon leaning on a trident, or striking with a trident, may be fairly frequent. But Poseidon hurling a trident is quite exceptional; and where he is so represented, as on the early silver coins of Poseidonia, he regularly wears a chlamýs over his arms. Also the head, with its neat plait twisted round trim locks, its long silky moustache, and its full beard with undulating strands, seems too refined and dignified for any deity beneath the rank of Zeus. I conclude that the originator of this remarkable type was deliberately portraying Poseidon in the guise of Zeus (cp. supra ii. 795 n. 3 figs. 762—764). After all, Poseidon was but a by-form of the greater god (supra p. 736). J. Jüthner, however, in the Ath. Mitth. 1937 lxii. 136—148 decides for an athlete hurling his akóntion!

Fig. 901.

ii. 741 Zeus Ithomátas. C. T. Seltman in the Cambridge University Reporter 1932 lxii. 799 claims that the Brussels tetradrachm of Zankle-Messana (supra ii. 794 f. fig. 757), 'which should be dated ca. 461 B.C., the year of liberation from the tyranny, has on the obverse a figure, not of Poseidon, but of Zeus fulminating (Num. Chron. 1883, p. 168) which closely resembles the Zeus Ithomatas on coins of Messenia from 369 B.C. onwards (B.M.C. Peloponnesus, Pl. xxii, 1, 6, 7, 10). Thus the Messanians of Zankle showed their sympathy with the Messenians, who in 461 were being besieged on Ithome. Apparently, therefore, Hagelaidas made the statue before 461, therefore at Ithome, and not at Naupactus after 455 B.C. This agrees with other dated works by the sculptor and does away with the need either for inventing a younger sculptor of the same name, or for assuming his unnatural longevity.'

ii. 745 n. 4. F. Matz 'Ein Zeuskopf in Villa Borghese' in the Jahrb. d. Deutsch. Arch. Inst. 1931 xlvi. 1—31 with figs. 1—21 and pls. 1 and 2 reaches the following conclusions (p. 31): 'der Zeuskopf Borghese ist der nächste Verwandte des Kasseler Apoll. Kopiert ist er nach einer Bronzestatue des stehenden Gottes, der mit der Linken das Zepter aufstützte und in der gesenkten Rechten den Blitz hielt. In demselben Verwandschaftsverhältnis wie zum Kasseler Apoll steht der borghesische Kopf zu dem des olympischen Zeus. Auch der Kasseler Apoll und der Zeus Borghese sind also Schöpfungen des Phidias. Jener ist in den fünfziger Jahren, dieser in dem Jahrzehnt zwischen 455 und 445 entstanden. Die engen Beziehungen, die zwischen dem olympischen Zeus und dem Zeus Borghese bestehen, sind entscheidend für die Frühdatierung des olympischen Zeus und für seinen Ansatz vor der Parthenos.'

Fig. 902.

ii. 746 n. 2 pl. xxxii, 1 silver statuette of Zeus. A. W. Van Buren in the Am. Journ. Arch. 1937 xli. 489 ff. fig. 6 (=my fig. 901) illustrates a silver bust of 'Jupiter,' which was found in 1924, in a crushed state, at a Roman station on the Little St Bernard ('Mons Minoris Jovis') together with a patterned silver ribbon and a figure of Hercules within the front of a small shrine, likewise of silver (P. Barocelli in the Not. Scavi 1924 p. 391). The bust has now been restored and installed in the Museum at Aosta. The thunderbolt in relief on the right side of the chest implies that the silversmith was copying some statue of the god with that attribute in his right hand.

ii. 748 f. beardless type of Zeus. T. Birt 'Anxius und Anxur' in Glotta 1927 xv. 118 discusses the epithet of the Volscian Iupiter Anxurus (on whom see E. Aust in Roscher Lex. Myth. ii. 640 fig., id. in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. i. 2653) and supports the derivation from ξέω, ἄξοος already given by Serv. in Verg. Aen. 7. 799 circa hunc tractum Campaniae colebatur puer Iuppiter, qui Anxyrus dicebatur, quasi ἄνευ ξυροῦ, id est sine novacula, quia barbam numquam rasisset, et Iuno virgo, quae Feronia dicebatur, cp. Akron in Hor. sat. 1. 5. 26 Anxur [autem] dictum, quod ibi inberbis Iuppiter colitur.

ii. 752 the eagle of Zeus. R. J. H. Jenkins (June 3, 1930) notes: 'With regard to eagles and Zeus, it is interesting to recall that some 3000—4000 B.C. A-anni-padda built a temple to the Earth Mother Nin-khursag at al 'Ubaid, and over the door flew the eagle of the sky-god, Im-dugud.' See C. L. Woolley The Sumerians Oxford (1929) p. 40 f. fig. 10.

ii. 754 n. 1 Tavium. P. Kretschmer in Glotta 1925 xiv. 304 derives the name of the town Tavium 'von einer vorphrygischen Stammform Tav-=Zeus, wie die bithynische Stadt Τλεῖον (Strabo [542 f., 565]), kontrahiert Tium (Τῖος Aelian [de nat. an. 15. 5], Τῖον Ptol. [5. 1. 7]) von der phrygischen Namensform Tiv-, armen. tiv "Tag"=gr. Δι̃ϝ-.'

ii. 757 n. 8 the chronology of Pheidias' career. Recent discussion by G. Lippold 'Das Ende des Phidias' in the Jahrb. d. Deutsch. Arch. Inst. 1923/24 xxxviii/ix. 152—155 (Pheidias was already at work on his Zeus c. 448, but may well have been simultaneously engaged upon his Athena), H. Schrader Phidias Frankfurt am Main 1924 p. 27 (his Zeus must be dated between c. 460 and 448, i.e. before his Athena), W. Judeich 'Zum "Pheidias-Papyrus"' in Hermes 1925 lx. 50—58 (rejects H. Schrader's view: holds that Pheidias finished his Athena in 438/7, retired to Elis in 433/2, and was at Olympia making his Zeus from 432 onwards), E. N. Gardiner Olympia Its History and Remains Oxford 1925 p. 240 f. (his Zeus should be dated 438—432, i.e. after his Athena), C. Picard in the Revue de l'histoire des religions 1926 xciii. 80 n. 3 (accepts the finding of H. Schrader), G. M. A. Richter The Sculpture and Sculptors of the Greeks Yale Univ. Press 1929 pp. 166—170 (the later dating of Zeus 'would seem to be the more likely,' but 'We must leave it an open question whether Pheidias left Athens in 438 or in 432'). The contest continues.

ii. 759 the marble statuette of Zeus at Lyons. Espérandieu Bas-reliefs de la Gaule Rom. iii. 46 f. no. 1810 with three views.

ii. 760 n. 2 throne-legs of white marble. Cp. the statue of Zeus (?) enthroned found in Delos (J. Chamonard in the Bull. Corr. Hell. 1933 lvii. 155 ff. fig. 16) and the statuette of Kybele enthroned from a neighbouring site (id. in Délos viii. 1. 220 with fig. 97).

ii. 760 f. Alexander's reversion to a pre-Pheidiac type of seated Zeus. One of the town-gates of Thasos, which can be dated 412—411 B.C., is adorned with an archaïsing relief (G. Mendel in the Bull. Corr. Hell. 1900 xxiv. 560—569 pls. 14 and 15 wrongly dated c. 470 and interpreted as Demeter with Iris, Nike, or Hebe. J. ff. Baker-Penoyre in the Journ. Hell. Stud. 1909 xxix. 223 says more correctly 'the fine relief of Zeus and Nike.' C. Picard 'La porte de Zeus à Thasos' in the Rev. Arch. 1912 ii. 43—76, id. 'Encore la porte de Zeus à Thasos' ib. 1912 ii. 385—398, id. in the Revue de l'histoire des religions 1926 xciii. 81 n. 1 recognises Zeus and Iris). Within a naïskos, the pediment of which is surmounted by an eagle with spread wings, sits Zeus on a throne with back, arm-rest, support in form of dancer (cp. supra p. 682 figs. 492, 493, p. 700 fig. 517), and footstool. He wears an Ionic chitón and himátion with formal pleats, holds a long sceptre in his left hand, and fingers a tress of hair with his right. Before him stands Nike, winged and wearing chitôn and himation.

ii. 764 ff. Modifications in the shape of the thunderbolt. E. Unger 'Dreizack' in Ebert Reallex. ii. 462 deals with the near East (Babylonia, Assyria, Syria, Asia Minor). G. Furlani 'Fulmini mesopotamici, hittiti, greci ed etruschi' in Studi Etruschi 1931 v. 203—231 is a careful and well-documented survey, but without illustrations.

At Râs eš-Shamrâ, 'Fennel Head,' the capital of ancient Ugarit,'some ten miles north of Laodikeia on the Syrian coast, Prof. Claude F. A. Schaeffer, Director of the French Archaeological Mission, in 1932 recovered from a small sanctuary 'in the western periphery of the great temple' a splendidly preserved stêle (1·45= high), which shows in champlevé relief Baal and, under his protection, a small man—probably a local king. Baal brandishes a club in his right hand and holds in his left a stylised thunderbolt of unique design. Above, it seems to be an elaboration of the bipartite fork with zig-zags. Below, it ends in a straight shaft and fine spear-head. The date appears to be s. xiv B.C. (C. F. A. Schaeffer in The Illustrated London News for Feb. 11, 1933 p. 212 with figs. 5 and 15 on pp. 178 and 181. Mlle M. Rutten in the Encyclopédie photographique de l'Art Le Musée du Louvre: Canaan, Phénicie Paris 1937 ii. 102 with fig. =my fig. 902

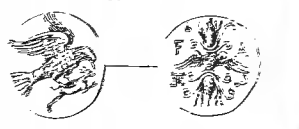

Fig. 903.

As to the thunderbolt on coins of Olympia, another specimen of the very rare 'fly'-type (supra ii. 781 pl. xxxvi, 5) is now in my collection. Mr C. T. Seltman informed me (April 26, 1934) that one or two examples of a late drachmê had come to light, on which the handle of the bolt took the shape of a small human head, perhaps Keraunos. I am indebted to Mr E. S. G. Robinson for the casts from which my fig. 903 was made. But I should prefer to describe the little facing head as a Gorgóneion, with obvious allusion to the aigis of Zeus aigiochos, and Mr Robinson (Sept. 7, 1938) agrees 'that the head is probably that of a gorgon.'

ii. 782 sacrifice to living animals on Greek soil. The goddess Boubrostis, to whom a black bull was sacrificed at Smyrna (Metrodoros of Chios (Frag. hist. Gr. iii. 205 Müller =frag. 3 (Frag. gr. Hist. i. 265 Jacoby) ap. Plout. symp. 6. 8. 1 ἐδόκει δ' ἡ βούβροστις ἕτεσον εἶναι (sc. τοῦ βοὸς) μόριον· τὸ δὲ τεκμήριον ἐλαμβάνομεν ἐκ τῶν Μητροδώρου Ἰασικέων. ἱστορεῖ γὰρ ὅτι Σμυρναῖοι τὸ παλαιὸν Αἰολεῖς ὄντες θύουσι βουβρόστει ταῦρον μέλανα καὶ κατακόψαντες αὐτὸν ὁλοκαυτοῦσιν) may well have been a personified Gaddîy (see W. Leaf on Il. 24. 532, but also O. Kern in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. iii. 933). An Athenian inscription of the early fourth century B.C. prescribes Κυσὶν πόσαια τρία (Michel Recueil d'Inscr. gr. no. 672, 9 . on which see U. von Wilamowitz-Moellendorff Isyllos von Epidauros Berlin 1886 and supra p. 1083.

ii. 784 Keraunos. C. Picard in the Revue de l'histoire des religions 1926 xciii. 81 n. 3 suggests that the small figure beneath the throne of Zeus on the gateway at Thasos (supra on ii. 760 f.) may be 'une personnification de la foudre.' Improbable.

ii. 788 n. 0. Two five-pronged forks, aptly illustrating the πεμπώβολα of Il. 1. 463= Od. 3. 460, were found in a 'Depotfund' of c. 1000 B.C. at Tecchiarello di Pariana in the province of Massa-Carrara and are now at Florence (F. von Duhn in Ebert Reallex. ii. 378 no. 118. id. 'Pempobolon' in the Jahrb. d. Deutsch. Arch. Inst. 1926 xli Arch. Anz. pp. 331—334 fig. 1).

ii. 789 ff. the trident as a lightning-fork. See now G. Furlani 'Sulla preistoria del tridente di Posidone' in Studi e Materiali di storia delle religioni 1932 viii. 42—47 with figs.

E. F. Coote Lake 'Shrove Tuesday in South Dalmatia' in Folk-Lore 1927 xxxviii. 371—375 describes the Carnival at Cattaro in 1922, when a young man wearing a black mask with sheep's horns and carrying a small black trident, about two feet long, leapt high in the air throughout the procession. Lake suggests (p. 374) that this was magic to make the crops grow high, and that the magician bore 'his old trident-thunderbolt as part of the fertility rites.' Possible, but precarious.

Sir John Marshall's discovery of a chalko-lithic civilisation on the Indus has enabled us now to trace the figure of Çiva back to a period c. 3000 B.C., when he appears as an ithyphallic god with bull's horns and a raised point between them. Sir John suggested to me in conversation that this arrangement of two curved horns and a central spike may have developed at a later date into Çiva's attribute the trident.

ii. 802. On Jan. 10, 1927 I saw two other specimens of the M. Herennius terra cotta belonging to Messrs W. S. Lincoln & Son. One of these corresponded closely with that described by Mr E. J. Seltman (supra ii. 1225) and was obviously modern. The other, of heavier make and devoid of the signature T. AF, represented three herms in juxtaposition—Poseidon, Zeus, Hades—all wearing kálathoi and each marked in front by his attribute. Was this M. Herennius the decurio of Pompeii who was struck by lightning on a cloudless day (Plin. nat. hist. 2. 137: F. Münzer in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. viii. 664)?

ii. 805 the Etruscan bidental. See further G. Furlani 'Il bidental etrusco e un' iscrizione di Tiglatpileser I d' Assiria' in Studi e Materiali di storia delle religioni 1930 vi. 9—49 (reviewed by G. B. Pighi in Aevum 1930 iv. 415—417 and by L. Banti in Studi etruschi 1931 v. 624).

ii. 807 n. 5 (5) astragalomanteía. E. Riess in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. ii. 1793 and T. Hopfner ib. Suppl. iv. 51—56. An article on 'Wurforakel' is promised for the 'Nachtrag' of vol. ix of the Handwörterbuch des deutschen Aberglaubens Berlin 1938— .

ii. 808 n. 0 (9) Zeus Keraúnios in Moesia Inferior. C. M. Danoff 'Eine neue Weihung an Zeus Keraunios aus Niedermoesien' in the Archiv f. Rel. 1936 xxxiii. 166—169 with

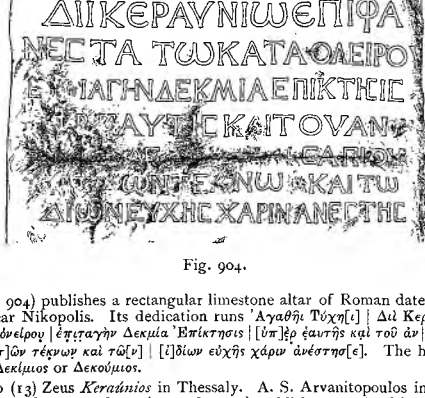

Fig. 904.

fig. (=my fig. 904) publishes a rectangular limestone altar of Roman date found in 1925 at Tirnovo near Nikopolis. Its dedication runs 'Αγαθῆι Τύχη[ι] | Διὶ Κεραυνίῳ 'Επιφα]νεστάτῳ κατὰ ὄνείρου | ἐπ̣ι̣τ̣αγὴν Δεκμία 'Επίκτησις | [ὑπ]ὲρ ἑαυτῆς καὶ τοῦ ἀν̣|[δρὸς] Δε.....υ Σαπίου | κα[ὶ τ]ῶν τέκνων καὶ τῶ[ν] | [ἐ]δίων εὐχῆς χάριν ἀνέστησ[ε]. The husband's name was perhaps Δεκίμιος or Δεκούμιος.

ii. 808 n. 0 (13) Zeus Keraúnios in Thessaly. A. S. Arvanitopoulos in the 'Αρχ. 'Εφ. 1924 pp. 143—146 no. 388 fig. 2 (=my fig. 905) publishes a stêle of local grey marble, found in the ruins of a temple of Zeus at Pythion (Topóliane) in Thessaly. This is inscribed in lettering of c. 200 B.C. or a little earlier [Δη or Τι]μοκράτης 'Αν[τι]π[άτ]ρο[υ] | [κα]τὰ ['Ε]π̣[ι]ν̣[ί]κη Παυσαν[ίου] | [Δ]ιὶ | Κε|ραυ|νίω and bears a relief representing Zeus as a bearded god, in a himátion, striding from left to right. His raised right hand brandishes a bolt; his outstretched left has an eagle on the forearm and appears to touch the apex of a tombstone, round which is bound a fillet painted purple. To the right of the tombstone stands Epinike, fully draped and perhaps carrying a phiále. Kern thought her a priestess, but Arvanitopoulos with more probability supposes that she was the wife of De(?)mokrates, that her husband had been killed by lightning, and that she put up this votive relief to avoid sharing in his fate.

ii. 808 n. 0 (17) Zeus Keraúnios at Rome. This inscription is included in the latest (1933) fascicule of the Corp. inscr. Lat. vi. 4 no. 36802.

ii. 811 n. 5 fig. 777. Furtwängler Ant. Gemmen i pl. 48, 4, ii. 4 comments: 'früher Sammlung Blacas...wohl Titus oder Domitian.'

ii. 812 fig. 778. C. T. Seltman in The Cambridge Ancient History Cambridge 1934 Plates iv. 144 fig. b speaks of 'a small Cupid (wing and lower part only preserved) helping to support the huge thunderbolt.' I see rather a Giant with snaky legs and curled wing. The Pergamene frieze had set the fashion.

ii. 814 n. 3 with fig. 780 the relief from Emesa. Similar reliefs have been found at Palmyra (Tadmor). H. A. Seyrig in the Jahrb. d. Deutsch. Arch. Inst. 1933 xlviii Arch. Anz. pp. 715—742 figs. 1—9 presents a preliminary report on the excavations carried out there by the French Department of Antiquities in 1930—1933 and supplements on many points the handsome work of T. Wiegand and his colleagues (Palmyra Berlin 1932 i. 1—171 with plan of town, ii pls. 1—100). It appears that the Palmyrene temple was dedicated on April 6, 32 A.D. to the triad Bel, Iaribol, and Aglibol. Somewhat later it was surrounded by four colonnades, on the north, east, and south by a double row of lower columns, on the west, where the main Propýlaion lay, by a single row of higher columns, all of the Corinthian order, but unfluted. Work began at the north-west angle in early Flavian times, and continued along the north, east, south, and west sides, reaching completion c. 150 A.D. Within this great quadrangle, some 200^{m} square, still stands on its broad podium a Corinthian pseudodipteral temple (8 × 15 columns, fluted) with the foundations of its altar on the north and its lustral basin on the south. It had originally two pediments and was quasi-Greek in plan, a north-to-south oblong with a door at the southern end. The plan, however, underwent sundry modifications. The southern door was built up. A fresh door was opened in the western side, south of its centre. A couple of ádyta was constructed at either end of the naós. The northern ádyton, with much mythological decoration, seems to have housed the páredroi of Bel—the sun-god Iaribol and the moon-god Aglibol. These names suggest that the principal Palmyrene god was properly called Bol, not Bel, the latter spelling being due to Babylonian influence. The southern ádyton, with simple geometric and plant designs, was possibly used for the lectisternium of the god. The roof of the northern ádyton is a square monolith hollowed out to form a dome, which is decorated with hexagonal compartments containing busts of the seven gods of the week—in the middle Iupiter, round him Sol, Mars, Luna, Venus, Saturnus, Mercurius—and ringed by the signs of the zodiac with four eagles in the spandrels. Bel was clearly conceived as a cosmic power. The lintel of the ádyton-door (cp. supra ii. 431) showed a great eagle with spread wings seen against a background of stars and flanked by Iaribol on the right and probably Aglibol on the left. On a level with the eagle's claws is a long snake, symbol of the sun's course, between six balls representing the other planets. Lastly, the space between the columns and the nadś-wall was spanned by a series of vertical slabs supporting the roof of the ptéron and carved with reliefs illustrative of the cult. The reliefs have been studied by H. A. Seyrig 'Bas-reliefs de la cella du temple de Bêl' in Syria 1933 xiv. 253—260 fig. 2 lintel, fig. 5 dome, id. 'Bas-reliefs monumentaux du temple de Bêl à Palmyre'

Fig. 905.

a b c

Fig. 906.

ib. 1934 xv. 155—186. One of them (ib. 1934 xv. 178—181 fig. 2) renders Iaribol in military dress, with rayed nimbus and sceptre, standing between Aglibol, likewise in military dress but with crescent horns and spear, and a fully draped goddess with sceptre (Beltis?)—a fairly close parallel to the relief from Emesa. Another (ib. 1934 xv. 173—178 pl. 22) shows Aglibol joining hands with a second and ill-preserved god over an altar set out with pine-cones, a pomegranate, and an apple, above which hovers an eagle bearing a snake (?) in its beak and a palm-branch in its talons. The scene takes place in a sanctuary marked by a cypress-tree etc. Fortunately a Palmyrene relief at Rome with a bilingual inscription enables us to name the second god Malachbelos (W. Helbig Führer durch die öffentlichen Sammlungen klassischer Altertümer in Rom[3] Leipzig 1912 i. 566 f. no. 988, Reinach Rép. Reliefs iii. 177 no. 5, Stuart Jones Cat. Sculpt. Pal. d. Conserv. Rome p. 257 f. Scala v no. 3 pl. 100. Inscr. Gr. Sic. It. no. 971 Ἀγλιβώλῳ καὶ Μαλαχβήλῳ πατρῴοις θεοῖς | καὶ τὸ σίγνον ἀργυροῦν σὺν παντὶ κόζμῳ ἀνέθηκ(ε) | Τ. Αὐρ(ήλιος) Ἡλιόδωρος Ἀντιόχου Ἀδριανὸς Παλμυρηνὸς ἐκ τῶν ἰδίων ὑπὲρ | σωτηρίας αὐτοῦ καὶ τ(ῆς) συμβίου καὶ τ(ῶν) τέκνων, ἔτους ζμφ (547 Seleucid era = 235 A.D.) μηνὸς Περιτίου) —another solar power (W. Drexler in Roscher Lex. Myth. ii. 2293—2301, K. Preisendanz in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. xiv. 824—828).

ii. 818 f. Zeus Zbelsoûrdos with snake. C. Picard in the Revue de l'histoire des religions 1926 xciii. 77 n. 3 cp. a small unpublished bronze in the Musée Saint-Pierre at Lyons, which portrays the god with a snake rolled round the arm that holds the thunderbolt. But does this betoken his aigís?

G. I. Katsarov in the Bulletin de l'Institut archéologique bulgare 1934 viii. 44—68 lists new dedications to deities, e.g. 'rough statues of...Zeus Zbelthiurdos, Kybele, Mithras, Dionysus, etc.' (D. M. Robinson in the Am. Journ. Arch. 1936 xl. 140).

ii. 823 n. 1 Dionysos as ἥρως? W. R. Halliday The Greek Questions of Plutarch Oxford 1928 p. 29 prints my emendation ἐλθεῖν ἥρ', ὦ Διόνυσε and p. 157 f. is 'inclined to welcome' it.

G. Seure 'ΝΕΟΣ ΗΡΩΣ, ΚΟΤΡΟΣ ΗΡΩΣ' in the Rev. Et. Gr. 1929 xlii. 241—254 discusses two sepulchral stêlai from Odessos (Varna), one inscribed 'Αγαθήνωρ 'Απατουρίου νέος ἥρως (fig. 1), the other 'Αρτεμίδωρος Νουμηνίου, | κοῦρος ἥρως [ὑμ]νωδός, χαῖρε (fig. 2).

ii. 824 ff. The whip of Zeus. L. Laistner Nebelsagen Stuttgart 1879 pp. 45, 160 f. already cites from German folk-lore proof that lightning was regarded as a long whip held by a fiery female form amid thunder-clouds, as a blue whip held by the storm-god, etc. Stegemann in the Handwörterbuch des deutschen Aberglaubens Berlin—Leipzig 1927 i. 1400 'Auch als Peitsche, Rute und Kugel in der Hand mythischer Gestalten dient der B[litz].'

ii. 833 n. 8 with fig. 793. See now Mendel Cat. Sculpt. Constantinople iii. 47 f. no. 842 fig. Id. ib. p. 48 ff. describes and illustrates a series of small altars dedicated to Zeus Brontôn: (1) p. 48 ff. no. 843 with three figs. (=my fig. 906) (Ineunu, early s. iii A.D.) 'Αγαθῇ Τύχῃ· ‖ Διὶ Βροντῶντι Ἐπη|κόῳ θεῷ Δαδᾶς Δαμᾶ | σὺν τοῖς τέκνοις Ὀ|νησίμῳ καὶ Διομᾶ | καὶ Χρυσίῳ ὑπὲρ τῶν | ἰδίων εὐχὴν ἀνέστησαν. Front: bust of Zeus facing, with large garland round head; below, Hermes with caduceus, purse, and ram before a wreathed altar, on which is perched an eagle with a leafy sprig in its beak. Back: rosette between horns; bull running to right uphill. Left side: two-handled vase with grape-bunches; two bucrania with frontlets above plough. Right side: traces of bust with radiate nimbus. (2) p. 50 f. no. 844 fig. (Ineunu, early s. iii A.D.). Front: rosette and the inscription 'Αγαθῇ Τύχῃ· | Διὶ Βροντῶν|τι Μέννης Θ|άλλου σὺν τέ|κνοις κατὰ ἐ|παιταγὴν ἀν|έστησαν. Back: bust of god, bearded (?); eagle on wreath, below which is inscribed Διὸς Μεγίστου. Sides: rosette above bucranium. (3) p. 51 f. no. 845 fig. (Gumbet, s. iii A.D.) 'Αγαθ[ῇ Τύχῃ· | Δ[ιὶ Βρο]ντῶντι Μέν[ης] | [ἔ]στησεν κατὰ κέλευ|[σιν] τοῦ θεοῦ. Front: crescent; half-length bust of Zeus with short beard and long hair, eagle on right shoulder. Back: two bucrania above plough. Left side: rounded vase above thunderbolt. Right side: rounded vase with two handles, vine-branch. Supra ii. 836.

S. Ferri 'Nuovi monumenti plastici dello Zeus di Bitinia' in Historia 1932 vi. 238—273 starts from a bust of coarse-grained Asiatic marble (figs. 1—3) and a similar head (fig. 4) in the Museum at Brussa (Prousa). Both are third-century effigies of Zeus, comparable with a head at Berlin (fig. 5) and with the inscribed bust of Zeus Brontôn in the British Museum (fig. 6=supra ii. 837 fig. 794). Ferri goes on to consider analogous heads in later art, e.g. the silver bust of Zeus from Little St Bernard (fig. 7 unrestored, supra p. 1153 fig. 901 restored), which he regards as descended from the original type of the Bithynian Zeus.

But by far the most important contribution to our knowledge of Zeus Brontôn is the painstaking study by C. W. M. Cox and A. Cameron in Monumenta Asiae Minoris antiqua Manchester Univ. Press 1937 v pp. xxxiv—xliv. These two scholars in the course of a four-weeks vacation (March 26—April 21, 1931) traversed the districts of Dorylaeion and Nakoleia, and catalogued there no fewer than 323 monuments, 282 for the first time. Among the new finds are 56 dedications to Zeus Brontôn: and a useful conspectus of previously published inscriptions is added by way of appendix (pp. 172—176). À propos of 'sepulchral-dedicatory inscriptions' the authors comment (p. xxxvii): 'It is curious that nowhere else in Asia Minor should epitaphs explicitly combined with dedications have been found or epitaphs concealed beneatb dedications have been reasonably suspected; that the area should be virtually identical with that of the Zeus Bronton cult; and that Zeus Bronton, though by no means monopolising the dedications of the region and very far from dominating the coin-types, should virtually monopolise the dedicatory epitaphs....It may well be that the explicit dedication of the grave to the god was here thought to be the most effective means of rendering it inviolable, and that Zeus Bronton receives the dedications, not only as the most prominent local deity, but as the god who made his presence felt most potently and whose wrath might most drastically strike down the impious or, by drought or storm, devastate their means of livelihood.' But Cox and Cameron 'regard it as still open to question whether Zeus Bronton was a chthonic deity' (p. xliii) and urge that inscription no. 225 (Seyit Gazi (Nakoleia)) Θεοῖς Κα|<κα>ταχθο|νίοις καὶ | Διὶ Βρον Ὄ|τῶντι Ὄ 'need not imply any intimate connection' between him and the Θεοὶ Καταχθόνιοι, though they hasten to add: 'None the less, if only from his constant association with the tomb, Zeus Bronton no doubt came to be conceived as having a chthonic aspect' (p. xliii). They demur (ib.), perhaps rightly, to my contention that he was served with mystic rites in a cave (supra ii. 836 ff. ἐξ αὐλῆς, speleum), and note (p. xli) that he and Apollon 'may have been σύνναοι θεοί' (nos. 173 Ayvacik, 181 Kuyucak). Lastly, they dissent from Sir W. M. Ramsay's view that Zeus Brontôn was called 'the Father god' and 'the Victorious Father' (supra ii. 836). In inscription no. 232 from Seyit Gazi (Nakoleia) - - - - | Δὶ Βροντῶν|τι εὐχὴν | καὶ πατρὶ θε|ῶ 'it seems probable that, as Körte thought (A.M. xxx, 1900, p. 442), ll. 3—4 link to the dedication to Bronton an epitaph to the dedicator's father, now dead and deified, and not a further dedication to a deity known to the citizens of Nacolea as Πατὴρ Θεός' (p. 111). 'Even in the Nacolean village dedication Νεικάνωρ καὶ Τα[τ]εις Διὶ Βροντῶντι καὶ Νεικήτορι πατρὶ (Ann. dell' Inst. xxxiii, 1861, p. 188, no. 38, at Ayvali)... we incline (partly owing to the resemblance of the names) to see in Νεικήτορι πατρί the deceased father of Neikanor... and not a god Νεικήτωρ Πατήρ' (p. 112).

ii. 836. On Zeus as 'Hearer of Prayer' see the valuable article by O. Weinreich 'ΘΕΟΙ ΕΠΗΚΟΟΙ' in the Ath. Mitth. 1912 xxxvii. 1—68 (especially pp. 23—25) and an interesting supplement to it by the same author in his Gebet und Wunder Stuttgart 1929 pp. 200—204 ('Die θυρίδες am Himmel, beim Ort der Gebetsaudienzen. Eine Interpretation von Lukian, Ikaromenippos 23 ff.').

ii. 838 Dionysos Brómios. C. Picard in the Revue de l'histoire des religions 1926 xciii. 83 n. 2 would explain the appellative by a reference to R. Pettazzoni I misteri Bologna (1925) pp. 1—40 ('Il rombo').

ii. 838 ritual enthronement. See now A. D. Nock in the Journ. Hell. Stud. 1926 xlvi. 47 f. ('Thronosis').

ii. 854 n. 9. To the bibliography of Kleanthes' Hymn add E. Neustadt 'Der Zeushymnos des Kleanthes' in Hermes 1931 lxvi. 387—401 (in line 4 is content with T. Bergk's cj. ὅλου), A. S. Way Hymns of Callimachus with the Hymn of Kleanthes in English verse London 1934 p. 35 f., M. Meunier Hymnes philosophiques d'Aristote, Cléanthe et Proclus Paris 1935 pp. 1—116.

ii. 859 ff. Kairos. A. A. Papadopoulos 'Καιρός' in the Ἐπετηρὶς Ἑταιρείας Βυζαντινῶν Σπουδῶν 1927 iv. 251—256 is summarised by G. Soyter in the Berl. philol. Woch. Sept. 22, 1928 pp. 1168 (Papadopoulos explains Καιρός 'als den Boten des Patriarchen, der dem Kaiser meldete, dass es "Zeit" sei, in die Hagia Sophia zu gehen. Später habe καιρός in der kirchlichen Sprache die Bedeutung "Erlaubnis (zum Messelesen)" angenommen').

ii. 861 fig. 799. The fragmentary replica at Athens is included in O. Walter Beschreibung der Reliefs im Kleinen Akropolismuseum in Athen Wien 1923 p. 74 no. 125 fig. Another, better preserved, was found at Tragurium (Trogir) in Dalmatia in 1928 and is published by M. Abramić 'Ein neues Kairos-Relief' in the Jahresh. d. oest. arch. Inst. 1930 xxvi. 1—8 pl. 1 with figs. 2 and 4. A relief at Petrograd is similar, but has the bearded type of Kairos (E. Curtius in the Arch. Zeit. 1876 xxxiii. 8 pl. 2, 1 condemns it as a forgery, Reinach Rép. Reliefs iii. 490 no. 3).

ii. 863 n. 1 fig. 801. H. Volkmann 'Studien zum Nemesiskult' in the Archiv f. Rel. 1928 xxvi. 298 no. 4 with fig. 2.

ii. 869 n. 2 Zeus Aktaios on Mt Pelion. The alleged discoveries of A. S. Arvanitopoulos stand in much need of verification. On June 27, 1934 Dr N. Bachtin wrote to me from Athens to say that early in May he had visited Pliassídi and found the place indicated by Arvanitopoulos 'still covered with deep snow.' Dr Bachtin continues: 'The peribolos was nowhere visible (though I cannot absolutely assert that it does not exist, since it might have been under the snow). Moreover, there is not a single sherd anywhere round to suggest the idea of a site that has ever been built on. Three weeks later I returned there with Mr Wade-Gery of Wadham. There was still too much snow to allow a thorough examination, but all that could be seen fully confirmed my suspicions, and Mr Wade-Gery agreed with me entirely. After that, I had the opportunity of meeting in Volo Giannopoulos...and mentioned my fears to him. He too expressed the gravest doubts as to the reliability of the results claimed by Arvanitopoulos.' With praiseworthy persistence Dr Bachtin visited Pliassídi yet again in the summer, when the snow had melted, and camped there for some time. He reports (Dec. 11, 1938): 'I found that the site I had examined with Wade-Gery in the spring was not the one which Arvanitopoulos meant: the supposed temple site is just above it—on the very summit marked 1548 on the Greek staff map. The shallow cave, or rather hole, is just below the trig. point and there seem to be some traces of a wall running from summit 1548 towards the lower summit marked 1529. There are also bits of tile... That is all, so that my conclusion remains substantially the same: Arvanitopoulos' sketch of his "excavation" is pure invention.'

ii. 874 n. 2 Zeus Karaïos. A. Plassart in the Bull. Corr. Hell. 1926 l. 399 ff. no. 17 gives the text of the dedication from Thespiai (supra on ii. 727) τοὶ σύσ[αστ]αι Διὶ | Καραιῶι ἀνέθεαν | Πούθων | Σόλων | Ἡνεσίδαμος | Δαμοτέλες | Διονύσιος | Μένες | Ἀντιφάων | Ἀρίστανδρος. He cp. a stèle from Akraiphia, now at Thebes (inv. no. 957), inscribed ἰαρὸν | Διὸς | Κεραιῶ and perhaps another from the same town inscribed Κεραιῶ (P. Perdrizet in the Bull. Corr. Hell. 1898 xxii. 253 no. 7 had transcribed it as Κεραιώ).

ii. 875 n. 1 (1). E. Sittig should have said Erythrai, not Smyrna (L. Robert in the Bull. Corr. Hell. 1933 lvii. 472 n. 5).

ii. 876 n. 1 Zeus Hýpsistos. Further evidence includes the following items: (5 a) Sparta. A. M. Woodward in the Ann. Brit. Sch. Ath. 1923—1924; 1924—1925 xxvi. 222—224 publishes three dedications on small marble altars, perhaps used as building material, in the theatre at Sparta: no. 16 Διὶ | Ὑψίστῳ | Νεικέρως | εὐχ[ήν], no. 17 Διοκλῆ[ς] | Διὶ Ὑψίστῳ | εὐχήν, no. 18 Ἀφροδεισί[ος δοῦλος] | Κλαυ. Πρατο[λάου τοῦ Βρα[σί]δου Διὶ Ὑ[ψ]|-[ίστῳ εὐχήν] with an epigram restored by A. Wilhelm θρησκεί[αισιν ὑ]περμε[γά]λα[ισιν τόνδ' ἀνέθηκα,]‖ ὄφρα τις | εἰς ἐμὸν | ἦθος ἐσ[αθρήσας | [ἀγορεύοι· (or ἀγορεύῃ·)]‖ "τοίων | γὰρ μερ[όπων καὶ | [γε]νεὴ [θαλέθει (or θαλερή)]."

(9) Makedonia. C. Avezou—C. Picard in the Bull. Corr. Hell. 1913 xxxvii. 100 no. 8 (a broken slab of white marble at Thessalonike) Θεῶι Ὑψίστωι κατ' ἐπιταγὴν ΙΟΥΕ⊏ ('L'existence d'une colonie juive à Thessalonique dans l'antiquité [Acts 17. 1] fait supposer que le Θεὸς Ὕψιστος est ici, comme en d'autres cas, le Jahvé des Hébreux'). This grafting of Jewish henotheism on to a Greek stem is comparable with St Paul's treatment of the dedication Ἀγνώστῳ Θεῷ (Acts 17. 23). C. F. Edson in the Harvard Theological Review 1936 xxix. 62 n. 53 reports that Ch. I. Makatonas has found more Zeus Hýpsistos inscriptions at Kozani in Makedonia.

(10) Thrace. G. Bakalakis in Θρακικά 1935 vi. 302 ff. = Rev. Arch. 1937 ii. 385 no. 168 (Tsari near Cavalla) Διὶ Ὑψίστοι εὐχαρισ[τή]|ριον κ.τ.λ. on behalf of Rhoimetalkas iii.

(11 a) Dacia. C. Daicoviciu 'Contributions au syncrétisme religieux à Sarmizegetusa' in the Anuarul Universitatea Cluj, Publ. Instit. Studii clasice 1928—1932 i. 81—88 publishes seven inscriptions on altars found at Sarmizegetusa illustrating syncretism. 'Thus we have an altar to Invicto Deo Serapidi, another where Sol Invictus (Mithras) is included in a list of Roman deities, Θεῷ Ὑψίστῳ ἐπηκόῳ [p. 85 no. 3 Θεῷ Ὑψίστῳ Ἐπηκόῳ εὐχαριστοῦσα ἀνέθηκ(εν) Αἰλία Κασσία], Fortunae Daciarum, etc.' (D. M. Robinson in the Am. Journ. Arch. 1933 xxxvii. 135).

(17) Karia. Iasos (B. Haussoullier in the Bull. Corr. Hell. 1884 viii. 456 no. 4 a white marble boundary stone Διὸς | Ὑψίστου). Mylasa (A. W. Persson ib. 1922 xlvi. 414 no. 18 L Δ | Διὶ | Ὑψίστω[ι]). Stratonikeia (A. Laumonier ib. 1934 lviii. 337 no. 21 fig. 21 [Δ]ιεὶ Ὑψί[σ]τω καὶ Θ[ε]|ῶ Ἀγαθῶ | Σοκράτη[ς]—a striking combination of appellatives).

(19) Delos. For the uplifted hands of my fig. 817 C. Picard in the Revue de l'histoire des religions 1926 xciii. 92 n. 0 cites F. Cumont in the Atti della Pontificia Accademia romana di archeologia Serie iii Memorie 1923 i. 1 'Il sole vindice dei delitti ed il simbolo delle mani alzate' pp. 65—80.

A. Plassart in Délos xi. 289—293 ('Le sanctuaire de Zeus Hypsistos') includes fig. 234 ground-plan, figs. 235 and 236 views, fig. 237 four leaden 'figurines d'envoûtement' found in the precinct, and one inscription on a white marble block Ποσ[ῆς] Ποσι[δ]ωρ[ί]ου | [δς ἐποίει?] τὸν περίβολον | [καὶ τὰ ἐν] αὐτῶι χρησ[τήρια Διὶ Ὑψίστῳ καὶ | θεοῖς οἷς τοὺς βωμοὺς | ἱδρύσατο ἀνέθηκεν.

(23) Phrygia. Sir W. M. Ramsay Asianic Elements in Greek Civilisation London 1927 pp. 182—189 devotes a chapter to 'The Waggon (Benna)' and again concludes (p. 188): 'The god on the car, Benneus or Zeus Bennios, was the peasant-god, the trainer of men in the art of agriculture. He lives in legend as Gordius, whose ox-drawn car was preserved as a holy relic at the Phrygian Gordion' [Swoboda in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. vii. 1590 f. A. Körte Gordion (Jahrb. d. kais. deutsch. arch. Inst. Ergänzungsheft v) Berlin 1904 p. 16 already claims that the famous waggon was first meant for Zeus [cp. supra i. 338 n. 2] and later transferred to the 'Bauernkönig' Gordios].

(23 a) Pisidia. Suppl. epigr. Gr. vi no. 550 Saghir ὁ αὐτὸς Σκύμνος καὶ ἔτι | ἐπικαταλεί|πω τῇ κώμῃ | (δηνάρια) ρ' ἐκ τόκου ‖ γείνεσθαι βέ<ν>|νος Διὶ Καλα|καγαθίῳ ὑ|πὲρ καρπῶν. This bequest was first published by Sir W. M. Ramsay Studies in the History and Art of the Eastern Provinces of the Roman Empire London 1906 p. 345 no. 25 (id. in the Journ. Hell. Stud. 1912 xxxii. 162 no. 25), then discussed by J. Zingerle in the Akademie der Wissenschaften in Wien Phil.-hist. Klasse Anzeiger 1923 pp. 61—63 no. 2 (proposing βέ|(κ)ος for ΒЄ|ΝΟC), and lastly defended by Sir W. M. Ramsay in the Journ. Hell. Stud. 1933 liii. 317 no. 550.

(25) Paphlagonia. E. Kalinka in the Jahresh. d. oest. arch. Inst. 1933 xxviii Beiblatt pp. 64—66 no. 13 with fig. 31 publishes the 'Vogelfels' at Kushkaja near Amastris. An artificially smoothed rock-wall is here decorated with ambitious carvings worked in very high relief. From the top of rock-cut steps rise two rock-cut bases side by side. That on the left supports a column c. 2^{m} high, on which an eagle c. 2^{m} high but now headless sits with spread wings. That on the right supports an arched distyle niche, within which stands a male figure clad in a toga but minus his head. The base below the eagle-column is inscribed Θεῶι Ὑψίστωι | Ἐπηκό[ω]ι Ἡλ[ίω]ι | εὐ[ερκῆ? ἑδ]ραν | [κ]αὶ [τὸν ἀε?]τ[ὸν...] | τ[α]ῖο[ν - - -] | [- - - -]. Above the arched niche is a tabula ansata with a longer inscription beginning ὑπὲρ τῆ[s] Σε[βα]σ[τ]ῆς εἰ[ρήνης καὶ] εἰs | τὴν τειμὴ[ν] Χ [Τ]ι[β]ε[ρί]ου Κ[λα]υ[δ]ίου Γε[ρμα]ν[ικοῦ] | Καίσ[α]ρο[s] Σε[β]α[σ]τοῦ ὁ τοῦ ἐ[π]ου[ρα]ν[ίου θε]ο[ῦ] | Σε[βασ]τοῦ [ἀρχιε-ρε]ὼ[s] κ.τ.λ. A neighbouring inscription in both Latin and Greek (Corp. inscr. Lat. iii Suppl. no. 6983 = Dessau Inscr. Lat. sel. no. 5883) shows that the dedicator was G. Iulius Aquila (nomen omen) 'divi Augusti perpetuus sacerdos,' and dates his dedication to the year 45 A.D.

(29) Syria. Doura on the Euphrates. C. Hopkins in P. V. C. Baur—M. I. Rostovtzeff The Excavations at Dura-Europos Second Season 1928—1929 Yale Univ. Press 1931 pp. 86—90 fig. 2 publishes an inscribed stone slab found within the tower of the temple of the Palmyrene gods on what appears to have been the site of an older sanctuary ἔτους βοὺ | μηνὸs Δίου | περὶ δ' ὥραν ἠμε|ρινὴν σεισμοῦ | κατὰ τὴν χώραν | γενομένου ἡ | πόλις τὸν βωμὸν ἀνήγειρεν | Μεγίστωι Διί. The exact date of the earthquake would thus be about 10 o'clock in the morning of Oct. 26/7, 160 A.D. Hopkins cp. the votive inscription of Byblos for escape from an earthquake (R. Dussaud in the Rev. Arch. 1896 i. 299 on a stone altar [Διὶ Σω]τηρὶ | Ἀπολλόδω|ρος Νίκωνο(s) | ἀπὸ σεισμοῦ | διασωθεὶs ἀν|έ|θηκεν), and adds: 'from the north wall of the pronaos come two graffiti to greatest Zeus scratched near the person to the right in the scene of the Roman tribune sacrificing' (F. Cumont Fouilles de Doura-Europos (1922—1923) Paris 1926 p. 387 f. no. 25 Διὸs Μεγίστου, | [Ἠ]στία? and below Διὸs Με[γί]στ[ου] with col. pl. 50). See further R. Cagnat —M. Besnier in the Rev. Arch. 1931 ii. 369 no. 114, A. M. Woodward in the Journ. Rom. Stud. 1933 xxiii. 93. M. Rostovtzeff Dura-Europos and its Art Oxford 1938 p. 65 (cp. pp. 36 and 44 with pl. 6 plans and restoration by H. Pearson) sums up: 'Zeus Megistos was probably the interpretatio graeca of one of the local Semitic names of the great sky god. He succeeded in all probability in this temple to the great Greco-Macedonian god Zeus Olympius. His synnaos theos in this temple and his acolyte was the Arabian light and caravan god Arsu.'

Damaskos. R. Mouterde in Syria 1925 vi. 246—252 no. 33 pl. 33, 2^{a} and 2^{b} publishes an altar of Zeus Mánaphos found somewhere in the Haurān and now at Damaskos. The basalt block bears in high relief of c. s. iv A.D. a half-length bust of the deity, who is beardless and has curling locks like a sun-god, a Syrian collar, and Greek drapery. Front: Ζεῦ Μά|ναφε, μ[ί]|ξον[α τὴ]|[ν τύχην]. Left side: Ζεῦ Μ[άνα]φ[ε], | μίξονα τὴν | τύχην. | Β(?)ούμνο|s Ἰνάθης | εὐσεβῶs | βιώσας | [ἀ]νέθηκε. Cp. Corp. inscr. Lat. iii. 1 no. 3668 = Dessau Inscr. Lat. sel. no. 4349 (Aquincum or, more probably, Carnuntum) dis patris Ma|lalpho et Thean|drio pro sal. | dd. nn., | Cl. Victorinus | eq. coh. Ð Canprag. | et Cl. Maximus fil., | dom. Can., v. s. l. l., where J. H. Mordtmann in the Zeitschrift der Deutschen Morgenländischen Gesellschaft 1875 p. 106 n. 1 rightly cj. Manapho. T. Nöldeke in J. Hastings Encyclopædia of Religion and Ethics Edinburgh 1908 i. 662ᵇ says: 'The name Manāt, "height," "high place," is also a kind of abstract noun. That Manāt was worshipped as a god [among the ancient Arabs] is proved by the testimony of a verse, and is confirmed by the occurrence of the name 'Abd Manāt, which was especially common at Mecca and among the neighbouring tribe of Hudhail.' See further W. Drexler in Roscher Lex. Myth. ii. 2309 f., K. Preisendanz in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. xiv. 971.

(30) Phoinike. M. Pillet 'Le Temple de Byblos' in Syria 1927 viii. 105—112 gives a ground-plan (pl. 28) and views (pls. 29 and 30) of the famous temple, excavated in June 1926. R. Dussaud ib. pp. 113—125 discusses its restoration (fig. 2 after a coin of Macrinus).

(33) Aigyptos. C. Roberts—T. C. Skeat—A. D. Nock 'The gild of Zeus Hypsistos' in the Harvard Theological Review 1936 xxix. 39—89 publish with elaborate and valuable commentary a papyrus sheet of the late Ptolemaic period (c. 69—58 B.C.) containing regulations for the gild with its election of an annual president, its monthly banquet in the sanctuary of Zeus, its standing orders, etc.: 3 ff. ἀγαθῆι τύχηι. | νόμοs δν ἔθεντο [κα]τὰ κοινὸν οἱ ἐκ τῆs τοῦ Διὸs Ὑψίστου συνόδου τοῦτον εἶναι κύριον, | καὶ ποιοῦντεs καθὶ διαγ[ρ]έγει πρῶτον μὲν προχειρισάμενοι ἐπ' ἐαυτῶν | ἡγούμενον Πετεσοῦ[χον] Τεφθέννιος, ἄνδρα λόγιον, τοῦ τόπου καὶ τῶν ἀνδρῶν | ἄξιον, εἰs ἑ[ν]|αυτὸν [ἀπὸ τοῦ] προ[γ]εγ[ρ]αμένου μηνὸs καὶ ἡμέρας συνειφ[ό]ρ[όι]ρ[οι]s δὲ πᾶσι π[υείσθ]ε κατὰ μῆνα πόσι[ν] μίαν ἃ ἐν τῶι τοῦ Διὸs | *ἱερῶι ἐν αἷs ἐν ἀνδ[ρῶνι] κοινῶι σ[π]ένδοντεs εὐχεσθωισαν καὶ τἄλλα τὰ νο|μιζό[μεν]α ὑπέρ τε τ[ο]ῦ θεο(ῦ) καὶ κυρίο(υ) βασιλέωs· ὑπακούσειν δὲ πάντας τοῦ τε ἡγουμ[έ]νου καὶ τ[οῦ]

τούτου ὑπηρέτου ἐν τε ταῖς ἀγήκουσι τῶι κοινῶι καὶ παρέσονται ἐπὶ τὰ[ς] | δοθει[σομ]έναις αὐτοῖς παραγγελίας καὶ [σ]υνλόγους καὶ συναγωγὰς καὶ ἀποδημί[ας] | καὶ μ[η]δ[δ]ενὶ αὐτῶν ἐξέστω συντεγματαρχήσειν μηδὲ σχίματα συνίστασ[θαι] | μηδ' ἀπ[ο]χωρήσε[ιν ἐκ] τῆς τοῦ ἡγ[ου]μένου φράτρας εἰς ἑτέραν φράτραν | καὶ μὴι γ[ε]γεαλογ[ήσειν ἕ]τερος τὸν ἕτερον ἐν τῶι συμποσίωι μηδὲ κακο]λογ[ήσειν] ἕτερος [τὸν] ἕτερον ἐν τῶι συμποσίωι μηδὲ λαλήσειν μη|δὲ ἐπ[ικα]λήσειν καὶ μὲ κατηιγορή[σ]ειν [[α]] τοῦ ἑτέρου μηδὲ ἀπόρρησιν | διδ[όναι] ἐπὶ τὸν ἐνι[αυτ]ὸν καὶ μηδ' ἀ[φα]γιεῖν τὰς συμποσίας μηδὲ ἐπέργεσ|θ·[·]· γ[.][.]πον εκτολ( ) [μη]ι̣δ' ἀποκλέψειν τ ἑτεραν καὶ μὴι κωλύσειν τὸν | κ.τ.λ.

ii. 890 n. 2 Mt Taygeton. D. W. Freshfield Below the Snow Line London 1923 pp. 124—128 describes his ascent of this mountain (7874 ft.): 'The highest top of Taygetus lies some twelve miles south-south-west of Sparta. The peasants who make a pilgrimage annually to the chapel on the summit in the month of August follow a path which climbs to the village of Anavryti, on the middle shelf of the mountain, and then slants upwards to a gap in one of the spurs and across the upper slopes to the saddle north of the culminating crest....The top of Taygetus has been curiously treated. When I reached what had from a distance looked like a dilapidated stone man it proved to be the ridge of the roof of a small chapel. The rest was buried under snow-drifts, which choked up a little stone enclosure and several cells built round it....I envied the pilgrims who watch sunsets and moonrises here in August. It was just mid-day when I arrived, and local mists were playing round the mountain, which promised, and before long produced, a brief thunder shower. The distant panorama was imperfect; but I saw a great deal under beautiful shifting lights. To the north the eyes overlooked all Peloponnesus to the vapours that rested on its northern heights. To the west the green hills of Messenia glowed in sunshine; its great bay swept round in a wonderful curve, and beyond lay Pylos and the distant islands. At our very feet a little town hung over its haven, a tiny bay of the Gulf of Kalamata. To the south the long promontory of Cape Matapan stretched out, peak beyond peak, all far below me. A transparent opalescent mist hid Crete, but only veiled Cythera.'

ii. 894 n. 3 Zeus Hellánios. J. P. Harland Prehistoric Aigina Paris 1925 pp. 27—29. 40 f., 53, 55 f., 67, 82 ff. attributes the cult of Zeus Hellánios to Achaeans of the period Helladic iii (1400—1100 B.C.). Summary by S. Reinach in the Rev. Arch. 1927 i. 252.

J. P. Harland 'An Inscribed Hydria in Aegina' in the Am. Journ. Arch. 1925 xxix. 76—78 fig. 1 f. publishes a bronze hydría found by L. Curtius (1906) in an ancient cistern high up on Mt Oros. Round the rim of this beautiful vessel runs a dedication in lettering of c. 470 B.C. ΠΛΑΘΟΝ : ΕΚΕΣΘΕΝΕΣ : ΑΝΕΘΕΝ : ΗΥΙΟΙ : ΠΡΟΚΛΕΟΣ : ΗΕΛΛΑΝΙΟΙ : ΔΙΙ 'Plathon (and) Echesthenes, sons of Prokles, dedicated (this) to Hellánios Zeus.' Id. Prehistoric Aigina Paris 1925 p. 83 adds: 'Professor Ludwig Curtius wrote me that a roof tile with several letters of the god's name had been found on this site.'

G. Welter 'Der Heilige Berg des Zeus Hellanios' in the Jahrb. d. Deutsch. Arch. Inst. 1938 liii Arch. Anz. pp. 8—16 republishes this hydría (fig. 3 f.) and goes on to describe his own excavations of August 1933. He laid bare a terrace, approached by steps and partly cut out of the rocks, on the northern slope of the Oros (fig. 5 f.). On the terrace are the foundations of a hostel for pilgrims, which could be dated by sherds of 'Megarian' bowls, to the Pergamene period of Aigina (210—133 B.C.). The actual altar of Zeus Hellánios occupied the highest point of the Oros, where there had been a Late Mycenaean settlement (fig. 7 plan). The summit on its west and south sides was partially encircled by a retaining wall and built up to form a round platform comparable with the γῆς χῶμα (Paus. 8. 38. 7) on the top of Mt Lykaion (supra i. 81 ff.). It was further equipped in Hellenistic times with hostels and stoaí, suggestive of games perhaps held below on the level at the foot of the terrace. Bronze coins of Pergamene date, struck either at Pergamon or more probably in Aigina, have obv. the head of Aiakos, rev. A I | Γ I | N H nude archaic Apollon advancing to right with filleted bay-branch and strung bow (Brit. Mus. Cat. Coins Attica etc. p. 145 pl. 26, 4 f., H. Thiersch 'Äginetische Studien' in the Nachr. d. Gesellsch. d. Wiss. Göttingen Phil.-hist. Classe 1928 pp. 141—147 pls. 1—3). Aiakos was appropriate as the forefather both of the Aeginetans and, through Pergamos, of the Pergamenes. G. Welter Aigina Berlin 1938 includes p. 91 f. a brief chapter on 'Die Kultstätte des Zeus Hellanios auf dem Oros' and p. 122 the 'Fasti' of the site. The Late Mycenaean settlement on the summit was vacated c. 1225 B.C. 'Geometric' sherds found there imply the arrival of the cult, which thenceforward was kept up throughout the whole classical period. The lay-out of the terrace and the building of its hostel may be dated c. 170 B.C. From the ruins of this building, in Byzantine times, was constructed the monastery of St Nikolaos. That in turn was left derelict in the middle ages, and is now succeeded by the church of the Taxiarchs.

ii. 895 n. 1 Zeus Aphésios. On the cults of Zeus at Megara—Zeus Olýmpios (Paus. 1. 40. 4), Aphésios (1. 44. 9), Kónios (1. 40. 6), with the Muses (1. 43. 6)—see now E. L. Highbarger The History and Civilization of ancient Megara Pt i (The Johns Hopkins University Studies in Archaeology No. 2) Baltimore 1927 pp. 41—43. K. Hanell Megarische Studien Lund 1934 pp. 79—82 deals with Zeus Aphésios and his relations to Zeus Apesántios ('Zeus Aphesios ist der alte Gott des argivischen Apesasberges, dessen Kultus die Argiver nach Megara mitgebracht haben, wo der Kultus, wie die Funde zeigen, in der geometrischen Zeit gegründet wurde.... An den Kultus des Zeus Aphesios knüpft sich wie in Argos die Flutsage. Stifter des Kultes ist ein aus der Flut geretteter Heros [supra ii. 897 n. 1], in diesem Falle ein Sohn des Gottes selbst und Eponyme des Landes. Sein Rettung geschieht übrigens in einer sehr eigenartigen Weise, indem er dem Geschrei fliegender Kraniche nachschwimmt. Hierdurch wird noch eine schöne Etymologie gewonnen [Paus.

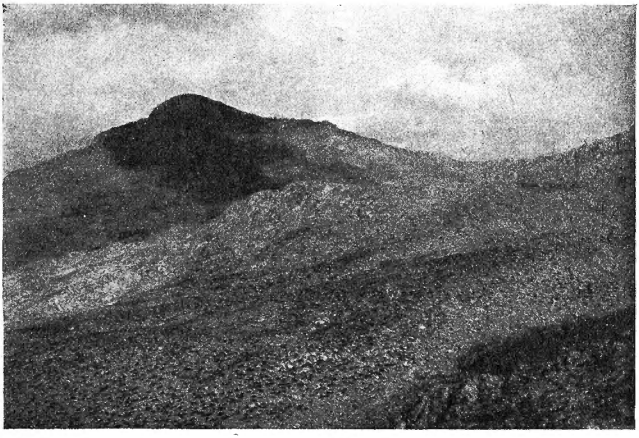

Fig. 907.

1. 40. 1 ἀλλὰ—νήχεσθαι γὰρ πετομένων γεράνων πρὸς τὴν βοὴν τῶν ὀρνίθων αὐτόν—διὰ τοῦτο Γερανίαν τὸ ὄρος ὀνομασθῆναι], und eigentlich ist dieser Zug hinreichend, um die ganze Geschichte als späte dichterische Erfindung zu charakterisieren').

ii. 898. To the mountain-cults of Zeus in Boiotia add that of Zeus Keraiós at Akraiphia and that of Zeus Karaiós at Thespiai (supra on ii. 874 n. 2).

ii. 899 n. 1 Herakles Chárops. N. G. Pappadakis 'Περὶ τὸ Χαρόπειον τῆς Κορωνείας' in the Ἀρχ. Δελτ. 1916 ii. 217—272.

ii. 901 n. 2 Mt Parnassos. D. W. Freshfield Below the Snow Line London 1923 pp. 128—130 gives the height of Parnassos as 8064 ft. and says of his ascent: 'When I got to the top a faint gleam was already visible in the eastern sky. It quickly deepened and broadened until, without warning, a spot of light shone on the dark sea horizon, grew to an arch, and in a few moments the sun's orb was floating on the sky. To the sailors on the Aegean it had not yet risen, and it was some minutes before a path of light flashed across the waters to Euboea. Then the long backbone of the great island stood out with all its heights and hollows blue against the golden east, throwing a clear-cut shadow on the strait that divides it from the mainland. The plains of Boeotia next took the day; the mist rose from its lakes, and the rivers flashed out as silver threads across its broad fields. On the northern horizon, beyond the Gulf of Volo, Pelion, Olympus, and even distant Athos took shape as grey phantoms. Still the shores of the Gulf of Corinth were slow to awaken. Night hung reluctantly over the Adriatic long after Attica was in broad day. But at last the veil of twilight was lifted everywhere; hills and valleys, cities and harbours stood out clear and distinct in local detail and colour. I shall not attempt a catalogue of the famous sights in view. I had had that rare enjoyment, a most successful sunrise, worth a night in the open, and worthy of the Poets' Mountain.' Fig. 907, which shows the summit of Parnassos as seen from the south-west, is from a photograph taken by Mr C. M. Sleeman on Sept. 9, 1926.

ii. 902 n. 2 Mt Kenaion. N. Pappadakis in 1924 attempted to locate the sanctuary of Zeus Kénaios. He found a massive precinct-wall, 2·5^{m} thick, extending for a stretch of c. 50^{m}. The side towards the sea was missing, but three angle-towers were preserved. Neither temple nor altar came to light (Bull. Corr. Hell. 1924 xlviii. 480, A. M. Woodward in the Journ. Hell. Stud. 1925 xlv. 224, E. H. Heffner in the Am. Journ. Arch. 1925 xxix. 112). Resuming his search, Pappadakis discovered that the precinct was pentagonal. On the south and south-east the wall had been largely destroyed. The angle-towers also had suffered. They were well built with regular courses of póros-blocks. The walls, 3^{m} thick, had two faces of proïsodomous masonry with internal filling, the stones being taken from the Lichades. Minor finds were disappointing—a large marble phiále near the north tower, sherds of Graeco-Roman date (none older than c. 300 B.C.), etc. Within the precinct stands the Church of St Constantine (Bull. Corr. Hell. 1926 l. 554 f.).

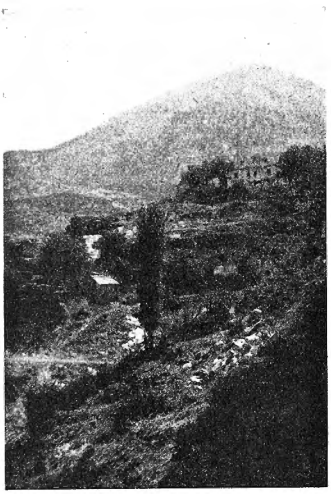

Fig. 908.

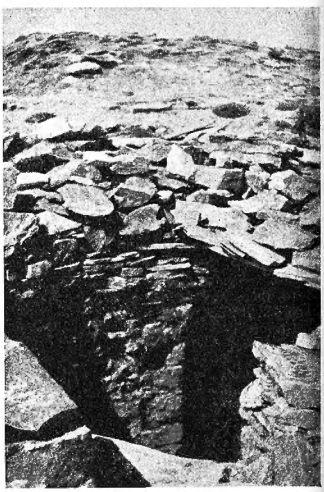

Fig. 909.

ii. 903 Akarnania. At Stratos the temple of Zeus occupied a commanding hill-top. A. K. Orlandos "Ὁ ἐν Στράτῳ τῆς Ἀκαρνανίας ναὸς τοῦ Διός" in the Ἀρχ. Δελτ. 1923 viii. 1—51 with 43 figs. and 2 pls. purports to give the first full account of the building. But it is not free from inexactitudes, and the author seems to have poached unduly upon the preserves of the French School at Athens, which had been at work on the site intermittently ever since 1892. We must therefore rely on the definitive publication by F. Courby—C. Picard Recherches archéologiques à Stratos d'Acarnanie Paris 1924 pp. 1—124 with 78 figs. and 19 pls. The temple—possibly not the first on the spot—was built c. 330 B.C. It is a Doric peripteral structure of fine grey limestone with 6 × 11 columns as yet unfluted. Prónaos and opisthódomos had each two columns in antis. Within the naós were Ionic columns, ranged round three sides of it, and these may have carried a carved (?) frieze and dentils. The roof was perhaps, but not certainly, hypaethral. A. Joubin in the Bull. Corr. Hell. 1893 xvii. 451 f. no. 4 = Inscr. Gr. sept. iii. 1 nos. 447 f. published an inscription which proves that at Stratos in s. ii B.C. slaves were manumitted by a deed of sale to Zeus: lines 3—5 read (Courby—Picard p. 13) [ἀ]πέδοτο Διονύσιος [Δ]ιορυγίου | Στράτιος τῶι Διὶ ἐπ' [ἐλευθερίαι σῶ]μ[α] | [ἀγ]ορεῖον κ.τ.λ.

ii. 904 Mount Ossa. I am indebted to Dr N. Bachtin for photographs of the mountain and of the chapel on its summit taken by Mrs Bachtin in 1934. Fig. 908 shows Ossa as seen from Spelia on the north-west. Fig. 909 gives the entrance into the little chapel of a b

Fig. 910.

Hagios Elias. Steps down lead to a doorway, within which is a round-headed arch. The roof of the chapel forms the actual summit of the mountain. 'People nowadays prefer to worship St Elias lower down in the valley.'

ii. 904 n. 1 Zeus Laphýstios. N. I. Giannopoulos in the Ἀρχ. Ἐφ. 1925—1926 pp. 183—185 figs. 1 α, 1 β (=my fig. 910 a, b) publishes a bronze statuette ploughed up in a field among the ruins of Halos, where once stood the sanctuary of Zeus Laphýstios. It shows a bearded male figure advancing with right hand raised and left held forward. If, as seems likely, this was meant for Zeus, his right hand must have brandished a thunderbolt, his left may have carried eagle or sceptre (?). Hair projecting like a cap, wedge-shaped beard, mere holes for eyes, incised lines for mouth, triangular chest with two small projections for nipples, double belt above, single belt below—the whole suggesting a date c. 700 B.C. Reinach Rép. Stat. vi. 164 no. 1.

ii. 905 n. 0. My friend and colleague Mr C. M. Sleeman on Sept. 3, 1926 and again on July 14, 1929 made the ascent of Mt Olympos and secured a series of excellent photographs. These include my pl. lxviii Mítka, the highest peak, as seen from the Ridge, fig. 911 the 'Throne of Zeus' from Mítka Ridge, fig. 912 Skolion from the Brèche, fig. 913 the chapel of St Elias (supra i. 103) from the south-west.

ii. 906 Mount Tomaros. E. Polaschek in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. vi A. 1697 f. draws attention to a group of mountain-names found mainly, if not entirely, in the Illyrian area: (1) Tmor on the Dalmatian coast, north-west of Ragusa; (2) Tomori in northern Epeiros, east of Berat; (3) Tómaros or Tmáros, the modern Olicika, south-west of Dodona; (4) Tmárion in Arkadia (Hesych. Τμάριον· ὄρος Ἀρκαδίας). Whether these names are of Greek or Illyrian formation is uncertain (H. Krahe Die alten balkanillyrischen geographischen Namen Heidelberg 1925 p. 58). N. Jokl in Ebert Reallex. vi. 34 decides for the latter. In either case they would be connectible with the root tem- of τέμνω, τομή, etc. and so signify 'sheer-cut' or the like (cp. Τέμπη, Τέμπυρα, Τομεύς, Τόμις). In Greek times such mountains would be the natural habitat of Zeus. That is certain for Mt Tómaros or Tmáros near Dodona (Claud. de bello Getico 16 ff. iactent...Minervam...caeso Tomari Iovis augure luco | arbore praesaga tabulas animasse oquaces, Hesych. Τμάριος· Ζεὺς ἐν Δωδώνῃ), where the priests of the god were called tomoúroi (Strab. 328 ἀπὸ δὲ τοῦ Τομάρου τοὺς ὑπὸ τοῦ ποιητοῦ λεγομένους ὑποφήτας τοῦ Διός, οὓς καὶ ἀνιπτόποδας, χαμαιεύνας καλεῖ, τομούρους φασὶ λεχθῆναι· κ.τ.λ.) or tómouroi (supra ii. 693 n. 3). It is probable also that Zeus was worshipped on Mt Tomori near Berat, to judge from the sacred character of that mountain and from certain cult-usages reported by recent travellers. To attest these curious and little-known facts, I cite three eye-witnesses:

Fig. 911.

J. Swire King Zog's Albania London 1937 p. 250 ff. describes in graphic terms his ascent of 'Tomori's holy summit' and ib. p. 253 gives the local legend: 'One August 25 long ago...Abas Ali came from Arabia to Berat; and mounting a great white horse (which has left hoof-marks upon the mountain) he fought the barbarians of the neighbourhood. When he had overcome them he rested for five days on Tomori, then went to dwell on Mount Olympus; but every year he returns on August 25 for five days, when there come Bektashis—and Christians too—sometimes eight or nine thousand people, to pay him homage. They bring their sheep for food, slaughter them on the summit, then take them down to their bivouacs by the tekké. So Tomori is a holy mountain and për Baba Tomorit a sacred oath. The shrine was built, so Baba Tyrabiu told me, on the site of an antique pagan shrine, so Abas Ali probably inherited his supernatural powers from the pagan god he displaced.' Id. ib. p. 280 mentions a sacred cave made by Mahomet with 'passages which may not be defiled by man; and they lead underground...to the top of Tomori and to the tekké on the crag above Kruja.'

R. Matthews Sons of the Eagle London 1937 p. 273 ff. ('A mountain of Zeus') has much the same tale to tell. He too climbed the mountain under the guidance of a kirijee, who had been up it often before and said: "Last year there had been twelve hundred sheep sacrificed on top, or it might be fifteen hundred. And it didn't do to be disrespectful about these matters either." When asked why the mountain was so holy, he replied: "Many hundreds of years ago...there were two brothers, very holy men, who lived in Arabia. One day they arrived in Albania: no one knows how, some say through the air. The younger of the two set up his house in Berat, where he was highly venerated for his sanctity and became the patron saint of the town. But the elder brother, Ali, was a great warrior. Through all the countryside he rode on his wonderful horse, challenging and conquering the barbarians who lived around. His horse could cover miles at a single bound. You may still see the marks of its hooves on the rocks of Tomori....At last a day came when Ali had overcome all his enemies. So he retired to the summit of Tomori, to the spot where the shrine stands to-day. For three days he meditated alone there on the fate of his foes and the future of his country, Albania. Then one last time he vaulted into the saddle of his great horse. Through the air it bore him to the top of Mount Olympus, in Greece, and there he lives for ever. But every year, on August 15, the day when he and his brother first arrived in the country, he returns to Tomori's summit. For three days he remains there to receive the homage of his people. And it is because of that and because of his guardianship that Christians and Moslems alike make their pilgrimage every year and for three days offer sacrifices at the shrine." 'Living for ever on Olympus.... Then it was indeed to Zeus, under this so thin disguise, that the people of southern Albania still paid their homage.' Id. ib. p. 283 'All I could feel as I halted finally beneath the shadow of the shrine was a sentiment of immense pathos. For hundreds of years, thousands probably, pilgrims had been making their way up the great mountain to sacrifice to Something on the spot where we stood now....Round these few square yards had centred the reverence of tens of thousands of men peopling a score of centuries. Yet they had left nothing behind to see. Just a sacrificial stone. And four bare walls. Unroofed. Partially breached on one side. The home of Zeus: the Zeus who had never died for the people of this country round. His last home on earth, probably, and he had not wherewith to cover his head. But it was easy to understand, lifting one's face to the strong clean wind that blew out of nowhere, that a god or a saint should have chosen the summit for his residence Beneath, and to the west, the whole land lay stretched out and visible, to the distant silver of the Adriatic, eight thousand feet below; only in the south did the chain of the Acroceraunian mountains cut off the view. To the east, wave beyond wave of peaks, tumbling black in the sunset, conducted the eye to the imagined Serbian frontier. The evening haze had hidden from sight all trace of human habitation but one: a square white monastery, folded in a lonely pineclad valley at our feet on the further side, whose head was the guardian of the sacrifice. We stumbled down another stony path in the failing light.' At the monastery the baba, a young and scholarly man, had more to tell (ib. p. 284 f.): "You must know...that the shrine isn't Tomori's only claim to veneration. Somewhere on this northern side, they say, is a crag from whose topmost pinnacle there springs an apple tree. I've never been near there myself, I only speak of what I hear, but every one talks about it. For this apple tree's fruits are of more than natural size. But so steep are the precipices that tumble beneath it that not the hardiest climber has yet been able to scale them to pluck one. Now and then, in the autumn, a windfall will roll down the rocks to the turf below. Peasants who pass at that time of year always look to see if there is one there, for those great apples, they say, have the power of healing all diseases. Even the dying, I have heard men say, can be brought back to life if such a fruit is given them." Mr Matthews ends his narrative by noting the resemblance between Tomori in the north and Tomaros in the south: ib. p. 286 'if you go one way up Tomori to-day, you will eventually reach a village, itself called Tomori. Above it is a collection of ruins, so far unexplored, and known locally as Qyteti (the city). And the biggest among them is named by the villagers Dodona.'

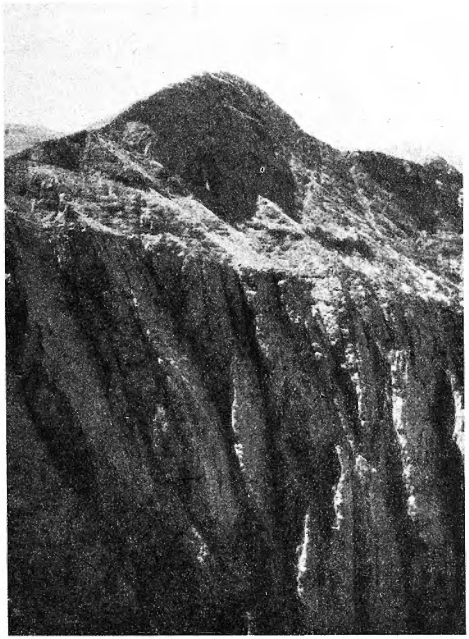

Fig. 912.

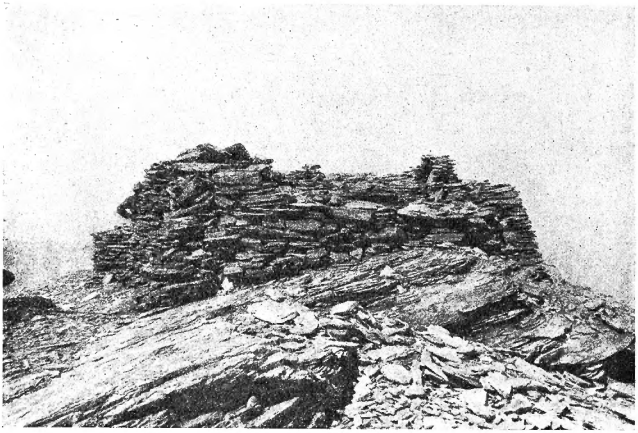

Fig. 913.

Mr Hugh Hunt of the Abbey Theatre, Dublin, made the ascent of Tomori in the spring of 1929 and has kindly furnished me with an account of his experiences: 'In a tekke (small monastery) at the foot of Mt Tomori I spent the night. I was on my way from Koritza to Berat...accompanied by an English police officer and an interpreter. We were welcomed by the monks, who were of the Bektashite branch of Mohammedans.... The monks professed great interest in the Christian religion and asked me many questions about the Anglican church, particularly about Saint George, whom they held in great reverence and whose feast day they celebrated. We learnt that on the following day a pilgrimage was to be made to the summit of Mt Tomori, where a sacrifice of a white bull was to take place, and accepted the invitation to join in this festival. On the following day we rose at daybreak and commenced the climb. The full complement of monks were in attendance—some forty in all—and a few servants. The climb was an arduous one and the day was hot. The summit was veiled in clouds—a good omen, the monks told me, for this indicated the presence of ZEFS, to whom this sacrifice was to be dedicated. I became interested, for although my knowledge of Greek mythology is remarkably small I began to see that there must be some connection between this cloud-loving deity and Zeus. But questions proved of little use; the monks appeared as little informed as myself; the ceremony was an annual rite—or perhaps of more frequent occurrence, for I am of the opinion that they informed me that they celebrated St George's day in like fashion, but I cannot be sure of this. We reached the summit—it was late in the day—and there we found a bull, brought up earlier by the villagers, and a fire was already kindled. The killing of this beast was an unpleasant spectacle, and I did not attend very closely, interesting myself in the glimpses of the valley below, which appeared every now and again like pools of water through the cloud rifts. Prayers were offered by the chief monk; and the bull, now happily released from pain, was hoisted on a stout wooden construction and roasted. So far as I remember, it had a garland of bright flowers round its neck; but these were, I believe, put on after its decease. I left earlier than the rest, accompanied by the interpreter and my companion, and regained the village after nightfall. What was the ultimate fate of the bull, I never discovered.'

The foregoing statements appear to involve a threefold blend of Bektashite usage, common folk-belief, and classical reminiscence. On the Bektashi order and its syncretism of Islam with Christianity see G. Jacob Die Bektaschijje (Abh. d. bayer. Akad. Philos.-philol. Classe xxiv. 3. 2) Munich 1909 pp. 1—53 figs. 1—3, also F. W. Hasluck Christianity and Islam under the Sultans Oxford 1929 ii. 869 Index s.v. Tomor, Mount (Bektashi tekke on, 163^2, 548: Abbas Ali haunts, 93^2, 548, 548^2: gold plant on, 645^2: oath by, 548^2). Folk-belief has provided the magic horse, the underground passages, the apples of immortality, the gold plant. Classical reminiscence will explain the hoof-marks on the mountain, the departure to Olympos, above all the survival of the name Zeús. Nevertheless, when due allowance has been made for all these factors, the abiding sanctity of the mountain, the annual pilgrimage to its summit, and the solemn sacrifice of a white bull by the assembled villagers are ample proof that the ancient cult of the sky-god on his holy hill goes on from generation to generation almost untouched by the passing changes of politics and religion.

ii. 906 n. 3 the stone ship of Agamemnon. W. Dörpfeld Alt-Olympia Berlin 1935 i. 265 cites as a possible parallel a ship-like foundation of river-worn stones in the Áltis at Olympia.

ii. 907 n. 2 Zeus Ainésios. K. A. Neugebauer in the Jahrb. d. Deutsch. Arch. Inst. 1934 xlix. 163 would see Zeus Ainésios on a bronze coin of Kranioi in Kephallenia (ib. p. 162 fig. 1, cp. Brit. Mus. Cat. Coins Peloponnesus p. 80 pl. 17, 1 (Poseidon?), McClean Cat. Coins ii. 439 no. 6683 pl. 228, 12 (Kephalos)).

ii. 910 n. 1. The great temple of Zeus at Akragas is still a battle-ground for the architects. R. Vallois in the Rev. Ét. Gr. 1924 xxxvii. 198 criticises the results reached by B. Pace (supra ii. 1227). S. R. Pierce 'Il tempio di Giove Olimpico a Girgenti Sicilia' in Architettura e arti decorative 1923/1924 iii. 385—391 returns to the charge. P. Marconi Agrigento. Topografia ed arte Firenze 1929 pp. 1—238 with 162 figs. (especially pp. 57—66 figs. 29—36)—an important work, of which T. Ashby in The Times Literary Supplement for May 15, 1930 p. 413 says: 'the excavations conducted some years ago in the vast temple of the Olympian Zeus..., which proved that the telamones faced outwards (and not inwards, as Pace and Pierce had believed), are for the first time adequately described.' P. Marconi 'Novità nell' Olimpieion di Agrigento' in Dedalo 1932 pp. 165—173 gives 5 figs. of these telamônes and a reconstruction. Lastly, W. B. Dinsmoor read a paper, as yet unpublished, on 'The Giants of Agrigento' at the General Meeting of the Archaeological Institute of America, New York 1935 (Am. Journ. Arch. 1936 xl. 126).

ii. 918 n. 1 Zeus Mêlios. See the succinct article by gr. Kruse in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. xv. 524. C. Bosch of Halle a. S. in the Numismatisches Literatur-Blatt 1932 xlix. 257§ f. reviews Kruse's article and tries to discredit this appellative: 'Vaillant und Piovene sind Mionnets Gewährsmänner!...Das Zeugnis aber ist ganz wertlos, denn die Münzen sind bis heute nicht belegt.' Bosch wants to jettison all the early coin-men, Cohen included. That strikes me as hypersceptical.

ii. 918 Mount Kynthos. Three years after the publication of my note the final and authoritative report of A. Plassart Les sanctuaires et les cultes du Mont Cynthe Paris 1928 pp. 1—319 with 260 figs. and 6 pls. was issued in Délos xi. The sections that chiefly concern me are pp. 51—69 ('Sommet du Cynthe. Le culte de Zeus et d'Athèna aux temps archaïques'), 71—92 ('Sommet du Cynthe. Le sanctuaire de Zeus et d'Athèna au temps de l'indépendance Délienne (314—166)'), 93—144 ('Sommet du Cynthe. Le sanctuaire de Zeus et d'Athèna sous la seconde domination Athénienne'), 228—255 ('Sanctuaire de l'antre'). Plassart has here and there corrected my statements: e.g. on p. 66 n. 2 he regards as arbitrary my assumption that in 'Minoan' times the top of Mt Kynthos was tenanted by the earth-mother (Rhea) as well as by the sky-father (Kronos), and on p. 252 n. 4 he refutes my attempt to find traces in Delos of Rhea's lions. Again, he has succeeded in proving what—in spite of having visited the spot—I had never suspected, viz. that the supposed prehistoric cave-temple was in reality only a pseudo-antiquity, an artificial grotto put together in Ptolemaic times for Herakles as ancestor of the Ptolemies!

O. Rubensohn in the Jahrb. d. Deutsch. Arch. Inst. 1931 xlvi Arch. Anz. p. 360 ff. adds some points of interest. In pp. 361—367 ('Zur Vorgeschichte des Delischen Kultes') he notes the small prehistoric settlement underneath the sanctuary of Zeus and Athena on the mountain-top as being of early Cycladic date and as probably postulating a cult akin to that of the Cretan Zeus; he connects with the same settlement two large Cycladic graves in the témenos of Apollon—the θήκη of Opis and Arge (Délos v. 63—74 ('Le "Tombeau mycénien"')) and the σῆμα of Hyperoche and Laodike (C. Picard—J. Replat in the Bull. Corr. Hell. 1924 xlviii. 247 ff.); and he finds a survival of early Helladic worship in the altar of horns and its archaic ritual (supra i. 482 n. 1, iii. 1087). In pp. 367—370 ('Zeus Kynthios und Athena Kynthia') he distinguishes an archaic period when the square precinct had only a rock-cut altar in the midst; a third-century reconstruction with stairways, própylon, peribolos, and two Ionic oîkoi; and a later lay-out of three small terraces on the east side, of which the most southerly had an oblong building and a mosaic inscription (supra ii. 919 with fig. 829) of doubtful significance, possibly the banquet-hall and lustral centre of some mystic society. In pp. 375—379 ('Das Höhlenheiligtum am Kynthos') he accepts Plassart's dating of the bogus cave, but questions his interpretation of it as a Herakleion. Herakles in Delos was associated with the Kabeiroi (P. Roussel Délos Colonie athénienne Paris 1916 p. 232 f.), who had there two distinct sanctuaries, one on the left bank of the Inopos, the other described as τὸ Καβείρ[ε]ιον τὸ ε[ἰ]ς Κύνθον (Inscr. Gr. Deli ii no. 144, A 90) and probably to be identified with the famous cave-temple.

Plassart in Délos xi. 265 records two inscriptions to Zeus Mégistos (e.g. Ἡλιόδωρος Διὶ | Μεγίστῳ | κατὰ πρόσταγμα on a block of white marble found with some Roman lamps in the south-west portion of sanctuary C on the northern slope of Mt Kynthos) and justly treats him as a Semitic god.

ii. 922 Mount Atabyrion. R. Herbig in the Jahrb. d. Deutsch. Arch. Inst. 1928 xliii Arch. Anz. p. 633 f. mentions as a new undertaking the excavation of the sanctuary of Zeus Atabýrios. No remains of a temple were found, but a massive peribolos-wall (fig. 26) and a building of uncertain use ('Halle für Votive? Monumentaleingang?'). Many dedications of Graeco-Roman date, all to Zeus Atabýrios, made monotonous reading. Votive objects included numerous small bulls and zebus in bronze and two fine fragments of bronze statuettes representing the god (fig. 27).

O. Eissfeldt 'Der Gott des Tabor und seine Verbreitung' in the Archiv f. Rel. 1934 xxxi. 14—41 claims that the name and cult of the Palestinian Tabor spread viâ Crete to Rhodes in the second millennium B.C., and thence in 580 B.C. to Agrigentum and later to the Crimea (Corp. inscr. Gr. ii no. 2103 b ('Prope Sympheropolin (Akmedschet), haud procul a montibus Taurorum') a base inscribed Διὶ Ἀταβυρίωι Ποσίδεος Ποσιδέου χαριστήριον. E. H. Minns Scythians and Greeks Cambridge 1913 pp. 463, 476). Eissfeldt further discusses the character of the god, who dwelt on a mountain and had the bull for his symbol, concluding that he was a mountain- and storm-god comparable with Hadad, Rimmon-Ramman, and Tešub, but also capable of taking an interest in human affairs.

ii. 939 n. 1 Mt Juktas as a recumbent face. My friend Mr N. G. L. Hammond supplies me with a good Greek parallel. He writes (Feb. 25, 1931): 'The mountain identified locally with Dione in repose is called Emértsa (Gk. Ἐμέρτσα). The Austrian Staff map 1/200,000 (Korfu sheet 38° 40°) wrongly calls it Nemerčika. The mountain lies on the Albanian frontier north of the headwaters of the Kalamas (in antiquity Thyamis).'

ii. 941 f. n. 0. To the references for the tomb of Zeus add Ptol. Hephaist. ap. Phot. bibl. p. 147 b 37 ff. Bekker ὡς ὁ ἐν Κρήτῃ τάφος λεγόμενος τοῦ Διὸς Ὀλύμπου τοῦ Κρητός ἐστιν, ὃς παρὰ τοῦ Κρόνου λαβὼν τὸν Δία ἔτρεφέ τε καὶ ἐπαίδευε τὰ θεῖα. ἀλλὰ γὰρ βάλλει (φησίν) ὁ Ζεὺς τὸν τροφέα καὶ διδάσκαλον κεραυνῷ, ὅτι δὴ τοὺς Γίγαντας αὐτοῦ τῇ βασιλείᾳ ἐπιθέσθαι ὑπετίθετο. ἀλλὰ βαλὼν καὶ νεκρὸν ἔχων μετεμελεῖτο· μὴ ἔχων δ' ἄλλως τὸ πάθος ἐκκλῖναι, δίδωσι τὸ ἴδιον ὄνομα τῷ τάφῳ τοῦ ἀνῃρημένου. Epiphan. ancor. 106 (i. 208 Dindorf) καὶ τί μοι τὰ πλήθη λέγειν τοῦ γενναίου τούτου φθορέως καὶ φθορέων διδασκάλου; οὗ τὸ μνῆμα οὐκ ὀλίγοις ἐστὶ δῆλον. ἐν Κρήτῃ γὰρ τῇ νήσῳ ἐν τῷ ὄρει τῷ λεγομένῳ Λασίῳ (? cp. Lasithi) ἕως δεῦρο δακτυλοδεικτεῖται.

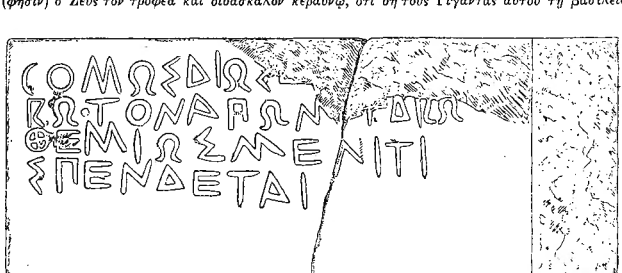

Fig. 914.

ii. 946 n. 0 Zeus Endendros. F. Hiller von Gaertringen in Gnomon 1930 vi. 428 cites Inscr. Gr. ins. v. 2 no. 1027 fig. (=my fig. 914) a white marble slab inscribed βωμὸς Διὸς Ἐ[νδένδ]ρο, τῶν ἀπὸ Μ[αν]δρο[θέμιος· μέλιτι σπένδεται. See further id. 'Zeusaltar aus Paros' in the Sitzungsber. d. Akad. d. Wiss. Berlin Phil.-hist. Classe 1906 pp. 786—788.

ii. 946 ff. n. 0 Zeus Velchános. Attempts to connect Fελχάνος with Volcanus are still rife: see e.g. A. Nehring in Schrader Reallex. ii. 239 n. 1, F. Muller Jzn Altitalisches Wörterbuch Göttingen 1926 p. 560, Walde—Pokorny Vergl. Wörterb. d. indogerm. Spr. i. 321, Margherita Guarducci 'Velchanos—Volcanus' in Scritti in onore di Bartolomeo Nogara Città del Vaticano 1937 pp. 184—203 pl. 20, 1—4. But such proposals, however specious, are of very doubtful value.

Prof. J. Vürtheim of Leiden informed me (Feb. 13, 1926) that in a paper communicated to the Royal Academy of Amsterdam and published in December 1924 he had independently reached the same conclusion as Dr Atkinson and myself, viz. that Fελχάνος means 'god of the Willow-tree.' See J. Vürtheim Europa (Mededeelingen der koninklijke Akademie van Wetenschappen, Afdeeling Letterkunde Deel 57, Serie A, N° 6) Amsterdam 1924 p. 6 ff.

C. Picard in the Revue de l'histoire des religions 1926 xciii. 92 n. 0 suggests that a large vase (?) or rhytón (?) of enamelled gold, shaped like a cock's head, which is figured among the presents of the Keftiu (Cretans?) in the second register of the tomb-paintings of Rekhmaré (G. A. Hoskins Travels in Ethiopia 1835 col. pl. between pp. 330 and 331), bore to the cult of Zeus Velchános the same relation as the lioness-heads of Knossos, Delphoi, and Mykenai (in gold) to that of Rhea. He also cp. a sherd of 1425—1123 B.C. found in the Valley of the Kings by Lord Carnarvon in 1920—21 (The Journal of Egyptian Archaeology 1923 ix. 1 ff. pl. 20, 1 wrongly described as the earliest known drawing of the domestic cock in Egypt) and a genius (?) with a cock's head on a Cretan intaglio from Mt Ide now in the Museum at Candia.

More about cocks in magic and religion supra p. 45 n. 2. Add J. Praetorius Alectryomantia, Seu Divinatio Magica cum Gallis Gallinaceis peracta... Francofurti & Lipsiæ 1680 pp. 1—185, C. T. Seltman in the Ann. Brit. Sch. Ath. 1923—1924; 1924—1925 xxvi. 93 ff. ('Eros and Cocks'), Güntert in the Handwörterbuch des deutschen Aberglaubens Berlin—Leipzig 1930/1931 iii. 1325—1346 s.vv. 'Hahn,' 'Hahnenbalken,' 'Hahnenei,' 'Hahnenkampf,' 'Hahnenkrähen,' 'Hahnenschlagen,' 'Hahnentanz,' D'Arcy W. Thompson A Glossary of Greek Birds[2] Oxford 1936 pp. 33—44.

ii. 951 n. 0 with fig. 844 the Stroganoff bust of Zeus. O. Waldhauer in Archäologische Mitteilungen aus russischen Sammlungen Berlin—Leipzig 1928 i. 1. 58 f. no. 41 pl. 23 cp. a fine bronze head from the Uvárov collection, now in the Historical Museum at Moscow (ib. fig. 14, S. Reinach Recueil de têtes antiques idéales ou idéalisées Paris 1903 p. 194 pl. 239).

ii. 960 n. 0 contact with Mother Earth. W. Kroll 'Unum exuta pedem—ein volkskundlicher Seitensprung' in Glotta 1936 xxv. 152—158 questions my view of the Dodonaean rule and discusses alternatives. His list of relevant usages is interesting, but—so far as I can judge—what he calls the 'Antaiosmotiv' remains the most probable explanation.

ii. 961 n. 0. The cult of Hektor at Thebes in Boiotia (Paus. 9. 18. 5) is handled by Miss G. H. Macurdy in the Class. Quart. 1926 xx. 179 f. But her contentions (Héktor a shortened form of Echélaos (cp. Il. 5. 473) = Echelos, a god of death) are risquées.

ii. 962 n. 2 Zeus at Ephesos. Excavations carried on from September to November 1926 under the direction of J. Keil, M. Theuer, and A. Deissmann discovered on the northern slopes of the Panaghir Dagh (Mt Peion) a number of rock-cut votive niches and near them a témenos of Zeus, Oreía (Kybele), and other deities. An altar-shaped rock is inscribed in lettering of s. v B.C. Ζανὸς | Πατροίο | ἱερόν, and a relief-inscription of c. 300 B.C. reads Ζανὸς ἱερὸν Πατρ|ωίο καὶ Ἀπόλλωνος | Ἀριστώνακτος | τοῦ Κυνιδεω. The site yielded no temple, but many inscriptions together with eight complete and three fragmentary Hellenistic reliefs showing the triad Kybele, Attis, and Zeus, or the pair Kybele and Attis, all bearing the lions symbolic of the goddess (J. Keil in the Jahresh. d. oest. arch. Inst. 1926 xxiii. Beiblatt pp. 256—261 with figs. 48 rock-altar, 49—51 reliefs, Bull. Corr. Hell. 1926 l. 580, A. M. Woodward in the Journ. Hell. Stud. 1927 xlvii. 260). Keil infers from the repeated absence of Zeus on these reliefs 'dass die Kulttrias, Vater, Mutter und Sohn, nicht ursprünglich ist, dass vielmehr die grosse Mutter zunächst nur den jugendlichen Gott zum Begleiter hatte. Wie die griechischen Ephesier diesen jugendlichen Gott benannten bzw. welchem ihrer Götter sie den altanatolischen Paredros der Bergmutter gleichsetzten [Hermes? Apollon?], bleibt noch zu ermitteln.'

ii. 963 n. 0 Διοπετής. The word is used in a secondary sense 'struck by lightning' in Aristophon Ἰατρὸς frag. 2 (Frag. com. Gr. iii. 358 Meineke) ap. Stob. flor. 6. 27 (ed. Gaisford i. 162) αἱ τῶν ἑταιρῶν γὰρ διοπετεῖς οἰκίαι | γεγόνασιν ἄβατοι τοῖς ἔχουσι μηδὲ ἕν.

ii. 969 n. 4. C. Picard in the Revue de l'histoire des religions 1926 xciii. 92 n. 0 doubts the religious intervention of the Eumolpid Timotheos at Alexandreia and at Pessinous.

ii. 970 n. 0 Attis and Gallos. A. H. Sayce in the Class. Rev. 1928 xlii. 161 f. quotes Iskallis as the Hittite name of Attis, and connects it with the Hittite verb isgall-, iskall- 'to cut.' Hence isgallas and iskallis 'eunuch,' which appears in Greek as γάλλος.

ii. 970 n. 0 the finger of Attis. This curious belief may belong to the group of primitive notions studied by R. D. Scott The Thumb of Knowledge New York 1930 pp. 1—296 (Finn mac Cumaill, Sigurd, Taliesin, etc.). S. Reinach in the Rev. Arch. 1930 ii. 203 comments shrewdly: 'Est-ce le caractère sacré attaché, depuis l'époque quaternaire, à la main de l'homme?... A-t-on déjà songé aux statuettes alexandrines d'Harpocrate, l'enfant divin qui se met les doigts dans la bouche?'

ii. 970 n. 0 Agdistis. T. Zielinski La Sibylle Paris 1924 pp. 76—81 distinguishes the Phrygian myth of Agdistis, leading up to the rite of 'autocastration' and subsequent recovery, from its doublet the Greek myth of Attis, leading up to the doctrine of death followed by new life.

ii. 971 n. 2 Theoì Ágrioi. O. Weinreich in the Sitzungsber. d. Heidelb. Akad. d. Wiss. Phil.-hist. Classe 1913 Abh. v. 15—19 collects all essential references to Θεοὶ Ἄγριοι, Θεοὶ

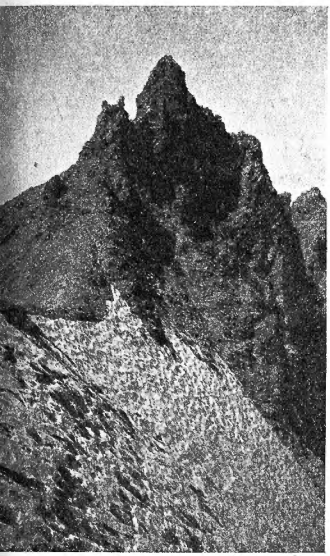

Fig. 915.

Fig. 916.

a b c

Fig. 917.

Ἀγρότεροι, Θεοὶ Ἄγρεῖς and considers their significance. He argues that they were primarily 'Hunters'—Sondergötter in Usener's sense (supra ii. 13 n. 1)—who were secondarily identified with a variety of greater gods. A similar conclusion, as Weinreich observes, had been reached by L. Malten Kyrene (Philologische Untersuchungen xx) Berlin 1911 p. 10.

ii. 973 n. 1 life-priests of Zeus Solymeús. F. Schehl in the Jahresh. d. oest. arch. Inst. 1929 xxiv Beiblatt pp. 95—106 adds another [τὸν] γενόμενον διὰ βίου Διὸς Σολυμέως | [ἱερέα] Τιβέριον Κλαύδιον Ἀρίππαν from an inscription of 140—145 A.D. found at Termessos.

a b

Fig. 918.

Fig. 919.

ii. 974 n. 0 festival of Zeus Eleuthérios. Other views in J. N. Svoronos 'ΤΕΡΜΗΣΣΟΣ Η ΤΟ ΚΑΠΟΤΣ ΕΧΟΤΣΑ' in the Journ. Intern. d'Arch. Num. 1898 i. 181—184.

ii. 977 ff. Mount Argaios. The engineer E. J. Ritter 'Erdjias Dag' in the Zeitschrift des Deutschen und Österreichischen Alpenvereins Innsbruck 1931 lxii. 124—148 gives a full account of Mt Argaios (pp. 124—127 (i) 'Vorgeschichte,' 127—133 (ii) 'Der Berg (Lage, Aufbau und Gestalt),' 133—137 (iii) 'Ersteigungsgeschichte,' 137—148 (iv) 'Erlebnisse') with p. 129 'Kartenskizze vom Erdjias Dag,' opposite p. 134 a fine photographic plate of 'Erdjias Dag gesehen von der Seldschukenburg in Kaisserie,' etc., and p. 146 'Zeichnung des Gipfelturmes.' Mr C. M. Sleeman, to whom I am indebted for my knowledge of this article, himself climbed the mountain on Aug. 30, 1936 and took a series of excellent photographs, of which I reproduce two—fig. 915 the rocky summit with the upper part of a snow slope on the northern side, and fig. 916 a rock-pinnacle a little beneath and south-east of the summit with the plain of Everek in the distance.

I take this opportunity of publishing two small bronzes illustrative of the cult on Mt Argaios. They were obtained from a Greek refugee formerly resident in Kaisereih and are now in my collection. The one is a tiny model of the mountain with a disproportionately large eagle perched on the top of it (fig. 917: height 2 inches). There is some indication of the aiguilles near the summit, also of streams descending from the snows, of a cavern high up in front, of two foothills (? breasts of the mountain-mother), etc. In brief, the coin-type shown supra ii. 979 fig. 862 is here rendered in the round. The other little bronze (fig. 918: height 2¼ inches) represents an eagle on a pillar, the top of which is shaped like a cone and decorated with six leaves. The waist has a band round it. The base is patterned with crisscross lines and rests on a square plinth. Akin to these diminutive exvotos is a bronze (height 0·15^{m}) in the Louvre, assigned to the latter half of the second millennium B.C., which figures an eagle perched proudly on the antlers of a stag (Encyclopédie photographique de l'art v. 292 fig. C with text by Mlle Rutten).

The coin-type of Tranquillina as Tyche of Kaisareia wearing Mt Argaios as a headdress (supra ii. 979 fig. 877) can be paralleled by an engraved serpentine of Roman work c. 250 A.D., which has on one side a solar charioteer in his quadriga, on the other the veiled head of Kaisareia in profile to the right with Mt Argaios as a crown and the inscription EVTVXI BOKONTI εὐτύχ(ε)ι Βοκόντι(ε) (Brit. Mus. Cat. Gems^{2} p. 179 no. 1663 pl. 22). Another rare coin-type of Kaisareia shows Zeus standing with a kálathos on his head and Mt Argaios in his left hand (F. Lenormant in Daremberg—Saglio Dict. Ant. iii. 1996 fig. 5140 after Mionnet Descr. de méd. ant. iv. 432 no. 178 Alexander Severus ('Sérapis'), ib. Suppl. vii. 742 pl. 13, 4 (=my fig. 919)).

ii. 981 n. 1 Mt Kasion in Syria. O. Eissfeldt Baal Zaphon, Zeus Kasios und der Durchzug der Israeliten durchs Meer Halle (Saale) 1932 pp. 1—72 with sketch at beginning and map at end, especially p. 30 ff. ('Zeus Kasios')—reviewed by G. Bertram in Gnomon 1933 ix. 554 f., by F. Nötscher in the Wiener Zeitschrift für die Kunde des Morgenlandes 1933 xl. 140 f., and by A. Wendel in the Orientalistische Literaturzeitung 1934 xxxvii. 105 f.—holds that the Semitic Baal Zaphon became by interpretatio Graeca Zeus Kasios both in Syria and in Egypt, where his rescue of the Israelites was attributed to Jahwe.

ii. 984 n. 4 Mt Kasion in Egypt. A papyrus at Berlin mentions Zeus Kásios in s. ii A.D. (Ägyptische Urkunden aus den Museen zu Berlin Berlin 1903 iii. 142 no. 827, 2 f. (P. 7150) τὸ προσκύνημά σου παρὰ τῷ Δι τῷ Κασίῳ, F. Preisigke Wörterbuch der griechischen Papyrusurkunden Berlin 1931 iii. 388).

ii. 987 n. 0 anchor inscribed Ζεὺς Κάσι(ο)ς Σώζ[ων]. A 'Campanian' hydría from S. Maria di Capua, now at Karlsruhe, represents a scene of departure, in which a young man bids farewell to a woman and is about to step on board his ship. The stern of the vessel has, not only an ἄφλαστον adorned with light and dark fillets, but also a στυλίσκος set on the steersman's seat and labelled Ⅰ[Ε]ΥΣ ΣΩΤΗΡ (Winnefeld Vasensamml. Karlsruhe p. 83 f. no. 350, dated by F. von Duhn in the Jahrb. d. kais. deutsch. arch. Inst. 1888 iii. 229 ff. c. 300 B.C., H. Diels 'Das Aphlaston der antiken Schiffe' in the Zeitschrift des Vereins für Volkskunde 1915 xxv. 69 fig. 4, L. Deubner in the Jahrb. d. Deutsch. Arch. Inst. 1927 xlii. 180 ff. fig. 12).

ii. 987 n. 1 Zeus Hynnareús. U. von Wilamowitz-Möllendorff Der Glaube der Hellenen Berlin 1931 i. 127 n. 3: 'Wer Hesiod mit Αἰγεῖον das kretische Τυνάριον wiedergeben lässt, traut ihm eine verwunderliche Sprachkenntnis zu.'

ii. 1012 n. 1. Similar tales in C. F. Coxwell Siberian and other Folk-Tales London 1933 p. 414 ('Three Sisters') and pp. 540—552 ('The Story of a Wise Maiden').

ii. 1015 n. 8. The Moliones as figured by a Boeotian fibula from the Idaean Cave and by a geometric sherd from the Argive Heraion have one body, but two heads, four arms, and four legs (C. Blinkenberg Fibules grecques et orientales (Det Kgl. Danske Videnskabernes Selskab. Historisk-filologiske Meddelelser xiii. 1) Køpenhavn 1926 p. 163 ff. figs. 197, 198). See also O. Weinreich in the Archiv f. Rel. 1925 xxiii. 63 f.

ii. 1017 n. 4 Pegasos as lightning-bearer (?). L. Malten in the Jahrb. d. Deutsch. Arch. Inst. 1925 xl. 155 fig. 63 adduces bronze coins of Termessos with obv. head of Zeus, rev. forepart of bridled horse galloping with winged thunderbolt behind (Brit. Mus. Cat. Coins Lycia, etc. p. 269 f. pl. 41, 10, Hunter Cat. Coins ii. 523 no. 1).

ii. 1021 Nyx in the Orphic theogony. W. K. C. Guthrie Orpheus and Greek Religion Cambridge 1935 p. 103 notes Aristot. met. 1071 b 26 f. οἱ θεολόγοι οἱ ἐκ Νυκτὸς γεννῶντες and ib. 1091 b 4 ff. οἱ δὲ ποιηταὶ οἱ ἀρχαῖοι ταύτῃ ὁμοίως, ᾗ βασιλεύειν καὶ ἄρχειν φασὶν οὐ τοὺς πρώτους, οἷον Νύκτα καὶ Οὐρανὸν ἢ Χάος ἢ Ὠκεανόν, ἀλλὰ τὸν Δία with Alex. Aphrod. ad loc. (p. 821, 10 ff. Hayduck) αἰνίττεται δὲ τὸν Ὀρφέα· καὶ οὗτος γάρ φησιν ὅτι τὸ ἀγαθὸν καὶ ἄριστον ὕστερόν ἐστι τῶν ἄλλων. ἐπεὶ γὰρ τὸ βασιλεῦον καὶ κρατοῦν τῆς τῶν ἁπάντων φύσεώς ἐστι τὸ ἀγαθὸν καὶ ἄριστον, ὁ δὲ Ζεὺς βασιλεύει καὶ κρατεῖ, ὁ Ζεὺς ἄρ' ἐστὶ τὸ ἀγαθὸν καὶ ἄριστον. καὶ ἐπεὶ πρῶτον μὲν κατ' Ὀρφέα τὸ Χάος γέγονεν, εἶθ' ὁ Ὠκεανός, τρίτον Νύξ, τέταρτον ὁ Οὐρανός, εἶτ' ἀθανάτων βασιλεὺς θεῶν ὁ Ζεύς, δῆλον ὅτι καὶ οὗτος τὸν Δία, ταὐτὸν δ' εἰπεῖν τὸ ἀγαθὸν καὶ ἄριστον, ὕστερον νομίζει καὶ τοῦ Χάους καὶ τοῦ Ὠκεανοῦ καὶ τῆς Νυκτὸς καὶ τοῦ Οὐρανοῦ, ἤτοι τοῦ κόσμου.

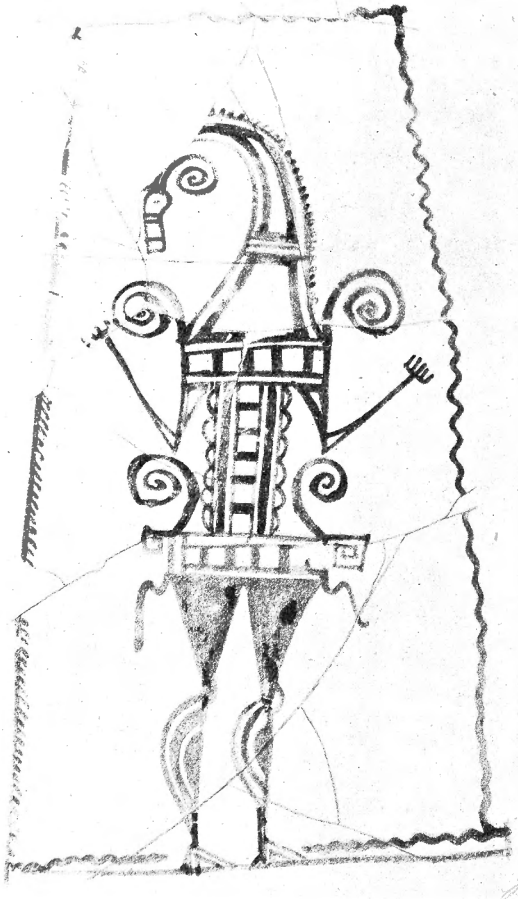

Fig. 920.

ii. 1024. On the Mandaeans in general see W. Brandt in J. Hastings Encyclopædia of Religion and Ethics Edinburgh 1915 viii. 380ª—393ª. C. H. Kraeling 'The Origin and Antiquity of the Mandeans' in the Journal of the American Oriental Society 1929 xlix. 195—218 shows (p. 209) that Mandaean cosmogony 'harks back to the traditions of the Orphic hymns, of Mochos and Sanchuniathon' (summary by E. H. Heffner in the Am. Journ. Arch. 1930 xxxiv. 200).

ii. 1025 Erikepaîos. A papyrus of s. iii B.C. found at Gurob addresses Ἰρεκεπαῖγε in an Orphic context (J. G. Smyly Greek Papyri from Gurob Dublin 1921 (Royal Irish Academy. Cunninghan Memoirs xii) p. 1 ff. no. 1 pl. 1, Orph. frag. vet. 31 col. i, 22 Kern [– –]λεῦ (Smyly cj. βασιλεῦ or Εὐβουλεῦ) Ἰρεκεπαῖγε σῶισόμ με | κ.τ.λ., W. K. C. Guthrie op. cit. p. 98).

ii. 1027. On 'Zeus Schöpfer' see J. Amann Die Zeusrede des Ailios Aristeides Stuttgart 1931 p. 47 ff.

ii. 1033 ff. The Cosmic Egg. R. Eisler Weltenmantel und Himmelszelt München 1910 ii. 410 n. 3 (Letts, Finns, Peruvians, etc.), E. Mogk 'Das Ei im Volksbrauch und Volksglauben' in the Zeitschrift des Vereins für Volkskunde 1915 xxv. 215—223, A. Olivieri 'L' uovo cosmogonico degli Orfici' in the Atti della Reale Accademia di Archeologia, Lettere e Belle arti Napoli 1920 vii. 295—334 (reviewed by F. Kiesow in the Bollettino di Filologia Classica 1921 xxvii. 169—173), Eckstein in the Handwörterbuch des deutschen Aberglaubens Berlin—Leipzig 1929/1930 ii. 595—644 ('Ei'), especially p. 596 with nn. 11, 12, 13 ('Weltei' etc.), H. C. Baldry 'Embryological Analogies in Pre-Socratic Cosmogony' in the Class. Quart. 1932 xxvi. 27 ff.

ii. 1039 χάος connected with χάσκω. F. Börtzler 'Zu den antiken Chaoskosmogonien' in the Archiv f. Rel. 1930 xxviii. 253—268 discusses the history of the rival ancient etymology from χύσις, σύγχυσις, etc.

ii. 1040 the horse-cult in Hispania Tarraconensis. A. Schulten Numantia München 1931 ii. 213 pl. 21 (=my fig. 920) publishes a red Iberian vase (supra p. 1090) bearing the black-figured design of a horse-headed god with human hands and feet—possibly the actor in some mumming play—and notes (op. cit. i. 248) that the Celtiberians worshipped the Celtic horse-goddess Epona.

Recent studies of the horse-cult include P. Maylam The Hooden Horse, an East Kent Christmas Custom Canterbury 1909 pp. 1—124 with pls. A—G, G. Ancey 'Le Cheval de Troie' in the Rev. Arch. 1913 i. 378—381, L. Malten 'Das Pferd im Totenglauben' in the Jahrb. d. kais. deutsch. arch. Inst. 1914 xxix. 179—256 with 42 figs., M. Oldfield Howey The Horse in Magic and Myth London 1923 pp. 1—238 with 6 pls. and other figs. (popular), Schrader *Reallex.*² ii. 172ᵇ—175ª, L. Curtius in Die Antike 1927 iii. 166—170, 184—186, H. M. Hubbell 'Horse Sacrifice in Antiquity' in Yale Classical Studies 1928 i. 179—192, Steller in the Handwörterbuch des deutschen Aberglaubens Berlin—Leipzig 1935 vi. 1598—1652 ('Pferd'), 1652—1655 ('Pferdefleisch'), 1655 f. ('Pferdefuss'), 1656—1660 ('Pferdeheilige'), 1660 f. ('Pferdehuf'), 1661—1664 ('Pferdejunge'), 1664—1670 ('Pferdekopf'), 1670 f. ('Pferdemahr'), 1671—1675 ('Pferdeopfer'), 1675 f. ('Pferdeschwanz'), 1679 f. ('Pferdestall'), 1680 f. ('Pferdetag'), 1681—1683 ('Pferdeumritte'), 1683 f. ('Pferdeweihe'), Ohrt ib. 1676—1679 ('Pferdesegen'), W. Koppers 'Pferdeopfer und Pferdekult der Indogermanen' in the Wiener Beiträge zur Kulturgeschichte und Linguistik 1936 iv. 279—411, R. Bleichsteiner 'Rossweihe und Pferderennen im Totenkult der kaukasischen Völker' ib. 413—495, A. Slawik 'Kultische Geheimbünde der Japaner und Germanen. Pferd' ib. 692—699, R. Lantier 'Chevaux-enseignes celtiques' in the Rev. Arch. 1939 i. 236—247 figs. 1—3.

ii. 1044 fig. 893 Helene and Menelaos. See now E. Buschor in Furtwängler—Reichhold Gr. Vasenmalerei iii. 307—311 fig. 147 pl. 170, 1. But E. Löwy 'Archäologisch-Philologisches' in Wiener Studien 1929 xlvii. 59 f. still (cp. id. 'Entstehung einer Sagenversion' ib. 1912 xxxiv. 282—287) argues with much force that Aristoph. Lys. 155 f. ὁ γὼν Μενέλαος τὰς Ἑλένας τὰ μᾶλά πα | γυμνὰς παραυδὼν ἐξέβαλ', οἰῶ, τὸ ξίφος must have had in mind some famous painting by a contemporary Attic artist.

ii. 1046 fig. 896 Eros with thunderbolt and sceptre. Another Roman gem has Eros leaning on a pillar with thunderbolt in right hand and sceptre in left (Furtwängler Ant. Gemmen i pl. 43, 55, ii. 209, Lippold Gemmen pl. 28, 6 p. 171).

ii. 1048 fig. 906 Eros whipped. Cp. the genre scenes in Furtwängler Geschnitt. Steine Berlin p. 257 no. 6918 pl. 51=id. Ant. Gemmen i pl. 42, 50, ii. 203 and in the Wilson gems (supra p. 39 n. 6) no. 5218, where three schoolboys, not Erotes, form a similar group.

ii. 1050 Erotes on early Christian sarcophagi. See now G. Rodenwaldt 'Der Klinensarkophag von S. Lorenzo' in the Jahrb. d. Deutsch. Arch. Inst. 1930 xlv. 116—189 with 59 figs. and pls. 5—7.

ii. 1053 fig. 910 Aion. Other effigies of Aion are given by H. Gressmann in the Vorträge der Bibliothek Warburg 1923—1924 Leipzig—Berlin 1926 p. 186 pl. 4, 8 and 9. O. Brendel in the Jahrb. d. Deutsch. Arch. Inst. 1933 xlviii Arch. Anz. pp. 595—599 fig. 8 adds an interesting statue at Castel-Gandolfo, which shows him as a four-winged and four-armed god with leonine head, an eye on his chest, small lion-heads on his belly and on either knee. He is flanked by two snakes, which are not twined round him. At his right foot is a hydra and a horned lion; at his left foot is Kerberos. Altogether, an aggregate of symbols worthy of this syncretistic deity (supra p. 914 n. o).

Fig. 921

ii. 1054 ff. Zeus Ktêsios. H. Sjövall Zeus im altgriechischen Hauskult Lund 1931 pp. 53—74 deals at length with this curious cult. After stating my conclusions (pp. 64—66), he proceeds to develop a rival hypothesis, which is roughly as follows. He starts with a primary piece of magic: the jar containing παγκαρπία is charged with orenda and serves as a praedeistic means of ensuring perpetual supplies in the storeroom. In course of time come secondary modifications: water and oil are added, and so the whole becomes ἀμβροσία and is taken to imply a 'Sondergott' Ktesios ('Der ursprünglich magische Zwangsritus ist zum Opferritus geworden'). Ktesios under the influence of the 'Hausschlange' is conceived as a snake, and is finally identified with an Olympian deity as Zeus Ktêsios. Reviews by H. J. Rose in the Journ. Hell. Stud. 1932 lii. 149 and in the Class. Rev. 1932 xlvi. 181, by A. Momigliano in the Studi e Materiali di storia delle religioni 1932 viii. 119, by K. Keyssner in the Berl. philol. Woch. Mai 6, 1933 pp. 493—497, by C. Picard in the Rev. Ét. Gr. 1934 xlvii. 377 f. and in the Revue de l'histoire des religions 1934 cx. 247—249.

W. Peek in the Ath. Mitth. 1934 lix. 43 f. no. 6 (Aigina: archaic) Διὸς Πασίο | [κ]αὶ Σοτῆρο[ς], cp. Inscr. Gr. Arc. Lac. Mess. ii no. 62 (supra i. 520 n. 2) and W. R. Paton—E. L. Hicks The Inscriptions of Cos Oxford 1891 no. 36, d 37 and 40 τῶι Πασίωι.

ii. 1059 Donatus as interp. Serv. On this much-debated point see P. Wessner in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. ii A. 1837—1842, H. J. Thomson 'Servius auctus and Donatus' in the Class. Quart. 1927 xxi. 205 f., G. B. Waldrop 'Donatus, the Interpreter of Vergil and Terence' in Harvard Studies in Classical Philology 1927 xxxviii. 75—142.

ii. 1059 ff. burial in the house. H. J. Rose in the Class. Quart. 1930 xxiv. 130 quotes F. von Duhn Italische Gräberkunde Heidelberg 1924 i. 36 (Saepinum, Sepino) for the only example of an Italian buried in and with his house. In 1930 G. Mylonas found 'Middle Helladic' houses, both rectangular and apsidal, on the southern slope of the akrópolis at Eleusis. 'Under the floors of these houses and between the walls were found burials of small children' (E. H. Heffner in the Am. Journ. Arch. 1931 xxxv. 197. Further details by G. Karo in the Jahrb. d. Deutsch. Arch. Inst. 1931 xlvi Arch. Anz. p. 231 ff.). But the evidence of such practices is abundant and quite conclusive, as will be admitted by anyone who reads the important articles of G. Wilke 'Wohnungsbestattung' in Ebert Reallex. xiv. 443—445 and 'Hausgrab' ib. v. 215 f.

ii. 1066 Zeus Ktésios in Thasos. P. Guillon in the Rev. Arch. 1937 i. 195—200 figs. 1 and 2 publishes a boundary-stone from Thasos inscribed c. 400 B.C. Διὸς | Κτησί|ο Πα|τρωίο and cp. another from the same locality and of similar date published by G. Mendel in the Bull. Corr. Hell. 1900 xxiv. 270 no. 10 [Δι]ὸς | ['Α]γοραίο | Θασίο (summarised by D. M. Robinson in the Am. Journ. Arch. 1937 xli. 617).

ii. 1066 Zeus Ktésios at Mylasa. A. W. Persson in the Bull. Corr. Hell. 1922 xlvi. 398 f. no. 3 a fragmentary inscription mentioning 8 f. [τὸν δεῖνα τοῦ δεῖνος, ἐ][ρέα] Διὸς Κτησίου.

ii. 1068 the jars of Zeus. A Pompeian painting from a house in the Strada della Fortuna published by H. Heydemann in the Bull. d. Inst. 1868 p. 19 ff. and in the Arch. Zeit. 1868 xxvi. 33—35 pl. 4 (=my fig. 921) and reproduced by Reinach Rép. Peint. Gr. Rom. p. 9 no. 4 ('Jupiter consulte le sort') shows the god seated with one of the Fates holding lots (?) and Nike bearing a palm-branch behind him. He has a long sceptre in his left hand and extends the right, with the lot that he has drawn or is about to draw, over a jar set on the ground at his feet. This painting deteriorated so fast on exposure to the air that a month after its discovery a thunderbolt, originally painted beside the jar in front of the god's right foot, had completely vanished. Heydemann would connect the whole scene with a picture of Herakles and the snakes painted vertically beneath it on the same wall.

A relief dating from s. iii B.C. and found at Athens in the sanctuary of Artemis Kallíste represents a man and his wife invoking the goddess, who with a large torch held in both hands stands behind her altar and in front of two big jars set on the ground (A. Philadelpheus in the Bull. Corr. Hell. 1927 li. 158 no. 1 pl. 8. P. Roussel ib. pp. 164—169 'Remarques sur le bas-relief de Kallistè' traces the significance of the jars and cites the Homeric parallel. E. H. Heffner summarises both papers in the Am. Journ. Arch. 1928 xxxii. 360).

ii. 1069 f. Zeus Agamémnon. I. Harrie 'Zeus Agamemnon in Sparta' in the Archiv f. Rel. 1925 xxiii. 359—369 explains this cult as a case of Hellenistic divinisation ('die Apotheose wird nicht als der Kult einer wirklichen Gottheit betrachtet, es haftet ihr ein Beigeschmack von serviler Schmeichelei an; diese Spartiaten, die den Agamemnon zum Götterkönig ausrufen, atmen alexandrinische Hofluft') and seeks to account for its attribution to Sparta by assuming a learned revival of the early lyrical version which connected Agamemnon with Lakedaimon and Amyklai (K. Wernicke in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. i. 724).

ii. 1070 ff. Zeus Amphiáraos. B. Leonardos ''Αμφιαρείου' in the 'Αρχ. 'Εφ. 1917 pp. 239—242, ''Αμφιάρειον' ib. 1918 pp. 110—113, 1919 pp. 99—102, 1922 pp. 101—111, 1923 pp. 166—169 reports on his excavations at the Amphiareion near Oropos over a series of seven successive years. Id. ''Αμφιαρείου ἐπιγραφαί' in the 'Εφ. 'Αρχ. 1885 pp. 93 ff., 153 ff., 1886 p. 53 ff., 1889 p. 1 ff., 1891 p. 71 ff., 1892 p. 33 ff., in the 'Αρχ. 'Εφ. 1917 pp. 39 ff., 231 ff., 1918 p. 73 ff., 1919 p. 54 ff., 1923 p. 36 ff., 1925—1926 p. 9 ff. collects 160 inscriptions from the site.

ii. 1072 Zeus amphithalés. A. Oepke ''Αμφιθαλεῖς im griechischen und hellenistischen Kult' in the Archiv f. Rel. 1934 xxxi. 42—56 deals in primis with the young acolytes in the Bacchic inscription found near Torre Nova (A. Vogliano in the Am. Journ. Arch. 1933 xxxvii. 215 ff., F. Cumont ib. p. 232 ff., with abstract by C. Alexander ib. p. 264 ff.)

and stresses the importance of pueri ingenui patrimi et matrimi in a variety of ancient cults, mystic and otherwise.

ii. 1073 ff. Zeus Trophónios. F. Peeters 'À propos de l'oracle de Trophonios. i. Les onctions d'huile et le bain dans l'Hercyna' in Le Musée Belge 1929 xxxiii. 27—32 (the anointing with oil before the bath (Paus. 9. 39. 5—7) was not a religious rite, but a practical precaution against cold).

ii. 1075 Demeter Erinýs. A. H. Krappe ''ΕΡΙΝΤΣ' in the Rhein. Mus. 1932 lxxxi. 305—320 ('die Erinyen sind die rossgestaltigen Zwillingstöchter des Herrn der Erdentiefe und einer alten Fruchtbarkeitsgottheit, einer frühgriechischen "Mutter Erde," beide gleichfalls rossgestaltig.... Nach einer gleichfalls alten Parallelüberlieferung ist nur eines der Zwillingskinder weiblichen Geschlechts; das andere ist ein Hengst...').

ii. 1077 f. Zeus Asklepiós. Cp. Galen. περὶ ἀνατομικῶν ἐγχειρήσεων 1. 2 (ii. 224 f. Kühn) ἐγὼ δὲ ἐν τῇ πατρίδι κατ' ἐκεῖνον ἔτι διέτριβον τὸν χρόνον, ὑπὸ Σατύρῳ παιδευόμενος, ἔτος ἤδη τέταρτον ἐπιδημοῦντι τῇ Περγάμῳ μετὰ Κουστουνίου Ῥουφίνου, κατασκευάζοντος ἡμῖν τὸν νεὼν τοῦ Διὸς Ἀσκληπιοῦ (where Kühn prints the erroneous translation 'divi Aesculapii templum').

Fig. 922.

ii. 1082 metopes from the temple of Asklepios. But K. A. Neugebauer in the Jahrb. d. Deutsch. Arch. Inst. 1926 xli. 83 f. infers from their lack of an upper border, from their exact height, and from other indications that these are votive reliefs, not metopes at all.

ii. 1082 ff. Asklepiós and the Snake. An echo of Asklepios' snake at Epidauros may be heard in the legend of St Hilarion (Oct. 21), who at Epidaurum or Epidaurus (Ragusa vecchia) in southern Dalmatia burnt a huge snake, of the sort called boa because they can swallow an ox (S. Baring-Gould The Lives of the Saints Edinburgh 1914 xii. 516 f.). The story is told by Hieron. v. S. Hilar. eremit. 39 (xxiii. 50 B—C Migne).

On Alexandros or the Sham Seer see also A. D. Nock 'Alexander of Abonuteichos' in the Class. Quart. 1928 xxii. 160—162.

Comparable with the coin-types of Glykon is the snake that appears on bronze pieces issued by Caracalla at Pautalia in Thrace. This monster rises erect on quadruple coils with the tail of a fish and a radiate nimbus (Brit. Mus. Cat. Coins The Tauric Chersonese, etc. p. 144 f. nos. 30—32, McClean Cat. Coins ii. 195 no. 4525 pl. 170, 2) or wreath (ib. ii. 196 no. 4526) round his head. A specimen issued by Geta gives him a lion's head (Brit. Mus. Cat. Coins The Tauric Chersonese, etc. p. 146 no. 46). Other bronze coins of Pautalia struck by Caracalla show Asklepios with his serpent-staff borne through the air by a winged and bearded snake (ib. p. 145 no. 34 fig.). And the same type occurs, under Severus Alexander, at Nikaia in Bithynia (Waddington—Babelon—Reinach Monn. gr. d'As. Min. i. 474 no. 597 (wrongly described as holding a mask in his right hand) pl. 82, 24. Fig. 922 is from a coin of mine).

ii. 1087. One more effort to find a satisfactory etymology for Asklepiós is that of D. Detscev, who in the Bulletin de l'Institut Archéologique Bulgare 1925 iii. 131—164 derives the name from a Thracian stem áσι-* 'snake' and -κλαπιός, καλαπιός cognate with the Thracian place-name κλητι-δάνα (connected with glapi* and apio* 'to bend'). On which showing Asklepiós might mean 'he who moves with serpent coils.' Further summary of these very rash speculations is supplied by E. H. Heffner in the Am. Journ. Arch. 1926 xxx. 207 f.

ii. 1089 ff. Telesphoros. G. Seure in the Rev. Arch. 1926 ii. 161 ff. no. 276 fig. 117, A publishes a Thracian statuette of Asklepios, with Telesphoros beside him, now in the Museum at Plovdiv. Other examples of the hooded type are fairly numerous: they occur e.g. in bronze at Amiens (Reinach Rép. Stat. iii. 13 no. 2), Avignon (ii. 470 no. 5), Djemila (ii. 470 no. 6), Florence (v. 223 no. 6), Nona in Dalmatia (iii. 22 no. 4 f.), Paris (ii. 470 no. 4), Trèves (iv. 293 no. 3), Troyes (ii. 470 no. 2), in marble at Mantineia (ii. 469 no. 11), Munich (vi. 110 no. 1), in stone at Nîmes (vi. 110 no. 2), and even in amber at Oedenburg (iv. 293 no. 6). The type is further discussed by J. Schmidt in Roscher Lex. Myth. v. 315 ff., H. Herter De Priapo Giessen 1932 p. 193 ('Priapus agricolarum potius exemplo hoc vestimenti genere uti videtur'), R. Egger 'Genius Cucullatus' in the Wiener prähistorische Zeitschrift 1932 xix. 311—323 (two altars inscribed Genio Cucullato in a small Celtic temple at Wabelsdorf in Carinthia: this deity, worshipped throughout the Romano-Celtic area, was introduced into Greece by the Galatians from Asia Minor, and under the Greek name Telesphoros travelled far and wide during the early centuries of our era), K. Kerényi 'Telesphoros' in Egyetemes Philologiai Koezloeny Budapest 1933 lvii. 7—11 (the cult of Telesphoros was essentially Graeco-Roman), F. J. de Waele in the Am. Journ. Arch. 1933 xxxvii. 446 n. 2 (two figurines from Corinth 'may represent a similar small divinity, a predecessor of Telesphoros, as Euamerion...in Titane (Paus. II, 11, 7)'), F. M. Heichelheim 'Genii Cucullati' in Archaeologia Aeliana Fourth Series xii. 187—194 ('among the Celts of the Danube region, Gaul, and Britain, native deities who wore the cucullus were assimilated not only to the Roman genius and the eastern Telesphorus...but also to the Cabiri....A survival of the genii cucullati in the similar representations of dwarfs, hobgoblins, and the like, in the post-Roman period...does not seem unlikely').

ii. 1089 Grabphalli. Paus. 8. 34. 2 (near Megalopolis) γῆς χῶμα...ἐπίθημα ἔχον λίθου πεποιημένον δάκτυλον, καὶ δὴ καὶ ὄνομα τῷ χώματί ἐστι Δακτύλου μνῆμα is interpreted by C. Belger in the Berl. philol. Woch. Mai 14, 1892 p. 640 as a phallós. But see the facts collected by Frazer Pausanias iv. 354—357.

ii. 1090 Zeus Hórios. On Zeus Ὅριος see also H. J. W. Tillyard in the Ann. Brit. Sch. Ath. 1904—1905 xi. 65, S. Eitrem Beiträge zur griechischen Religionsgeschichte Kristiania 1920 iii. 33, and E. Fehrle in Roscher Lex. Myth. vi. 648. It must be borne in mind that Zeus Ὅριος was not merely the Greek rendering of Iupiter Terminus or Terminalis, but also a genuine Hellenic deity, the natural protector of boundaries. Plat. legg. 842 E Διὸς ὁρίου μὲν πρῶτος νόμος ὅδε εἰρήσθω· μὴ κινείτω γῆς ὅρια μηδεὶς κ.τ.λ. implies the sanction of long-standing usage. The calendar of the Attic tetrápolis found at Koukounari, which dates from the earlier part of s. iv B.C., prescribes for Skirophorion the sacrifice of a sheep to Zeus Ὅριος (R. B. Richardson in the Am. Journ. Arch. 1895 x. 209 ff. col. I, II = J. de Prott Leges Graecorum Sacrae Lipsiae 1896 Fasti sacri p. 46 ff. no. 26, A II [τάδε ὁ ἄρχων θύ?]ει· Διὶ Ὁρίωι οἷς Δ++). And the northern boundary of the Thracian Chersonesos was marked by an inscribed altar of the same god ([Dem.] de Halonnes. 39 f. καίτοι Χερρονήσου οἱ ὅροι εἰσίν, οὐκ Ἀγορά, ἀλλὰ βωμὸς τοῦ Διὸς τοῦ Ὁρίου, ὃς ἐστι μεταξὺ Πτελεοῦ καὶ Λευκῆς Ἀκτῆς, ᾗ ἡ διορυχὴ ἔμελλε Χερρονήσου ἔσεσθαι, ὡς γε τὸ ἐπίγραμμα τὸ ἐπὶ τοῦ βωμοῦ τοῦ Διὸς τοῦ Ὁρίου δηλοῖ. ἔστι δὲ τουτί· τόνδε καθιδρύσαντο θεῷ περικαλλέα βωμὸν | Λευκῆς καὶ Πτελεοῦ μέσσον ὅρον θέμενοι | ἐναέται, χώρης σημήϊον· ἀμμορίης δὲ | αὐτὸς ἄναξ μακάρων ἐστὶ μέσος Κρονίδης (J. H. Vince translates 'Zeus is Warden of our No Man's Land.' F. Blass had cj. μοίρης σημήϊον ἀμμορίης τε on the strength of Od. 20. 75 f.)). Hence Schöll—Studemund anecd. i. 265 Ἐπίθετα Διός... 71 ὁρίου, ib. i. 266 Ἐπίθετα Διός... 66 ὁρίου. Cp. a dedication of the Abderites to Hadrian as Τραιανῷ Ἀδριανῷ | Σεβαστῷ Ζηνὶ Ἐφορίω (G. Bakalakis in Θρακικά 1937 viii. 29 = Rev. Arch. 1937 ii. 386 no. 170).

ii. 1091 ff. Zeus Meilichios. Short studies of this cult in H. Sjövall Zeus im altgriechischen Hauskult Lund 1931 pp. 75—84 ('Zeus Philios und Zeus Meilichios') and M. P. Nilsson 'Die Götter des Symposions' (E Symbolis Philologicis O. A. Danielsson octogenario dicatis seorsum expressum) Upsaliae 1932 pp. 224—227. G. Blum 'Μειλίχιος' in Le Musée Belge 1913 xvii. 313—320 held that the appellative meant '"maître des abeilles," c'est-à-dire des âmes' (A. Plassart in the Bull. Corr. Hell. 1926 l. 423 n. 4): cp. Journ. Hell. Stud. 1895 xv. 19.

ii. 1095 κύρβεις. M. Guarducci '"Axones" e "kyrbeis"' in the Rendiconti della Pontificia Accademia romana di Archeologia 1929—1931 vii. 101—107 distinguishes ἄξονες, three or, more probably, four tables of wood set at an angle to each other and revolving on a common axle, from κύρβεις, prismatic or pyramidal blocks of stone tapering towards the top but not made to move: both forms of monument were inscribed boustrophedón. She publishes the limestone fragment of a law-κύρβις from Prinias (Rhizenia?) and compares with it the inscribed tapering stone from Dreros (Michel Recueil d'Inscr. gr. no. 23, F. Blass in Collitz—Bechtel Gr. Dial.-Inschr. iii. 2. 239 ff. no. 4952, Dittenberger Syll. inscr. Gr.[3] no. 527) and a similar inscription on a block of red trachyte from Chios (U. von Wilamowitz-Moellendorff Nordionische Steine (Abh. d. berl. Akad. 1909 Phil.-hist. Classe ii. 64 ff. pl. 2 no. 25), E. Schwyzer Dialectorum Graecarum exempla epigraphica potiora Lipsiae 1923 p. 337 f. no. 687, M. N. Tod A selection of Greek historical inscriptions to the end of the fifth century B.C. Oxford 1933 p. 1 ff. no. 1). See now M. Guarducci in Inscr. Cret. i. 84 ff. Dreros no. 1, 297 f. Rhizenia? no. 7. Note also the pillar of Poseidon, made of brass and inscribed with the laws, in the island of Atlantis (Plat. Kritias 119 c ff.). L. B. Holland 'Axones' in the Am. Journ. Arch. 1939 xliii. 302 (unpublished).

ii. 1099 n. 2 the altar of Zeus Litaîos on coins of Nikaia. On these coins see now C. T. Seltman in the Cambridge University Reporter 1926 lvii. 556 (report of a paper read to the Cambridge Philological Society, Nov. 25, 1926).

ii. 1101 Zeus Xénios. J. Vürtheim Aischylos' Schutzflehende Amsterdam 1928 pp. 6—8 ('Zeus Xenios'), O. Weinreich s.v. 'Xenios' in Roscher Lex. Myth. vi. 522—525 (a careful and comprehensive collection of data).

ii. 1102 n. 4 Arántides. H. Krahe 'Zu makedonisch ΑΡΑΝΤΙΣΙΝ · ΕΡΙΝΤΣΙ' in the Archiv f. Rel. 1933 xxx. 393—395 regards the name as Illyrian.

ii. 1103. F. N. Pryce in the Journ. Hell. Stud. 1936 lvi. 77 f. pl. 5 publishes a small Attic bell-krater, said to have been found at Corinth and now in the collection of Mr E. Armytage, which appears to show Theseus waiting at the altar of Zeus Meilíchios to be purified of blood-guiltiness, cp. Bakchyl. 17. 46 ff.

ii. 1103 n. 7 Zeus Sykásios. H. Vorwahl 'Zum Ursprung des "Feigenblatts"' in the Rhein. Mus. 1930 lxxix. 319 f. rightly concludes: 'So ergibt die philologische Untersuchung eine Bestätigung der psychoanalytischen Bemerkung, dass das Feigenblatt nicht das Symbol der Keuschheit, sondern der bewusst gewordenen Sexualität sei.'

ii. 1105 Zeus Meilíchios enthroned. A. Plassart in the Bull. Corr. Hell. 1926 l. 424 n. 3 cites a votive relief in the Museum at Corfu (inv. no. 352), which represents Zeus seated to the right on a rock with a sceptre in his left hand, a phiale in his right. On either side of him two snakes advance, raising their heads. Before him are traces of a small female votary with uplifted arm. The relief is inscribed in letters of s. iii or earlier Ἠγησὼ Διὶ Μειλιχίωι.

ii. 1114 Zeus Meilíchios associated with Helios. S. G. Paraskeuaïdes in the Ἀρχ. Ἐφ. 1932 ἀρχ. χρον. p. 12 f. no. 1 fig. 1 publishes a grey marble slab from Mytilene bearing a manumission of c. 200 B.C. Τεῖμις Εὐκτιμένηα | ἀφείει ἐλευθέραν | Πέλεαν ὑπὸ Δία καὶ | Ἄλιον, ἀνένκλητόν | μοι γενομέναν, | ἐπεί κε τὸν βίον ἐγλίπη. ‖ Τεῖμις Εὐκτιμένηα | ἀφείει ἐλευθέραν | ἐλευθέραν | ὑπὸ Δία καὶ Ἄλιον. He quotes other manumissions ὑπὸ Δία Γᾶν Ἥλιον (Dittenberger Syll. inscr. Gr.[3] no. 1212 with n. 2, supra ii. 729 n. 0) and ὑπὸ Δία Ἥλιον (K. A. Rhomaios in the Ἀρχ. Δελτ. 1924—1925 ix παράρτ. 5 Thermos).

ii. 1115 Zeus Meilíchios at Sounion. In the fortress outside the temple at Sounion G. P. Oikonomos in 1924 found 'a votive stele to Zeus Meilichios, with two snakes displayed symmetrically' (A. M. Woodward in the Journ. Hell. Stud. 1924 xliv. 274, cp. G. Welter in the Jahrb. d. Deutsch. Arch. Inst. 1925 xl Arch. Anz. p. 314).

ii. 1124 n. 0 a goblet inscribed ΔΙΟΣ ΣΩΤΗΡΟΣ. Such γραμματικὰ ἐκπώματα have been listed and discussed by C. Picard 'À propos de deux coupes du Vatican et d'un fragment du Musée Kircher' in the Mélanges d'archéologie et d'histoire (École Française de Rome) 1910 xxx. 99—116 pls. 2 and 3 and id. in the Rev. Arch. 1913 ii. 174—178 ('ΓΡΑΜΜΑΤΙΚΑ ΕΚΠΩΜΑΤΑ'). He enumerates sixteen specimens, of which no. 7 is a stámnos from Fasano with a painted inscription ΔΙΟΣ ΣΩΤΗΡΟΣ (Brit. Mus. Cat. Vases iv. 226 no. F 548), no. 15 a kýlix of black Attic ware from Pantikapaion incised [ἄμ]φωτις Διὸς Σωτῆρ[os] (B. Pharmakowsky in the Jahrb. d. kais. deutsch. arch. Inst. 1910 xxv Arch. Anz. p. 209 f.), no. 16 fig. 5 a fragment of a black-glazed kántharos from the Peiraieus lettered in orange-red paint [ΔΙΟΣ] ΣΩΤΗ[ΡΟΣ]. See further C. Picard in the Rev. Arch. 1938 ii. 105—107.

ii. 1132 the soul of the divine king escaped as a bird. A. H. Krappe in the Rhein. Mus. 1928 lxxvii. 184 cites an Iranian tale from F. Spiegel Erânische Alterthumskunde Leipzig 1873 ii. 43: 'So hören wir (Yt. 19, 34) dass sich die königliche Majestät in Gestalt eines Vogels von Yima entfernte, als derselbe anfing lügnerische Worte zu sprechen; immerhin wird man gedacht haben dass die Majestät auf ein anderes Glied der königlichen Familie überging.'

ii. 1132 n. 4 the sceptre of Zeus. Cp. Hes. cat. frag. 123 Kinkel, 103 Rzach, ap. Plat. Min. 320 D (Minos) ὃς βασιλεύτατος ἔσκε καταθνητῶν βασιλήων | καὶ πλείστων ἤνασσε περικτιόνων ἀνθρώπων | Ζηνὸς ἔχων σκῆπτρον· τῷ καὶ πολέων βασίλευεν.

ii. 1132 n. 6. On sceptre-worship see also M. Cary—A. D. Nock 'Magic spears' in the Class. Quart. 1927 xxi. 123 n. 5.

ii. 1135 the central slab from the eastern frieze of the Parthenon (pl. xliv). One or two fresh facts and fancies must be recorded. W. R. Lethaby 'The Central Part of the Eastern Frieze of the Parthenon' in the Journ. Hell. Stud. 1929 xlix. 7—13 figs. 1—6 (summarised by E. H. Heffner in the Am. Journ. Arch. 1929 xxxiii. 555 f.) observes that exquisite sepia-drawings made in all probability by William Pars in 1765—6 and now in the Elgin Collection at the British Museum bring out sundry details no longer distinct (heads of Athena and Hephaistos, etc.). 'The central group is divided off from the rest of the frieze right and left by intervals of space down through which, on either hand, a slightly scored line may be traced. It is probable, I think, that these lines defined a difference of colour in the background which showed that the central action was on a different plane from the rest, that is, in the interior of the Temple.'

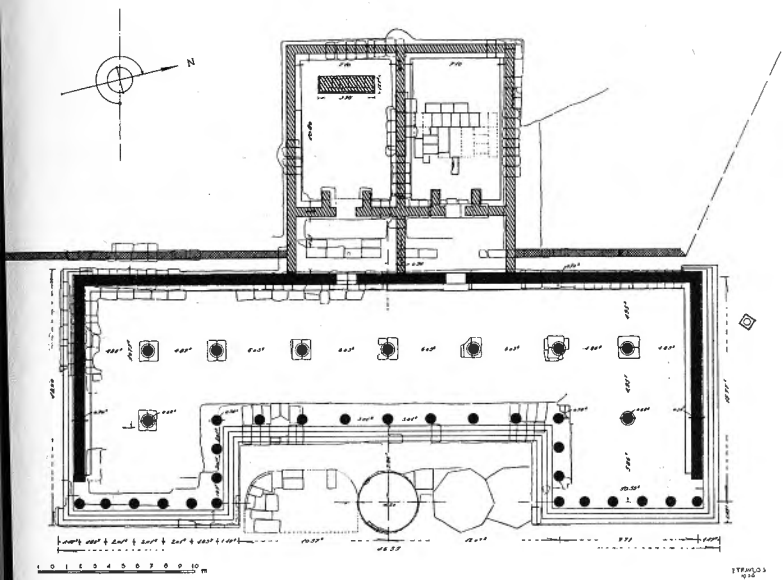

Fig. 923.

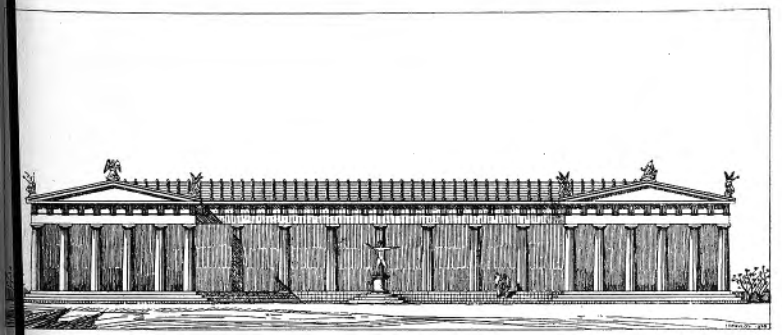

Fig. 924.

Lily Ross Taylor 'Seats and Peplos on the Parthenon Frieze' in the Am. Journ. Arch. 1936 xl. 121 and ead. 'A Sellisternium on the Parthenon Frieze' in Quantulacumque: Studies Presented to Kirsopp Lake London 1937 pp. 253—264 figs. 1—7 suggests that the péplos was intended, not as clothing for the xóanon of Athena, but as drapery to be placed over the chair of one of the gods.

ii. 1135 n. 4. N. Valmin 'Die Zeus-Stoa in der Agora von Athen' in the K. Humanistika Vetenskapssamfundets i Lund Årsberättelse 1933—1934 i (Bulletin de la Société Royale des Lettres de Lund 1933—1934 i) Lund 1934 pp. 1—7 with fig. 1 ('Skizzenplan') rightly located the Stoà Basíleios and identified it with the Stoá of 'Zeus Soter-Eleutherios.' O. Walter 'Zeus- und Königshalle der Athener Agora' in the Jahresh. d. oest. arch. Inst. 1936 xxx Beiblatt pp. 95—100 maintains that the Stoà Basíleios (c. 500 B.C.) was distinct from the Stoá of Zeus Eleuthérios (shortly before 400 B.C.). But that is not the view taken by the American excavators of the Agorá (Hesperia 1937 vi. 225 f.). Thanks to their highly successful researches it is now possible to assert with some confidence that the Stoà Basíleios was identical with the Stoá of Zeus Eleuthérios, and to get some idea of its history and appearance. See the definitive account of the building contributed by H. A. Thompson to Hesperia 1937 vi. 5—77 ('Stoa of Zeus Eleutherios') with pl. 1 groundplan, actual state, pl. 2 groundplan, restored, and 39 figs. By the courtesy of Mr Thompson I am able to reproduce both the restored plan (pl. 2 = my fig. 923) and the restored elevation (fig. 34 = my fig. 924) of this important structure. It seems probable that certain earlier remains found beneath the Stoá (rectangular base of pýtos with neighbouring altar) belonged to a sanctuary of Zeus Sotér or Eleuthérios (schol. Aristoph. Plout. 1175 ἐν ἄστει Διὰ Σωτῆρα τιμῶσιν, ἔνθα καὶ Σωτῆρος Διός ἐστιν ἱερόν· τὸν αὐτὸν δὲ ἔνιοι καὶ Ἐλευθέριόν φασι), who owed his second title to the deliverance from Persia that he had wrought (Harpokr. s.v. Ἐλευθέριος Ζεύς· Ὑπερείδης (frag. 25 p. 279 a 32 ff. Sauppe) "τῷ μὲν τοίνυν Διί, ὦ ἄνδρες δικασταί, ἡ ἐπωνυμία γέγονε τοῦ Ἐλευθέριον προσαγορεύεσθαι διὰ τὸ τοὺς ἐξελευθέρους τὴν στοὰν οἰκοδομῆσαι τὴν πλησίον αὐτοῦ." *ὁ δὲ Διόδυμός φησιν ἁμαρτάνειν τὸν ῥήτορα· ἐκλήθη γὰρ Ἐλευθέριος διὰ τὸ τῶν Μηδικῶν ἀπαλλαγῆναι τοὺς Ἀθηναίους. ὅτι δὲ ἐπιγέγραπται μὲν Σωτήρ, ὀνομάζεται δὲ καὶ Ἐλευθέριος, δηλοῖ καὶ Μέναν*δρος, cp. et. mag. p. 329, 44 ff.). The pre-Persic statue of the god presumably perished in the sack of 480/479 B.C. and was later replaced by another statue bearing the appellation Eleuthérios. When the Stoá was designed, c. 430 B.C., room was left in front of it for the famous figure on a large circular base. The building, which was virtually completed by 409/8 B.C. (Inscr. Gr. ed. min. i no. 115, 7 f. [πρόσθεν τ]ε[ς] Στο[ᾶς τῆς Βασιλείας), was a Doric colonnade with a façade of seven columns and two wings of six by four columns—an arrangement perhaps suggested by that of Mnesikles' Propylaia. On the back-wall were paintings of the Twelve Gods (Paus. 1. 3. 3); on 'the wall beyond,' probably the south wall, paintings of Theseus and Demokratia and Demos (Paus. ib.); also, presumably on the north wall, a painting of the battle fought at Mantineia by the Athenians sent to help the Lacedaemonians (Paus. 1. 3. 4). The paintings were by Euphranor (Val. Max. 8. 11. ext. 5, Plin. nat. hist. 35. 129, Plout. de glor. Ath. 2, Loukian. imagg. 7, Paus. 1. 3. 4, Eustath. in Il. p. 145, 10 ff.). The tiled roof had two akrotéria in terra cotta, which represented Theseus hurling Skiron into the sea and Hemera carrying Kephalos (Paus. 1. 3. 1), perhaps a relic of the official quarters assigned to the basileús before the Persian invasion (see, however, the suggestions of C. Picard in the Rev. Arch. 1938 ii. 95 f.). An annex of two large rooms was built behind the Stoá in s. i A.D. to secure greater privacy for the court of the basileús and for occasional meetings of the council of the Areopagites (cp. Dem. in Aristog. 1. 23).

ii. 1137 n. 0 the basileús about to wear Athena's péplos (?). Cp. Diod. 1. 14 (each of the gods honoured Herakles with special gifts) Ἀθηνᾶ μὲν πέπλῳ, Ἥφαιστος δὲ ῥοπάλῳ καὶ θώρακι. For interchange of clothing see further W. R. Halliday The Greek Questions of Plutarch Oxford 1928 p. 216 ff.

ii. 1143. K. A. Neugebauer in the Jahrb. d. Deutsch. Arch. Inst. 1922 xxxvii Arch. Anz. p. 76 no. 25 records the acquisition by the Berlin Antiquarium (inv. no. 30021, photo 3440) of a small bronze snake (0·187^{m} long) with raised head and inlaid pupils. Its back is inscribed in archaic lettering ΙΑΡΟΣΕΜΙΤΟΜΕΛΛΙΨΙΟΤΟ-ΤΤΕΛΑΝΑΙ (ἱαρὸς ἐμὶ τῶ Μελλιχίο τῶ Πελάναι). This was purchased at Paris in 1911 as coming from the Peloponnese, and A. Plassart in the Bull. Corr. Hell. 1926 l. 424 n. 4 states that in 1916 he saw near the find-spot (Pellana in Achaia) a second small bronze snake, but uninscribed, which was said to have been found at the same time.

ii. 1146 n. 0 pyramidal tombs for horses at Agrigentum. C. M. Firth and J. E. Quibell found at Saqqara two mummies of horses, dating from the reign of Ramses ii (Comptes rendus de l'Acad. des inscr. et belles-lettres 1926 p. 205 f.). But on Greek pyramidal structures see now the important paper of L. E. Lord in the Am. Journ. Arch. 1939 xliii. 78—84.

ii. 1150 tomb-ceiling as mimic sky. Sir A. J. Evans in The Illustrated London News for Sept. 26, 1931 p. 485 ff. publishes a temple-tomb close to the palace at Knossos. The rock-cut sepulchral chamber had a central pillar, and 'the rock ceiling—squares of which were visible between the beams—had been tinted with the brilliant Egyptian blue, or kyanos, so that the dead beneath the vault might not be without the illusion of the sky above.' See further id. The Palace of Minos London 1935 iv. 2. 975 and context.

ii. 1151 Zeus Meilichios at Thespiai, etc. A. Plassart in the Bull. Corr. Hell. 1926 l. 422 f. no. 43 cites a fragmentary inscription from Thespiai Δεξιάδας | Πτέρωνος | ἱαρεὺς | Δι[ὶ Μ]ειλιχίοι | κὴ Μιλιχίη. | κ.τ.λ. and no. 44 another from the same place Θρασύμαχος | Θέωνος ἱαρεὺς | Διὶ Μιλιχίω. Id. ib. p. 423 n. 2 refers to A. D. Keramopoullos in the Ἀρχ. Δελτ. 1917 iii. 422 n. 0 no. 2 (Lebadeia) a marble stelídion (height 0·23^{m}) bearing an omphalós (height c. 0·05^{m}) and beneath it the inscription [Σ]ωσίας | Δαίμονι | Μιλιχίῳ with a snake creeping up towards it: Keramopoullos observes that Δαίμων Μιλίχιος may well be the Ἀγαθὸς Δαίμων. Plassart p. 423 n. 3 adds A. Jardé—M. Laurent in the Bull. Corr. Hell. 1902 xxvi. 324 ff. no. 15 (Anthedon) a marble stéle (height 0·40^{m}) with a snake [Ἀ]πολλόνιο[ς] | [Κ]αφισοδό[του] | [Δι]εῖ (or [Ζην]εῖ?) Μιλ[ι]χί[φ] found above the door of the church of Hagios Athanasios, which appears to stand on the site of the sanctuary of Zeus Milichios.

ii. 1153 n. 1. See further P. Kretschmer 'Oidipus und Melampus' in Glotta 1923 xii. 59—61, E. Fränkel in Gnomon 1928 iv. 447, H. Petersson in M. P. Nilsson The Mycenaean Origin of Greek Mythology Cambridge 1932 p. 105 n. 11, L. W. Daly in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. xvii. 2104 f.

ii. 1155 Zeus Meilichios in Thessaly. Inscr. Gr. sept. iii. 2 no. 145 (Thebae Phthiotides) a white stone inscribed Διὶ Μειλιχίωι | Κριτὼ | Ἀρσί[α]? | ἀνέθ[η][κ]εν.

ii. 1156 Akrisios. A. H. Krappe in the Rev. Ét. Gr. 1930 xliii. 157 treats Akrisios as 'le vieux dieu Cronos lui-même' and compares Akrisios' expulsion of the infant Perseus (influencing the legend of Astyages and Kyros the Persian) with Kronos' expulsion of the infant Zeus, concluding that a folk-tale motif may be traced in both myths and even in the quasi-historical legend. L. Bieler in Wiener Studien 1931 xlix. 120—123 ('Der Tod des Akrisios') regards Ἀκρίσιος as Illyrian, Τευταμίδας as 'vorgriechisch-pelasgisch.' H. Krahe 'Sprachwissenschaftliches zur Sage von der Flucht des Akrisios' id. 1933 li. 141—143 argues that both Ἀκρίσιος and Τευταμίδας are names of Illyrian origin.

ii. 1156 Zeus Milichios in Samos. E. Preuner in the Ath. Mitth. 1924 xlix. 42 no. 9 a votive inscription from Tigani Κλέας Μεγάκλου | Διὶ Μιλιχίωι.

ii. 1156 Zeus Meilichios in Nisyros. W. Peek in the Ath. Mitth. 1932 lvii. 57 f. no. 8 an inscription of Roman date from Rhodes (G. Jacopi in Clara Rhodos 1932 ii. 213 f. no. 52) Καλλικράτην ἱερῆα πατρὸς γεγαῶτα Θέωνος | Ζηνὸς Μειλιχίοιο κλυτὴ Νείσυρος ἀείδει and Ζεῦ μ[εδέ]ων Νείσυρον, ἀπήμονα σῶιξε Θέωνα | Καλλικράτους, ὃν στέψας, ἐπεὶ τεὸς εἰρὸς ἐτύχθη. The two distichs are engraved within two wreaths on a tabula ansata of white marble. R. Herbst in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. xvii. 765 adds Inscr. Gr. ins. iii nos. 95 and 96.

ii. 1157 Zeus Meilichios in Kypros. T. B. Mitford in the Journ. Hell. Stud. 1937 lvii. 29 no. 2 a boundary-stone at Amathous ΔΙΟΣ | ΜΕΙΛΙΧΙΟΥ in large lettering with ΩΝ (quid?) in smaller lettering to the left of the second line.

ii. 1157 n. 0 Zeus Apotrópaios. E. A. Gardner—F. Ll. Griffith Naukratis London 1888 ii. 13, 61, 68 no. 14 pl. 22 ἱερὸν Δι[ὸς Ἀπ]οτροπ[αίου] on a stone found in the témenos of Hera.

For the sale of priesthoods at Erythrai see L. Robert in the Bull. Corr. Hell. 1933 lvii. 472.

ii. 1158 Zeus Meilíchios at Kyrene. U. von Wilamowitz-Moellendorff in Hermes 1930 lxv. 257 f. ('Lesefrüchte' no. 280) cites rock-cut inscriptions at and near Kyrene to show that the dead were associated in cult with the Eumenides and with Zeus Meilíchios (after S. Ferri Contributi di Cirene alla storia della religione greca (Collezione Γραφή. 2) Roma 1923) pl. 10).

ii. 1158 Zeus Meilíchios at Selinous. K. Lehmann-Hartleben in the Jahrb. d. Deutsch. Arch. Inst. 1926 xli Arch. Anz. p. 179 fig. 36 briefly reports the discovery by E. Gàbrici of a sanctuary of Zeus Meilíchios at Selinous. This small témenos occupied the north-east angle of the large site sacred to Demeter Malophóros, just as the témenos of Hekate Propylaía occupied the south-east angle. For a full account of it see E. Gàbrici's official publication in the Mon. d. Linc. 1928 xxxii. 91—107 figs. 53—64

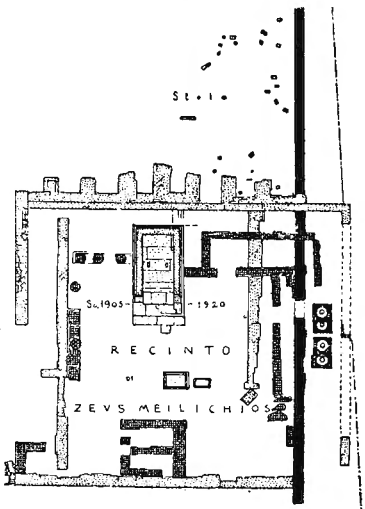

Fig. 925.

('Edicola ed altari di Meilichios e della Pasikrateia (?)'), 174—181 ('Stele figurate del recinto di Meilichios'), 381—383 (inscriptions), 403—405 (cult). The precinct (pl. 2, part of which = my fig. 925) included a little temple, the base of which measured only 5·20^{m} by 2·97^{m}—a mere casket for the statue or statues within. Two Doric columns stood opposite the antae; but their entablature was of a simplified Ionic order (fig. 58 = my fig. 926). In front of the temple were two oblong altars, one large, one small; and it was originally flanked by a pair of porticoes, each with five columns. Behind the west wall of the precinct were found numerous stêlai, mostly small piers square in section, or pyramidal, or cylindrical, and nearly all without inscription. The few inscribed blocks were archaic in character: p. 381 f. no. 3 pl. 97, 4 τὸ Διὸς τὸ Μ|ειλιχίο ἐμὶ | πρῶτα Εὐμε|νίδο τὸ Πε|διάρχο ('I, the first-fruits of Eumenides son of Pediarchos, belong to Zeus Meilíchios.' Wilamowitz in Hermes 1930 lxv. 258 cj. πρὸ τᾶ(ν) Εὐμενίδο(ν)), p. 382 no. 4 pl. 97, 1 = my fig. 927 Λυκίσφο (perhaps Γ|λυκίσφο| ἐμὶ̣ Μειλίχιος, p. 382 f. no. 5 pl. 97, 2 Μελίχιος | τὸν Κλευλιδᾶν, p. 384 no. 9 pl. 97, 3 τὸ Μ̣ι̣λ̣[ιχίο – –]σαφο[–]s. Other finds on the site were a double altar of simpler type (fig. 62), and several small wells (figs. 63—66) for the storage of lustral water, etc. Offerings made to the god were vases and objects of minor worth, which were burnt along with the animal sacrifice and buried in the ashes: over them was erected a stéle, often surmounted by a pair of busts, male and female (pls. 27, 1—4, 28, 1—6, 29, 1—8, of which 27, 3 f. = my figs. 928 f.). Gàbrici concludes that the whole cult had a chthonian character, Zeus Meilichios and Pasikrateia (?) being the Selinuntine equivalents of Hades and Persephone.

ii. 1158 Zeus Meilichios at Pompeii. For a description of his temple in Reg. viii. 7 (8). 25 see A. Mau—A. Ippel Führer durch Pompeji Leipzig 1928 p. 162 f. R. C. Carrington in the Journ. Rom. Stud. 1933 xxiii. 132 pl. 10 figures the wall of it and dates it early in s. I B.C.

ii. 1159 n. 1. On the names Δάζιμος, Δάζος, and the like see H. Krahe Die alten balkanillyrischen geographischen Namen Heidelberg 1925 p. 86 and R. Vulpe 'Gli Illiri dell' Italia imperiale romana' in the Ephemeris Dacoromana (Annuario della Scuola Romena di Roma) 1925 iii. 131, 145 n. 1, 217. And on the Lares, E. Tabeling Mater Larum Zum Wesen der Larenreligion Frankfurt am Main 1932 pp. 1—104.

ii. 1160 ff. Zeus Philios. See H. Sjövall Zeus im altgriechischen Hauskult Lund 1931 pp. 75—84 ('Zeus Philios und Zeus Meilichios'), M. P. Nilsson 'Die Götter des Symposions' (E Symbolis Philologicis O. A. Danielsson octogenario dicatis seorsum expressum) Upsaliae 1932 pp. 218—224.

ii. 1161 ff. Zeus Philios at Athens. Gabriel Welter 'Eine Weihung an Zeus Philios' in the Ath. Mitth. 1925 l. 165 f. publishes an inscription of the early fourth century B.C., found in a Byzantine wall above the odeîon of Herodes Attikos at Athens and probably derived from the adjoining Asklepieion: Λυσικράτης [Λ]υσικλέος | ἐκ Κο[λ]ωνῶ Δ[ι]ὶ Φιλίωι | [ἀ]νέ[θ]η[κεν].

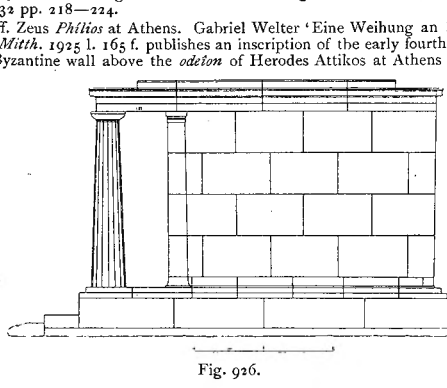

Fig. 926.

ii. 1163 n. 6. H. J. Rose 'The Bride of Hades' in Classical Philology 1925 xx. 238—243 (the idea underlying Soph. Ant. 815 and other Greek passages is that the earth receives increased fertility from the potential, unused fertility of the chaste).

ii. 1167 love in relation to Zeus. Dion Chrys. or. 4 p. 71 Dindorf ὁμοίως δὲ καὶ φιλίαν οὐκ ἄλλην ἢ τὸ ταὐτὰ βούλεσθαι καὶ διανοεῖσθαι, ὁμόνοιάν τινα οὖσαν...ὃς ἂν οὖν τῷ Διὶ φίλος ᾖ καὶ ὁμονοῇ πρὸς ἐκεῖνον, ἔσθ' ὅπως ἀδίκου τινὸς ἐπιθυμήσει πράγματος ἢ πονηρόν τι καὶ αἰσχρὸν διανοηθήσεται; On this subject of personal intimacy with Zeus see further the able articles of F. Dirlmeier on 'ΘΕΟΦΙΛΙΑ—ΦΙΛΟΘΕΙΑ' in Philologus 1935 xc. 57—77 and 176—193.

ii. 1167 f. Diotima's τέλεα καὶ ἐποπτικά. A. M. Desrousseaux 'Plutarque, Mor. 382^{cd}' in the Rev. Ét. Gr. 1933 xlvi. 210—213 (Plout. de Is. et Os. 78 διὸ καὶ Πλάτων καὶ Ἀριστοτέλης ἐποπτικὸν τοῦτο τὸ μέρος τῆς φιλοσοφίας καλοῦσιν, ὡς (Desrousseaux corr. ᾧ vel, quod praestat, ἐν ᾧ) οἱ τὰ δοξαστὰ καὶ μικτὰ καὶ παντοδαπὰ ταῦτα παραμειψάμενοι τῷ λόγῳ πρὸς τὸ πρῶτον ἐκεῖνο καὶ ἁπλοῦν καὶ ἄυλον ἐξάλλονται καί, θιγόντες ἁπλῶς (so Reiske for ἅλως) τῆς περὶ αὐτὸ καθαρᾶς ἀληθείας, οἷον ἐν τελέτῃ (so Reiske for ἐντελῆ) τέλος, ἔχειν φιλοσοφίαν νομίζουσι—from which it is clear that Aristotle was following the very words of his master in symp. 210 A).

ii. 1176 n. 4 Zeus Ephéstios. See now H. Sjövall Zeus im altgriechischen Hauskult Lund 1931 p. 115 f.

ii. 1177 n. 2. Cp. Aristot. εἰς Ἑρμείαν 16 ff. Edmonds, 14 f. Diehl ap. Athen. 696 D, Diog. Laert. 5. 8, Stob. flor. 1. 12 (ed. Gaisford i. 5) τοίγαρ ἀοίδιμον ἔργοις | ἀθάνατόν τέ μιν αὐδήσουσι (so Wilamowitz for αὐξήσουσι) Μοῦσαι, | Μναμοσύναις θύγατρες, | Διὸς Ξενίου σέβας αὔξου|σαι φιλίας τε γέρας βεβαίου.

Fig. 927.

Fig. 928.

Fig. 929.

ii. 1179 ff. Trajan and Zeus Philios at Pergamon. W. H. Buckler 'Auguste, Zeus Patroos' in the Rev. Philol. Troisième Série 1935 lxi. 177—188 adduces a series of official Pergamene inscriptions (nine decrees and two letters) to show that the complete deification of Augustus was reached through three successive phases: (1) from 27 B.C. to 3 B.C. he was αὐτοκράτωρ Καῖσαρ θεοῦ υἱὸς Σεβαστός, and his highpriest ὁ ἀρχιερεὺς θεᾶς Ῥώμης καὶ αὐτοκράτορος Καίσαρος θεοῦ υἱοῦ Σεβαστοῦ; (2) from 2 B.C. to 14 A.D. Augustus was αὐτοκράτωρ Καῖσαρ θεοῦ υἱὸς Σεβαστός, ἀρχιερεὺς μέγιστος καὶ πατὴρ τῆς πατρίδος καὶ τοῦ σύμπαντος τῶν ἀνθρώπων γένους, and his highpriest ὁ ἀρχιερεὺς θεᾶς Ῥώμης καὶ αὐτοκράτορος Καίσαρος θεοῦ υἱοῦ Σεβαστοῦ ἀρχιερέως μεγίστου καὶ πατρὸς τῆς πατρίδος καὶ τοῦ σύμπαντος τῶν ἀνθρώπων γένους; (3) from 15 A.D. onwards (after his death on Aug. 19, 14 A.D. and his consecration by the Senate on Sept. 17, 14 A.D.) Augustus became θεὸς Σεβαστὸς Καῖσαρ Ζεὺς Πατρῷος αὐτοκράτωρ καὶ ἀρχιερεὺς μέγιστος, πατὴρ τῆς πατρίδος καὶ τοῦ σύμπαντος τῶν ἀνθρώπων γένους, and his highpriest ὁ ἀρχιερεὺς θεᾶς Ῥώμης καὶ θεοῦ Σεβαστοῦ Καίσαρος Διὸς Πατρῴου αὐτοκράτορος καὶ ἀρχιερέως μεγίστου, πατρὸς τῆς πατρίδος καὶ τοῦ σύμπαντος τῶν ἀνθρώπων γένους. Thus Augustus while alive was treated as (1) a hero and (2) a demi-god, when dead was raised to the rank of (3) a god and identified with Zeus Πατρῷος. The documents relevant to this third stage are (a) Sir C. T. Newton A History of Discoveries at Halicarnassus, Cnidus, and Branchidæ London 1862—1863 ii. 2. 695—698 no. 6 pl. 87, G. Hirschfeld in The Collection of Ancient Greek Inscriptions in the British Museum London 1893 iv. 1. 63—65 no. 894; (b) J. Keil 'Zur Geschichte der Hymnoden in der Provinz Asia' in the Jahresh. d. oest. arch. Inst 1908 xi. 101—107 (Ödemish near Hypaipa); (c) Corp. inscr. Gr. ii no. 3187 (Smyrna). Cp. also (d) a marble pedestal from Aphrodisias, which must have carried a statue of Zeus with the features of Augustus, inscribed Δία Πατρῷον | [Σεβ]αστὸν Καίσαρα (W. Kubitschek—W. Reichel in the Anz. d. Akad. d. Wiss. Wien Phil.-hist. Classe 1893 p. 103 no. 13); and (e) a dedication from Dorylaeion θεῶι Σεβαστῶι Καίσαρι θοῦ υἱῶι Διὶ Πατρῴ[ωι, πατρὶ τῆς πα][τρίδος καὶ τοῦ σύμπαν]τος ἀνθρώπων γέ[νους,] κ.τ.λ. (I. Meliopoulos in the Ath. Mitth. 1897 xxii. 480 f., Dittenberger Orient. Gr. inscr. sel. no. 479). Mr Buckler concludes his very noteworthy article on Augustus at Pergamon by a further suggestion: 'En y acceptant l'épithète divine, Trajan imitait le plus illustre de ses prédécesseurs; n'aurait-il pas choisi celle de Zeus Philios, symbole de sa bienveillance, afin de marquer le contraste avec les antiques splendeurs du Zeus Patrôos?'

ii. 1187 n. 0 fig. 900 Zeus Némeios at Alexandreia. His wreath is probably of oak-leaves, not sélinon. Oak-wreath and aigís are characteristic of Zeus on Alexandrine cameos (supra p. 537 f.).

P. Kabbadias in the Ἐφ. Ἀρχ. 1918 p. 192 f. fig. 39 publishes a dedication (no. 11) from Epidauros: Ἥρᾳ Ἀργείᾳ | Διὶ Νεμείῳ | πατρίο[ι] θε|οῖς ὁ ἱεροφάντης | Διογένης ἱερα|πολήσας τοῦ | Σωτῆρος τὸ | ΡΟΔ΄ ἔτος (=297 A.D., cp. Inscr. Gr. Pelop. i nos. 1001 and 1002).

ii. 1187 n. 4. D. M. Robinson at Olynthos found Bottiaean pottery of quasi-Aegean character (A. W. Lawrence on Hdt. 8. 127. See G. E. Mylonas in D. M. Robinson Excavations at Olynthus Baltimore 1933 v. 60—63 (Group iii, second half of s. vi to beginning of s. v B.C.)).

ii. 1191 Olympic contests at Daphne. A bronze statuette (height 6 inches) now in the British Museum shows a naked youth carrying a board (?) inscribed in relief ΑΝΤΙΟΧ-ΕΩΝ | ΤΩΝ ΕΠΙ | ΔΑΦΝΗΙ (Sir E. J. Forsdyke in The British Museum Quarterly 1929—1930 iv. 70 f. pl. 44, d)—presumably a record of success in these sports.

ii. 1194 emperors wearing the aigís. J. Arneth Monumente des K. K. Münz- und Antiken-Cabinettes in Wien Wien 1849 p. 31 f. pl. 18, 2 an onyx engraved with Julian(?) as a beardless Zeus. He wears an aigís and holds a sceptre in his raised right hand, a thunderbolt in his lowered left. At his left side is a trophy with seated prisoner; at his right side, an eagle. The legs of Zeus, the field, and the back of the whole gem are covered with 'Gnostic' inscriptions.

ii. 1197 n. 3. To the bibliography of Antiocheia add E. S. Bouchier A short History of Antioch 300 B.C.—A.D. 1268 Oxford 1921 pp. 1—324.

ii. 1213 'Jupiter-columns.' M. P. Nilsson 'Zur Deutung der Juppitergigantensäulen' in the Archiv f. Rel. 1925 xxiii. 182—184 argues from the wheel etc. that the god in question was a Celtic deity (Taranis?).

ii. 1213 the Column of Mayence. On Quilling's views see also L. Deubner in the Archiv f. Rel. 1925 xxiii. 310 f.

ii. 1216 the omphalós found by F. Courby at Delphoi. C. Picard in the Revue de l'histoire des religions 1926 xciii. 85 n. 1 states that in the Rev. Arch. 1921 (not 1920) i. 172 he did not regard Courby's omphalós as 'faux,' but holds that the inscription on it ('archaïque?') raises many doubts—see P. Roussel in the Rev. Ét. Gr. 1915 xxviii. 457, id. in the Rev. Arch. 1925 ii. 49 n. 1. C. Picard in the Rev. Ét. Gr. 1930 xliii. 136 still hesitates ('L'omphalos n° 19 n'a pas encore ses lettres de créance bien établies').

ii. 1218 the witch-cult in western Europe. Cp. Miss M. A. Murray The God of the Witches London (1933) pp. 1—214 (reviewed by H. Coote Lake in Folk-Lore 1934 xlv. 277 f.) and e contra C. L'Estrange Ewen Some Witchcraft Criticisms (London) 1938 (printed for the author) pp. 1—6.

ii. 1219 the Milky Way conceived as a tree. U. Holmberg in J. A. MacCulloch The Mythology of all Races Boston 1927 iv (Finno-Ugric, Siberian). 82 cites the 'song of the Great Oak'—a Finnish account of the Milky Way 'regarded by some Arctic tribes as being the trunk of a great tree, along which those killed in battle wander.'

ii. 1221 the axe from Mallia. J. Charbonneaux in the Mon. Piot 1925—1926 xxviii. 6 ff. pl. 2 and figs. 3, 4, 6 publishes this axe as ending in the forepart of a panther, not a lioness. So also C. Picard in the Revue de l'histoire des religions 1926 xciii. 70 n. 1, 78 n. 3, and P. Couissin in the Rev. Arch. 1928 i. 261 fig. 6.

ii. 1221 fig. 1015 relief of lictors' axes. For similar reliefs see Stuart Jones Cat. Sculpt. Pal. d. Conserv. Rome p. 19 f. Scala i nos. 1 and 2 pl. 9, ib. p. 157 Sala degli Orti Mecenaziani no. 6 b pl. 59.

ii. 1221 the 'Tomb of the Lictor' at Vetulonia. See now H. Mühlestein Die Kunst der Etrusker Berlin 1929 p. 85 n. 0 and p. 228 f., who in fig. 149 publishes a good photograph (Alinari 45 853) of the 'Eisernes Rutenbeil < Labrys > aus Vetulonia < Tomba del Littore > Mus. archeologico Florenz' and refers it to s. vii B.C.

ii. 1221 carvings in amber. Other examples (human and simian figures from Vetulonia) in D. R. MacIver Villanovans and Early Etruscans Oxford 1924 p. 107 fig. 25.

ii. 1222 fig. 1017 the earliest representation of Zeus (?). S. Benton in the Ann. Brit. Sch. Ath. 1934—1935 xxxv. 85, 98 pl. 21, 1—3 provides three excellent photographs of this little bronze, but calls it cautiously 'the Dodona thrower,' 'the Dodona figure.'

M. P. Nilsson Homer and Mycenae London 1933 p. 80 suggests that a terra-cotta head and a stone axe found in the Mycenaean sanctuary at Asine 'are the earliest representations of Zeus, the Greek god of thunder.' See further O. Frödin in The Illustrated London News for Sept. 25, 1926 p. 548 fig. (2) and Nilsson Min.-Myc. Rel. pp. xx—xxii pl. 4. The head (0·105^{m} high) showed traces of white on the face, but had eyes, lips, and hair painted red. With it were found five smaller female figures in terra cotta and sundry vases, including a two-handled bowl of the 'Granary Class' (A. J. B. Wace in the Ann. Brit. Sch. Ath. 1921—1922, 1922—1923 xxv. 40 f. ('The Granary Class of L. H. III. Pottery')) and a composite vessel of three cups conjoined.

ii. 1228 Zeus Telesiourgós at Miletos. K. Latte 'Ζεὺς Τελεσιουργός' in Philologus 1930 lxxxv. 225—227 notes that in both inscriptions this is the god to whom sacrifice is made by a new priest at his ordination. Hence, he thinks, we obtain light on Hesych. τελεσίεργον παιᾶνα· τὸν ἐπιτελεστικὸν τῶν τοῖς θεοῖς ἐπιτελουμένων ἱερῶν, where the manuscript reading τελεσιγέρων was wrongly altered by T. Hemsterhuys into τελεσίεργον—a blunder perpetuated by M. Schmidt in both his editions. Sir H. Stuart Jones, however, in the new Liddell and Scott p. 1770 (following E. Diehl Supplementum Lyricum^{2} Bonn 1917 p. 66) says 'prob. a gloss on τελεσσίε[ρον παιᾶνα in Pi. Pae. 7. 2.' Unfortunately the text in Pindar is very insecure. O. Schroeder Supplementum Pindaricum Berolini 1923 p. 3 records Wilamowitz' cj. τελεσσιε[πῆ] θεοῦ cp. schol. ἕπεσι.

ii. 1229 relief of Agdistis and Attis. A Hellenistic relief (height 0·61^{m}), found in the Peiraieus and now in the Berlin Antiquarium, shows Agdistis as a draped goddess, with a týmpanon in her left hand, presenting a flower to a youthful Attis, who sits before her clad in the costume of Asia Minor (Kurze Beschreibung der antiken Skulpturen im Alten Museum^{2} Berlin—Leipzig 1920 p. 106 no. 1612).

iii. 35 n. 10. Cp. Nikephoros Basilakes progymn. 7. 10 (i. 489, 5 f. Walz) ἄνωθεν συνῆγε τὰς νεφέλας ὁ Ζεύς.

iii. 57 n. 2. J. D. Beazley Der berliner Maler Berlin-Wilmersdorf 1930 p. 21 no. 202 pl. 13, 3 fragments of a red-figured hydría at Athens (G 251) 'Triballos?' a barbarian in panther-skin (?) with phallós on staff, forehead, and nose! Perhaps cp. E. de Chanot 'Géryon' in the Gaz. Arch. 1880 vi. 136—138 pl. 22 = Reinach Rép. Stat. ii. 26 no. 7, if not also Babelon–Blanchet Cat. Bronzes de la Bibl. Nat. p. 482 f. no. 1175. To the literary allusions add Iuv. 6. O 26, and see W. B. McDaniel in the Am. Journ. Arch. 1918 xxii. 35 n. 1.

iii. 63 n. 3. See now E. Kapp 'Πισθέταιρος' in Philologus 1929 N.F. xxxviii. 259—261 (defends Πισθ- against Πειθ-).

iii. 85 n. 0 (2) fig. 28. This sarcophagus, now at Zagreb, is better published by G. M. A. Hanfmann in the Am. Journ. Arch. 1939 xliii. 229 ff. fig. 2.

iii. 165 the sanctity of dew. J. Roscoe The Northern Bantu Cambridge 1915 p. 28: Among the Banyoro is a clan called 'The Basita, whose principal totem is the Milch Cow which has been with a bull, and their second Dew upon the Grass. The members of this clan avoid for several days drinking milk from a cow which has been with a bull, and also refrain from walking in grass while dew rests on it.'

iii. 245 f. The epiboion, as its name implies, was a sacrifice subsequent to, or additional to, that of a cow for Athena, and must not be viewed as a preliminary rite.

iii. 292 sea-bathing as a rain-charm. Miss M. A. Murray has kindly sent me a note (July 17, 1938) 'about ceremonial bathing (by the whole population), on a set day in the spring, in the sea. It is done at Gaza by Bedu and fellahin alike, men, women, children & animals. I think it may be connected with the cult of Atargatis.' May we not rather suppose that this is only another case of communal rain-charm?

iii. 298 the formula kónx, ómpax. I would venture to compare a spell to stop nose-bleeding by a whispered nóx, pág, rípx (G. F. Abbott Macedonian Folklore Cambridge 1903 p. 233 no. 40 and p. 360 μ'. Περὶ μύτην ὅπου τρέχει, λέγε εἰς τὸ μέρος ἐκεῖνο ὅπου τρέχει, κρυφίως εἰς τὸ αὐτί· μόξ, πάξ, ρίπξ, καὶ θέλει παύσῃ—an extract from a medical treatise contained in an eighteenth-century MS. possibly written by a physician named Constantine Rizioti).

iii. 322 n. 0 Ζήνιον ὕδωρ. Cp. the sacred and curative character of Ascension Day rain-water. A. R. Wright—T. E. Lones British Calendar Customs (England i) London 1936 p. 141 f. cite examples from five counties, of which one will serve: 'A Warwickshire cook of a relative of mine was seen last Ascension Day, May 1, standing out of doors, basin in hand, to catch the rain that was falling. In explanation she said that Holy Thursday rain was holy water, and came straight from heaven. The reason that she preserved it was that it was good for weak or sore eyes' (Cuthbert Bede in Notes and Queries Sixth Series 1883 vii. 367).

iii. 336 n. 5. Sieve-superstitions are collected with a wealth of detail by Eckstein in the Handwörterbuch des deutschen Aberglaubens Berlin—Leipzig 1936 vii. 1662—1686 ('Sieb'), 1686—1701 ('Siebdrehen, Sieblaufen, Siebtreiben').

iii. 341 n. 3. On the pentagram see further Col. Allotte de La Fuye 'Le Pentagramme pythagoricien, sa diffusion, son emploi dans le syllabaire cunéiforme' in Babyloniaca 1934 xiv. 1—56 figs. 1—10.

iii. 345 n. 1. With regard to Egyptian receptacles for viscera Mr Sidney Smith informs me (Nov. 17, 1934) (1) that limestone pots with plain lids go back to the late Old Kingdom (Dyns. v—vi), (2) that jars with lids in the shape of the deceased's head are typical of the Middle Kingdom and occur down to Dyn. xviii, and (3) that 'the four children of Horus' belong to the New Kingdom from the late xviiith Dyn. onwards.

iii. 348 the 'Canopi' of Osiris. See now F. W. Freiherr von Bissing Ägyptische Kultbilder der Ptolemaier- und Römerzeit (Der Alte Orient xxxiv. 1/2) Leipzig 1936 pp. 28—34 'Das Kultbild von Kanopos' pl. 4, 10 a and 10 b (an Osiris of Kanopos in marble, from Egypt), pl. 4, 11 a (an Osiris of Kanopos in bronze, from Egypt, resting on an 'Opfertafel'), pl. 5, 11 b (an Osiris of Kanopos, owned by the Queen of the Netherlands), pl. 8, 18 (a Kanopos with spiral fluting, in the Vatican).

iii. 348 Nile-water. The sanctity of Nile-water is discussed by F. J. Dölger Antike und Christentum Münster in Westfalen 1936 v. 3. 153—187 ('Nilwasser und Taufwasser').

iii. 349. Theonoe was not the wife, but the unsuccessful lover, of Kanobos (n. 8).

iii. 358 n. 6. G. A. Megas in Hermes 1933 lxviii. 415 ff. argues that the story of the Danaïdes was a folktale later localised at Argos. He cites (after B. Chalatianz in the Zeitschrift des Vereins für Volkskunde 1909 xix. 362) an Armenian parallel, heard at Etschmiatsin in 1899, which however so closely resembles the Greek myth that I should rather assume classical influence, direct or indirect.

iii. 426 the Danaïdes and the fertility-charm. C. F. A. Schaeffer in his Schweich Lecture of Jan. 27, 1937 ('Fertility cult and cult of the dead at Ugarit. Devices for libations in the Mycenaean tombs. The jar of the Danaids') compared the πίθοι τετρημένοι of the Danaïdes with the libation-funnels at Ras Shamra. Id. 'Les fouilles de Ras Shamra-Ugarit. Septième campagne (printemps 1935)' in Syria 1936 xvii. 105—148 refers to the period 'Minoen ou Helladic récent III' (s. xiv—xiii B.C.) several sepulchral deposits (p. 112 f. with fig. 4) 'caractérisés par la présence d'un grand entonnoir à libation percé d'ouvertures enfoui verticalement dans la terre avec, à sa base, une accumulation de vases. Parmi eux des rhytons attestent bien le caractère votif de ces dispositifs (fig.

et 4). Comme nous l'avions déjà dit[2] ([2]Cf. Rapport de la troisième campagne, Syria, 1932, p. 12), ils ont dû servir au rite magique, ayant probablement pour but de favoriser la fécondité de la terre et dont l'une des tablettes de Ras Shamra semble donner la formule[1] ([1]L.c., Syria, 1932, p. 12).'

iii. 429 the manalis lapis. F. Bömer 'Der sogenannte lapis manalis' in the Archiv f. Rel. 1936 xxxiii. 270—281 discusses previous interpretations of this 'Regenstein,' rejecting both the derivation from manare and that from Manes. He starts afresh from the authoritative statements of Varro (supra p. 435 n. 2) and contends that aquae mănale meant a 'Handkrug für Wasser,' being derived from mănus (cp. id. 'Lat. aquae manale' in Glotta 1937 xxvi. 1—7); that mānalis lapis—originally termed mānale sacrum—was a sacred water-pot, probably a hollow stone of pot-like formation used for ritual purposes (so O. Gilbert Geschichte und Topographie der Stadt Rom im Altertum Leipzig 1885 ii. 154 n. 1); and that later this mānalis lapis was confused with the lapis Mānalis or 'stone of the Manes,' Festus' ostium Orci (supra p. 432 n. 4). Bömer sums up: 'Das Instrument des römischen Regenzaubers war ein manale sacrum, ein heiliges Wassergefäss; der wirkliche lapis manalis, der Stein der Manen, steht mit dem Regen in keiner Verbindung. Einen lapis manalis als Regenstein, an den man bisher glaubte, hat es nie gegeben. Er ist eine etymologische Konstruktion der Antiquare.'

iii. 434 f. the manales petrae. T. F. G. Dexter The Sacred Stone Perranporth (1929) p. 27 no. 51 cites from Morris Celtic Researches a 'Maen Glaw' or "Rain Stone," "which they rolled about when they wanted rain," and compares the Lapis Manalis at Rome.

iii. 475 f. the birth of Montezuma. Cp. E. S. Hartland Primitive Paternity London 1909 i. 11 'A pearl fell into the bosom of a girl and she swallowed it, as the Chinese tell, with the result that a boy was born (according to one version, from her breast) who afterwards became the great emperor Yu.'

iii. 538 n. 0 pl. xliv. F. Lenormant 'Jupiter Ægiochus, camée sur chrysoprase' in the Gaz. Arch. 1875 i. 95—99 pl. 13 published a very large cameo from the Northwick collection (then owned by Feuardent), a chrysoprase in the Asia Minor style of Marcus Aurelius and Commodus. Its subject is a facing Zeus, almost exactly like that of my malachite relief, but coarser in effect and without acorns on the oak-wreath.

iii. 564 ff. 'ox-driving.' F. Cumont 'St. George and Mithra "The Cattle-Thief"' in the Journ. Rom. Stud. 1937 xxvii. 63—71 notes that at the monastery of Ilori in Mingrelia, as late as c. 1850 A.D., 'every year on the Festival of St. George, to whom the church of the monastery was dedicated, an ox mysteriously entered the building ready for sacrifice.' Cumont argues that St George has here replaced Mithras the βουκλόπος θεός (Porph. de antr. nymph. 18).

iii. 573 Zeus Polieús and altar. (Mrs) J. P. Shear in Hesperia 1936 v. 316 with fig. 22, 6—8 says: 'Is it not possible to connect this type [my figs. 399—402] with the greatest of the Athenian festivals of Zeus, the Diasia, which was of a propitiatory character?' Ead. ib. p. 301 with fig. 11, 1—2 [my fig. 548] would recognise the altar of Zeus Polias [sic!] and associate it with the Dipoleia. She gives the same explanation of the bucranium-type (her pl. 5, 1—29).

iii. 580 n. 0 with fig. 404. See now C. Watzinger in Furtwängler—Reichhold—Hauser Gr. Vasenmalerei iii. 343 ff. fig. 163 and pl. 175.

iii. 593 Diomos, priest of Zeus Polieús, first to slay an ox. But Synkell. chron. 153 B (i. 289 Dindorf) says of Kekrops οὗτος πρῶτος βοῦν ἐθυσίασε καὶ Ζῆνα προσηγόρευσεν, ὥς τινες.

iii. 612 n. 0. On the Βαλλητύς see also S. Weinstock in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. xvii. 856.

iii. 623 n. 1 with fig. 423. The design on these glass plaques is drawn (rather unsuccessfully) to a larger scale by W. Technau in the Jahrb. d. Deutsch. Arch. Inst. 1937 lii. 98 f. fig. 12.

iii. 634 n. 2. E. C. Yorke in the Class. Quart. 1936 xxx. 153 f. maintains that the Prometheus Bound, 'if Aeschylus was its author,' must have been the latest of his extant plays, to be dated between 458 and 456 B.C. Prof. D. S. Robertson in the Cambridge University Reporter 1938 lxix. 387 reviews recent opinions and argues from the 'Sophoclean features' of the play for 'the latest possible date.' He even suggests that 'Aeschylus left the Prometheus trilogy incomplete' and that some of the odes may have been 'supplied by one of his sons, Euphorion and Euaion, or by his nephew Philocles, all tragic poets.'

iii. 655 n. 0 with figs. 464—469. My conjecture that the head on these coins represents Zeus Ólbios can, I find, claim the support of A. Reinach, who in the Revue

Bronze statuette of Zeus Olýmpios from Bulgaria, now in the Museum of the Augusta Trajana Society at Stara Zagora.

See page 1196.

b

a

Fig. 930.

épigraphique 1913 i. 172 no. 461 anent an inscription from Lampsakos dedicated Θεῷ Ὀλβίῳ observed: 'À la lumière de cette inscription il y aurait lieu de se demander si ce n'est pas Zeus Olbios à cornes de taureau qu'il faut voir sur les monnaies à tête cornue qu'on qualifie de Zeus Ammon, Pan ou Priape corniger.' Johanna Schmidt in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. xvii. 2430.

iii. 767 ff. guardian snakes in pediment. Cp. J. Johnson 'Apotropaic serpents in Minturnae temple decoration' in the Am. Journ. Arch. 1939 xliii. 306.

iii. 813 n. 3 the cult of Athena on the Nike-bastion. P. Lemerle in the Bull. Corr. Hell. 1937 lxi. 443 with figs. 4—7 reports that N. Balanos now recognises at least two successive sanctuaries below the level of the classical temple. One, the less ancient, is connected with the altar found by G. Welter (fig. 6). The other, the more ancient, included a hollowed block on which idols were lying (fig. 7) and an altar of Athena Nike mentioned in an archaic inscription [Michel Recueil d'Inscr. gr. no. 671, A 11 f., Dittenberger Syll. inscr. Gr.[3] no. 63, a 11 f. καὶ βο]μὸν λίθινον ('Adiectivum indicat fuisse quidem iam antea aram, sed non lapideam'), Inscr. Gr. ed. min. i no. 24, 14 f.].

iii. 832 n. 2. Dr H. Frankfort's paper on 'The Burney Relief' has now appeared in the Archiv für Orientforschung 1938 xii. 128—135 accompanied by three fresh photographic illustrations. This paper, of which he most kindly sent me an offprint, conclusively vindicates the genuineness of the relief, refers it on stylistic grounds to the Larsa period, and inclines to identify the female figure as Lilith or some other 'inhabitant of the Land of Death.' Her domed crown with four horns marks her as divine. Her so-called "ring and staff" are either 'a measuring rod and line,' as on the stêle of Ur-Nammu, or 'on our relief they might well be a continuous coiled piece of rope,' such measuring instruments serving as symbols of justice.

iii. 845 the earliest Gorgóneion. F. Chapouthier 'A travers trois gemmes prismatiques (époque Minoenne ['M. M. I']) in the Mélanges G. Glotz Paris 1932 i. 183—201 publishes a three-sided seal-stone in greyish steatite from Mallia, of which one side represents a facing Gorgóneion with bristling hair, large ears and eyes, wide cheeks but small mouth, and pointed chin (photographic pl. and fig. 2 = J. Charbonneaux in the Rev. Ét. Gr. 1933 xlvi. 76 fig. 3). The face is flanked by two small branches.

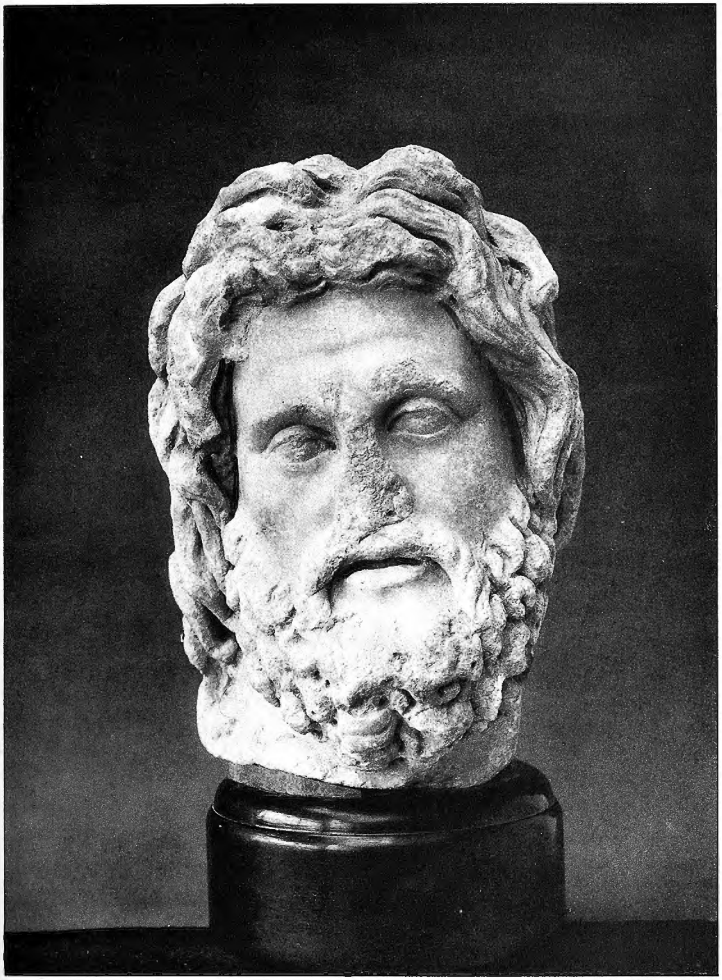
iii. 927 Akmon. On Doias the 'Twin'-brother of Akmon see Norbert Jokl in Ebert Reallex. x. 144 and 147 (after A. Fick in the Zeitschrift für vergleichende Sprachforschung 1907 xli. 347).

iii. 958 the temple of Zeus at Olympia struck by lightning (Paus. 5. 11. 9). C. Picard 'Zeus, Aristophane et Socrate' in the Rev. Ét. Gr. 1938 li. 60—63 finds an allusion to this incident in Aristoph. nub. 401 f. 'Prodige favorable et pieuse intention du ciel, disaient les bons esprits! Τί μαθών; eût répliqué le Socrate d'Aristophane, introducteur de dieux nouveaux et destructeur de la tradition religieuse.' This is much better than, with V. Coulon in the Rev. Ét. Gr. 1937 l. 453 f., to assume a like happening in the sanctuary of Zeus Sotêr and Athena Sôteira at the Peiraieus (Lykourg. in Leocr. 17, alib.—see Severin Solders Die ausserstädtischen Kulte und die Einigung Attikas Lund 1931 p. 2). Picard takes the opportunity of listing all the Zeus-cults in or near Athens—a useful record.

iii. 964 copies of the Pheidiac Zeus (?). Mr R. M. Cook in a letter from Athens dated Aug. 16, 1935 drew my attention to a small bronze figure of Zeus Olympios recently discovered in Bulgaria, and very kindly enclosed the photograph reproduced in my pl. lxxxii. He comments: 'It is a bronze statuette, found last March casually at Smero, a village a little north-east of Stara Zagora. The overall height is about 25 cm.; the height of the figure alone, 18 cm. All of the base is, I believe, original. It is not yet published, though photos of it (from the same negative as this) have appeared in a local paper & in one of the Sofia dailies. It is now in the Museum of the Augusta Trajana Society, at Stara Zagora: the director is Mr. C. Raikov.'

iii. 973 Christ in the likeness of Zeus. In the Christian appropriation of pagan statuary two methods were followed, which it might be convenient to distinguish as the outward and the inward. The one imposed some external sign of the new religion. The other sought to appreciate the internal qualities of the old. The first adapted. The second adopted. And naturally the former, as the easier process, was more frequent than the latter. The facts are fairly obvious, and I shall content myself with a single example of each.

H. Bulle in the Einzelaufnahmen nos. 1436 and 1437 (= my fig. 930, a and b) Text v. 93 publishes a bearded head of Pentelic marble (height 0·23[m]), which came from the neighbourhood of Athens and is now at Karlsruhe, and comments: 'Gehörte ohne Zweifel zu einer Herme.... Wohl originale Arbeit aus der zweiten Hälfte des 5. Jahrh.



Marble head from Jerash :
a third century Zeus (?), which perhaps served as a fifth-century Christ.

See page 1197.

v. Chr.' Bulle ignores the incised cross, which is simply omitted also in the small sketch given by the Jahrb. d. kais. deutsch. arch. Inst. 1890 v Arch. Anz. p. 5 no. 11. But A. J. B. Wace in the Class. Rev. 1932 xlvi. 65 says with more circumspection: 'Cases are known...where a cross was scratched on a work of art in early Christian times to sanctify what would otherwise have been ungodly.'

J. Garstang in The Illustrated London News for July 31, 1926 pp. 193—197 devotes a whole article to the interesting head found by H. Horsfield on the east side of the 'Street of Columns' at Jerash (Gerasa). For a detailed study of the site see the reports of J. W. Crowfoot 'The Church of S. Theodore at Jerash' in the Palestine Exploration Fund. Quarterly Statement for 1929 London pp. 17—36, id. 'The Churches of Gerasa, 1928, 1929' ib. Quarterly Statement for 1930 London pp. 32—42, id. 'Recent Work round the Fountain Court at Jerash' ib. Quarterly Statement for 1931 London pp. 143—154, id. Churches at Jerash A Preliminary Report of the Joint Yale-British School Expeditions to Jerash, 1928—1930 (British School of Archaeology in Jerusalem. Supplementary Papers. iii) London 1931 pp. 1—48 with 13 pls. and a plan. Garstang loc. cit. says: 'Between the doorway of the Basilica and that of the circular church, nearer to the former, and in the cloister into which both doors open, the head was found lying upon débris about a foot from the floor, and covered with more débris mixed with architectural remains....Such, briefly, is the evidence which attests that the head was in use contemporaneously with the Christian buildings of the area in which it was found.' Garstang well suggests 'that the head was originally chosen from among the earlier pagan sculptures of the place, or imported specially, as responding to a Christian conception.' He agrees 'that it belongs to the latter half of the second century A.D.' but adds somewhat inconsistently: 'One thing seems clear—that it was fashioned by a great artist who, working upon the established and familiar models of pagan Zeus or Asklepios, glorified them in the realisation of an ideal. Did such a genius exist in the fourth or fifth century at Jerash? And was that ideal the Suffering of Christ?' Accordingly the fine full-face view prefixed to his article is labelled: 'The earliest representation of Christ?...a remarkable sculptured Christ-like head (probably of the latter half of the 2nd century A.D.) found in a 5th-century Christian church at Jerash.' I confess that Garstang's enthusiasm leaves me a little breathless. I had the opportunity of examining the original head soon after its arrival in London (pl. lxxxiii is from the official photographs) and judged it, on stylistic grounds, to be a third-century head of Zeus. I did not think that its pathos was so pronounced as to justify us in calling it an ideal of Suffering. Indeed, the vertical furrows between the eyes, as distinct from the horizontal furrow across the forehead, were suggestive of concentrated thought rather than intense pain. I held, therefore, and still hold, that the Jerash head came from a third-century statue portraying Zeus, perhaps in his character of Providence (supra p. 946), a statue which may conceivably have served the fifth-century Gerasenes as an embodiment of Christ.

CORRIGENDA

i. 13. For 'bliss' read 'bless.'
i. 117 n. 0. For 'p. 444' read 'p. 517.'
i. 134 n. 4. For 'Lydia' read 'Ionia.'
i. 175 n. 2. For 'Maas' read 'Maass.'
i. 216 n. 3. For 'Athen. 84 c ff.' read 'Athen. 456 c ff.'
i. 220. For 'bácchos' read 'bákchos,' and so elsewhere (i. 221, 425, 442, 648, 649, 673).
i. 236 n. 10. For 'Liban. or. ii' read 'Liban. or. 11.'
i. 245. For 'daughter of Helios' read 'granddaughter of Helios.'
i. 272. For 'man' read 'men.'
i. 302 n. 5. Delete comma after 'Μυκήνην.'
i. 330. For 'Saltzmann' read 'Salzmann.'
i. 335 n. 7. For '104' and '105' read '267' and '268.'
i. 375. For 'Libye[7]' read 'Libye[2].'
i. 398 n. 4. For 'p. 92' read 'p. 311.'
i. 474. After 'swastika-patterns' insert 'and.'
i. 513 n. 5. For 'fig. 113' read 'fig. 387.'
i. 546 n. 4. For '471 n. 4.' read '471 f.'
i. 571 n. 2. For '§ 10 (a)' read '§ 10 (b).'
i. 591 n. 3. For 'In this' read 'In the.'
i. 604 n. 10. For 'mother-god' read 'mother-goddess.'
i. 646 n. 3. For 'Ζᾶν' read 'Ζάν.'
i. 660 n. 2. For 'Strab. 476' read 'Strab. 475.'
i. 675. For 'Kuster' read 'Küster.'
i. 717 n. 2. For 'E. Cumont' read 'F. Cumont.'
i. 732 n. 1. For 'n. 2' read 'n. 1.'
i. 768 n. 0. For 'in Alterthum' read 'im Alterthum.'
i. 776. For 'millenium' read 'millennium.'
i. 800. For 'Zeus Πελιναῖος' read 'Zeus Πελινναῖος.'
i. 824. For 'Kynados' read 'Kounados.'
i. 827 s.v. Makedonia. For 'Zeus 126 ff.' read 'Zeus 100 ff.'
i. 837 s.v. Phrygia. For 'Zeus Παπίας 393_3' read 'Zeus Παπίας 399_3.'
i. 842 s.v. Seimios. For '533 f.' read '553 f.'
i. 855 s.v. Zeus nursed by. For 'by goat 112_2 112_3' and '720_4' read 'by goat 112_3' and '720_3.'
i. 856 s.v. Zeus Attributes. For 'blue mantle 33_1' read 'blue mantle 33.'
i. 867 s.v. Fick, A. For '690_4' read '690_5.'
i. 867 s.v. Fire. For 'Zeus 702_6' read 'Zeus 702_1.'
i. 870 s.v. Heydemann, H. For '698_1' read '698_4.'
i. 870 s.v. Hill, G. F. For '356_2' read '356_4' and for '602_4' read '602_5.'
i. 875 s.v. Nilsson, M. P. For '669_3' read '669_8.'
i. 879 s.v. Rolland, E. For '357_2' read '257_2.'
i. 882. For 'Svoronos, J. H. (cont.)' read 'Svoronos, J. N. (cont.).'
ii. 864. For 'nforms' read 'informs.'
ii. 1093 n. 1. For 'recques' read 'grecques.'
ii. 1096 n. 4. For 'μοιούμενον' read 'ὁμοιούμενον.'
ii. 1113 n. 0. For 'ὀνομάζοντες' read 'ὀνομάζοντας.'

ii. 1323 s.v. Syria. The last entry 'Sun, Moon, and Morning-Star in folk-tale from 1004 ff.' should have been s.v. Syra.
ii. 1361 s.v. Eitrem, S. For '1042_{11}' read '1142_{11}.'
iii. 57 n. 2. For 'ὀρνιθογονίας β' read 'ὀρνιθογονίας β΄.'
iii. 79. For 'Man said' read 'Men said.'
iii. 104 n. 1. For 'n. 3' read 'n. 4.'
iii. 360 n. 4. For 'vi. 2089' read 'iv. 2089.'
iii. 400 n. 2. For 'Gábrici' read 'Gàbrici,' and so on p. xxi of vol. ii.
iii. 416 n. 0. For 'Tetz.' read 'Tzetz.'
iii. 518 n. 3. For 'être à' read 'être là.'
iii. 775. For '(fig.)' read '(fig. 569).'
iii. 976. For 'Brugman' read 'Brugmann,' and so on p. 977.
iii. 981. For 'pl. lxix' read 'pl. lxx.'

Fig. 931.

Zeus Tríos
on a bronze coin of Hierapolis in Phrygia (Imhoof-Blumer Gr. Münzen p. 214 f. no. 693 pl. 12, 22).
Supra ii. 571 n. 6.

INDEX I

PERSONS PLACES FESTIVALS

The contents of each item are arranged, as far as possible, under the following heads: Cults Epithets Festivals Oracles Rites Priests Worshippers Personations Myths Metamorphoses Genealogy Functions Etymology Attributes Types Identifications Assimilations Associations Comparisons Relations Supersedure.

In the Genealogies f. = father, m. = mother, s. = son, d. = daughter, b. = brother, st. = sister, gf. = grandfather, gm. = grandmother, gs. = grandson, gd. = granddaughter, h. = husband, w. = wife.

The larger numerals refer to pages, the smaller numerals to foot-notes.

Abaddir
  Cults: Manliana 937_0 Poeni 937_0
  Epithet: Sanctus 937_0
  Priests: cucaddires 937_0
Abaris, controls wind 106
Abbeville, statuette of pantheistic Zeus at 1129
Abdera, coins of 1002 f. 1008
Aberkios, epitaph of 972_0 1128
Abirkios, tombstone of 1126
Aborras 1027_1
Abydos
  Cult: meteorite 886
  —— coins of 856_0
Acerbas 646_0
Achaeans
  Cults: Zeus 650_0 Zeus Ἑλλάνιος 1164 —— shaft-graves of 362 (?)
Achero $98_{0(8)}$
Acheron 152 416
Achilles
  Cult: Olbia 654_0
  Epithet: Ποντάρχης 654_0
  Myth: Penthesileia 956
  Type: passage to Islands of the Blest 135 —— shield of 596 f. when dead demands bride 395 (?)
Achilleus, s. of Thetis 1043 See Achilles
Achilleus, the earth-born 1043
Adad
  Cults: Heliopolis in Syria 1095 Nabataioi 1097 Palmyra 1093
  Attribute: golden thunderbolt 1095
  Types: seated between two bulls with thunderbolt 1097 standing on bull with thunderbolt 831 standing on bull with double three-pronged thunderbolt in either hand 1095
  Identified with Zeus 945
  Compared with Ramman, Tešub, and the god of Mt Tabor 1173
Adighe 1114 See Circassians
Admete, d. of Eurystheus 1029
Adonia 1118
Adonis
  Cult: Malta 1031_7 (?)
  Myth: killed by boar 817_0
  Identified with Aion 914_0
  Superseded by John the Baptist 1031_7 (?)
Adraa, coins of 907
Adrasteia
  Epithet: ὀρεία 922_8
  Myth: served by Kelmis, Damnameneus, and Akmon 922_8
Adrasteia, a Cretan Nymph 931_3
Adrian, St 523_4
Aeneas 102 f.
Aërias 646_0
Aether See Aither
Aëthlios, s. of Aiolos, reputed to be s. of Zeus 107
Agallis 596 f.
Agamedes
  Associated with Trophonios 507_5
Agamemnon
  Myth: Palladion 609
  —— early connected with Lakedaimon and Amyklai 1181 later divinised as Zeus Agamémnon 1181 stone ship of 1171
Agapius, St 1102
Agatha, St 447_6
Agathos Daimon
  Type: ὄφις ἱερακόμορφος 343_1
  Identified with Daimon Milichios (?) 1187
Agaue 1124
Agdistis
  Cult: Peiraieus 1192
  Myth: pomegranate springs from his severed member 815_0
  Function: doublet of Attis 1174

Agdistis (cont.)
Type: draped goddess with týmpanon presenting flower to Attis 1192
Agdos, Mt
Myth: Agdistis 236
Agenor 161_1
Aglauros
Rites: human sacrifice at Salamis in Kypros 653_0 oath of épheboi 242
Myths: Erichthonios 185 f. 248_6 764 f. voluntary death for her country 242_6
Genealogy: Agraulos or Agraulis d. of Aktaios or Aktaion 242 w. of Ares 283_5 m. of the Kekropides 242 m. of Keryx by Hermes 602 f.
Functions: dew 237 603 944 earth-goddess 242 944 water-nymph 237_2 (?)
Etymology: 237_2
Associated with Demeter Κουροτρόφος 242
Aglibol
Cult: Palmyra 1158 f.
Type: in military dress with crescent horns and spear 1159
Associated with Bel and Iarihol 1158 f.
Agni
Genealogy: f. of Ekata, Dvita, Trita 544 f.
Agnostos Theos
Cult: Athens 1162
Agon Capitolinus 1141
Agorakritos 707 f. (?)
Agra
Cults: Artemis' Ἀγροτέρα 725 Eileithyia 168 724 Persephone and Demeter 722
Rites: Lesser Mysteries 722
Agrai 168 See Agra
Agraulides 659_0 (?) 660_0 (?)
Agraulis See Aglauros
Agraulos See Aglauros
Agreus
Cult: Korkyra 271_3
Attribute: cornu copiae 271_3
Agrigentum
Cults: Zeus Ἀταβύριος 525 Zeus Ὀλύμπιος 1171 f.
—— coins of $414_{a(b)}$ $415_{a(d)}$ 1146 Olympion at 1171 f. (bibliography) tombs for horses at 1187 Aia 236_9
Aiaia
Etymology: 1073 (?)
Aiakidai 650_0
Aiakos
Genealogy: forefather of Aeginetans and Pergamenes 1164
Function: judge of dead 402
Type: head on coins of Aigina (?) 1164
Aias
Epithet: τελαμώνιος 650_0
Function: faded god (?) 650_0
Etymology: 651_0
Aias, s. of Oïleus
Myths: Kassandra 867 956 struck by lightning 868
Aias, s. of Teukros, as name of priestly dynasts at Olba 643_0 645_0 founds cult of Zeus Ὄλβιος 643_0 prehistory of 650_0 ff.
Aïdoneus 6
Aigaion 139_2 (?)
Aigaion, Mt 929
Aigeion, Mt 1177
See also Aigaion, Mt
Aigeira
Cult: Zeus 1107 f.
—— coins of 1107 colossal head of Zeus from 1107 f.
Aigeus
Myths: leaves sword beneath rock at Troizen 484_{11} suicide 240_1
Type: witnesses birth of Erichthonios 186
Aigikoreis 1083
Aigina
Cults: Zeus 650_0 Zeus Ἑλλάνιος 1164 f.
Festivals: Amphiphorites (Ἀμφορίτης ἀγών) 603_{12} Delphinia 603_{12} Hydrophoria 603_{12} Myth: contest of Poseidon with Zeus 751_1
—— coins of 1164 (?)
Aigina, d. of Asopos 1121 f.
Aigion
Cult: Eileithyia 663_2
Aigipan 620_0 (?)
Aigis, a monster slain by Athena 839
Aigos Potamos, coins of 886_2 meteor of 885 f.
Aigyptos
Genealogy: s. of Belos and twin-b. of Danaos 355 f. of fifty sons 355
Aimilius Paullus impressed by the statue of Zeus at Olympia 960
Aineias
Myth: rescued from Diomedes by Apollon 103 —— phantom of 103
Ainos in Thrace
Cult: Hermes Περφεραῖος 1137
Myth: Epeios' statue of Hermes caught by fishermen in net 1137
Aiolie 106 140
Aiolis 161
Aiolos
Epithet: ἱππιοχάρμης 109_7
Genealogy: f. of Aëthlios 107 f. Makedon 110
Function: wind 157
Etymology: 109
Identified with Aiolos Hippotades 109 ff. 944
Aiolos Hippotades
Myth: 106 ff. 975
Genealogy: six sons and six daughters 106 107_3
Functions: a dead chieftain 107 944 'a-

Aiolos Hippotades (cont.)
sort of Zeus' 107 (?) cp. 944 keeper or king of the winds 106 f. 944
Etymology: 107_3
Identified with Aiolos eponym of Aeolians 109 ff. 944
Compared with Amakleides (Amalkeides), Protokles, Protokreon 122_2
Aiolos, Islands of, called Plotai 987
Aion
Cult: Alexandreia 913
Epithet: Αἰὼν Αἰώνων 913_4
Rite: birth from Kore 913
Function: syncretistic deity combining Chaldaean, Persian, Phoenician, Egyptian, and Gnostic elements 914_0
Attributes: horned lion 1180 Hydra 1180 Kerberos 1180 two snakes 1180
Types: leonine head, four wings, four arms, eye on chest, lion-heads on belly and both knees, etc. 1180 naked child marked with five golden crosses 913 916 f. phoenix with radiate nimbus 913_4 standing in zodiacal ring carried by Atlas 1128 syncretistic 1180 Identified with Adonis 913_4 Osiris 913_4 —— philosophic laudation of 913_4
Aion, s. of Baaut and Kolpias 914_0
Aisa
Genealogy: d. of Nyx 718_1
Function: spinner 716
Associated with Poros 747_1
Aischylos, date of P.v. by 634_2 1194 makes Athena both winged and wingless in same play 810 f. on the succession of Ouranos, Kronos, Zeus 739 on the possible overthrow of Zeus 740 f. on Zeus and the problem of evil 974
Aither
Cults: Amaseia 879 Orphists 879
Epithets: Ἀλεξιχάλαζος 879 Διὸς Αἰθήρ 454_1 pater 453_2 pater omnipotens 452_3
Genealogy: f. of Nephelai 70 879
Function: rain 452_3
Aithra 485_0 485_{12}
Aitne, Mt
Cults: Hadran 177_0 Hephaistos 177_0
Myths: Briareus 3_0 Enkelados 3_0 Typhoeus 3_0
Aix, d. of Helios
Myth: hidden by Ge in a Cretan cave, where—tended by Amaltheia—she nurtures infant Zeus with her milk 839_8 840_0
Compared with Minotaur in Labyrinth 840_0
Akakallis 414_0
Akamantes
Cults: Kyrene 115 Marathon 115
Functions: the dead 116 (?) winds 116 (?)
Akanthos in Egypt
Cult: Osiris 338
Rite: priests empty Nile-water daily into holed pithos 338 f. 354 372_8
Akephalos Theos 1127
Akeso 1083
Akhmîm 884_0 See Chemmis
Ak Kilisse
Cult: (Zeus) Πόλωξος 1140 (?)
Akmon
Genealogy: twin-b. of Doias 1196 of Ouranos 927
Function: servant of mountain-mother 922
Etymology: 925
Identified with Kronos 927_5 Ouranos 927_4
Akmoneia
Cult: Zeus 794
—— coins of 794 1070
Akragas See Agrigentum
Akraiphia
Cult: Zeus Κεραιός 1162 1165
Akrisios
Myths: imprisons Danaë in bronze chamber 364 455 expulsion of infant Perseus 1187 sends Danaë and Perseus adrift in a chest 455 killed by diskos of Perseus 1187
Genealogy: f. of Danaë 364 f. of Danaë by Eurydike d. of Lakedaimon 455 Identified with Kronos (?) 1187
Aktaion
Type: Polygnotos 1067
Aktaion, f. of Aglauros 242_4
Aktaios, f. of Agraulos 55_5 242
Akte 260
Alban Mt
Cult: Iupiter Latiaris 492
Alcumena 517 See also Alkmene
Aleos 823
Alexander the Great
Personates Zeus 540_0
Types: leonine 957_0 Lysippos 957_0 thick neck, upward glance, leonine hair 540_0 wearing aigis as chlamys 540_1
In relation to Zeus Ammon 1076 f. (bibliography) —— coins of 226 consults oracular trees of Sun and Moon in Prasiake 420_0 hurls spear at Troad 754_2 reverts to pre-Pheidiac type of seated Zeus 1155 f. sacrifices to Liber Pater in Thrace 1118
Alexandreia
Cults: Aion 913 Demeter 990 ff. Isis 346 Kore 913 Osiris 346 ff. Serapis 553_2 Zeus Νέμειος 1191
Rites: birth of Aion 913 ἡ τοῦ καλάθου πρόοδος 990 —— coins of 346 ff. 904_5 913_4 991 f. 1045 1111 f. 1191 Koreion at 913 Serapion at 553_2

Alexandros
Myth: Helene 78
Ali, Abbas 1168 ff.
Aliphera
Cults: Asklepios 126_5 Athena 126_5 Zeus Λεχεάτης 99_0 127_0
Alipheros, eponym 126_5
Alkamenes 169_0 171_0 215 216_1 223 722_3
Alkestis dies for love 99_3
Alkman brings kalathiskos-dance from Sardeis to Sparta 1008 (?)
Alkmene
Myth: consorts with Zeus 506 ff. 518
Genealogy: w. of Amphitryon and m. of Herakles by Zeus 506 Type: seated as suppliant on altar 511 f.
Allât 914_1
Aloeus 4_0
Alybe (Halybe) 1101
Amalberga, St 338_1
Amalkeides 121
Amaltheia the goat
Myth: flayed by Zeus, who wears its skin 839
Amaltheia the nymph
Myth: entrusts infant Zeus to her goat 839_6
Genealogy: m. of Dionysos by Ammon 126_4 (?)
Amaseia
Cult: Aither Ἀλεξιχάλαζος 879
Amasis, the vase-painter 681 (?)
Amastris = Amasra
Cults: Augustus 1163 Ge (?) Κυρία 1140 Theos Aniketos Ἀσβαμεύς 1140 Theos Hypsistos Ἐπήκοος Ἥλιος 1163 Zeus Στρατηγός 148
—— coins of 794 'Vogelfels' near 1162 f.
Amathous in Kypros
Cults: Iupiter Hospes (Zeus Ξένιος) 653_0 Zeus Μειλίχιος 1187
Rite: human sacrifice to Iupiter Hospes (Zeus Ξένιος) 653_0 Myth: Cerastae 653_0
—— scarab from 807
Amathus, s. of Aërias 646_0
Ambrosia the nymph, attacked by Lykourgos, is transformed into vine 1111 f. gives bowl to Ganymedes (?) 982 Ambrosiai Petrai 978 ff.
Amen
Cults: Napata 882_2 Thebes in Egypt 882_2
Function: sky-god 882_2
Types: aniconic 882_2 enthroned bundle representing dead man in sitting posture 1077 meteorite (?) 882_2 omphalós 882_2
Identified with Ba'al-hammân 1076
Compared with Jehovah 884_0
Amen-Râ
Function: sun 885_0
Amen-Râ (cont.)
Identified with Zeus 882_2 945
In relation to Min 885_0 the other ram-gods Heryshef, Khnum, and the Lord of Mendes 885_0 Ammon
Cult: Oxyrynchos 1076
Myth: hides Dionysos 126_4 (?)
Genealogy: f. of Dionysos by Amaltheia 126_4 (?)
Identified with Zeus 945
Ammoneion 882_2 1076 See Oasis of Siwah
Amnisos, Artemis bathes in 1032_3
—— Eileithyia, d. of Hera, born in cave at mouth of 1032_3 Nymphs of 1032_3
Amon 882_2 1076 See Amen
Amphiareion near Oropos, excavations at 1181
Amphion 54
Amphion and Zethos (bibliography) 1135
Amphiphorites (Ἀμφορίτης ἀγών) 603_{12}
Amphipolis, coins of 856_0
Amphitrite
Epithet: Ποσειδωνία 1047_{11}
Etymology: 124 f.
Associated with Poseidon 681 958
Amphitryon
Myth: Alkmene 506 ff.
Genealogy: f. of Iphikles by Alkmene 506
Etymology: 506
—— cup of 507 507_5 thálamos of, built by Trophonios and Agamedes 507_5 tripods dedicated by 507_5
Amûn 882_2 884_0 885_0 See Amen
Amyklai
Cult: Apollon 1109 f.
—— throne of Apollon at 220 631_4 1109 f.
Amyklaion, relief from 1109 stéle from 1008
Amykos 145_3 177_0
Amymone
Myths: Satyr 356 Poseidon 361 369
Function: fountain-nymph 357
Amynandridai 771_4
Anagyrous See Vari
Anahita
Cult: Persia 916_1
Etymology: 916_1
Anaïtis 1134 See also Anahita
Anaktes
Cult: Athens 120
Priests: Anaktoteléstai 1068
Ananke, spindle of 1116
Anaphe
Cult: Apollon Ἀσγελάτας 570_2
Festivals: Asgelaia 570_2 Taurophone(i)a 570_2 Theudaisia 570_2
Anaxagoras 418_0 454 481_3 886
Anaximandros 949_6
Androgeos
Cults: Athens 157 Phaleron 158
Epithets: Εὐρυγόης 157 f. κατὰ πρύμναν ἤρως 158_4
Genealogy: 158_2

Andros, Isiac hymm from 986
Anemoi
Cult: Tarentum 105 f.
See also Venti
Anemokoitai 104
Anesidora 202_0
Annakos 527 f.
Anogeia, folk-tale from 1070
Anoubis
Cults: Delos 154 f. Egypt 48_0
—— oath by (?) 48_0
Antaios challenges strangers to wrestling-bout 177_0 keeps in touch with mother-earth 1174 grave of, at Tingis 372_3 440_9 myth of, influenced by that of Kyknos 440_9 (?)
Anthedon
Cult: Zeus Μιλίχιος 1187
Anthesteria 430_0
Anthousa 71_4
Antimacheia
Cult: Zeus Τέτιος 562
Antiocheia on the Orontes
Cult: Zeus Σωτήρ 22
Rite: alytarch of Olympian games personates Zeus 562_3 —— bibliography of 1191 chalice from 972
Antiochos i of Kommagene
Epithets: Θεὸς Δίκαιος Ἐπιφανής 951
Personates Zeus Ὡρομάσδης 951 (?)
Antiope
Myth: consorts with Zeus 467 469 615_3
Type: pendant to Danaë 469
Antipas, St 1102
Antiphilos, the painter 627_0
Antisthenes 595
Antoninus Pius
Personates Zeus 1130
Aonia 531
Aos 512 See also Heos (Eos)
Apameia in Phrygia
Cult: Poseidon 22
Festival: Kibotoi 530 (?) —— coins of 293_2 528 f. 530 named Kibotos 530 Apeliotes 130
Apelles 297
Apesas, Mt
Cults: Zeus Ἀπεσάντιος 1165 Zeus Ἀφέσιος 1165
Aphrodisias in Karia
Cult: Zeus Πατρῷος (= Augustus) 1191
—— coins of 1148
Aphrodisias in Kilikia, coins of 763_2 (?)
Aphrodite
Cults: Argos 320_1 Askalon 154 Athens 170_0 171_0 722 725 f. 726 Athmonia or Athmonon 55_5 Mt Eryx 172 ff. Gaza 553 Ioulis 269_1 Cape Kolias 172 Megalopolis 567_0 Paphos 238_1 1112 1134 Samos 66_2 Saracens 915_2 Sparta 722_3 Thessaly 271 (?)
Epithets: ἀναδυομένη 297 ἐν Ἕλει 66_2 ἐν Καλάμοις 66_2 ἐν Κήποις 165 168
Aphrodite (cont.)
169_0 171 174_0 722 726 Ἐνόπλιος 722_3 Ἐρυκίνη 175_2 καλή 1073 Κτήσυλλα 269_1 Μαχανῖτις 567_0 Οὐρανία 55_5 152_6 153 f. 171_0 722 Παφία 899_5 1134 Χαβάρ (Χαμάρ) 915_2 915_3 917_7
Rite: sacrifice of heifer 171_0
Priestesses: ἱερόδουλοι 177_0
Personated by woman on ladder (?) 1118
Myths: springs from seed of Ouranos 274 springs from seed of Zeus 274 is borne by dolphin to Kypros 274 plants pomegranate in Kypros 817_0 sleeps with Hephaistos 175_2 transforms Melos the Delian into μηλέα and Pelias into πέλεια 817_0
Genealogy: eldest of the Moirai 171_0 m. of Eryx by Boutas or by Poseidon 176_0
Functions: mountain-mother 177_0 unites Sky with Earth 453 morning dew 172 vegetation 175_2
Etymology: 274_6 275_0 276_0
Attributes: bud 1060 dove 175_2 638_0 1057 doves 1112 flower 1060 mirror 94_0
Types: acrolithic ξόανον 567_0 Alkamenes 171_0 (?) 722_3 Capuan 173_0 Cnidian 970 cone 650_0 crouching 561 Damophon 567_0 Doidalses 471 draped and veiled 681 draped and flanked by two hovering Erotes 1018 draped and flanked by two winged female figures (Nikai?) 1016 ff. drawn by sparrows 831 drawn by swans 831_2 Fréjus 171_0 173_0 (?) herm 171_0 722 holding pomegranate 818_0 (?) in archaistic reliefs of the Twelve Gods 1055 ff. leaning on archaistic effigy of herself 171_0 leaning on pillar with tree in background 171_0 Melian 171_0 nude 834 nude goddess flanked by two Sirens 1016 nude goddess pressing her breast with dove or doves flying about her 1016 Pheidias 698 698_6 riding on goat 831 rising from sea 957 f. semi-draped 698_6 standing with dove on finger 638_0 with Eros at her shoulder 1022 with uplifted sandal 1020 stepping on to boat 137_4
Identified with Astarte 177_0 (?)
Associated with Ares 681 Eros 170_0 700 (?) 704 725 f. 746 Eryx 176_0 Poseidon 675_2 699 f.
Compared with ψυχή 747_2
In relation to Astarte $275_{0(2)}$ 276_0 coot 52_1 dove $275_{0(1)}$ (?) Moirai 722
—— meadows of 1064_4
Aphros, forefather of Aphroi
Genealogy: f. of Aphrodite by Astynome 276_1 s. of Kronos by Philyra 276_1
Apidanos 366
Apis
Types: bovine bust with solar disk

Apis (cont.)
between horns and lunar crescent round neck 1082 double bust (with Isis) 1132
Apollo
Cult: Rome 436_0
Epithet: pastoralis 268_1
Type: in Pompeian paintings of Twelve Gods $1062_{2(1\,f.)}$
See also Apollon
Apollodoros the mythographer 1103 f.
Apollon
Cults: Amyklai 1109 f. Anaphe 570_2 Athens 725 Bulla Regia 825_5 Chembis 983 Delos 119 984 f. Dreros 1087 Ephesos 1174 Gaza 553 Gryneion 100 Hybla 1029 Hyperboreoi 106_1 Karthaia 269_1 Kaulonia 830 Klaros 100 Korkyra 1120 Leukas 137_4 Miletos 474_0 Peiraieus 1083 Selinous 614_5 Tenedos 1146 Thebes in Boiotia 507_5 880 Thespiai 1070 Vari 261 265_0
Epithets: Ἀγρεύς 267 Ἀγνιεύς 1120 Ἀσγελάτας 570_2 Γαλάξιος (?) 880_1 Δελφίνιος 1087 Ἐριφύλλιος (?Ἐριφυλλος) 321_0 Ἕρσος 261 Ἰσμήνιος 507_5 880 Κάρνειος 996 Καρνεῖος 1078 Λατῷος 1047_{11} Λευκάτης 137_4 Λύκιος 355_4 Ναπαῖος 100_6(?) Νόμιος 265_0 267 ὀλβιοεργός 630_5 ὄλβιος 630_5 Πυθαῖος (?) 1120 Πύθιος 725 Σκυλακεύς 413_0 (?) Φίλιος (=Φιλήσιος) 474_0 Χαλάξιος 880
Oracles: Delphoi 100_4 Gryneion 100 Klaros 100
Rite: sacrifice of asses 106_1
Priestess: the Pythia 100 (?) 1122
Myths: is born in Delos 984 f. is hidden by Leto in Chembis 983 f. borrows aigis of Zeus 314_3 wears aigis 866 wraps aigis round Hektor 866 rescues Aineias from Diomedes 103 steals Delphic tripod 799_1 visits Lesbian oracle of Orpheus 99 ff. woos Thetis 742 Branchos 474_0 Kroisos 519 f.
Genealogy: s. of Zeus by Leto, and b. of Artemis $744_{1(6)}$ s. of Dionysos by Isis, and b. of Artemis 984 f. of Kydon by Akakallis d. of Minos 414_0 f. of Miletos by Akakallis d. of Minos 414_0
Functions: hail 880 sun 120_6 726_6 welfare 630_5
Etymology: 1135 (?) 1136
Attributes: apple (?) 1136 bay-branch 99 bay-wreath 99 bow and arrow 675 hawk 1073 kithāra and plêktron 683 684 swan 757_0
Types: square pillar inscribed ΚΑΡΝΕΙΟΣ 996 first wooden statue 119 holding double axe 1146 nude, archaic, advancing to right with filleted bay-branch and strung bow 1164 with Charites in right hand
Apollon (cont.)
1124 with hawk on head 46 Kassel 1155 Pheidias (?) 1155 kitharoidos 707 ff. 725 contest with Marsyas 659_0 710 slaying Niobids 955 riding on swan 831 1136 in car drawn by swans 830 f. in archaistic reliefs of the Twelve Gods 1055 ff.
Identified with Aristaios 267 f. Horos 984
Associated with Artemis 707 958 Zeus Βροντῶν 1160 f. Zeus Πατρῷος 1174
Compared with meteor 885
Supersedes Dionysos 1125
—— provenance of 1135 1137
Apollonia ad Rhyndacum, coins of 856_0
Apolloniastai 155
Apollonios of Tyana greets Pheidias' statue of Zeus at Olympia 961 Apulia
Myth: Daunus 364
Apulu 88_0
Apulum
Cult: Iupiter Optimus Bussumarus 1140 Iupiter Optimus Maximus Bussumarius 1140
Aquae Albulae 1013
Aquae Cutiliae, floating island in 1012 f. sacred to Victory (sc. Vacuna) 1012
Aquae Salsulae, floating island in 1015
Aquae Sulis
Cults: Luna 863_{11} Sol 863_{11} Sulis 858 ff.
——bronze head from 862 large pedimental relief from 862 ff. smaller pedimental reliefs from 863_{11} sometimes called Aquae Solis 863
Aquileia in Venetia, mosaic from $627_{(3)}$
Aquilo 107 162_5
Arabia
Cults: Arsu 1163 Hobal 334_1 Manāf 1163 Morning Star 915_2
Myth: Kalila and Dimna 405_0
Arachova 335_1
Arados
Cult: 'Dagon' 126_4
—— coins of 159_0
Arantides
Cult: Illyrioi (?) 1184
Ararat, Mt 530_7 531_0
Aratos, the exordium of 947 953 f. 974 quoted by St Paul 954
Arcadian League, coins of 715_0
Arcadians called προσέληνοι 315_0
—— claim to have seen Zeus shake the aigis 314
Archelaos of Priene 37 1070
Archilochos on rights and wrongs of animals 949
Ardea 365
Arelate, stag-mummers at 1067
Ares
Cults: Makedonia 282_6 Papremis 344_3
Epithet: Θαύλλος (?) or Θαῦλος 282_6
Genealogy: s. of Zeus 344_3 s. of Zeus by Hera, and b. of Hebe and Ares (cont.)

Eileithyia $744_{1(7)}$ h. of Agraulos 283_5
Functions: originally more than war-god 283_5 (?) fire in air 235_7
Attribute: hound 683
Type: in archaistic reliefs of the Twelve Gods 1055 ff.
Associated with Aphrodite 681
Arethousa 515_1
Argaios, Mt, as object of worship 1068 ascent of 1176 image of, as headdress 1177 image of, in hand of Zeus 1177 small bronze eagle on pillar representing (?) 1177 small bronze eagle on stag representing (?) 1177 small bronze model of 1177
Arge 1172
Argo 778_1 779_0 975
Argonauts, found Amphiphorites (Ἀμφορίτης ἀγών) at Aigina 603_{12} historical element in myth of 360_2 sent past Planktai by Hera 975 warned of Kyaneai by Phineus 976
Argos
Cults: Aphrodite 320_4 Athena Ὀξυδερκής 785_1 Athena Σάλπιγξ 729_3 Demeter Πελασγίς 417_0 Hellotis 1092 Hera 65 566_2 1043 ff. 1085 Hera Βασίλεια 66 Hera Εἰλείθυια 725_4 Zeus Ἑρκεῖος 455 Zeus Μηχανεύς 142_8 566_2 Zeus Ὄλβιος 631 Zeus Τέτιος 563
Epithets: ἄνυδρον $361_{8\,f.}$ 368 διψίαν... χθόνα 361 πολυδίψιον 361 368
Festival: Hysteria 320_4
Rites: ἱερὸς γάμος 1044 ff. initiation 1046 Λεχέρνα 1044 women present veil to Hera 1046 Myths: Akrisios 364 Danaos and the Danaïdes 355 ff. irrigation by Danaos or the Danaïdes 361 f. Io 631 ff. Kleobis and Biton 1044 Polyneikes 563 Poseidon contends with Hera 751_1 Tyrsenos discovers trumpet 729_3 —— early kings of 67_2 after the peace of Nikias 62 f. Amymonian Waters at 361 archaic bronze vessel at 566_2 bones of Tantalos at 417_0 (?) bronze chamber of Danaë at 455 coins of 355_4 471 Hellotion at 1092 Heraion at 633_0 tomb of Pelasgos at 566_2 relief of Selene from 1085 f.
Argos, watcher of Io
Attribute: bull's hide 837
Types: with eye on his chest 631_4 covered with eyes 633_0 wearing ox-hide cape 634_1 wearing panther-skin 638_0
Ariatha 1090
Aristaios
Cults: Arkadia 268 Keos 267 f.
Myths: builds altar to Zeus Ikmaios 266 sacrifices to Seirios 266 saves Keos from drought 266 Sardinia 270
Aristaios (cont.)
Genealogy: s. of Apollon by Kyrene and f. of Aktaion 266_3 f. of Charmos and Kallikarpos 270
Functions: culture-hero 266 f. king embodying sky-god 269
Type: Zeus-like head 270 f.
Identified with Apollo Agreûs and Nómios 267 f. Zeus 270 Zeus Aristaios 267 f.
Aristoteles, false reading for Aristokles (?) 1043_4
Aristotle 482 f.
Arkadia
Cults: Aristaios 268 Zeus Λύκαιος 525
Rite: priest of Zeus Λύκαιος makes rain by stirring the spring Hagno with oak-branch 315
Arkalochori Cave near Lyktos, perhaps the famous cave of Zeus and Rhea 1143 treasure from 1143
Arkesilaos, the sculptor 1022
Arkesine, coins of 820_2
Armenia
Cult: Astlik 293_2
Festival: Vartevar 293
Rite: pigeons set free 293
Armenios 946
Arnouphis 325 f. 332
Arrhephoria 165 ff. 179 188 236 240 f. 602
Arrhetophoria 165_7 (?) 166_0
Arsu 1163
Artemidos, St 269
Artemis
Cults: Agra 725 Athens 1181 Bithynia 992 f. Boiotia 990 Ephesos 896_2 968 Gygaia Limne 989 Ioulis 269 Messene 66_2 Olympia 1009 Palaiopolis in Korkyra 844_{10} Patmos 986 Sardeis 1082 Sparta 1009 1030
Epithets: Ἀγροτέρα 725 Ἀλφειονία 671_0 Ἀμαρυσία 55_5 Ἀναΐτις $899_{5(3)}$ Ἀρίστη 268_6 γαιάοχος 10_4 διοτρεφής 34_2 (?) Ἐλεία 66_2 Ἐλευθέρα $899_{5(2)}$ Ἐνοδία 279_4 Ἐφεσία 324_5 899_5 900 1133 1134 Θροσία 1083 Καλλίστη 268_6 1124 1181 Κολοηνή 989 Κορδάκα 1009 Λυγοδέσμα 1030 f. 1031_5 Μουνυχία 233_1 Ὀρθία 1009 1030 1031_5 1134 Παγασίτις 1083 Παρθένος 986 Πατμία 986 Περσία 565_1 Σκυλακῖτις 413_0 Ταυροπόλος 624_0 636_0
Rites: ἀρκτεύσασα 1083 νέβρεια (?) 1083 παρθένεια 1008 sacrifice of she-goat in girl's clothing to Artemis Μουνυχία 233_1
Priestesses: νεβροί (?) 1083
Myth: is born in Delos 985
Genealogy: d. of Zeus by Leto, and st. of Apollon $744_{1(7)}$ d. of Dionysos by Isis, and st. of Apollon 984
Functions: childbirth 985 moon 726_6
Attributes: bow 638_0 725 fawn 640_0 fish 990 two jars 1181 torch 1181 wheel-torch 638_0

Artemis (cont.)
Types: cult-statue with veil $899_{5(2\,f.)}$ Endoios 968 hasting to greet the new-born Athena (?) 710 f. 'Colonna' 710 f. riding horned doe 831 slaying Niobids 955 standing with wheel-torch and bow 638_9 in archaistic reliefs of the Twelve Gods 1055 ff.
Identified with Bendis 189_1 233_1 Boubastis 984 Diktynna 189_1 Oupis 189_1
Associated with Apollon 707 958
In relation to stags 1134
Superseded by St John the Evangelist 986 —— birthday of 178_0 fawns of 1064_4 two images of, on coin of Aspendos $899_{5(1)}$
Artemision, bronze statue fished up from sea off 1151 ff.
Ascension Day 1193
Asia
Etymology: 1107
Asies, nephew or brother of Atys 1107
Asine, 'Mycenaean' finds at 1192
Asis
Cult: Euyuk 1106 f.
Askalon
Cult: Aphrodite Οὐρανία 154
Asklepios
Cults: Aliphera 126_5 Athens 775 Epidauros 1182 Inönü in Phrygia 1146 Nikaia in Bithynia 1182 Pautalia 1182 Sparta 1030_4
Epithet: Ἀγνίτας 1030_4
Metamorphosed into snake 1182
Etymology: 1182 (?)
Type: holding serpent-staff and horne through air by winged and bearded snake 1182
Aspalis 283_4
Aspasia
Epithet: Τύραννος (?) or Τυραννοδαίμων (?) 66_4
Personates Hera 32_5 66_4
Aspendos, coin of $899_{5(1)}$
Aspis ἐν Ἄργει 356_5
Assteas 511_0
Assyria, demons of, influence Etruscan conception of Charon 1143
Assyrioi (= Syrioi)
Cult: dove 1103
Astaroth, kteïs of (?) 918_3
Astarte
Cults: Delos 152_6 153 f. Sidon 1023 Tyre 892 f.
Epithet: Παλαιστίνη 152_6 153 f.
Myth: finds fallen star 892 917
Functions: moon 892_4 the planet Venus 892_4
Type: nude goddess 834
Identified with Aphrodite 177_0 (?)
In relation to Aphrodite $275_{0(2)}$ 276_0
—— kteïs of (?) 918_3
Asteria, name of Delos 984 f.
Asterie, Titaness
Myth: Zeus 984 f.
Metamorphosed into quail 985 stone 985
Asterion 619_1 628_0
Asteropos 1067
Astlik 293_2
Atabyrion, Mt, in Rhodes
Cult: Zeus Ἀταβύριος 1172
—— excavations on 1172 See also Atabyros, Mt
Atabyros, Mt, in Rhodes, geology of 986 See also Atabyrion, Mt Atargatis
Cults: Heliopolis in Syria 1095 Nabataioi 1097 Palmyra 1093
Attribute: lions (?) 1096
Types: bust with fish-scales (?) on face and chest 1097 bust with two fishes as head-dress 1097
Athamas
Myth: Nephele 73 f.
Athanasia $60_{5(3)}$
Athanasios, St 1187
Athena
Cults: Aliphera 126_5 Argos 729_3 785_1 Athens 749 f. 827_8 859_1 Ausees 128_1 Boiotia 608 820_1 Corinth 1092 Crete 126_4 (?) Elis 224 f. Emesa 888 Hephaistia in Lemnos 216_1 Ilion 283_4 Korone 782 Kos 566_2 Mt Kynthos 1172 Lakonike 776 Libye 128_1 839 Marathon 1092 Megalopolis 567_0 Megara 782 f. Olympia 967 Oxyrhynchite nome 190_8 Peiraieus 659_0 1196 Pelasgians 226 Pella 869 Pergamon 794 872 Plataiai 773_6 Rhodes 355 Salamis in Kypros 653_0 Sparta 11_1 661 Syracuse 850_6 Tanagra 567_0 Tegea 1141 Thespiai 1066 Thessaly 608 871_1 Troy 193_0
Epithets: ἀγλαότιμε 776_1 Ἄγλαυρος 240_8 246 Αἰθυια 608_4 782 f. 795 αἰολόμορφε 776_1 Ἀλέα 1141 Ἀλκίδημος (not Ἀλκίς) 869 Ἀρεία 773_6 Ἀρχήγετις 827_8 Βαλενίκη $60_{5(4)}$ Βία 608_8 Βοαρμία 608 Βούδεια 608 γλαυκῶπις 193_0 (?) 201_3 781 834 844 Γοργοεπήκοος 836 (See Panagia Epithets) Γοργῶπις 189_1 γοργῶπις 844 δράκαινα 776_1 δύναμις τοῦ Διός 873_2 Ἐγκέλαδος 55_5 Ἑλλωτίς 1092 Ἐργάνη 191_8 795 967 εὐώδιν 763_4 (?) Ζωστειρία 567_0 Ἡφαιστία 216 218 1047_{11} θύγατερ Διὸς αἰγιόχοιο 866_7 Ἱππία 13_0 Ἰτωνία 820_1 871_1 Κόρη 608_4 κούρη Διὸς αἰγιόχοιο 866_7 Κυνθία 1172 Λινδία 355 Μαχανίς 566_2 Μαχανῖτις 567_0 Μήτηρ 225_1 749 835 Μόριος 762 Νίκη 811 813 1196 Νικηφόρος 794 ὀβριμοπάτρη 737_8 Οἰνάνθη 184_3 (?) Ὁμολωίς (at Thebes in Boiotia) 608_8 Ὀξυδερκής 785_1 Παλλάς 201_2 573 743_9 Πάνδροσος 246 Παρεία 776 Παρθένος 573 749 823 1155 Πολιάς 213 244 573_4 614 721 749 758 772_4 813 Πολιοῦχος 771

Athena (cont.)
Προναία 727$_3$ Πρόνοια 727$_3$ Σάλπιγξ 729$_3$ Σώτειρα 659$_9$ 1196 Τριτογένεια 123$_8$ 719 f. 726 Τριτογενής 123$_7$ Τριτωνίς 126$_6$ 726 Τγίεια 614$_5$ 775 859$_1$ φιλένθεος 776$_1$ Χαλκίοικος 11$_1$ 661
Festivals: Athenaia 212 f. Chalkeia 211 ff. Panathenaia 720 Plynteria 224$_3$ 749 Tritomenis 719$_4$
Rites: annual fight of maidens among Ausees 128$_1$ annual washing of Argive image in Inachos 224$_3$ 749 bull-hanging at Ilion 283$_4$ ἱερὸς γάμος 224$_3$ liturgy of Pallas' snake 775 πέπλος woven at Chalkeia 212 priestess with aigis visits newly married couple 225$_2$ sacrifice of ox 782$_4$ sacrifice of ram 782$_4$ sacrifice of sow 225$_1$
Priestesses: Ἀρρηφόροι 165 ff. 212 Auge 823 drawn from Bouzygai 609
Personated by fairest virgin of Ausees 128$_1$ priestess 225$_2$
Myths: birth from head of Zeus 477 657 ff. 737 744 birth at Athens 720 birth in Crete from cloud cleft by Zeus 727 birth beside river Triton 125 743$_9$ is wooed by Hephaistos 218 ff. 236 274 734 slays the monster Aigis and uses its skin as breastplate 839 slays the Gorgon and wears its skin 844 flays Pallas the Giant, who had attempted to violate her, and wears his skin and wings 842 adorns woman 201 at Ikonion makes images of clay 528 brings Kekrops to Megara 783 809 f. (?) entrusts Erichthonios to the Kekropides 238 ff. carries Lykabettos 238 plants olive-tree at Athens 750 f. contest with Gorgon about beauty 850$_6$ contest with Poseidon about Athens 750 ff. contest with Poseidon about Trozen 751$_1$ gives péplos to Herakles 1186 helps Herakles in rape of Delphic tripod 799$_1$ helps Herakles against Hydra 797 cuts spear for Peleus 209$_2$ superintends building of Argo 778$_1$ 779$_0$ nurses Bakchos or Iakchos 225$_1$ would bestow immortality on Tydeus 60$_{5(3)}$
Genealogy: d. of Bronteas 60$_{5(4)}$ d. of Pallas the Giant by Titanis d. of Okeanos 842 d. of Poseidon by lake Tritonis 216 d. of Poseidon by lake Tritonis, later adopted by Zeus 128$_1$
Functions: goddess of the Akropolis at Athens 189 837 originally Pelasgian mountain-mother in Asia Minor 236 736 831 originally mother-goddess, later virgin 737 749 originally wife of Hephaistos 200 223 736 867 mountain-mother 224 246 729$_3$ 748 831 866 earth-goddess 200$_0$ 246

Athena (cont.)
pottery 191$_8$ arts and crafts 201 women's handiwork 795 nurse of children 225$_1$ wisdom 726 727$_3$ 728 aithér 726$_6$ 727 728 clouds 729 dawn 728 (?) morning twilight 728 (?) earthquake 3$_0$ keeper of the thunderbolt 867 second self of Zeus 872 f. sneeze of Zeus 662$_1$ (?) 732 (?)
Etymology: 60$_{5(3)}$ 191$_8$ 726 727 727$_3$ 728 839$_2$ (?)
Attributes: aigis 837 ff. 866 f. chariot drawn by four winged horses 807 double axe 190$_6$ Gorgóneion 837 ff. Gorgon-shield 39 helmet 811 ff. winged helmet 820$_9$ olive-tree 190 749 ff. owl 190 558 776 ff. pillar 190 763$_2$ pomegranate 811 ff. snakes 189 f. 764 ff.
Types: primitive pre-warlike 189$_1$ advancing to left with thunderbolt and Gorgon-shield 868 f. 871 f. advancing to right with thunderbolt and Gorgon-shield 869 advancing to right with spear and shield 869 ff. advancing with uplifted lance 573 Albani 837$_9$ 857 archaistic 225$_1$ 837$_9$ 868 ff. in archaistic reliefs of the Twelve Gods 1055 ff. bearing dead warrior across sea 809 f. bearing infant on her arm 218 806 bearing snake in basket 218 Bronze Athena by Pheidias 225$_1$ 862 Cassel 837$_8$ 858 clay vessel as fetish and symbol 191$_8$ cock with human face wearing skin of cock's head as helmet 804 cult-statue in Erechtheion 574$_0$ cult-statue in Peisistratic Hekatompedon 574$_0$ Elgin statuette 830 emergent from head of Zeus 662 f. 668 ff. exhibiting olive-plant 755 762 f. fighting on Ionic column 1006 fulminant 793$_2$ 868 ff. grouped with Hephaistos in the Hephaisteion 213 ff. gull 783 hasting to right in full armour 659 694 ff. hawk 781 holding corn-ears 607 holding crow 782 782$_3$ holding double axe 867$_5$ holding helmet in hand 686 687 human-headed bird wearing helmet 801 in chariot drawn by two owls 830 in chariot drawn by two snakes 769 f. 831 kite or shearwater 781 Lanckorónski relief 830 Lansdowne relief 779$_0$ 'Lemnia' 211 216$_1$ 858 Lenormant 773$_6$ letting owl fly 830 nude (?) 868$_5$ ornithomorphic passing into anthropomorphic 794 ornithomorphic, semi-ornithomorphic, anthropomorphic in combination 799 799$_1$ ὀρθόκιτθος 225$_1$ owl 781 784 ff. 837 owl as spinner 795 owl with human helmeted head 801 ff. 'Palladion' 573$_4$ 609 1006 Parthénos 211 868$_5$ 933 Parthénos with olive

Athena (cont.)
instead of pillar 763_2 Pheidias 933 (See also Bronze Athena, Lansdowne relief, 'Lemnia', Lenormant, Parthénos, Varvakeion) pigeon 781 pursued by Hephaistos 220 f. rising from head of Zeus 612 669 673 ff. 688 seated and weaponless 574_0 seated beside Hephaistos 205 seated beside olive 763_2 seated beside Zeus 1049_1 seated with phiále, helmet, spear, and snake 614 seated with pomegranate in right hand and helmet in left 811 ff. setting foot on chariot 807 snake 776 (?) 837 (?) standing before Zeus 663 686 ff. standing beside olive 763_2 standing on knees of Zeus 663 681 ff. standing to left with owl in right hand and spear in left 827 standing to right with owl in left hand and phiále in right 827 standing to right with owl in right hand and spear in left 830 standing with lance at rest 573 swallow 782 Varvakeion 773_6 837_5 858 vulture 781 wearing helmet with features of Sokrates, Silenos, etc. 804_1 winged 88_0 225_1 785 804 ff. winged and advancing to right with brandished thunderbolt and outstretched aigís 820 871 winged and armed on Graeco-Roman gems 822 winged and flying to left with helmet, spear, and shield 821 winged and standing en face between two owls 822 winged and standing to left carries Nike on right hand and holds shield and spear with left 820 f. winged and standing to left crowns the king's name with raised right hand and holds shield with lowered left 820 winged and wingless on same vase 809 811 with cock on helmet 46_4 with glaucous eyes 216 with owl on head 46
Identified with Basileia $60_{5(4)}$ Gorgon 189_1
Assimilated to Aphrodite 225_1
Associated with Hephaistos 200 ff. 736 Herakles 958 Zeus 872 f. Zeus Μαχανεύς 566_2 567_0
Compared with Cretan snake-goddess 189 f. 225 f. meteor 885
In relation to Erechtheus 190 758 Gorgon 836 Nike 811 olive-tree 763 f. owl 781 784_1 789 791 snake 770
Supersedes Demeter 607 f. Ge 188
Superseded by Panagia Γοργοεπήκοος 189_2 —— birthday of 719 f. five Athenas 842_4 honoured by Peisistratos and his successors 188_3 motherhood of, passes into maidenhood 224
Athene, early name of Athens 224 748
Athenis 969
Athens
Cults: Agnostos Theos 1162 Anaktes 120 Androgeos 157 Aphrodite 725 f. Aphrodite ἐν Κήποις 165 168 726 Aphrodite Οὐρανία 171_0 722 Apollon Πύθιος 725 Artemis Καλλίστη 1181 Asklepios 775 Athena Ἀρχήγετις 827_5 Athena Νίκη 811 ff. 1196 Athena Πολιάς 244 573_4 614 721 749 758 Athena Ὑγίεια 775 859_1 Basile or Basileia $60_{5(6)}$ Blaute 177_1 Eros and Aphrodite 170_0 Demeter 990 f. Demeter Χλόη 177 Dionysos 604_2 Dionysos Ἐλευθερεύς 574 Eileithyia 588_1 Eros 725 f. Eumenides 189_1 Ge Θέμις 168 Ge Καρποφόρος 242 601_2 Ge Κουροτρόφος 177_1 244 Ge Ὀλυμπία 169_0 Hephaistos 211 ff. 226 f. 721 Hera 66_3 725 Hermes 725 Hermes Χθόνιος 604_2 Heros ὁ ἐπὶ βλαύτῃ 177, Isis 588_1 Kekrops 771 Kronos and Rhea 169_0 Men 308 f. Meter 67_0 Moirai 721 Nike Ἄπτερος 811 Nymphs 308 f. Pan 308 f. Panagia Γοργοεπήκοος 189_1 588 Pandrosos 243 f. Poseidon 721 Poseidon Γαιήοχος 11_2 Poseidon Ἐλάτης 9_1 Sarapis 588_1 Tritopatores 113 ff. Zeus 1196 Zeus Ἐλευθέριος 212_2 1186 Zeus Ἑρκεῖος 243 749 Zeus Ἡραῖος 1047 Zeus Κάριος 569_5 Zeus Μοιραγέτης 721_4 Zeus Ὀλύμπιος 604_2 Zeus Πάνδημος 212_2 Zeus Πολιεύς 317 570 ff. 720 f. Zeus Σωτήρ 575_9 1184 Zeus Ὕψιστος 939_4 Zeus Φίλιος 1189
Festivals: Anthesteria 430_0 Arrhephoria 165 ff. Balletys 612_0 1194 Bouphonia (See Rites: βουφόνια) Choes 1105 Chytroi 604_2 Deipnophoria 241_0 246_8 Diasia 1194 Diisoteria 575_9 Dipolieia 317 574 ff. 656 f. Genesia 1105 Haloia 815_0 1105 Hephaistia 213 Hieros Gamos 1047 Hydrophoria 603 f. Niketeria 754_4 Oschophoria 241_0 Theogamia 1047 Thesmophoria 815_0 1030 f.
Rites: ἄροτος Βουζύγιος 606 βουφόνια 570 576 ff. 873 bridal bath from Kallirrhoe (Enneakrounos) 370 ff. bull-carrying 1091 communion of worshippers devouring sacred flesh 606 ἐπὶ ὀχήματος φέρεσθαι καλάθιον (v.l. κάλαθον) εἰς τιμὴν τῆς Δήμητρος 990 f. pitchers placed over tombs of the unmarried 372 sacrifice of pig to Zeus Heraîos 1047 women celebrating Thesmophoria called μέλισσαι 1083 women celebrating Thesmophoria lie on bed of willows 103
Priestesses: Ἐρρηφόροι 166 261 Λουτρίδες 749
Myths: birth of Athena 720 Bouzyges

Athens (cont.)
606 ff. contest of Poseidon with Athena 750 ff.
In relation to Megara 783_1
—— Aglaurion at 169_6 242 f. Asklepieion at 775 1189 Bountypon at 597 bronze double axe with incised man, waterfowl, horse, and wheel found near 1145 f. Christianised Parthenon at 588_1 sanctuary of Eros and Aphrodite at 170_0 coins of 187_2 254 f. 485_{12} 569_5 570 ff. 694 695_4 713 725_7 754 f. 755 f. 775 779_0 788 f. 794 801 (?) 812 827 830 853_5 871 897 f. 1194 court ἐπὶ Παλλαδίῳ at 609 Διὸς ψῆφος at $600_{(4)}$ Disoterion at 576_0 Enneakrounos at 370_5 Erechtheion at 213 574_0 721 725 737 749 f. 758 f. 867 Hekatompedon at 574_0 768 f. Hephaisteion at 213 ff. 223 701 Kallirrhoe at 370_5 Kekropion at 771 Nike-balustrade at 706_6 819 Nike-hastion at 813 1196 Nike-temple (eastern frieze) at 581_0 755_2 olives as life-trees of 187_2 760 olive-tree on the Akropolis at 187_2 749 ff. Olympieion at 725 Pandroseion at 243 260 749 f. Parthenon at (See Parthenon) Propylaia at 775 1186 Pythion at 725 sepulchral stêlai etc. from 373 380 382 386 snakes in painted pôros from pediment at 767 ff. Stoà Basileios at 216 1185 1186 (description and history) Stoà Basileios identified with Stoá of Zeus Eleuthérios at 1186 stratification of cults on Akropolis at 736 'Theseion' at 223_6 'Tower of the Winds' at 129 f. town-arms of 785 ff.
Athmonia or Athmonon
Cult: (Aphrodite) Οὐρανία 55_5
Athos, Mt
Epithets: Ἅγιον Ὄρος 748_5 δαιμόνιε (voc.) 748_5
Personified as a giant 748_5
—— Macrobii dwell on 748_5 shadow of, touches Lemnian cow 1102
Atlantis
Cult: Poseidon 283_4 1184
Rite: bull sacrificed to Poseidon on pillar 283_4
—— brass pillar inscribed with laws in 1184
Atlas
Epithet: ὀλοόφρων 1103
Myths: Herakles 956 at Polos 417_0
Genealogy: s. of Ouranos by Ge 887
Function: supports sky 1064
Etymology: 417_0
Types: bearing pôlos 417_0 bearing Aion in zodiacal ring 1128 —— pillars of 1115
Atreus
Myth: golden lamb 1080
Atropos 717
Attes 874 See also Attis
Attike
Cults: Zeus 1196 Zeus Τέτιος 319_1 563
Attis
Cults: Ephesos 1174 Peiraieus 1192
Epithets: Τῆς (Τῆς?) 874_{11} χλοερὸς στάχυς ἀμηθείς $300_{0(1)}$
Function: rain 874
Etymology: 952
Attribute: pomegranates 815_0
Types: recumbent 1128 triumphant 1127 f.
Associated with Agdistis 1192 Kybele 1174 Kybele and Zeus 1174
In relation to Christianity 952 Kybele 952
—— as doublet of Agdistis 1174 as pig (?) 874_{15}
Atys
Cult: Smyrna 22
Genealogy: uncle or brother of Asies 1107 Auge 823 823_3
Augustus
Cults: Amastris 1163 Aphrodisias in Karia 1191 Dorylaeion 1191 Pergamon 1191
Epithet: ὁ ἐπουράνιος θεὸς Σεβαστός = divus Augustus 1163
Priests: ἀρχιερεύς 1163 1191 perpetuus sacerdos 1163
Personates Zeus Πατρῷος 1125 1191
—— complete deification of, reached through three stages (hero, demi-god, god) 1191
Aulus, head of, dug up on Capitol 441
Aura 225_1
Auramazda 1112
Aurelian, solar monotheism of 945 cp. 907
Aurora 73
Aurva $95_{3(1)}$
Ausees
Cult: Athena 128_1
Autariatai 502_2
Auxesia 612_0
Avenches See Aventicum
Aventicum, bronze statuette from 827
Axieros 1070 1128 f.
Axiokersa 1070 1128
Axiokersos 1070 1128 f.

Ba'al (Baal, Bel)
Cults: Palmyra 1158 Ras Shamra 1156
Function: cosmic power 1159
Type: brandishes club in right hand and holds stylised thunderbolt in left 1156
Associated with Iaribol and Aglibol 1158 f.
Ba'albek See Heliopolis in Syria
Ba'al-hammân
Identified with Amon 1076 Zeus 945
Ba'al-šamin
Identified with Zeus 945 1095
—— solar eagle of 982

Ba'al Zaphon
Identified with Zeus Κάσιος in Syria and Egypt 1177
Babylonia
Cults: 'Breakers of Heaven and Earth' 483 'the fettered god' 483 484_7 Ishum 889
Myth: tree of life and tree of the gate of heaven 1136
Bacis, the bull of Hermonthis, bibliography of 1082 See also Bakha, Bouchis
Baganda, kings of, have lion as totem 957_0
Baitylos, s. of Ouranos by Ge 887 891
Bakchos
Cult: Halikarnassos 558
Epithet: Ὀμβρικός 558 560_6
Function: rain 558
Etymology: 953_3
Bakha, the bull of Hermonthis 953_3 See also Bacis, Bouchis Baki(s)
Cult: Lydia 1082
Identified with Dionysos 1082
Baktriane, coins of 532 ff. 540 871 f.
Balletys 612_0 1194
Balor 933_7
Barbara, St 472_3
Baros See Embaros
Basile 66_2 (?)
Basile or Basileia
Cult: Athens $60_{5(6)}$
Function: 'Queen' of Heaven, or of Underworld (?) $60_{5(6)}$
Basileia as Athanasia (?) $60_{5(3)}$ as Athena (?) $60_{5(4)}$ as Basile (?) $60_{5(6)}$ as bride of Pisthetairos 57 ff. as Hera Βασίλεια 61 as an imaginary goddess recalling the Basilissa and Hera $60_{5(8)}$ as Kore (?) $60_{5(7)}$ as Meter (?) 67_0 as Orphic Dike (?) 950_4 as d. of Ouranos by Titaia (Ge) and st. of Rhea (Pandora), who brought up the Titans, was called Megale Meter, and became by her b. Hyperion the m. of Helios and Selene (?) $60_{5(5)}$ as personification of Royalty (?) $60_{5(1)}$ as d. of Zeus (?) $60_{5(2)}$
Basques
Rites: corrida 1090 Toro de Fuego 1090
Bath See Aquae Sulis
Bathykles 220 f.
Baubo
Type: seated on pig 1119
Compared with analogous apotrópaia 1119
Begoë (?) 434
Beisân See Beth-Shan
Bektashi order still worships Zeus on Mt Tomori near Berat 1170 f.
Beliar 332_2
Bellerophontes 413_0
Bellona
Cult: Rome 1142
Epithet: Pulvinensis 1142
Priest: cistophorus 1142
Belos
Genealogy: f. of Danaos 368
Function: sky-god 369_1
Beltis (?) 1159
Benacus, Lake, floating island in 1014 f.
Bendis
Cults: Philippoi 1134 Thrace 189_1
Identified with Artemis 189_1 233_1
Benedict, St 338_1
Beni Hasan, mimetic dances from tomb at 993
Bes
Function: apotropaic 847_1
Types: female 847_1 full-face 847_1 musician 1001 pygmy with wrinkled forehead and nose, broad face, and hanging tongue 847_1
Compared with Gorgon 847_1
Bethel
Cult: stone of Jacob (Maṣṣēbhah? meteorite??) 891 f.
Etymology: 891
Compared with Egyptian meteor-cults (?) 884_0
In relation to baityloi or baitylia 891 —— two places so called 891
Beth-Shan
Cult: Antit 195_0
—— burial pithoi from 195_0 tubular stands from 195_0
Billutschei 334_1
Bithynia
Cults: Artemis 992 f. Zeus 1160
Rite: ὁ κάλαθος τῆς Ἀρτέμιδος 992 f.
—— coins of 820
Blaute
Cult: Athens 177_1
Boghaz-Keui, Hittite forms of Greek names in cuneiform texts from 112_0 Hittite rock-carvings at 1097
Boïdas 149 ff.
Boiotia
Cults: Artemis 990 Athena Βοαρμία 608 Athena Ἰτωνία 820_1 871 Athena Λογγᾶτις 608_3 Dan 736_3 Hera Βασίλεια 61_1 Poseidon 736_3 Zeus Βασιλεύς 61_1
—— coins of 819 f.
Boiotos 109_4
Bol, Palmyrene form of Bel 1159
Bononia in Bulgaria
Cult: Iupiter Optimus Maximus Dolichenus 1098
Boötes 491
Boreas 130 160 See also Borras
Boreios 129
Borras 335 See also Boreas
Borysthenes 655_0 (?)
Borysthenis 135 140
Bosporos
Cults: Twelve Gods 147 f. Zeus Οὔριος 142 ff.
—— 'Praying Boy' on shore of 149 ff.
Bosporos Kimmerios 155 gold cicalas from 253_0

Bostra
Cults: Zeus Ἄμμων 912_4 Zeus Ἐπικάρπιος 912 —— carved lintel of temple near 909 coins of 908 912_4
Boubastis
Identified with Artemis 984
Boubrostis
Cult: Smyrna 1156
Bouchis 1082 See Bacis, Bakha
Boupalos 969
Bouphonia 570 576 ff. 873
Boura 21 f. 1118
Bourina 363 f.
Bousiris, king of Egypt, sacrifices strangers to Zeus 653_0
Boutas 176_0
Boutes 589
Boutes, ancestor of Eteoboutadai
Cult: Erechtheion 758
Priest: ἱερεύς 213_3
Boutike Limne, floating island in 983
Bouto (Boutos, Boutoi) in Egypt
Cult: Leto 983
Bouto, the goddess (earlier Udô)
Identified with Leto 984
Boutypoi, family of clan Kerykes 585 589 597 603
Bouzygai 608 ff. furnish priest of Zeus Téleios, priest of Zeus ἐν Παλλαδίῳ, and priestess of Athena (ἐπὶ Παλλαδίῳ ?) 609 keep sacred oxen at Eleusis 610
Bouzyges, eponym of Bouzygai 608 first to plough with yoke of oxen 606 f. identified with Epimenides 610 plough of 606
Boxing Day 530_6
Brachmanes 107
Branchos 474_0
Briareos 120
Briareus 3_0
Bricia 1117
Brimo
Epithets: πότνια $300_{6(1)}$ 913_4 ῥηξίχθων 4_0
Brimos $300_{6(1)}$ 301 913_4
Brisai
Myth: taught Aristaios 266
Britomartis
Cult: Gaza 550
Genealogy: d. of Zeus by Hekate (?) 544_4
Etymology: 550
Associated with Marnas 550
Bronteas $60_{5(4)}$
Brontes 125_3
Brundisium
Etymology: 1115
Buddha
Myths: birth from side of Mâyâ $97_{0(4)}$ fight with Mara 1087
Buenos Aires 160_2
Bulgaria
Cults: three-headed rider-god with epithets Κύριος θεός and θεὸς
Bulgaria (cont.)
Πανθοποιός (or Πάνθοπτος) 1125 Zeus Διόνυσος 1126
Bulla Regia
Cult: Apollon 825_5
—— two statues of winged Minerva from 825_5
Byblos
Cult: Zeus Σωτήρ 1163
—— excavation and restoration of temple at 1163
Byzantion, bull-headed furnace at 1102 coins of 1120

Caelestis 1045_5
Calaminae 988 f.
Caligula attempts to bring statue of Zeus Olýmpios to Rome 968 f. marries the Moon 1092 personates Helios 1092 personates Zeus 969_1
Campania
Cults: Iuno Feronia 1155 Iupiter Anxurus 1155
Cancer 589 1146
Canicula 266_3
Capitoline triad (Iupiter flanked by Iuno and Minerva) 40 f. 904
Capua
Cult: Iupiter Olbius Sabaeus 656_3
—— Arretine skýphos from 1003 coins of 408_0 mundus at 429_1 tomb-painting from 1000 f.
Caracalla
Personates Zeus 37_6
Caradoc and the serpent 1124
Carchemish, Hittite god at 957_0
Carmel, Mt, as object of worship 1068
Carnuntum
Cults: Manaphus 1163 Theandrius 1163
Carthage
Cult: Hera 1045
Rite: sacrifice of children to Kronos by fire 611_5
Caucasus 236
Celtiberians
Cult: Epona 1179
Celts
Cults: Boussourigios 1140 Bussumarus (Bussumarius) 1140 Danu 367 Epona 1179 Genius Cucullatus 1183 Taranis (?) 1191
Myth: Tuatha Dé Danann 367 —— traverse Europe in second millennium B.C. 367 enter Asia Minor in s. iii B.C. 367
Cerastae 653_0
Cereres 1124 f.
Ceres
Rite: sacrifice of a pregnant sow 23
Myth: consorts with Iupiter 452
Attributes: corn-wreath $1062_{2\,(1f.)}$ torch $1062_{2\,(1f.)}$
Type: in Pompeian paintings of Twelve Gods $1062_{2\,(1f.)}$

Ceres (cont.)
Identified with earth 452
Cernunnos, rock-carving of, in Val Camonica 1147
Chaaboû (?) 914_1
Chaamoû
Cult: Petra 914
Genealogy: m. of Dousares 914 f.
Chabakta, coins of 856_0
Chaironeia
Rite: Βουλίμου ἐξέλασις 1031_5
Myth: Kronos swallows stone 929
Chaldaeans
Cult: fire 339_3 340
Myth: outwitted by priest of Kanopos 339 f.
Chalke
Cults: Zeus and Hekate 544_3
Chalkeia 211 ff. 223
Chalkis ad Belum (?)
Cult: Helioseiros 1074
Chaos
Etymology: 1179
Identified with Poros 747_1
—— in Orphic theogony 1177 ff.
Charachmoba, coin of 908 f.
Charadros 361
Charis
Cult: Vari 261_7
Associated with Hephaistos 958
Charites
Genealogy: daughters of Zeus 955 daughters of Zeus by Eurynome $744_{1(3)}$ cp. 1070
Types: joining hands for dance 1057 naked 1070 three small females on hand of Apollon 1124
In relation to Zeus 1057
Charon
Epithet: Ἀκμονίδης (?) 927_3
Attribute: hammer 927_3
—— conceived by Etruscans under Assyrian influence 1143 mallet or hammer of, produces chthonian thunder 1143 receives plate of pomegranates 815_0 recent bibliography of 1143
Cheiron
Myth: gives spear to Peleus 209_2
Chembis
Cult: Apollon 983
Chemmis
Cult: Min 884_0
Chersonesos in Crete, coins of 1092
Chersonesos Taurike, coins of 1146
Chersonesos Thraikike
Cult: Zeus Ὅριος 1183
Cherubim 324_1
Chios
Cult: Dionysos Ὠμάδιος $599_{(2)}$ —— inscribed block of red trachyte from 1183
Chipa 624_0
Chloia 178_9 179_0
Choes 1105
Christ
Epithets: ὁ κύριος ἡμῶν 552_1 Porus Consilii Filius 747 Functions: judge 972 law-giver 972 teacher 972 timely storm of rain 326 552
Types: as infant borne by St Christopher 1020 youthful and beardless 970 ff. mature and bearded 970 ff. bronze group at Kaisareia Paneas 971_1 divine ruler 972_0 enthroned with globe as his footstool 948 seated on globe 948 974_0 shepherd-judge 972_0 threatening storm-god 973 in the likeness of Zeus 970 973 1196 influenced by pre-existing pagan types (the child Zeus or Dionysos? the Pheidiac Zeus?) 972 f. possibly influenced by other pagan types (Asklepios, Orpheus, Sarapis, etc.) 972_2 972_3 973_0
Compared with Zeus Astérios 954 —— painted in the guise of Zeus 970 perhaps alludes to the Eleusinian mysteries 307_0
Christina, St 1013
Christmas 915_3
Christodoulos, St 986
Christopher, St
Type: bearing infant Christ 1020
Chrysaor, twin-b. of Pegasos
Genealogy: f. of Geryones 1070
Type: in the pediment from Corfu 844_{10} 845_0
Chrysippos 726 1027_5
Chytroi, the festival 604_2
Cicero comments on Pheidias' statue of Zeus at Olympia 960 f.
Circassians (Adighe)
Cult: Schiblé 1114
—— treat as sacrosanct tree or man struck by lightning 1114
Çiva
Attribute: trident 1156
—— traced back to c. 3000 B.C. 1156
Claudia Quinta tows ship up the Tiber 895 f.
Clusium, tomb of Porsenna at 956_1
Commodus
Personates Hercules 1100 Iupiter 1100 Zeus 37_0 Ziu 1100
Constantine, St 1166
Constantinople, church of St Sophia at 906 f. conflagrations at 970_2 House of Lausos at 969 f. throne in the Magnaura at 957_0
Consualia 437
Consus 10_1
Corfu, archaic pediment from 844_{10} 845_0
Corinth
Cults: Athena Ἑλλωτίς 1092 Zeus Ὄμβριος 526
Myth: men sprung from mushrooms 478
—— coins of 1136

Cornutus 727
Corona 483 f.
Corycian Cave
Cult: Zeus 651_0
Crete
Cults: Athena 126_4 (?) Diktynna 189_1 Hellotis 1092 snake-goddess 189 Zeus Ἰδαῖος 953 Zeus Σκύλιος 413_0 Zeus Σκύλλιος 413_0
Rites: communion of worshippers devouring sacred flesh 606 ἱερὸς γάμος 1032 1092
Myths: Aix, d. of Helios, hidden by Ge in a cave, where—tended by Amaltheia—she nurtures infant Zeus with her milk 839_6 840_0 bull 1032_4 golden hound 1110 Iasion and Demeter 75 ff. infancy of Zeus 953 Zeus nursed by Meteres 225_1
In relation to Philistines 551_0 —— special virtues ascribed to foreigners from 592 tomb of Zeus in 1070 1173 tubular stands from 195_0 ff.
Cucaña 505
Cuccagna 504 f.
Cuclu 1075
Çyāma and Çabala, the hell-hounds of Yama 410_0 ff.
Cynics 595
Cyprian, initiations of 775 1046

Da, an ancient name of the earth-mother 9_0
Daânâu See Danauna
'Dagon'
Cult: Arados 126_4
Dagon, that is Siton, s. of Ouranos by Ge 887
Daidalos
Attributes: adze 1111 double axe 1111 saw 1111 square 1111
Compared with Ikaros and Talos 1111
Daimon Milichios
Cult: Lebadeia 1187
Attribute: snake 1187
Identified with Agathos Daimon (?) 1187
Daitroi, family of clan Kerykes 585 597 603
Daktyloi
Cults: Mt Ide in Crete 1033_1 Mt Ide in Phrygia 1033_1
Function: servants of mountain-mother 922
Etymology: 99_0 (?)
Type: three small male figures wreathed with flowers 1033
Daldis, coin of $899_{5(5)}$
Damateres
Cult: Rhodes 1124 f.
Rite: sacrifice of pregnant sheep 1124
Damia 612_0
Damigeron 920 f.
Damnameneus 922
Damophon 567_0 712 968 1108
Dan
Cult: Boiotia 736_3
Dan, the Hebrew tribe 354_6
Danaai 361 See also Danaïdes
Danaë
Myths: founds Ardea 365 is imprisoned by Akrisios in bronze chamber 364 is visited by Zeus as a fall of golden rain 455 ff. 518 is sent adrift in a chest with Perseus by Akrisios 455 is drawn ashore on Seriphos by Diktys s. of Peristhenes 455
Genealogy: d. of Akrisios 364 d. of Akrisios by Eurydike d. of Lakedaimon 455 m. of Perseus by Zeus 455
Types: Nikias of Athens 460 462 on coin 471 on gems 469 ff. recumbent undraped 467 f. seated on couch 456 458 460 463 standing behind or in chest 458_1 458_2 standing half-draped 465 f. Titian 466 f. Van Dyck 467
Compared with St Barbara 472_3 St Irene 472_3 the Virgin 467_0
In relation to Danaai, Danaïdes 476
—— as described by Simonides of Keos 471 f. as pendant to Antiope 469 as pendant to Leda 465 flanked by Antiope and Leda 467
Danaïdes 354 ff.
Myths: escape from Egypt 355 touch at Rhodes 355 make Argos well-watered 361 f. slay Aigyptiadai 356 bury heads of Aigyptiadai at Lerna 356 369 carry water to holed pithos in world below 369 f. 1193 f.
Genealogy: descended, through Epaphos, from Zeus 142
Type: emptying hydríai into pithos 425
Compared with priests of Akanthos in Egypt 339 354 users of libation-funnels at Ras Shamra 1193
In relation to Danaë 476 Orpheus 425_0
Danaoi
Etymology: 362 366
Identified with Danauna 354 360 362
In relation to Daunioi 364 f.
—— thólos-tombs of 362 (?)
Danaos
Myths: Egypt 355 Rhodes 355 Argos 355 f. makes Argos well-watered 361 f.
Genealogy: s. of Belos 355 368 twin-b. of Aigyptos 355 f. of fifty Danaïdes 354 f.
Danapris 366
Danastris 366
Danauna attack Rameses iii soon after 1200 B.C. 354 settle in Egypt 368 identified with Danaoi 354 360 362
Dānavás 362_3
Dānu 362_3
Danu 367

Danube See Danuvius
Danuvius
Epithet: νεφελοφόρος 368_6
Etymology: 366
Daphne, near Antiocheia on the Orontes
Festival: Olympia 1191
Daphnephoria 880
Dardanos
Identified with Polyarches 77_4
Das, an ancient name of the sky-father 9_0
Dauuioi
Etymology: 364 f. 366
In relation to Danaoi 364 f.
—— bury Aetolian envoys alive 365
thólos-tombs of 365 (?)
Daunios 364_7
Daunus 364 f.
Dazimos 1189
Dazos 1189
Deïoneus 72
Deipnophoria 241_0 246_8
Delos
Cults: Anoubis 154 f. Aphrodite Οὐρανία 152_6 153 f. Apollon 119 984 f. 1135 Astarte Παλαιστίνη 152_6 153 f. Harpokrates 154 f. Isis 154 f. Iupiter Sequndanus (Zeus Οὔριος) 155 Kabeiroi 1172 Sarapis 154 f. Tritopator Πυρρακιδῶν Αἰγιλιῶν 116 ff. Zeus Οὔριος 152 ff. Zeus Ὕψιστος 1162
Festivals: Euergesia 593_2 Pataikeia 593_2 Philetaireia 593_2 Sopatreia 593_2
Rites: γέρανος-dance 1087 Labyrinth-dance 1087 διαμαστίγωσις (?) 1087 εὐσεβῶν βωμός 593_2
Myths: birth of Apollon 984 f. birth of Artemis 985 Hyperoche and Laodike 1172 Opis and Arge 1172
Etymology: 985 (?)
—— altar of horns at 1087 1172 as a floating island 984 f. called Asteria 984 f. Egyptian sanctuary in 154 f. formerly sacred to Poseidon and Doris 985 marble group of Aphrodite and Pan from 1020 votive ladder entwined with snakes from 1119 winged Nike from 843_0
Delphinia 603_{12}
Delphoi
Cults: Apollon 1135 Ge 1121 Themis 1121
Rite: βοῦς τοῦ Ἥρωος 604_7
Myth: Zeus sets up stone vomited by Kronos 929 937
—— acanthus-column at 1009 f. Cnidian Lesche at 398 distyle bases at 1131 E at 1121 group of Ge and Themis from 1121 'Mycenaean' finds at 937_5 omphalós at 1120 f. plane-tree of Agamemnon at 1122 west frieze of Siphnian Treasury at 807
Demeter
Cults: Agra 722 Alexandreia 990 ff. Argos 417_0 Athens 177 990 f. Eleusis 967_1 990 Kolonos 179_0 Lykosoura 712 Megalopolis 66_2 Megara 569_5 1136 Melite, the Attic deme 202_0 (?) Mytilene 167 Pelasgians 191_0 (?) Phlyeis 202_0 Selinous 1136 1188 Theira 992
Epithets: ἀγλαόδωρος 596_8 Ἀνησιδώρα 202_0 Δεκάμαζος 916_1 Ἐλευσινίη 596_6 ἐν Ἔλει 66_2 Ἐρινύς 1182 ἐυπλόκαμος 77_1 Εὔχλοος 178_0 179_0 Θεσμοφόρος 168 244_3 Ἰουλώ 178_0 Κουροτρόφος 242 Μαλοφόρος 1136 1188 μεγάλα θεὸς εὐρυάνασσα 991 Μεγαλόμαζος 916_1 Πελασγίς 417_0 πολυτρόφε 990 πουλυμέδιμνε 990 Προηροσία 527 562 Χλόη 177 χλοόκαρπος 179_0
Rites: basket 104 990 ff. sacrifice of ram 178_0 sacrifice of pregnant sow 179_0
Priest: Φαιδυντής 967_1
Priestesses: δᾳδοῦχος 724_0 κερνοφόρος 724_0 μέλισσαι 1083
Personated by priestess $301_{0(3)}$
Myths: consorts with Zeus $301_{0(3)}$ 615_3 $744_{1(4)}$ Demophon 609 611_5 Iasion 75 ff.
Genealogy: m. of Kore 562_2 m. of Persephone by Zeus $744_{1(4)}$
Functions: earth 726_6 agriculture 527 provides food for man and beast 453 birth-goddess 673 ff.
Etymology: 1127
Attributes: corn-ears 1060 poppies 1060 sceptre 1060 torch 712
Types: Damophon 712 helping Zeus in labour 673 ff. in archaistic reliefs of the Twelve Gods 1055 ff. seated with corn-ears and sceptre 12_0
Associated with Aglauros 242 Despoina 712 Dionysos $302_{0(6)}$ Kore 178_0 Kore and Zeus Βουλεύς or Εὐβουλεύς 1124 Persephone 712 Zeus Βουλεύς 1124 Superseded by Athena 607 f.
——table of 177_1
Demetra, St 598_3
Demetreioi $302_{0(5)}$
Demetrios of Phaleron, sumptuary law passed by 380
Demetrios Poliorketes
Personates Zeus Kataibátes 1115
Demokratia 1186
Demon 121
Demophon
Festival: Balletys 612_0
Myths: Eleusis 609 611_5 Palladion 609
Demos 1186
Dendra, thólos-tomb at 623_1
Deo
Epithet: Βριμώ $301_{0(3)}$
Myth: consorts with Zeus $301_{0(3)}$ 615_3
Genealogy: m. of Pherephatta or Kore $301_{0(3)}$

Derwentwater, floating island in 1015
Derzelas
Cult: Thrace 1129
Despoina
Cult: Lykosoura 712
Rite: pomegranates taboo in her temple 815_0
Type: Damophon 712 f.
Associated with Demeter 712
—— marriage with 396
Deukalion
Myth: Lykoreia 526_7 966
—— flood of, drained off by cleft at Athens 169_0 grave of 604_2
Deus 320 671_3 672_0 1130 See also Zeus Devil
Type: serpent 767_2
—— phallós of 1078
Dia See Hebe
Dia, the festival 320_4
Diana
Epithet: Laodicia (? a blundered allusion to the cult at Aricia (supra i. 282_1, 282_3, ii. 147, 420_1)) 903_6
Function: daemonium meridianum 1130
Attributes: bow and arrows $1062_{2(1\,f.)}$ crown $1062_{2(2)}$ fawn $1062_{2(1)}$ sceptre $1062_{2(2)}$ spear $1062_{2(1)}$
Types: pillar with crown-shaped top 1119 f. in Pompeian paintings of Twelve Gods $1062_{2(1\,f.)}$
Superseded by St Christina (?) 1013
—— couch of 1044_4 name of, still survives as Jana, Janara, Janassana, etc. with a male counterpart Diano, Dianu, or the like 1130
Diasia 320_4 1194
Diaskouroi or Dias Kourai 664_0 (?)
Didyma near Miletos
Cults: Zeus Σωτήρ 563 Zeus Τέτιος 563
Rite: βοηγία 563
Diipoleia 575_4 596 See Dipolieia
Diipolia 320_4 575_6 593 See Dipolieia
Diipolieia 179 575_2 See Dipolieia
Diisoteria 575_9
Dike
Epithets: ἀγλαόμορφος 950_4 *παν*δερκής 950_4
Genealogy: d. of Zeus by Themis 823
Function: páredros of Zeus 949 f.
Type: guarding Peirithoos 402
Identified with Basileia 950_4 (?) Parthenos 823 Zeus 951
In relation to Zeus 949 ff.
Diktynna
Cult: Crete 189_1
Identified with Artemis 189_1
Diktys, s. of Peristhenes 455
Dinos 163
Diodoros, sources of, for things Cretan 1032_3
Diogenes of Apollonia 276_2
Diogenes the Babylonian 726 f.
Diokaisareia in Kilikia See Olba
Diomedes
Rite: human sacrifice at Salamis in Kypros 653_0 —— shield of 224_3
Diomeia, Attic deme
Cult: Herakles 594 724
Festival: Diomeia 594
Myth: Diomos 594
Diomeia, the festival 594
Diomos 593 ff.
Myths: first to kill ox 589 593 661_3 1194 founds Kynosarges 594
Etymology: 594_6 595_0
Dion Chrysostomos, describes Pheidias' statue of Zeus at Olympia 961 ff. 974 enters a plea for idolatry 963_1
Dion in Makedonia
Cult: Zeus Ὀλύμπιος 1068
Dione in repose identified with Mt Emertsa 1173
Dionysios, St 294
Dionysos
Cults: Athens 574 Chios $599_{(2)}$ Ephesos 422_0 Kos 413_0 Krastonia 1118 Lakonike 94_2 Samos 1030_3 Tenedos $599_{(2)}$ Thebes in Boiotia 1103 Thraco-Phrygians 874
Epithets: Ἀνθρωποφθοραίστης $599_{(2)}$ *βακ*χειώτης 94_2 Βασσαρεύς 94_2 Βρόμιος 1161 Δενδρίτης 753_2 Δημοτελής 212_2 δίγονος 1105 *διθυραμβο*γενής 1105 Διογενής 1105 Διὸς φῶς $80_{2(2)}$ 685_2 Εἰραφιώτης $83_{4(1)}$ 94_2 Ἐλευθερεύς 574 Ἐλιγεύς 1030_3 Ἐπάφιος 99_0 Ἔριφος 94_2 Εὔιος 1103 Ἡρικεπαῖος 515_6 (ep. 64_0 1179) Ἥρως (?) 1160 Μελάναιγις 837 1105 Παντοκράτωρ 422_0 Περικιόνιος 351_4 πολυγηθής 1103 πυριγενής 1118 ῥηξίχθων 4_0 Σεμελεύς 1105 Σεμεληγενέτης 1105 Σκυλλίτας 413_0 414_0 416_0 Thyoneus 1047_{11} Τηΐς 500 874 Ὠμάδιος $599_{(2)}$
Rites: at Chytroi 604_2 διθύραμβος 1104 f. marriage with Βασίλινσα 61_0 1105
Worshippers: human ἔριφοι 1104
Myths: simulated birth from Zeus 89_1 737 Zeus rains ambrosia at his birth 477 500 gives Bakchos or Iakchos to Athena as nurse 225_1 brings Hephaistos to Olympos 1106 attacked by Lykourgos, s. of Dryas 228_8 beats Pallene in wrestling-match 522_6 Tyrrhenian pirates 1031_4 pomegranates spring from his blood 815_0
Metamorphosed into kid 1104
Genealogy: s. of Ammon by Amaltheia 126_4 (?) υἱὸς Σταμίου 1114 f. by Isis of Apollon and Artemis 984
Functions: earthquake 4_0 life-giver 515_6 life-god of Thracians 953_4 rain 874
Etymology: $83_{4(1)}$
Attributes: bullae 88_0 ivy-wreath 675 685_2 kántharos 675 685_2 996 $1053_{1(1)}$ 1109 nárthex 88_0 996 nebris 1060

Dionysos (cont.)
panther 757_0 panther-skin 713 721 pedum 88_0 (?) torches 685_2 vine-staff $1053_{1(1)}$ vine-stem 685_2 vine-wreath 681
Types: pillar 1103 pillar with mask or masks 1103 herm on Ionic column 1006 double bust 1132 emerging from thigh of Zeus $80_{2(3\,\mathrm{ff.})}$ 686_0 standing on knees of Zeus 685_2 infant 88_0 685_2 infant riding on goat 1109 riding on bull 831 in chariot drawn by two griffins 842_2 recumbent 713 f. 721
Identified with Baki(s) 1082 cut corn $302_{0(6)}$ (?) Dousares 911 f. Zeus 1126
Associated with Demeter $302_{0(6)}$ Helene 1083 (?)
In relation to bull 94_2 fox 94_2 goat 94_2 Helios 718_1 Superseded by Apollon 1125 —— points of contact between Dionysiac and Christian practice 953
Diopan 620_0 (?)
Diores 110
Dios, the Thracian Zeus
Cult: Thraco-Phrygians 952
Epithet: Νῶσος 952
Dios Chorion
Cult: Zeus Ὀλύμπιος 22
Dios Hieron in Lydia, coin of 1117
Dioskourides, the gem-engraver 641_0
Dioskouroi
Attributes: caps with stars 542
Dios Phos $80_{2(2)}$ 685_2
Diospolia 575_7 See Dipolieia
Diospolis 515_5 See Laodikeia on the Lykos
Diotima 315_4 746 1189
Diounsis 1125 f.
Dipoleia 575_3 See Dipolieia
Dipolia 575_5 See Dipolieia
Dipolieia
317 574 ff. myths of the (Diomos) 593 ff. myths of the (Sopatros) 590 ff. myths of the (Thaulon) 596 ff. purpose of the 598 ff. 719 ritual of the 577 ff. 656 f. 662 669 f. 719 733 737 873 1194
Dis
Cult: Rome 904_2 1115
Epithet: Pater 432_1 904_2
Rite: human sacrifice commuted 433_0
Associated with Proserpina 432_1
Di-Sandas (?) 1097
Dithyrambos
Etymology: 1104 f.
Dius
Epithet: Fidius 946
Functions: lightning 946 protector of pledges 946
Diuturna 1112 f. See Iuturna
Dodo 289_2
Dodola, in the rain-magic of the Balkans 288 f. variations of her name 288 etymology of her name 289_2
Dodona
Rites. priests go with unwashen feet 1168 priests sleep on ground 1034_1 1168 cp. 1174
Priests: Ἕλλοι 1092 Σελλοί 1034_1 τομοῦροι (τόμουροι) 1168
Etymology: 289_2
—— bronze statuettes of Zeus (?) from 1078 1192 recent excavations at 1131
Doias 1196
Doidalses 471
Doïs, clipped form of Domater 289_2
Domater, Aeolic name for Demeter 289_2
Domitian
Personates Zeus 37_6
—— a devotee of Minerva 872 claims to be s. of Athena 872_3
Domouzi (later Tamouz) 1125
Donar
Identified with Volcanus (?) 210
—— birch-broom a symbol of 1072 cuckoo an animal form of (?) 65_0
Donatus as author of the scholia P. Danielis on the commentaries of Servius 1181
Dorians
Festival: Thaulia 282_7
Doros 109_7
Dorylaeion
Cult: Zeus Πατρῷος (= Augustus) 1191
—— monuments of 1160
Doto 129
Dousares
Cults: Elousa 915 Nabataioi 907 ff. Petra 914 ff.
Epithet: Ἀνίκητος 911_3 912
Rite: libation of victims' blood 907
Priest: ἱερεύς 911_3
Genealogy: s. of Chaamoû 914 f.
Functions: solar (?) 912 viticulture (?) 911 f.
Etymology: 911 915_1
Types: black stone, square and unshapen, set on base of wrought gold 907 hemispherical stone on cubical base 907 meteorite (?) 917 triad of stones surmounted by flat disks (? shew-bread) and set on plinth 908 Identified with Dionysos 911 f. Zeus Ammon (?) 912_4 Zeus Epikárpios (?) 912
—— misspelt Θεὺς Ἄρης and misinterpreted θεὸς Ἄρης 907 911
Drac, water-spirit of Languedoc 446_4
Draco 489
Drakanon
Myth: birth of Dionysos $83_{4(1)}$
Drekanon $83_{4(1)}$
Drepanon $83_{4(1)}$
Dreros
Cult: Apollon Δελφίνιος 1087
—— altar of horns at 1087 bronze Gorgóneion from 848_2 inscribed tapering stone from 1183 f.

Druses
Rite: cakes etc. passed through wooden calf 1092
Dryas, s. of Lykourgos king of Edonoi 426_4
Dryas, suitor for hand of Pallene
Myth: 522 f.
Compared with Idas 1072
Dryousa, name of Samos 1027_1
Dura-Europos
Cults: Hestia (?) 1163 Zeus Βέντλος 890 f. Zeus Θεός 1095 Zeus Κύριος 1095 Zeus Μέγιστος 1163
Dvita 545 cp. 546_1
Dyauš 531 1134

Easter Island
Rite: Tangata-Manu ('Man-Bird') 1137
Ebora Cerialis, coins of 1074
Echidna 410_0
Edonoi 426_4
Ëetion 77_4
Egeria 433_0
Egypt
Cults: Anoubis 48_0 HA of the Double Axe 351 Heh 914_0 Isis $302_{0\,(6)}$ Zeus Ἐλευθέριος 1130
Festival: Neiloia 344_4
Rite: sacrifice of straugers to Zeus 653_0
Myths: Bousiris 653_0 Kanobos (Kanopos) 339 f.
—— floating islands in marshes of 987 invaded by Mediterranean peoples 1077 f. (bibliography) regulations for the guild of Zeus Hypsistos in 1163 f. supposed influence of, on Eleusinian mysteries $302_{0\,(5\,f.)}$
Eilethyia 679_0 See Eileithyia
Eileithyia
Cults: Agra 724 Agrai 168 Aigion 663_2 Athens 588_1 Pelasgians 679_0 Pyrgoi 679_0
Epithet: Εὐκολίνη 724_1 (?)
Priestesses: Ἐρσηφόροι 168
Genealogy: d. of Hera 711 725 1032_3 d. of Zeus by Hera, and st. of Hebe and Ares $744_{1\,(7)}$
Function: birth-goddess 673 ff.
Etymology: 664_1 665_0
Types: acrolithic xóanon at Aigion 663_2 helping Zeus in labour $82_{0\,(4)}$ 667_1 667_2 671_0 673 $676_{(3)}$ flying from scene of Athena's birth 711 youthful 711
In relation to Hebe 711
Superseded by St Eleutherios 588_1 Hera 685_2
Eileithyiai
Cults: Kalchedon 667 f. Megara 668
Types: helping woman in labour $80_{2\,(1)}$ helping Zeus in labour 662 ff. Etruscan 665_0 winged 86_0 88_0 664 cp. $85_{0\,(2)}$
Ekata 545 cp. 546_1
Elagabalos
Cults: Emesa 900 ff. 905 f. Rome 902 ff. Mt Tauros 902
Epithet: invictus Sol Elagabalus 901_1
Priest: Elagabalus 902 ff.
Etymology: 900_4
Identified with Helios 901_1 Iupiter 902 904 Sol 901_1 902_3 —— altar of 902_0 stone of 900 ff.
Elagabalus brings black stone of Emesa to Rome 902 ff. builds temples for black stone at Rome 903 f. collects other holy stones at Rome 903 offers human sacrifices 526_3
Elaioussa Sebaste
Cult: Zeus Ὄλβιος 643_0 645_0
Elche, Lady of 1073
Elektra, d. of Atlas
Genealogy: m. of Dardanos by Zeus 77_6 m. of Iasion by Zeus 77_4
Elektryone 77_4
Eleusinia 297
Eleusis
Cults: Demeter 967_1 990 Persephone 967_1 Thea $302_{0\,(6)}$ 309 Theos $302_{0\,(6)}$ 309 Zeus Πολιεύς (?) 598 605_0
Festivals: Chloia 178_0 179_0 Eleusinia 297 Haloia 178_0 Kalamaia 179_0
Rites: ἅλαδε, μύσται 297 ἀπαρχαί $301_{0(4)}$ bull-carrying 1091 exhibition of corn-ear reaped in silence 299 ἱεροφάντης...εὐνουχισμένος...διὰ κωνείου...κέκραγε λέγων· 'ἱερὸν ἔτεκε πότνια κοῦρον Βριμὼ Βριμόν' $300_{0\,(1)}$ 301 913_4 κόγξ, δμπαξ 298 ὁ (ἡ) ἀφ' ἑστίας 611_5 πλημοχόαι 298 pomegranates taboo 815_0 τῷ καλάθῳ κατιόντος 990 ὖε, κύε 299 307 454
Priest: ἱεροφάντης $300_{0\,(1)}$
Priestess: Ἀρρηφόρος 167_8 168
Myths: Demophon 609 611_5 Thaulon 597
—— burials within 'Middle Helladic' houses at 1181 Dionysion at 297 Itonian Gate at 297 Kallichoron at $309_{4\,(2)}$ (?) 'Ploutonion' at $309_{4\,(2\,f.)}$ reliefs from $309_{4\,(2\,f.)}$ Rheitoi at 297 small copies of figures from west pediment of Parthenon found at 698_4 supposed influence of Egypt on Eleusinian mysteries $302_{0\,(5\,f.)}$ tablet of Ninnion found at 722_7 Telesterion at 724_0 Triptolemos-relief from 202_0
Eleutherios, St 588_1
Eleuthernai, coins of 421_0 gold tablets from 420_0
Elias, St
Cults: Mt Olympos in Makedonia 1167 Mt Ossa 1167
Eliogabalus 901_1 See Elagabalos, Elagabalus Elioun
Cult: Phoinike 762_3

Elioun (cont.)
Epithet: Ὕψιστος 762_3
Elis
Cults: Athena Μήτηρ 224 f. 749 Sosipolis 239_1 Zeus Ὄμβριος 525 f.
Myth: Molpis 525 f.
—— coins of 958 f.
Elishama s. of Gedaliah, seal of 1072
Elissa 646_9
Elos, called Kronos, s. of Ouranos by Ge 887
Elousa
Cults: Dousares 915 Lucifer 915_2 Venus 915_2
Rite: birth of Dousares 915
Elymnion (Elymnia)
Myth: union of Zeus with Hera 1041 f.
Elysian Way 1115
Elysium 1115
Embaros
Myth: sacrifices she-goat dressed as his d. to Artemis Μουνυχία 233_1
Etymology: 233_1
Emertsa, Mt, viewed as Dione in repose 1173
Emesa
Cults: Athena 888 Elagabalos 900 ff. 905 f. Keraunos 888_6
Festivals: Helia 901_1 Pythia 901_1 —— coins of 901 905 relief from 888_6 1158
Empedokles
Epithets: Ἀλεξανέμας 105_1 Κωλυσανέμας 105_2
—— the personified elements of 736_1
Enalos 133 135
Endoios 968
Endymion
Myths: Hera 74 Zeus 74
Genealogy: f. of fifty daughters by Selene 357
Engonasin or Ingeniculus 483 ff.
Identified with Atlas 491 Herakles 489 ff. Ixion on his wheel 483 Keteus 484 Orpheus 488 Prometheus chained to the Kaukasos 483 Talas 484 491 Talos 491 Tantalos 491 Taos 491 Thamyris 488 'the fettered god' of the Babylonians 483 cp. 484_7 Theseus 484
Enhodia
Cults: Larissa in Thessaly 279 Pherai 279 f.
Rite: sacrifice of bull with gilded horns 280
Enkelados 3_0 55_5
Enkidu 1106
Enkomi, Cypro-Mycenaean vase from 1150
Enoch 528
Enyo 608_3
Epaphos
Myth: 1082
Genealogy: ancestor of Danaïdes 142
Epeios 1137 1141 f.
Ephesos
Cults: Apollon 1174 Artemis 896_2 968 Attis 1174 Dionysos Παντοκράτωρ 422_0 (Kybele) Ὀρεία 1174 Poseidon $599_{(2)}$ Zeus Πανελλήνιος (? Hadrian) 422_0 Zeus Πατρῷος 1174
Rites: human ταῦροι $599_{(2)}$ ταυροκαθάψια (?) 1091
—— a hot-bed of magic 332_3 attached by cords to columns of Artemision 896_2 coins of 323899_5 excavations on the Panaghir Dagh at 1174 gold cicala from 253_0 neolithic pounder, facetted and inlaid with tin to serve as idol (?), from 898 ff.
Ephialtes 18_0
Epicureans 369
Epidauria 167
Epidauros
Cult: Asklepios 1182
—— bronze statuette by Hybristas from (?) 1150 f. metopes (?) from temple of Asklepios at 1182 relief of Hephaistos and Athena from 205 ff.
Epidaurum or Epidaurus in Dalmatia, St Hilarion burns snake at 1182
Epiktesis 1092
Epimenides and the Nemean lion 1085 controls wind 106 identified with Bouzyges 610 invited to Athens 592_3 περὶ Μίνω καὶ Ῥαδαμάνθυος 1103 (further bibliography) quoted by St Paul (?) 954
Epiphany, pagan parallels to Christian 913
Episkopos 593 f.
Epona
Cults: Celtiberians 1179 Celts 1179
Epopeus
Personates Zeus (?) 1112
Er, s. of Armenios 946
Erechtheion at Athens 213 574_0 721 725 737 749 f. 758 f. 867
Erechtheïs, the Attic tribe 759
Erechtheïs, the 'sea' of Poseidon in the Erechtheion 750 758 758_3
Erechtheus
Myth: war with Eumolpos 598
Genealogy: f. of Prokris 72
Etymology: 737 (cp. ii. 793) 867
Type: snake 773_8 (?)
Identified with Poseidon 12_3 737 758 f.
Associated with Poseidon 758
Confused with Erichthonios 181_1 773_8
In relation to Athena 190 758
Erichthonios
Myths: birth from ground 220 in charge of Aglauros and Herse 248_6 764 f. first sacrifices to Ge Κουροτρόφος 244
Genealogy: s. of Hephaistos by Athena 218 s. of Hephaistos by Atthis d. of Kranaos 218
Etymology: 181_1 220 245_6

Erichthonios (cont.)
Types: snake 218 753_2 (?) 771 773 half-snake 773 infant 218 771
Compared with Tithonos 248
Confused with Erechtheus 181_1 773_8
—— birth of 181 ff.
Eridanos
Etymology: 366
Identified with Neilos 349
Erikepaios
Epithet: [βασι]λεῦ or [Εὐβου]λεῦ 1179
Function: ζωοδοτήρ 64_0 (cp. 515_6)
Erinyes
Epithet: αἱολόδωροι 722_3
Myth: plant pomegranate on tomb of Eteokles and Polyneikes 815_0
Genealogy: daughters of Gaia 481
Function: blight the land 426_4
—— as horses 1182 as hounds 413_0 of (Hera) 928_5 of Ouranos 928_5
Erinys
Epithet: ἠεροφοῖτις 418_0
—— lashes Sisyphos 416
Eros
Cult: Athens 170_0 725 f.
Epithet: πολυτερπής 745_4 745_6
Myth: springs from egg laid by Nyx 53
Genealogy: s. of Poros by Penia 746
Attributes: axe 1129 bulla 92_0 hoop and hoop-stick 638_0
Types: ἀποσκοπεύων 1019 as infant driving Polyphemos 1020 1023 at the shoulder of Aphrodite 1022 at the shoulder of lover 1022 bearing thunderbolt for Zeus 1023 flanking Aphrodite 1018 guiding bull for Europe 1023 handing Aphrodite ashore 1023 hovering 39 465 f. 1018 1023 $1052_{(6)}$ leading eagle to Ganymedes 1023 on ladder 1118 on shoulder of Herakles 1019 f. pouring golden rain on Danaë 1023 prompting 37_5 1016 ff. receiving Aphrodite 957 f. removing Ares' helmet 1023 robbing Herakles of weapons 1019 spinning iynx 1023 standing on Aphrodite's arm 1018 stepping down from behind shoulder of Aphrodite 1018 touching breast of Aphrodite 1019 whipped 1179 whispering in Hebe's ear 1018 with crossed legs 1108 with thunderbolt and sceptre 1179
Associated with Aphrodite 170_0 704 746
In relation to Zeus 1129
Erotes
Functions: attendants on historical lovers 1025 attendants on mythological lovers 1023 ff.
Types: hovering 1019 playing about Aphrodite 173_0 procession 170_0 two 1023 ff. three 1025 four 1025 six 1025 eight 1025 nine 1025 numerous in early Christian art 1025 1180
Erotes (cont.)
Superseded by Renaissance putti and modern Cupids 1025
Erse See Herse
Ersephoria 166 265_0
Erysichthon 118
Erythrai in Ionia, sale of priesthoods at 1187
Eryx, eponym
Genealogy: s. of Aphrodite by Boutas or by Poseidon 176_0
Eryx, Mt
Cult: Aphrodite Ἐρυκίνη 172 ff. Venus Erycina 175_2
Priestesses: ἱερόδουλοι 176_0
Essenes 1141
Eteoboutadai 589 758
Eteokles 815_0
Etephilai
Cult: Mytilene 167
Ethausva 665_0 $678_{(2)}$
Etruria
Cults: Munthuch 430_0 439_2 Tina (Tinia) 259_0
Myths: Evan 259_0 Hercle chooses between Menrfa and Turan 839 Memrun (Memnon) 259_0 Tages 203_0 Thesan 259_0 Tinthun or Tinthn 259_0
– face-urns from 193_0
Etrusci, lightning-lore of 156 lore of Tages and Begoë (?) 434 mirrors of $86_{0(5)}$ 89_1 259 677_0 ff. 806 815_0 839
Euamerion
Cult: Titane 1183
Euboia
Cults: Zeus Ἑλύμιος 1042 (?) Zeus Ἐπικάρπιος 912_2
Euelpides 44 ff.
Euergesia 593_2
Eukleides of Athens 1107 f.
Eukoline 724_1 See Eileithyia
Eumelos of Corinth 628_0
Eumenides
Cults: Athens 189_1 Kyrene 1188
Eumenouthis 349
Eumolpos, makes war on Erechtheus 242_6 598 writes of Palamaon (?) 661_4 661_5
Euphranor 20_3 1186
Euripides, on the nature of Zeus 950
Europe
Myth: consorts with Zeus 469 615_3
Genealogy: d. of Phoinix and m. of Minos and Rhadamanthys by Zeus 627_1 d. of Phoinix and m. of Minos, Sarpedon, and Rhadamanthys by Zeus 628_0
Functions: earth-goddess 1092 tree-and-flower-goddess 617_0
Etymology: 1092
Attributes: basket 619_1 golden basket 1092
Types: beneath trees $622_{(3)}$ borne off by Zeus as a bull 615 ff. draped

Europe (cont.)
619 622_3 semi-draped 619 622_4 naked 619 622_5 floating 618_1 recumbent 618_1 sitting 618_1 standing 618_1 standing to front with basket on vase 980 stooping 618_1 in mosaics $626_{(2)}$ $627_{(3)}$ in wall-paintings $624_{1(1)}$
—— originally named Hellotis (?) 1092
Euros 130
Eurydike
Myth: Orpheus 99
Eurydike, d. of Lakedaimon
Genealogy: w. of Akrisios and m. of Danaë 455
Eurykomis 162
Eurynome
Myths: consorts with Zeus $744_{1(3)}$ hides Hephaistos in cave for nine years 228
Genealogy: d. of Okeanos, and m. of Charites by Zeus $744_{1(3)}$ cp. 1070
Eurystheus, takes refuge in pithos 408_0
Eustace, St 1102
Eutychia
Epithet: καλή 1073
Euyuk
Cult: Asis 1106 f.
Evan 259_0
Evander 314 315_0
Ezekiel 832_5

Falerii
Cult: Iuno 802_5
Rite: annual sacrifice of virgin to Iuno 802_5 (?)
Falerio, statue of Zeus from 535 537
Fates See Moirai
Faustina the younger
Cult: Mt Tauros 902
Fides 71_2
Fillin 1134
Finn mac Cumaill 1174
Finns
Myths: Milky Way conceived as 'Great Oak' 1192 Terhetär 446_4 Udutar 446_4
Florence
Rite: Scoppio del Carro 791_6
Fors 321_0
Fortuna
Etymology: 321_0
Freya 65_0
Fro 65_0
Fróyr 1134
Fufluns 88_0
Fundanus, Lake, floating island(s) in 1012

Gabriel 917_5
Gadeira
Cult: Herakles 983
—— golden olive of Pygmalion at 983
Gaia
Cult: Mt Hymettos 526_8 (?)
Epithets: μεγίστη 454_1 μήτηρ πάντων 454_1 πελώρη 928 1076
Gaia (cont.)
Myths: receives infant Zeus from Rhea and rears him in Crete 928 transforms Ambrosia into vine 1112
Genealogy: m. of Erinyes, Gigantes, Meliai 481
Type: recumbent with hand uplifted $85_{9(2)}$ (?) 601_2
Associated with Ouranos 419_3 420_0 422_0 477_3 744 745 928
Galateia 1023
Galatia
Cult: Zeus Βουσσουρίγιος 1140
Ganges
Cult: India 531
Ganymedes
Myth: Zeus 955_7 981 f.
Types: feeding eagle 981 f. standing at knee of seated Zeus 38 469 standing before seated Zeus 581_0 (?) 1050_0 1051_0 standing behind seated Zeus 1039 (?) 1040
Gargaron, Mt
Myths: Zeus consorts with Hera 35 Zeus visited by Apollon and Iris 35
Gaza
Cults: Aphrodite 553 Apollon 553 Britomartis 550 Hekate 553 Helios 553 Kore 553 Marnas 549 ff. Tyche 553 Zeus Ἀλδήμιος or Ἄλδος 556
Epithet: Μινώα 555
Rite: ceremonial bathing on set day of spring 1193 —— coins of 550 558 642_0 945 1072 Heroeion at 553 Marneion at 552 ff. St Porphyrios at 551 ff. Tychaion at 553
Ge
Cults: Amastris 1140 (?) Athens 168 169_0 177_1 244 601_2 Delphoi 1121 Phlyeis 202_0 Thermos in Aitolia 1184 Vari 265_0
Epithets: Ἀνησιδώρα 202_0 Θέμις 168 244_3 949 Καρποφόρος 242 601_2 Κουροτρόφος 177_1 244 Κυρία 1140 (?) Μεγάλη Θεός 202_0 Ὀλυμπία 169_0 188 236 265_0 Πανδώρα 202_0
Rite: sacrifice to any god preceded by sacrifice to Ge Κουροτρόφος 244
Priestesses: Ἐρσηφόροι 168
Myths: brings bough of golden apples as wedding-gift to Hera 1064 consorts with Zeus 949
Genealogy: m. by her b. Ouranos of four ss.—Elos called Kronos, Baitylos, Dagon that is Siton, and Atlas 887
Function: earthquakes 22
Attribute: omphalós 265_0
Types: emergent from ground 181 ff. 187 203_0 205_0 full-breasted 182 praying Zeus to rain 526_8 601
Identified with Themis 1064
Associated with Themis 1121 Zeus and Helios 1184

Ge (cont.)
Differentiated into Demeter and Persephone 312
Superseded by Athena 188
Geb 1027_5
Gela, coins of 1122
Gelanor 355 362
Genesia 1105
Genetyllides
Cult: Cape Kolias 172
Genetyllis 172_1
Genius Cucullatus
Cult: Celts 1183
Assimilated to Kabeiroi 1183 Telesphoros 1183
Survives as post-Roman dwarf, hobgoblin, etc. 1183
Genius Iovis Dolicheni 1097
Genius Terrae Africae (?)
Cult: Ghardimaou 1095
Gennadios, St 970
Gennaios
Cult: Heliopolis in Syria 888
Types: lion 888 lion's head 1095 —— influences type of Hermes 1093
George, St
Myths: dragon-slayer 1114 attacks evil spirits with his double lance 1141 burnt in bronze bull 1102
Supersedes Aphrodite (?) 1112 Mithras (?) 1194
Geraistos 191_0
Geran(e)ia, Mt 1165
Gerasa, excavations at 1197 head of third-century Zeus perhaps treated as fifth-century Christ at 1197
Germe, coins of 408_0
Gertrude, St 65_0
Geryones or Geryoneus
Genealogy: s. of Chrysaor 1070
—— rock-cut throne of, at Temenothyrai 1070
Geta
Personates Zeus 37_6
Ghardimaou
Cults: Genius Terrae Africae (?) 1095 Saturnus 1095
Gideon 500_1
Gigantes
Myth: Zeus 55_5 56_0 57_0 $306_{0(8)}$ 534 792_2 966
Genealogy: sons of Gaia 481
Types: wearing leopard-skin or lion-skin 57_0 wearing wolf-skin (?) 57_0 with human legs and snaky legs on same vase 842_2 with snaky legs 56_0 57_0 842_2
Gilgameš 1106
Gitiadas 661_7 (?)
Glaukos
Cult: Karystos 126_4 (?) 127 (?)
Function: sea-god 129 135
Glykon
Cult: Pautalia (?) 1182
Types: snake with human head 1182 Glykon (cont.) snake with lion's head and with fish-tail (?) 1182 snake with radiate nimbus (or wreath) round head and with fish-tail (?) 1182
Gnostics, formulae of 1137 f.
Gordion
Myth: ox-drawn car of Gordios 1162
Gordios 1162
Gorgon
Cult: Kerne 189_1
Epithets: Γοργείη κεφαλὴ δεινοῖο πελώρου 844_9 Διὸς τέρας αἰγιόχοιο 844_9 εὐπάραος 850_6 Μέδουσα 851_0
Myths: contest of beauty with Athena 850_6 slain by Athena 844 slain by Perseus 843 846_0
Functions: amulet 846 'apotropaic mask' (?) 846 cuttle-fish (?) 846 'evening aurora' (?) 846 gorilla (?) 846 lion (?) 846 moon 845 'nightmare' (?) 846 night-sun or Underworld-sun (?) 845_9 octopus (?) 846 'ritual mask' (?) 846 storm-cloud (?) 846 sun 845 863
Attributes: diadem and earrings 851_0
Types: archaic 848 middle 848_2 849 853 beautiful 849 ff. sinister 851 pathetic 851 ultrapathetic 851 profile 853 dead 853 Etruscan 853 856_0 Rondanini 851_1 Strozzi 853_1 Tyszkiewicz 851_2 bearded 862 f. 865 with winged head 706_2 flanked by lions 844_{10} 845_6 Gorgon-headed monster, with four wings and bird's claws, clutching two youths 836_3 844 woman-headed monster, with two wings and bird's claws, clutching two youths 836_3
Identified with Athena 189_1
Compared with Beauty of the Land 851_0 Bes 847_1 Bird Dikjeretto 844 Bird of Truth 844 Speaking Bird 844 Tzitzinaina 844
In relation to Athena 836
Gorgones
Epithets: Λίβυσσαι 847_1 Τιθράσιαι 847_1
Gortyna
Cults: Zeus Ἀστέριος 953 Zeus Σκύλλιος 413_0
—— coins of 618_0 $618_{(4)}$ 1092 men of, called Kartemnides and Korystioi 1092
Gosforth, the sculptured cross at 1128
Gournia, tubular stands from 197_0
Gral 505
Gryneion
Cult: Apollon 100
Gümbet in Phrygia
Cult: Zeus Βροντῶν 1160
Gwydion 51_0
Gygaia Limne
Cults: Artemis Κολοηνή 989 Nymphs 988 f.
Festival: annual reed-dance 989

Gygaia Limne (cont.)
Genealogy: m. of Talaimenes 989 —— called Koloë Limne 988 called Tala (?) 989 floating islands in 988 ff.
Gyges, king of Lydia, finds horse of bronze 1114
Gyges, s. of Ouranos and Ge 120
Gymnopaidiai 997 1008
Gythion
Cults: Poseidon Γαιάοχος 11_2 Zeus Ἄμμων 884_0 Zeus Καππώτας 884_0 939 ff. Zeus Τεράστιος 939
Myth: Orestes cured of madness 939
—— coins of 12_0

HA of the Double Axe
Cult: Egypt 351
Rite: priest purifies king at his coronation 351
Hadad 1093 1173 See Adad
Hades
Cult: Mytilene 6
Epithet: Κλύμενος 593_6
Types: enthroned with Persephone standing beside him 402 seated with Persephone seated beside him 425
Associated with Zeus and Poseidon 6 1156 f. (?)
In relation to pig 593_6
—— marriage with 395
Hadra, excavations at $618_{(3)}$ terra-cotta plaque from $618_{(3)}$
Hadran
Cult: Mt Aitne 177_0
Identified with Hephaistos 177_0
Hadrian
Personates Zeus Olýmpios 959_0
Hagelaidas 1153 f.
Hagioi Tessarakonta 11_1
Hagno, spring on Mt Lykaion 315
Halia 135
Halikarnassos
Cults: Bakchos Ὀμβρικός 558 560_6 Zeus Ἀσκραῖος 569
Rite: sacrifice of self-chosen goat 569
Halizones 1101
Haloia 178_0 815_0 1105 (?)
Halos
Cult: Zeus Λαφύστιος 1167
—— bronze statuette of Zeus (?) from 1167
Halybe See Alybe
Hamalkeides See Amalkeides
Hāpi 345_1
Harbaktes See Horos Epithets
Harmonia, genealogy of 77_4 tomb of 978
Harpokrates
Cult: Delos 154 f.
Type: infant sucking his fingers 1174
Hathor
Type: double bust (with cow) (?) 1132
Ḥaurân
Cults: bull-headed god 1098 Zeus Μάναφος 1163
Hebe
Cults: Kynosarges 724 f. Phlious 184_2 Sikyon 184_2
Epithet: Δία 184
Genealogy: d. of Zeus 724 f. d. of Zeus by Hera, and st. of Ares and Eileithyia $744_{1\,(7)}$
Associated with Hera 704 1048_4 Herakles 704 707 724 f.
In relation to Eileithyia 711
Hecate
Cult: Rome 544_3
See also Hekate
Heddernheim,
Cult: Iupiter Olbius 656_4
——reliefs from 209 f.
Heh
Cult: Egypt 914_0
Hekabe
Metamorphosed into bitch 413_0
In relation to Hekate 413_0
Hekate
Cults: Chalke 544_3 Gaza 553 Pherai 272_7 Selinous 1188 Stratonikeia 544_3 1066
Epithets: Γοργώ 805_4 Δαδοφόρος 544_3 εἰνοδία 413_0 Ἐνοδία 279_4 Καλλίστη 268_6 κυνοκέφαλος 413_0 κυρία 413_0 κύων 413_0 κύων μέλαινα 413_0 Μήνη 805_4 Μορμώ 805_4 πολύμορφε 805_4 Προπυλαία 1188 ῥηξίχθων 4_0 Σκυλακῖτις 413_0
Genealogy: m. of Britomartis by Zeus (?) 544_4
Attributes: myrtle-wreath 272_5 two torches 272_5 544
Type: holding torches 544
Identified with Ekata (?) 545 Kerberos 413_0
Associated with Zeus 544_3 544_4 1066
In relation to Hekabe 413_0
Hektor
Cult: Thebes in Boiotia 1174
Etymology: 1114 (?) 1174 (?)
Hel 447_0 447_6
Helene
Myths: birth from Leda's egg 738 f. Alexandros 78 Egypt 78 f. Menelaos 78 f. 1179 Proteus 78 Sparta 78
Genealogy: st. of Helenos 922
Associated with Dionysos 1083 (?)
Helenos
Myths: advises Greeks to fetch Philoktetes from Lemnos 921 receives from Apollon the prophetic stone siderites or oreites 922
Genealogy: b. of Helene 922
Helia 901_1
Helike, in Achaia 21 f. 1118
Heliogabalos, Heliogabalus 901_1 See Elagabalos, Elagabalus
Heliopolis in Syria
Cults: Adad 1095 Atargatis 1095 Gennaios 888 Hermes 1093 Iupiter Heliopolitanus 1093 ff. Magna Mater (?) 1093 Seimios 1095 Zeus 888

Heliopolis in Syria (cont.)
—— excavations at 1093 idol of gilded bronze from 1095
Helios
Cults: Gaza 553 Kara Adili 1071 Mytilene 1184 Thermos in Aitolia 1184
Epithets: Ἀνίκητος 912 Φύτιος 1071
Genealogy: h. of Rhodos, f. of seven sons, gf. of Ialysos, Kameiros, Lindos 986
Types: driving chariot 958 driving quadriga up from sea 718 radiate bust 1126 unworked stone 901
Identified with Elagabalos 901_1 Theos Hypsistos 1163
Assimilated to Gorgon 856_0 857_0 863
Associated with Men 1093 Zeus 1184 Zeus and Ge 1184
In relation to Dionysos 718_1 Nemesis 1073
—— baityloi dedicated to 889
Helioseiros
Cult: Chalkis ad Belum (?) 1074
Hellas 1092
Hellas personified 956
Helle 1092
Hellenes 1092
Hellespontos 1092
Helloi 1092
Hellos 1092
Hellotis
Cults: Argos 1092 Crete 1092
Hemera
Type: carrying Kephalos 1186
Hemithea 458_2(?)
Heos (Eos)
Myths: sheds tears of dew for death of Memnon 260 tends Tithonos in old age 247 transforms Tithonos into cicala 247
Genealogy: m. of Memnon by Tithonos 260
Types: pursuing Kephalos 187_1 bearing off Kephalos 187 pouring ambrosia (?) over old Tithonos 247
—— as Aurora imported into myth of Prokris 73
Heosphoros
Cult: Saracens 915_2 917_7
Hephaisteiou at Athens 213 ff. 223
Hephaistia in Lemnos
Cults: Athena 216_1 Hephaistos 216_1
—— Agyieûs-pillar (?) at 1120 coins of 233_2
Hephaistia in Lykia 228
Hephaistia, the festival at Athens 213
Hephaistias in Lemnos 229
Hephaistion See Hephaisteion at Athens
Hephaistion in Lykia 228
Hephaistos, Mts of, in Lykia 228
Hephaistos
Cults: Mt Aitne 177_0 Athens 211 ff. 226 f. 758 Lemnos 226 ff. Pelasgians 191_0 226 ff.
Hephaistos (cont.)
Epithets: κλυτόμητις 201_3 πολυτέχνης 201_4 πυρόεις 235_2 χαλκεύς 866_9
Festivals: Athenaia 212 f. Chalkeia 211 ff. Hephaistia 213
Rite: marriage with Lemnos 233 f. (?)
Priest: ἱερεύς 213_3
Myths: cleaves head of Zeus 125_3 222 477 660 f. falls from heaven 228 hidden for nine years by Eurynome and Thetis 228 fashions woman 201 gives aigis to Zeus 866 gives club and breastplate to Herakles 1186 makes magical throne for Hera 222 makes shield of Achilles 596 f. makes sword for Peleus 209_1 makes thunderbolt for Zeus 222 sleeps with Aphrodite 175_2 woos Athena 218 ff. 236 274 734
Genealogy: s. of Hera 235_2 f. of Erichthonios by Athena 236 f. f. of Erichthonios by Ge 236
Functions: arts and crafts 201 fire 227 f. fire on earth 234 fire springing from ground 228 lightning-flash 235 originally husband of Athena 200 223 736 758 867 originally Pelasgian sky-father in Asia Minor 236 736
Etymology: 190_7 200_1
Attributes: axe (?) 1106 double axe 125_3 200 235 477 867 1060 pîlos 234_9 pincers 1057
Types: flying from scene of Athena's birth 711 forging thunderbolt for Athena 210 f. presenting helmet to Athena 207 pursuing Athena 220 f. seated beside Athena in Parthenon frieze 205 grouped with Athena in the Hephaisteion 213 ff. Alkamenes 215 in archaistic reliefs of the Twelve Gods 1055 ff.
Identified with Hadran 177_0
Associated with Athena 200 ff. 736 Charis 958
In relation to Kadmilos 190_7 Philoktetes 190_7
Supersedes Zeus 188
—— list of objects made by 209_1
Hepit
Cult: Hittites 1131
—— reliefs from 209 f.
Hera
Cults: Argos 65 66 566_2 725_4 1043 ff. 1085 Athens 66_3 725 Boiotia 61_1 Carthage 1045 Hermione 1043 Mt Kithairon 1042 Korkyra 1120 Kos 66_2 Kypros 66_2 Lebadeia 61_1 Lindos 61_1 Mykenai 1045 Naukratis 1187 Orchomenos in Boiotia 949_9 Phokis 61_1 Pisidia 61_1 Plataiai 932 1042_6 Mt Pron 65 Samos 645_0 969 1027 ff. 1045 Sikinos (?) 61_1 Stymphalos 1070 Tarentum 636_6 Thorikos 725_4 Tiryns 1085

Hera (cont.)
Epithets: Ἀκρία 1120 Ἀργεία 66_8 1045 1085 Βασίλεια 66_2 Γαμήλιος 1042 Ἐλειθυια 725_4 Ἐλεία 66_2 Εὐρωπία 216_1 Ζυγία 949_0 1060_7 Ληϊὼ Νυχία 1042 Νυμφευομένη 1042_6 παμβασίλεια 61_1 Παρθενία 1027_1 Παρθένος 1043 1044_4 πολυώνυμος 61_1 πότνια 736_3 siderei regina poli 1046 Τελεία 65 932 948_{16} 949_0 1042 1042_6 1044_4 1060_7 Χήρα 1070
Festivals: πενταετηρίς 356_5 the Shield from Argos 356_5 Tonea 1028 ff.
Rites: annual bathing in Kanathos 224_3 1032_3 1044_4 bathing in Parthenios 1027_1(?) 1031 (?) 1032_3(?) bathing in Theren 1032_3(?) leg of victim reserved for Hera 566_2 στιβάδες or στιβάδεια 61_1 veil presented by Argive women 1046
Priests: κλειδοῦχος 66_2 Milon holding pomegranate as priest of Hera (?) 816_0 817_0
Priestesses: ἱέρειαι 1085 Kallithyia 1085 (Kydippe or Theano) drawn by white oxen 1044
Personated by Aspasia 32_5 66_4
Myths: courted by Zeus for three hundred years 1025 wooed by Zeus clandestinely 1025 f. grows up and marries Zeus in Samos 1027 bathes in Aborras after marriage with Zeus 1027_1 consorts with Zeus 35 58 65 111 111_1 180 $744_{1(?)}$ 1025 ff. carried off by Zeus from Euboia to Boiotia 1042 Διὸς ἁπάτη 35 180 924 1065 hung up by Zeus with ákmones fastened to her feet 924 threatened by Zeus with flogging 924 contest with Poseidon 751_1 Endymion 74 Hesperides 1064 Ixion 74 f. judgment of Paris 67 receives bough of golden apples as wedding-gift from Ge 1064 sends Argonauts past Planktai 975 simulated birth of Herakles 89_1 suckles Herakles 89_1 92_0 94_0
Genealogy: m. of Eileithyia 711 725 1032_3 m of Hephaistos 235_2 m. of Hebe, Ares, Eileithyia by Zeus $744_{1(?)}$ m. of Herakles by Zeus 92_0(?) Functions: not ab initio the wife of Zeus 744_1 1025 1065 marriage-goddess 948_{16} 1042 1060_7 aér 726_6 1046_5 cloud (?) 75_1 rain (?) 75_1
Attributes: Charites 65 Horai 65 sceptre 65 816_0 1039 f. 1048_4 cuckoo-sceptre 65 67 1044 lily-sceptre 92_0 stephánе 67 1039 f. floral stephánе 92_0 rayed stephánе 1041 veil 636_0 1033 1039 f. 1057 1060 star-spangled veil 1040 wedding-ring 1033 willow-wreath 1053 (?) lily 92_0 pomegranate 65 816_0 1043 lion 67_5 panther 67
Hera (cont.)
Types: pillar 1085 on pillar 638_0 Athenis and Boupalos 969 Smilis 1027 Polykleitos 65 816_0 1043 f. Praxiteles (?) 932 f. Ludovisi 1117 obscene (?) 1027_5 enthroned 67 f. seated on rock 701 seated beside Zeus as bride and bridegroom 1027 f. seated with Zeus seated before her 1048 seated with Zeus seated beside her 1048 f. seated with Zeus seated en échelon 1053 seated with Zeus seated facing her 1049 ff. seated with Zeus standing before her 687 in archaistic reliefs of the Twelve Gods 1055 ff. veiled 1045 virgin seated on lion (Iuno Caelestis) 1045
Associated with Hebe 704 1048_4 Leto 1042 Zeus 745 958 1025 ff.
In relation to Herakles 1045_5 Zeus 633_0 1025 ff.
Supersedes Eileithyia 685_2 Leto 1042 —— couch of 1044 1044_4 garden of 1064
Herakleia in Lucania, coins of 714_8 794 820_2
Herakleides Pontikos, pretends on his death-bed to become a snake 773_1
Herakleitos 234 1046_5
Herakles
Cults: Diomeia 594 724 Gadeira 983 Kynosarges 724 Mt Kynthos 1172 Sebastopolis (Herakleopolis) 408_9 Tyre 892 f. 978
Epithets: Ἀλεξίκακε 508_3 ἄναξ πυρός, ὄρχαμε κόσμου, | Ἥλιε, κ.τ.λ. 893_1 Ἀστροχίτων 892 f. 978 Ἥραιος 216_1 1047_{11} τριέσπερος 508_3 509_0 τρισέληνος 508_3 509_0 Χάροψ 1165
Myths: simulated birth from Hera 89_1 suckled by Hera 89_1 92_0 94_0 as infant strangles snakes 767_2 Atlas 956 Auge 823 Delphic tripod 409_0 799_1 Hesperides 1019 Hydra 795 ff. Kerberos 408_0 Nemean lion 956 Periklymenos 744_4 Prometheus 956 Virtue (Athena) and Vice (Aphrodite) 839 pyre on Mt Oite 512 ff.
Genealogy: s. of Zeus by Alkmene w. of Amphitryon 506 s. of Zeus by Hera 92_0(?) s. of Uni (Iuno) 92_0 f. of Tyrsenos by the Lydian woman (Omphale) 729_3 ancestor of Ptolemies 1172
Attribute: lion-skin 841_1
Types: double bust (with Hermes) 1132 dragging off two-headed Kerberos 399 dragging off three-headed Kerberos 402 f. feasting in Olympos 724_0 fighting Amazons 955 fighting Centaur (?) 1142 'Lansdowne' 704_9 recumbent 714 robbed of weapons by Eros 1019 with Eros on his shoulder 1019 f.
Identified with Engonasin or Ingeniculus 489 ff. Melqarth 893

Herakles (cont.)
Associated with Athena 958 Hebe 704 707 724 f.
In relation to Hera 1045_3 Iphikles 506 sea-gull 52_3 —— emerald stéle of 892 initiation of 724_0 724_4 pillars of 978 983 provenance of 1136
Hercle 92_0 839 1090
Herculaneum, silver buckle from 755
Hercules
Cults: Nikaia in Liguria 492_1 Numidia 1078
Epithets: Lapidarius 492_1 Saxanus 492_1
Personated by Commodus 1100
Myth: birth delayed by Lucina 663_2
Function: quarries 492_1
Types: in Pompeian painting of Twelve Gods $1062_{2(2)}$ in silver shrine 1155
—— table of 1044_4
Hercules, the constellation 491
Herkyna
Cult: Lebadeia 1182
Hermaïstai 155
Hermes
Cults: Ainos in Thrace 1137 Athens 725 Heliopolis in Syria 1093 Kyllene 725_5 Lydo-Phrygians 283_4 Peiraieus 1083 Pelasgians 191_0 Sedasa 1071
Epithets: Ἀέριος 325_2 332 αἰθέριον δρόμον εἰλίσσων ὑπὸ τάρταρα γαίης 332_3 Ἀργεϊφόντης 1132 διάκτορος 498_0 ἐνκάρδιε 332_3 ἐριούνιος 181_1 Ἐριφύλλιος (?Ἐρίφυλλος) 321_0 ἐριχθόνιος 181_1 Κανδαύλας 283_4 416_0 κοσμοκράτωρ 332_3 κύκλε σελήνης 332_3 Κυλλήνιος 671_3 675 Κυνάγκης 283_4 416_0 λόγων ἀρχηγέτα γλώσσης 332_3 Μαιαδεύς 1131 Μέγιστος 1071 μηχανιώτης 94_2 567_0 παντοκράτωρ 332_3 πειθοδικαιόσυνε 332_3 Περφεραῖος 1137 πνεύματος ἠνίοχε 332_3 πτηνοπέδιλε 332_3 σπαργανιώτης 94_2 στρογγύλε καὶ τετράγωνε 332_3 Τρισμέγιστος 332_3 Φαλάνθης (?Φαλανθεύς) 321_0 Χθόνιος 181_1 604_2 χλαμυδηφόρε 332_3 ψυχοπομπός 332_3
Rite: at Chytroi 604_2
Personated by high-priest at Olba 654_0
Myths: born on Mt Kerykion 417_0 cleaves head of Zeus 661 attends birth of Dionysos $80_{2(3)}$ $83_{4(1)}$ $85_{0(2)}$
Genealogy: s. of Maia 1131 f. of Kephalos by Herse 246 f. of Keryx by Aglauros or Pandrose (Pandrosos) 602 f. f. of Tat 332_3
Etymology: 411_9 (?)
Attributes: caduceus 675 eagle 1071 goat 1060 winged pétasos 39 purse 1082
Types: phallós 725_5 xóanon 725_5 bearded 1060_1 double bust (with Herakles) 1132 Lysippos 706 f. Damophon 567_0 in archaistic reliefs of the Twelve Gods 1055 ff. sandal-binding 706_6 707_0 standing axe in Hermes (cont.)
hand 661 standing with purse, caduceus, and ram 1160 with caduceus and eagle 1071 with phallós ending in ram's head 1082 with supported foot 638_0 640_0 with winged head 706
Identified with Thoth 332_3
Assimilated to Gennaios 1093
Associated with Hestia 958 Zeus 1071
—— Epeios' statue of, caught by fishermen in net 1137
Hermione
Cult: Hera Παρθένος 1043
Myths: Zeus and Hera come to 'anchorage' 1043 Zeus transforms himself into cuckoo 1043 Hermonthis
Cult: Bakha 953_3
—— excavations at 1082
Herodias 163_3
Heros κατὰ πρύμναν 158_4
Heros ὁ ἐπὶ βλαύτῃ 177_1
Herse
Myth: Erichthonios 186 248_8 764 f.
Genealogy: d. of Kekrops 166 d. of Zeus 261 d. of Zeus by Selene 179 f. m. of Kephalos by Hermes 246
Function: personification of dew 237 245 944
Hesperides
Myths: Hera 1064 Herakles 1019
Type: Panainos 956
—— garden of 404_0 1064
Hestia
Cults: Dura-Europos (?) 1163 Kos 565 f. Thasos 1125
Epithet: Βουλαία 1125
Rite: Coan sacrifice of ox that bowed its neck 565
Attributes: sceptre 1057 veil 1057
Types: in archaistic reliefs of the Twelve Gods 1055 ff. seated with Zeus seated facing her 1050_9 virginal, but with prominent breasts 1107 Associated with Hermes 958 Zeus 1050_9 1052_1 1125
Heudanemoi 103 f.
Heudanemos 103 f.
Hierapolis in Syria
Priest: 'cock' 1097
Hierapytna
Cult: Zeus Σκύλλιος 413_0
Hierax Theos See Horos Epithets
Hieron, on Thracian Bosporos 142 f. 145 147 f.
Hieros Gamos 1047 See also Index II
Hilarion, St 915_2 1182
Himalia 477 518
Himera, coins of 853_5 929
Himeros
Type: prompting 1018
Hindus, ceremonial rebirth of 1092
Hippodameia, d. of Oinomaos 956
Hippokentauroi 75_0

Hippolytos
Type: with Eros at his shoulder 1022 (?)
Hippolytus, St 338_1
Hippotes 107_3
Hipta 1078 1131
Histia See Hestia
Histie See Hestia
Hittite forms of early Greek names in the cuneiform texts from Boghaz-Keui 112_0
Hittites
Cults: bronze cattle (?) 1102 dagger-god 1140 (bibliography) Hepit 1131 Iskallis 1174 lion-god 837 mother-goddess standing on lion 834 Mother of the gods 916_6 Tarku (?) 651_0 652_0 Illujankas 1135
In relation to Kabeiroi 1128
Hobal 334_1
Holda
Functions: chthonic 447_6 fertility of soil 447_6 sky-power 446 snow 447 souls of the dead 447_0
Etymology: 447_0
Types: black woman 448 white lady 448
Identified with Minerva 210 (?)
Superseded by St Lucy 447_6
Holl 446
Holle 446 447_6
Horai
Genealogy: daughters of Zeus 955 daughters of Zeus by Themis $744_{1\,(2)}$
Function: doorkeepers of Zeus 34
Types: four Seasons as children 1127 f. holding flower, grapes, corn 1057 holding pomegranate in right hand and bird, flower, or doubtful object in left 818_0 (?) neo-Attic 659_0 660_0 Sosias-kylix 818_0
In relation to Zeus 1057
Ḫorites of Mt Seir
Cult: Ḫurun 1076
Horos
Epithets: Ἀρβάκτης 1073 Ἱέραξ Θεός 1073
Types: head on feeding-bottle $193_{(b)}$ sparrow-hawk 1073
Identified with Apollon 984 —— children of 345_1
Hulda 446
Hulle 446
Hungary, gold cicalas from 253_0 f.
Ḫurun
Cults: Ḫorites of Mt Seir 1076 Pi-Ramses 1076
Type: falcon 1076
Hyades 512 518 660_0 (?) 1082
Hyakinthos 460
Hybla
Cult: Apollon 1029
Hybris, the Silenos 513
Hybristas 1150
Hydra
Myths: Herakles 795 ff. Iolaos 797 —— as attribute of Aion 1180
Hydrophoria 603 f. 603_{12}
Hygieia, name of, on amulets 343 (?) on lēkythos from Gela 775 (?)
Hymettos, Mt
Cults: Gaia 526_8 (?) Zeus Ὄμβριος 526
Hynnarion, Mt
Cult: Zeus Τυναρεύς 1177
Hypaipa, coin of $899_{5(3)}$
Hypanis 653 cp. 655_0 (?)
Hypatios, St 992 f.
Hyperboreoi
Myth: Apollon takes Kroisos to their land 520
Rite: sacrifice of asses to Apollon 106_1 —— further bibliography of 1136 f.
Hypereia, fountain-nymph at Pherai 272_5
Hypermestra
Myth: saves Lynkeus and is imprisoned by Danaos 356 369_7 ultimately weds Lynkeus 356
Hypermnestra See Hypermestra
Hyperoche 1172
Hyperochos, slain by Phemios 1105
Hypnos
Type: with winged head 706_2
Hypsipyle 360_1
Hypsouranios 983
Hystaspes, the Mage 1147
Hysteria, the festival 320_4

Ialysos, gs. of Helios 986
Ianiculum, statuette of gilded bronze from Syrian sanctuary on 1114
Ianus
Epithets: divom deus 1130 Quadrifrons 1132
Attribute: pētasos 1131
—— 'polarity' of (?) 1130
Iapetos 3_0
Iapyges 925_5
Iapyx 364_7
Iaribol
Cult: Palmyra 1158 f.
Type: in military dress with rayed nimbus and sceptre 1159
Associated with Bel and Aglibol 1158 f.
Iasion
Myths: lies with Demeter 75 ff. or with phantom of Demeter 77 or with statue of Demeter 77 is thunderstruck by Zeus 76
Genealogy: s. of Katreus by Phronia 77_4 s. of Zeus by Elektra 77_4 f. of Ploutos 75 f.
Identified with Eëtion 77_4
Iasios 76_1 See Iasion
Iaso 1083
Iason
Myths: first sacrifices to Twelve Gods 147 f. founds temple of Zeus on Bosporos 148
Genealogy: s. of Aison s. of Kretheus s. of Aiolos 148
Iason 76_1 See Iasion

Iasos in Karia 76_1
Cult: Zeus Ὕψιστος 1162
Iasos 76_1 See Iasion
Iassos 76_1 See Iasion
Iberians
Cults: bull 1090 horse-headed god with human hands and feet 1179
Rites: dance of men wearing bulls' horns and hoofs (?) 1090 mumming play (?) 1178 —— column of, decorated with double axes 1138
Idaean Daktyloi See Daktyloi
Idas
Compared with Dryas 1072
Ide, a Cretan Nymph 931_3 982 (?)
Ide, a Phrygian Nymph 982 (?)
Ide, Mt, in Crete
Cults: Daktyloi 1033_1 Rhea 1033_1
Ide, Mt, in Phrygia (Mysia)
Cults: Daktyloi 1033_1 Mother of the gods 893 Rhea 1033_1
Myths: Daktyloi (Kelmis, Damnameneus, Akmon) discover iron 922 Zeus consorts with Hera 35 180 1032 ff. Zeus visited by Apollon and Iris 35
Idoumaioi
Cult: Koze 334_1
Idnna 65_0
Idyia 743_8
Ikaria 594
Ikaros
Attributes: double axe 1111 square 1111
Compared with Daidalos and Talos 1111
Ikonion
Myths: Annakos 527 f. Prometheus and Athena make images of clay 528
—— Paul and Thekla at 523 f.
Ilion
Cult: Athena 283_4
Rite: bull-hanging for Athena 283_4
Illujankas 1135
Illyrioi
Cult: Arantides (?) 1184
Myths: Akrisios (?) 1187 Daunus 364 Teutamidas (?) 1187
Imbrasos 1029
Imbros, Epiphany song from 295 f.
Im-dugud 1155
Inachos
Myth: punished by Poseidon with drought 355 f.
Inachos, the river 224_3 361
Inarime 3_0
India
Cults: Ganges 531 Indra 531 Vishnu 546_1 Zeus Ὄμβριος 531
Rites: jar of rains 107 f. jar of winds 104_7 107 f.
—— early coinage of 532 f. 540 ff. 871 f.
Indra
Cult: India 531
Myths: combat with demons 362_3 slays Namuki with foam 273 fights Vṛtra 531 slays Vṛtra with thunderbolt 273_3 362_3
Genealogy: s. of Dyauš 531
Function: storm 544
Etymology: 1078 (?)
Attribute: vajra 926
Identified with Zeus 540 545
—— elephant of 546 f.
Ingeniculus See Engonasin
Ino 133 135 1104
Inönü in Phrygia
Cults: Asklepios 1146 draped goddess holding grape-bunch and cornu copiae 1146 Nemesis 1146 rider-god 1146 Theoi Hosioi kai Dikaioi 1146 Zeus Βροντῶν 1160 Zeus Μέγιστος 1160
—— altars from 1146 1160
Io
Epithet: Καλλιθύεσσα 1082 1085
Myths: travels 360_4 Zeus 615_3 631 ff.
Types: heifer 631_4 heifer with human face 634_1 maiden with heifer's ears and horns 634_2 maiden with heifer's horns 634 637_3 ff. maiden with heifer at her side 634 641_3 antefixes 635_0 in arabesque 640_0 in bridal array 636_0
—— bibliography of 1082
Iolaos
Myths: Delphic tripod 799_1 Herakles suckled by Hera 89_1 Hydra 797
Type: duplicated 89_1 (?)
Ioulis
Cults: Aphrodite Κτήσυλλα 269_1 Artemis 269
—— coins of 269 271
Iovis Opulentia 156
Iovos 1115 See Iupiter
Iphigeneia
Epithet: Ὀρσιλοχία 99_0
Myth: sacrifice of, commuted to sacrifice of deer or bear or bull 233_1
Iphikles
Genealogy: s. of Amphitryon by Alkmene 506
In relation to Herakles 506
Irekepaigos 1179 See Erikepaios
Irene, St 472_8
Iris
Functions: bridesmaid of Hera 1033 f. messenger of Zeus 54
Attribute: knotted or studded staff 94_0
Types: standing before seated Hera 1051_0 standing beside seated Hera 1053
Irminsûl, as support of sky 1116 f.
Ishum
Cult: Babylonia 889
Function: fire 889
Isis
Cults: Athens 588_1 Delos 154 f. Egypt $302_{0(6)}$ Pompeii 641_4 Rhodes 986

Isis (cont.)
Genealogy: m. by Dionysos of Apollon and Artemis 984
Functions: earth $302_{0(6)}$ 344_1 351 'Queen of Heaven' 350
Attribute: starry robe 350
Types: 'Canopus' 346 double bust (with Apis) 1132
Identified with Eumenouthis (?) 349 Theonoe (?) 349
Associated with Nephthys, Neith, and Selket or Serqet 345_1
—— earth 'the body of Isis' 351 the star of 180
Iskallis, Hittite form of Attis 1174
Ištar
Functions: morning- and evening-star 834 ravisher of men 834
Type: nude goddess 834
Istros, the river, names of 368_6 source of 1117
See also Danuvius
Istros, the town, coins of 1137
Italy, coins of central $342_{0(4)}$
Itanos
Cults: Athena 126_4 127 'Triton' 126_3 127
—— coins of 126_4 127
Itanos, eponym 126_4
Iulianus, the Chaldaean 332
Iuno
Cults: Campania 1155 Falerii 802_5 Lanuvium 837_4 Rome 23
Epithets: Caelestis 1045_5 Feronia 1155 Lucina 1044_4 1117 Moneta 23_5 Sispita Mater Regina 837_4 Sospita 837
Rites: annual sacrifice of virgin at Falerii 802_5 (?) sacrifice of pregnant sow 23
Functions: aer 235_0 childbirth 1117
Attributes: peacock 41 stephánē with nine crescents 1117
Types: in Pompeian paintings of Twelve Gods $1062_{2(1\text{ f.})}$ virgin seated on lion 1045
Identified with earth 452
—— couch of 1044_4 star of 180
Iupiter
Cults: Alban Mt 492 Amathous in Kypros 653_0 Apulum 1140 Bononia in Bulgaria 1098 Campania 1155 Capua 656_3 Delos 155 Heddernheim 656_4 Heliopolis in Syria 1093 ff. Maiden Castle (?) 1098 f. Makedonia 148_7 Nescania 1129 Numidia 1078 Pompeii 29_4 Rome 433_0 544_3 1097 f. Salamis in Kypros 646_0 Syracuse 148 Volsci 1155
Epithets: Aeternus 947 Anxur 1155 Anxurus 1155 Bronton 544_3 Bussumarius 1140 Bussumarus 1140 Capitolinus 246_0 562_3 707_2 1066 Conservator 946 Conservator Totius Poli 947 deus deorum 1130
Iupiter (cont.)
Dolichenus 37_6 831 945 946 f. 1097 f. (bibliography) Elicius 433_0 Exhibitor Invictus 947 Heliopolitanus 945 1093 1095 Hospes 653_0 Ilicius 433_0 (?) Imperator 148 Maius 321_0 Nasamonius Tonans 325_3 nubilus 36_1 Numen Praestantissimum 947 Olbius 656_3656_4 Optimus Maximus 947 1093 1098 1140 Pantheus 1129 Pluvialis 324 Pluvius 324 333 Purpurio 55_5 Sabaeus 656_3 Salaminius 646_0 Secundanus 156 f. Secundus 156 157 Sequndanus 155 ff. Syrius 902_3 Terminalis 1183 Terminus 1183 verveceus 1078
Festivals: Latiar 432_1 Latinae 432_1
Rites: aquaelicium 432_9 human sacrifice to Iupiter Elicius commuted 433_0
Priest: flamen Dialis must neither touch nor mention dog or goat 243_5
Personated by Commodus 1100 magistrate presiding at games 562_3
Myths: consorts with Ceres 452 in Gigantomachy gets thunderbolts from eagle 792_2 rains blood before death of M. Marcellus 479 rescues Alcumena 517 transforms ants into men (Myrmidones) 608_2
Genealogy: f. of Aeacus by Aegina 608_2
Functions: aether 235_0 ignis 235_0 lightning 433_0 rain 432_9 wind 107 157 protector of boundaries 1183 ruler of starry sky 948
Etymology: 452_1
Attribute: eagle 41
Types: beardless $1062_{2(1)}$? with white hair 734_0 silver bust 1155 1160 half-length figure fulminant 333 enthroned above clouds 40 surrounded by zodiac etc. 1159 seated between Minerva and Iuno 40 f. 41 standing on bull 831 holding whip and corn-ears with pólos on head and bulls beside him 1093 in Pompeian paintings of Twelve Gods $1062_{2(1\text{ f.})}$
Identified with air 452 rain 452 452_3 sky 452 Elagabalos 902 904 Marnas 555 f.
Iupiter, the planet 71_1
Iustitia 823_7
Iuturna (Diuturna)
Etymology: 1112 f.
Ixion
Personates Zeus 141
Myths: Hera 74 f. Zeus 74 f. 974
Genealogy: f. of Kentauros 75
Types: Greek 1072 Etruscan 1072 Roman 1072 Byzantine 1072
Identified with Engonasin or Ingeniculus 483

Jack of the Hammer 1142
Jacob, ladder of 1118 f.

Jains 1120
Jehovah
Cult: Thessalonike 1162
Epithet: σεισίχθων 21
Functions: earthquake 5_6 10_1 21 storm 324_1 884_0
Attributes: hawk (?) 558 high crown 1072 thunderbolt 1072
Types: as a solar Zeus 558 bearded head wearing wreath 558 (?) drawn by Cherubim 324_1 seated on throne, with thunderbolt in right hand, between two stands supporting seven-branched palmettes—the whole on a boat with stem and stern ending in a bird's head 1072 seated on winged wheel 558 Identified with Marnas 558 (?) Theos Hypsistos 1162 Zeus 945
Compared with Amen 884_0
In relation to Zeus Κάσιος in Egypt 1177
Jerash See Gerasa Jews
Rites: alleged sacrifice of children to Moloch by fire 611_5 Μονοτοδαρία 1081
John the Baptist
Cult: Malta 1031_7 (?)
Supersedes Adonis 1031_7 (?)
John the Evangelist, St, in Patmos 986
Jordan 295 f.
Juktas, Mt, profile of Zeus on 1173

Ka'bah
Festival: annual covering in black with inscribed gold band 918 f.
Myths: brought from heaven by Gabriel 917_5 first white, then black 917_5 escapes deluge 917_6 Abraham consorts with Hagar upon it 917_7 918 Abraham fastens his camel to it, when about to sacrifice Isaac 917_7 Functions: 'in pre-Islamic times the meteoric form of an Arab deity, either Dousares himself (Münter) or the Moon (V. Dalberg)' (?) 917 'originally a goddess embodied as an aerolite and annually draped in accordance with an ancient marriage-rite' (?) 916_1 —— Arab beliefs concerning 917 f. described by J. L. Burckhardt 919 f. described by Sir R. F. Burton 918 f. described by Sir W. Muir 919_4
Kabeirion at Thebes in Boiotia, vase from 160 votive table from 580_0
Kabeiroi
Cults: Delos 1172 Mt Kynthos 1172 Phoinike 1001
Priest: κοίης or κόης 1083
Etymology: 1128
In relation to Genius Cucullatus 1183 Hittites 1128 St Thomas 1128
—— bibliography of 1128
Kabeiros
Cult: Thessalonike 902_7
Kadmilos 190_7
Kadmos
Genealogy: b. of Harmonia 77_4 —— tomb of 978
Kaikias 130
Kaineus 3_9
Kairos
Type: Lysippos 970
—— bibliography of 1161
Kaisareia in Kappadokia
Cults: Tyche (Tranquillina) 1177 Zeus 1177
—— coins of 1177
Kaisareia Paneas, bronze group at 971_1 1086 statue of Julian at 972_0 1086
Kalamaia 179_0
Kalamis 1152 (?)
Kalchedon
Cult: Eileithyiai 667 f.
Kallimachos the sculptor 1008 f.
Kalliope 100_2 (?) 100_6 (?)
Kallithyia 1085
Kallynteria 240 f.
Kamarina, coins of 853_5 1146
Kameiros, gs. of Helios 986
Kanatha
Cult: Zeus Μάρας ὁ Κύριος 555
Kanathos 224_3
Kanobos (Kanopos)
Cult: Kanopos 340
Myths: helmsman of Menelaos 339_3 340 priest of Kanopos outwits Chaldaeans 339 f.
Kanobos, the helmsman of Menelaos
Myth: loved by Theonoe, d. of Proteus 349_8 1193
Genealogy: h. of Eumenouthis 349
Identified with Osiris 349
Kanobos, the star 349
Kanopos
Cult: Kanobos (Kanopos) 340
Function: the Osiris-Neilos of fresh water, opposed by Set-Typhon the salt water of the sea 344_8 (?)
Type: terra-cotta strainer caulked with wax and filled with Nile-water 339_3 340 344 1193
Kapisa
Cult: Zeus 545
Kappadokia, idols with one, two, and three heads from 1135
Kar, s. of Phoroneus 569_5
Kara Adili
Cults: Helios 1071 Zeus 1071
Karia, akrópolis of Megara 569_5
Karissai
Cult: Mytilene 167
Karkinos 1128
Karneia 1076
Karnos
Function: vine-god 1076
Type: ram 1076
Karousa
Cult: Zeus Δικαιόσυνος Μέγας 951

Karpathos
Cult: Poseidon Πόρθμιος 18_0
Kartemnides See Gortyna
Karthaia
Cult: Apollon 269_1
—— coins of 271
Karystos
Cults: Glaukos 126_4 (?) 127 (?) Zeus 126_4 127
—— coins of 1041
Kasion, Mt, in Egypt
Cult: Zeus Κάσιος 1177
Kasion, Mt, in Syria
Cult: Zeus Κάσιος 1177
Kasmilos 1128
Kassandra
Myth: Aias, s. of Oïleus 867 956
Kassandreia
Cults: meteorite 884_0 886 Zeus Ἄμμων 882_2
—— coins of 882_2 884_0
Kastor and Polydeukes, bibliography of 1134
Kataibasia 1115
Kato Zakro, clay seal-impressions from 840_0 845 1106
Katreus 77_4
Kaulonia
Cult: Apollon 830
Kavak
Cults: Theos Olbios 630_0 Zeus Ὄλβιος 628 ff.
Kekrops
Cult: Athens 771
Priest: ἱερεύς 771_4 1194
Myths: brought by Athena to Megara 783 809 f. (?) buried in Kekropion at Athens 770 f.
Genealogy: f. of Aglauros, Pandrosos, Herse 237 ff.
Etymology: 251_0
Type: with snaky tail 181 186 187 770 773 810_1
Keles 1083
Kelmis 922
Kenaion, Mt
Cults: St Constantine 1166 Zeus Κήναιος (Κηναῖος) 1166 Kentauros
Genealogy: s. of Ixion 75
Etymology: 1072 (?)
Kentriadai, family of clan Kerykes 585 597 603
Keos
Cults: Aristaios 267 f. St Artemidos 269 Artemis 269 Ktesylla Ἑκαέργη 269_1 Seirios 266 Zeus Ἰκμαῖος 266 f. Aristaios 265 ff. Ktesylla 269_1
—— coins of 270
Kephallenia
Cult: Zeus Αἰνήσιος 1171
Kephalos
Myths: borne off to Syria by Heos (Eos) 246 Prokris 72
Kephalos (cont.)
Genealogy: s. of Deïoneus 72 s. of Hermes by Herse 246 s. of Hermes by Kreousa d. of Erechtheus 246_{12} b. of Ainetos, Aktor, Phylakos 187_1 f. of Tithonos and gf. of Phaethon 246 f.
Types: borne off by Hemera 1186 borne off by Heos 187 pursued by Heos 187_1 standing on coins of Kranioi (?) 1171
Kephisodotos the younger 659_0
Keraunos
Cult: Emesa 888_6
Etymology: 1114
Kerberos
Epithets: latratu...trifauci 403_1 tergeminus 403_1 triceps 403_1 triformis 403_1 Τρικάρηνος 403_1 Τρικέρβερος 403_1 τρίκρανος 403_1 trilingui ore or ore trilingui 403_1 τρισώματος 403_1
Etymology: 411_0 412_0
Types: on coins 408_0 on gems 408_0 ff. on vases 408_0 one-headed 403_1 two-headed 399 three-headed 402 f. 403_1 fifty-headed 403_1 hundred-headed 403_1
Compared with Kleon 403_1
—— as attribute of Aion 1180 in modern Greek folk-songs and folk-tales 412_0 f. oath by (?) 48_0 snaky adjuncts of 410_0
Keres, as hounds 413_0
Kerkyon 177_0
Kerne
Cult: Gorgon 189_1
Myth: Eos and Tithonos 248
Kerykes, priestly clan of Eleusis 104 585 589 597 f. 602 737
Kerykion, Mt 417_0
Keryx, eponym of Kerykes
Genealogy: s. of Hermes by Aglauros 602 f. s. of Hermes by Pandrose (Pandrosos) 603
Keteus, s. of Lykaon and f. of Megisto (=Kallisto) 484
Keyx 141
Khonds 446
Kibotoi 530 (?)
Kibotos See Apameia in Phrygia
Kinyras 817_0
Kios or Prousias
Rite: κάλαθος taken in procession 993
Kirke
Myth: Odysseus 1073
—— gloriole of 1072
Kithairon, Mt
Cults: Hera 1042 Hera Ἀητὼ Νυχία 1042 Leto Μυχία or Νυχία 1042 1065 Zeus 1042 1065
Epithet: Ἐρωνύων μυχός 1042_4
Myths: Zeus consorts with Hera 1042 Zeus consorts with Leto 1042 1065
Kithairon, the mountain-god 1042

Klaros
Cult: Apollon 100
Klazomenai
Cult: Zeus Τροπαιοφόρος 1117
—— white-figured sarcophagus from 807
Kleanthes' Hymn to Zeus 1161 (further bibliography)
Kleanthes of Corinth 671_0
Kledona 290 See also Klidhona
Kleidemos 120
Kleitodemos See Kleidemos
Kleobis and Biton 1044 1083
Kleonai
Rite: sacrifice to hail-clouds 879
—— official 'hail-guards' at 878 f.
Klidhona 290 f. See also Kledona
Klotho $80_{2\,(1)}$ (?) 717
Klymene (=Persephone?) 593_6
Klymenos (=Hades) 593_6
Klytaimestra
Myth: killed by Orestes 426_4
—— dream of 239_1 phantom of 102
Knossos
Cult: natural stones 937_4
Rite: ἱερὸς γάμος 1032 1065
—— coins of 1087
Kokkygion, Mt
Cult: Zeus 65
Myth: Zeus the cuckoo 63
Kokkyx, Mt 65
Kolias, Cape
Cults: Aphrodite 172 Genetyllides 172
Koloë Limne See Gygaia Limne
Kolonos
Cult: Demeter Εὔχλοος 179_0
Kolotes 47_0
Komatas 246
Kombe 135
Konisalos 1083
Kopaïs, Lake, floating islands on 987 f.
Koptos
Cult: Min 882_2
Kore
Cults: Alexandreia 913 Gaza 553 Mytilene 167 Phlyeis 202_0
Epithets: Ἐνοδία 279_4 Θεσμοφόρος 168 Πρωτογόνη 202_0
Rite: birth of Aion 913
Priest: δᾳδοῦχος (?) 66_2
Genealogy: d. of Demeter 562_2
Types: bunch of wheat-ears $301_{0\,(3)}$ (?) between corn-stalk and poppy $899_{5\,(4\text{ ff.})}$
Associated with Demeter 178_0 Demeter and Zeus Βουλεύς or Εὐβουλεύς 1124
Koresia, coins of 271
Koressos, Mt
Cult: Zeus 323
Korkyra
Cults: Agreus 271_3 Apollon Ἀγυιεύς 1120 Apollon Πυθαεύς (?) 1120 Hera Ἀκρία 1120 Zeus Κάσιος 271_3 Zeus Μειλίχιος 1184
Korone
Cult: Athena 782
Koronis
Myth: Poseidon 782_4
Metamorphosed into crow 782_4
Korybantes
Myth: sprung from tears of Zeus 323_2
Functions: τῆς Ῥέας ὀπαδοί 323_2 τροφεῖς καὶ φύλακες καὶ διδάσκαλοι τοῦ Διός 323_2 Identified with Kouretes 323_2 cp. 1070
—— sword dance of 1070
Korystioi See Gortyna
Kos
Cults: Athena Μαχανίς 566_2 Dionysos Σκυλλίτας 413_0 Hera Ἀργεία Ἐλεία Βασίλεια 66_2 Hestia (Histia) 565 f. Twelve Gods 566_2 Zeus Μαχανεύς 566 f. Zeus Πολιεύς 565
Myth: Nisyros 18_0
—— Fountain of Bourina in 363 f.
Kottos 120
Kouretes
Rite: sacrifice children to Kronos 937
Myths: sprung from rain 323 478 sprung from tears of Zeus 323 deceive Kronos 937 953 receive infant Zeus from Rhea 931_3
Types: three male dancers clashing weapons 1127 f. three small male figures wreathed with flowers 1034_1 (?)
Identified with Korybantes 323_2 cp. 1070
Associated with Kybele and Attis 1127 f.
—— sword-dance of 1070 1127
Koze 334_1
Kranioi
Cult: Zeus Αἰνήσιος (?) 1171
—— coins of 1171
Krannon
Rite: rain-charm 296 f. 316
—— coins of 297
Krastonia
Cult: Dionysos 1118
Kritios 849_2
Kroisos sends gifts to Branchidai 520_4 sends gifts to Pytho 520 on the pyre 518 ff. taken by Apollon to the Hyperboreoi 520 has ominous dream 522
Kronos
Cults: Athens 169_0 Mt Kynthos (?) 1172
Epithets: ἀγκυλομήτης 928_7 μέγας 928
Rite: sacrifice of children by Kouretes 937
Myths: mntilates Ouranos 481 928_5 consorts with Rhea 111_1 swallows his children by Rhea 744 928 1139 swallows horse in place of Poseidon 929_3 swallows stone in place of Zeus 927 929 ff. deceived by Kouretes 937 953 expulsion of infant Zeus 1187 deposed by Zeus 966

Kronos (cont.)
Genealogy: f. by Rhea of Hestia, Demeter, Hera, Hades, Ennosigaios, Zeus 928 f. of Zeus 34
Functions: 'Minoan' sky-god 200 953 'Minoan' storm-god 34 Saturday 938
Etymology: 1139 f.
Attributes: double axe 200 drépanon 481
Types: three-eyed (?) 933_7 white-haired king standing sceptre in hand 931 bearded head of fifth-century style 929_9 veiled 933_7 935 1140 crowned 1140 ara Capitolina 933 f.
Identified with Akmon 927_5 Akrisios (?) 1187
Associated with Rhea 169_0 745
Compared with Balor 933_7 (?) Saturnus 933_7 (?)
Confused with Chronos 746
—— baítyloi dedicated to 889 sickle of 1135 stone of 889_2 927 ff. teknophagía of, as dance-theme 935_3 tower of 51_0 1115
Kroton, coins of 714_7
Ktesilochos 82_3 86_0
Ktesylla
Cult: Keos 269_1
Epithet: Ἐκαέργη 269_1
Myth: 269_1
Kuzah 334_1
Kyaneai 975 f.
Kybdasos 1083
Kybele
Cult: Ephesos 1174
Epithet: Ὀρεία 1174
Function: mountain-mother of Asia Minor 834
Etymology: 916_1 (?)
Attribute: lions 834 1174
Type: black stone of Pessinous 893 f. 896 f.
Associated with Attis 1174 Attis and Zeus 1174
In relation to Attis 952 meteorites 893 ff. Papas 952
—— See also Mother of the gods
Kydon, s. of Apollon 414_0
Kydonia, coins of 413_0 f.
Kyklopes
Function: builders 1074
Kyklops
Function: death-god (?) 1075
Kyknos 177_0 441_0
Kyllene
Cult: Hermes 725_5
Kylon and his men attached by thread to statue of Athena 896_2
Kynegetai 1083
Kynes 1083 1156
Kynosarges
Cults: Hebe 724 f. Herakles 724
Myth: Diomos 594
Kynthos, Mt
Cults: Athena Κυνθία 1172 Herakles
Kynthos, Mt (cont.)
1172 Kabeiroi 1172 Kronos (?) 1172 Rhea (?) 1172 Zeus Κύνθιος 1172 Zeus Μέγιστος 1172 —— cave-temple on, a pseudo-antiquity 1172 prehistoric settlement on 1172
Kypros
Cults: Hera Ἐλεία 66_2 Zeus Ελαπιναστής 652_0 762_3 Zeus Ειλήτι (?) 762_3 Zeus Ἔλαιους (?) 762_3 Zeus Εὐελίδης 762_3 Zeus Κεράστης (?) 652_0 Zeus Σπλαγχνοτόμος 652_0
Myths: Aphrodite plants pomegranate 817_0 Kinyras makes Melos the Delian companion to Adonis and gives him Pelia to wife 817_0 Melos the Delian and his wife Pelia hang themselves in grief for death of Adonis 817_0 Melos the Delian transformed into μηλέα by Aphrodite and Pelia into πέλεια 817_0 coins of 899_5 face-urns from 193_0 193 (b) terra-cotta statuette of priest wearing bull-mask from 1090
Kypselos, chest of 507
Kyrene
Cults: Akamantes 115 Athena 535_1 Eumenides 1188 Hera 535_1 (?) Tritopateres 115 Zeus 535_1 Zeus Μειλίχιος 1188 —— fountain of Apollon at 353 rainfall at 353 silphion produced from shower of pitch at 353 f. statue of Zeus from 534 f.
Kyrrhos
Cult: Zeus 794
—— coins of 794
Kyzikos
Cult: Zeus Ἀγνός 1071
—— coins of 408_0 1128 fate of, depends on preservation of meteorite 886_5

Labyadai, oaths of 585_4
Labyrinth, on Babylonian tablets 1086 in Crete 1086 in Egypt 1087 in south India 1087 in Malekula 1087 at Taormina 1087 at Tiryns (?) 1086 as dance-theme 1087 as game of Troy 1087 as internal organs of man's body (?) 1086 as map of soul's journey 1087 as mosaic 1087 as royal tomb or palace 1087 bibliography of 1086 f. 1141 etymology of 1141
Lachesis 717
La Crau 482
Lactantius, on the possibility of Zeus being superseded 739_2
Lado 289_2
Ladon 404_0
Laertes in Kilikia, coin of 843_3
Lailaps 735_5
Laïos, unavenged death of 426
Lakedaimon, f. of Eurydike 455

Lakonike
Cults: Athena Παρεία 776 Dionysos Ἔμφυος 94_2
Lakrateides, votive relief of $309_{4(3)}$
Lalan $679_{(3)}$ See Laran
Lampadedromia 1012
Lampsakos
Cult: Theos Olbios 1196
Lanuvium
Cult: Iuno Sospita 837_4
Laodike 1172
Laodikeia ad Libanum, sacred stone of quasi-human shape from 910_5 911_0
Laodikeia on the Lykos, coin of 515_8
Laphystion, Mt, in Boiotia
Cult: Zeus Λαφύστιος 525
Lapithai
Type: fighting Centaur (?) 1142
Laran $679_{(3)}$ $680_{(4)}$
Lares
Epithet: Compitales 119
Function: ancestral spirits 119 cp. 1189
Larissa in Thessaly
Cults: Enhodia 279 Leukathea 1080 Zeus (Μειλίχιος) 279
Latiar 432_1
Latinae 432_1
Látona 162_5
La Turbie, further bibliography of 1117 f.
Laussel, horn-bearing woman of 1091
Lebadeia
Cults: Daimon Milichios 1187 Hera Βασιλίς 61_1 Herkyna 1182 Zeus Βασιλεύς 61_1 Zeus Τροφώνιος 1182 Zeus Τέτιος 562 f.
—— water of Lethe and water of Mnemosyne at 422_0
Leda
Myth: consorts with Zeus 462_1 467 469
Genealogy: d. of Thestios s. of Agenor s. of Pleuron 161_1
—— as pendant to Danaë 465
Leimones 1034_1 (?)
Leleges
Cult: Tarku (?) 651_0
Myth: with Nymphs build temple of Hera at Samos 1029
Lemnos
Cult: Hephaistos 226 ff.
Myths: Hephaistos' fall from heaven 228 f. Hypsipyle 360_1 Lemnian women murder their husbands 360_1
—— Galen's visits to 229 231 Lemnian earth obtained thence 229 231 f.
Lemnos, eponym
Rites: marriage with Hephaistos 233 f. (?) sacrifice of virgins 191_0 233_1
Functions: earth-goddess 233 probably a form of Artemis 233_1
Leochares 570 573 868_5
Lerna, springs at 356 361 369 Danaïdes bury heads of Aigyptiadia at 356 369
Lesbos
Cults: Poseidon Ἐλώμνιος 1042_1 Poseidon Ἔλύτιος 1042_1
Priestess: Ἐρσόφορος 167_{10} 168 261
—— coins of 856_0 oracle of Orpheus' head at 99 ff.
Lethe, in mystic play at Ephesos 422_0 identified with river Lethon in Kyrenaïke 422_0 identified with river Limia in Lusitania 422_0 water of, as Orphic conception 420_0 421_0 water of, at Lebadeia 422_0
Leto
Cults: Bouto (Boutos, Boutoi) 983 Mt Kithairon 1042 1065 Phaistos 1042_9
Epithets: Μυχία or Νυχία 1042 1042_9 1065 Φυτίη 1042_9
Myths: consorts with Zeus $744_{1(6)}$ birth of Apollon 984 f. bides Apollon in Chembis 983 f.
Genealogy: m. of Apollon and Artemis by Zeus $744_{1(6)}$
Etymology: 1042_5
Attribute: cock 1042_9
Types: birth of Athena 681 Praxiteles (?) 933
Identified with Bouto (earlier Ὠδώ) 984
Associated with Hera 1042
Superseded by Hera 1042
Letopolis 884_0
Leukas
Cult: Apollon Λευκάτης 137_4
Rite: the Leucadian leap 136_3 137_0 1076
Myth: Zeus 941_1
Leukathea 1080 See Leukothea
Leuke, island in Euxine sea 135 140
Leukippos, s. of Xanthios 590_5
Leukothea (Leukathea)
Cult: Larissa in Thessaly 1080
Rite: caldron of apotheosis 1104
Metamorphosed into gull 783_1
Libanos, Mt
Cults: baityloi or baitýlia 888 f.
Priests: Λιθοφόροι 888_4
—— skins spread to catch honey-dew on 500_1
Liber
Cult: Thrace 1118
Epithet: Pater 1118
—— assigned by Etruscans to seventh region of sky 156_4
Libyans, believe the sky to be holed 353 call he-goat tityrus 1080 fringed goat-skins worn by women of 838 f.
Libye, the country
Cult: Athena 128_1 839
Myth: Gorgones 847_1 866
Liguria
Myth: Herakles and rain of stones 483
Ligurians 483_3
Lilith (?)
Cult: Sumerians 832 ff. 1196

Lilith (?) (cont.)
Epithet: Ardat Lili ('the slave-girl of the Night') 835
Functions: ancestress of Athena, half-bird half-goddess 834 ravisher of men by night 834
Attributes: coiled piece of rope (?) 1196 head-dress of bovine horns 832 1196 measuring rod and looped cord (?) 832 1196
Types: nude female figure with wings, claws, and spurs of a bird, standing en face on two goats 833 f. nude female figure with wings, claws, and spurs of a bird, standing en face on two lions and flanked by two owls 832 f.
Lindos
Cults: Damateres and Zeus Δαμάρριος 1124 Hera Βασίλεια 61_1
Lindos, gs. of Helios 986
Linos 243_5
Lipara 110
Lips 130
Lithobolia 612_0
Lithuanian gods 108 (Perdoytus) 109_1 (Vēlēs) 158 (Wejopatis)
Livia
Personates Venus 1021
Associated with Zeus Ámmon 1078 (?)
Lokroi Epizephyrioi
Cults: Zeus 1097 Zeus' Ελευθέριος 1097
London
Cult: 'three Mother Goddesses' 1126
Lordon 1083
Lucian, satirises Zeus Olýmpios 966
Lucifer
Cult: Elousa 915_2
Myth: fallen from heaven 917
Lucina, delays birth of Hercules 663_2
Lucretius 50_1
Lucy, St 447_6
Ludi Capitolini 1141
Luna
Cult: Aquae Sulis 863_{11}
Attribute: crescent 41
Lupercal 1104
Lupercalia, bibliography of 1104
Luperci 1104
Lussoius 1117
Luxovium in Germania Superior
Cults: Bricia 1117 Lussoius 1117
Lydia
Cult: Baki(s) 1082
Rite: prenuptial free love 1026_4
Lydo-Phrygians
Cult: Ἑρμῆ Κυνάγχα, Μητρὶ Καυδαύλα 283_4
Lykabettos 238
Lykaion, Mt
Cult: Zeus Λύκαιος 267 1068
Priest: makes rain with oak-branch 267 —— summit of 1164
Lykaon 484 526
Lykia, solar symbol of 1074
Lykoreia
Myth: Deukalion 526_7 966
Lykosoura
Cults: Demeter 712 Despoina 712 f.
Lykourgos, king of Arabia
Myth: attacks Ambrosia 1111 f.
Attribute: double axe 1111
Lykourgos, king of Edonoi
Myths: attacks Dionysos and is blinded by Zeus 228_8 slays his s. Dryas 426_4
Lyktos, cave of Arkalochori near 1143 Rhea brings infant Zeus first to 928
Lynkeus
Myths: presents Abas with shield dedicated by Danaos to Hera 356_5 saved by Hypermestra 356 369_7
Lyra 484 488 877
Lysimachides, votive relief of $309_{4(2)}$
Lysippos 187_3 638_0 704_9 (?) 706 957_0 970 1019 f.
Lystra, altar 'to the Epēkoos and to... and to Hermes' 1071 bronze statuette of Hermes with caduceus and eagle 1071
Lyttos
Cult: Zeus 525
—— later form of Lyktos 928_9

Ma 1134 as equivalent of Μήτηρ 1131
Madagascar
Myth: origin of woman $98_{0(6)}$
Maenads
Attribute: ivy-wreath 1133
Types: double bust 1133 grouped with kalathiskos-dancers 1006 Skopas 471 —— artificial skins worn by 95_0
Mageiroi 585 See Daitroi
Magna Mater
Cults: Heliopolis in Syria (?) 1093 Rome 896 f. 896_1
Magnesia ad Mæandrum
Cult: Zeus Σωσίπολις 239_1 $599_{(3)}$ 604_7
—— coins of 211
Maia
Rite: sacrifice of a pregnant sow 23
Genealogy: m. of Hermes 1131
Maiden Castle
Cults: Iupiter Dolichenus (?) 1098 f. Minerva 1098
Maionia, coins of $899_{5(6)}$
Makedon 110
Makedonia
Cults: Ares Θαύλλος (?) or Θαῦλος 282_6 Iupiter Imperator (Zeus Οὔριος) 148_7
Rite: klidhona 290 f.
—— coius of 853_2 868 f. 957_0
Makris 1042
Malachbelos
Cults: Palmyra 1159 Rome 1159
Function: solar 1159
Maleates 1083

Mallia, bronze double axe with incised lions from neighbourhood of 1143 f. steatite seal-stone from 1196 stone axe ending in forepart of panther (not lioness) from 1192
Mallos in Kilikia, coins of 843_0
Malta
Cults: Adonis 1031_7 (?) John the Baptist 1031_7 (?)
Rite: golden idol annually thrown by monk into field of bean-flowers 1031_7
Manāf 1163
Manaphus
Cult: Carnuntum (?) 1163
Manât 914_1
Mandaeans 1179
Māndhātr $96_{0(3)}$
Manes, as divinised ancestors 440_8 lower part of mundus consecrated to 431 offerings to 441 stream up to join the living through manalis lapis 432
Mania, m. of the Lares
Rite: human sacrifice commuted 433_0
Manichaeans 50_1
Manliana
Cult: Abaddir Sanctus 937_0
Manzan Görmö 1098
Mara, fight of Buddha with 1087
Marathon
Cults: Akamantes 115 Athena Ἑλλωτίς 1092 Tritopatreis 115
Myth: hiding-place of Athena pursued by Hephaistos 220_8 (?)
—— commemorated by leaves on Athena's helmet 812 f.
Marduk 1135
Margaret, St, of Scotland 335_0
Maristiusta (?) $680_{(4)}$
Marna See Marnas
Marnas
Cults: Gaza 549 ff. Ostia (?) 556
Rites: human sacrifice 554 f. initiation 554
Function: rain 549 551 f.
Etymology: 550
Types: youthful hunter 550 556 f. youthful Zeus 557 mature Zeus 557 f.
Identified with Iupiter 555 f. Jehovah 558 (?) Zeus Kretagenēs 551 553_1 555
Associated with Britomartis 550 —— bronze seal of 549_3 (?)
Marneion at Gaza, description of 552 ff. comparison of, with Cretan Labyrinth 555
Mars
Cult: Rome 432 1021
Epithet: Ultor 1021
Attribute: Oscan helmet $1062_{2(2)}$
Type: in Pompeian paintings of Twelve Gods $1062_{2(1\,f.)}$
Associated with Venus 442 f.
Marsyas
Attributes: cornu copiae 530 flutes 530
Types: contest with Apollon 659_0 710 seated in grotto 530
Marsyas, river in Phrygia 531_0
Mary Magdalen, St 335_0
Mater
Epithet: Idaea 896_0 896_4
Mater deum
Attributes: pedum and cymbals 895_2 Phrygian cap 895_2 pipes 895_2
Type: black stone of Pessinous 894_2
Associated with Navis Salvia 895_2 896_0 —— altar of 895 f.
See also Meter Theon, Mother of the gods
Mayence, column of 1191
Mean 88_0 92_0
Médard, St 334_2
Medousa 851_0 See Gorgon
Megalopolis
Cults: Aphrodite Μαχανῖτις 567_0 Athena Μαχανῖτις 567_0 Demeter ἐν Ἔλει 66_2
—— coins of 712_6 Δακτύλου μνῆμα near 1183
Megara
Cults: Athena Αἴθνια 782 f. 795 Demeter 569_5 Demeter Μαλοφόρος 1136 Eileithyiai 668 Pandion ii 783_1 Zeus Ἀφέσιος 1165 Zeus Κόνιος (not Κρόνιος, nor Κώνιος, nor Σκοτίτης, nor Χθόνιος) 569_5 1165 Zeus Ὀλύμπιος 1165 Zeus with the Muses 1165
Myth: Athena as gull brings Kekrops 783
In relation to Athens 783_1 —— tomb of Pandion ii at 783_1 wild-olive as life-tree of 762
Megara, w. of Herakles 422
Megaros (Megareus), s. of Zeus 1165
Megisto (= Kallisto), d. of Keteus 484
Meidias, the potter 704_1 1018 f.
Meilichos 1111
Melampous
Myth: taught by Cheiron 793
Genealogy: s. of Amythaon 793
Etymology: 1187
Melanippe 109_4
Melanthos slays Xanthos 1105
Meliai
Genealogy: daughters of Gaia 481
Meligounis 110
Melite, the Attic deme
Cult: Demeter Ἀνησιδώρα 202_0 (?)
—— rock-cut cisterns at 363
Melite in Phthia
Cults: Artemis 283_4 Aspalis Ἀμειλήτη Ἐκαέργη 283_4
Meliteus 246
Melos, coins of $342_{0(1)}$ 'Gigantomachy'-amphora from 535_0 incised gem from 843_0 1111 1138
Melos the Delian 817_6

Melqarth
Cult: Tyre 893
Identified with Herakles 893
Memnon 259_0
Memphis 78
Men
Cults: Athens 308 f. Theira 992
Functions: dew 309 moon 309
Assimilated to Hermes 309
Associated with Helios 1093 Pan 308 f.
Menedemos of Eretria 595
Menelaos
Myth: Helene 78 f. 1179
helmsman of 339_3 340
Menerva
Type: winged 679_0
See also Menrfa, Menrva
Menoikeus, tomb of 815_0
Menrfa $679_{(3)}$ $680_{(4)}$ 839 See also Menerva, Menrva
Menrva 92_0 1090 See also Menerva, Menrfa
Mercurius
Cult: Numidia 1078
Attribute: purse $1062_{2(1\text{ f.})}$
Types: in pediment of Domitian's Capitoline temple 707 in Pompeian paintings of Twelve Gods $1062_{2(1\text{ f.})}$
Identified with Wodan 210 (?)
Associated with Volcanus and Minerva 209 f.
Messene
Cults: Artemis Ἐλεία 66_2 Zeus Ἐπιδώτας 1130 Zeus Ἰθωμάτας 525
Mestbâ or Amset 345_1
Metapontum
Cult: Zeus Ἐλευθέριος 1097
Rite: θέρος χρυσοῦν dedicated at Delphoi 307_0
—— coins of 307_0 820_2
Meter
Cult: Athens 67_0
Meteres, nurses of Zeus in Crete 225_1
Meter Theon
Cult: Phaistos 422_0
See also Mater deum, Mother of the gods
Metis
Epithet: πρώτη γενέτις 745_6
Myth: swallowed by Zeus 125_3 567_0 727_3 728 743 f. $744_{1(1)}$
Metamorphosed into fly 744_4 (?) many shapes 744
Genealogy: d. of Okeanos 125_3 d. of Okeanos by Tethys 743 m. of Athena by Zeus $744_{1(1)}$ m. of Poros 746 f.
Compared with Thetis 745
Metis (masc.)
Epithet: πρῶτος γενέτωρ 745_4
Myth: birth from cosmic egg ('the cloud') 727
Identified with Phanes 745
Michael, St
Cult: 1070
Supersedes Zeus 277_2 (?)
Midas, captures Silenos by ruse 433_0
Miletos
Cults: Apollon Φίλιος (= Φιλήσιος) 474_0 Zeus Δουσάρης Σωτήρ (?) 912 Zeus Νόσιος 7_2 1111 Zeus Τελεσιουργός 1192
Festival: Διὸς βοῦς 564
Miletos, s. of Apollon 414_0
Milichie
Cult: Thespiai 1187
Milky Way
Myths: Hera 1098 Manzan Görmö 1098 —— conceived as celestial road 946 1115 conceived as celestial tree 1192
Mimas 3_0
Min
Cults: Chemmis 884_0 Koptos 882_2
Functions: fertility 885_0 thunderbolt 882_2
Attribute: thunderbolt 884_0
In relation to Âmen-Râ 885_0 the other bull-gods of Egypt 885_0
Mine 1090
Minerva
Cults: Maiden Castle 1098 Rome 856_0 859
Epithets: Medica 859 Tritonia 126_0 Tritonis 126_0 Victrix $823\,825_0\,825_1$(?)
Myth: Myrmix 608_2
Attributes: cornu copiae 825_5 mural crown 825_5 owl 41
Types: holding sprig of olive 695_5 in Pompeian paintings of Twelve Gods $1062_{2(1\text{ f.})}$ winged 823 ff.
Identified with Holda (?) 210
Associated with Volcanus and Mercurius 209 f.
Compared with Sulis 859
—— five Minervas 842_4 843_0 in Etruscan lightning-lore 156 specially honoured by Domitian 872
Minos
Epithets: Ζηνὸς ἔχων σκῆπτρον 1184 ὁλοόφρων 1103
Myths: Poseidon 628_1 done to death in hot bath by Kokalos or his daughters 1104 Genealogy: s. of Zeus by Europe 627_1 628_0 f. of Akakallis 414_0
Etymology: 411_0 (?)
Minotaur
Epithet: Ταῦρος Μινώιος 1090
Type: leading two captive women (?) 1090
Compared with Aix 840_0
—— bibliography of 1087 ff.
Mithras
Epithet: βουκλόπος θεός 1194
Myth: birth from rock 236_3
Identified with Zeus 945
Superseded by St George (?) 1194
Mitra 1134 See Mithras
Mneia, in mystic play at Ephesos 422_0
Mnemosyne
Cult: Thespiai 1070
Myth: consorts with Zeus $744_{1(5)}$

Mnemosyne (cont.)
Genealogy: m. of Muses by Zeus $744_{1(5)}$ 1189
—— water of, as Orphic conception 420_0 421_0 water of, at Lebadeia 422_0
Mnevis
Type: bull-beaded man with solar disk and plumes 1082
Mochlos, vase from 193 (b)
Mochos 1179
Moirai
Cults: Athens 721 Sparta 722_3
Epithet: Λαχέσεις 722_3
Genealogy: daughters of Nyx 718_1 daughters of Zeus by Themis $744_{1(2)}$
Types: holding sceptres 1057 one seated and two standing figures 659 717 three standing figures 715 f. 717_2
Assimilated to Aphrodite 722
Associated with Zeus Μοιραγέτης 721_4
In relation to Aphrodite 722 Zeus 1057 —— eldest of, identified with Aphrodite Οὐρανία 171_0
Moliones
Type: with two heads, four arms, four legs, one body 1177
Molpis, sacrificed to Zeus Ómbrios 525 f.
Momos 742_4
Moneta
Etymology: 23_5
Montezuma 475 f. 1194
Morning Star See Heosphoros, Lucifer
Moses, rock of 1118
Mosychlos 232_3 234
Mother of the gods
Cults: Hittites 916_1 Mt Ide in Phrygia (Mysia) 893 Pessinous 893 ff. Thebes in Boiotia 893
Type: meteorite 893 ff.
Associated with Pan 893
—— ktetis of (?) 918_3 star of 180 stone image of, falls from heaven 893
See also Mater deum, Meter Theon
Mundilfori 1075
Munthuch 430_0 439_2
Muses
Cult: Megara 1165
Myths: bury Orpheus 1115 feed Komatas, in chest, on honey 246 Thamyris 488
Genealogy: daughters of Zeus by Mnemosyne $471_{1(5)}$ 1189
Associated with Zeus 1165
Mutina, floating island in territory of 1014
Mykenai
Cult: Hera 1045
Myth: founded by Perseus 363 478_2
Etymology: 478_2
Mykenai, rectangular wells at 363 shaft-graves at 363 thólos-tombs at 363 'Treasury of Atreus' at 367_5
Mykene, early name of Mykenai 224
Mykonos
Cults: Poseidon Τεμενίτης 179_0 Poseidon Φύκιος 179_0
Mylasa
Cults: Zeus Κτήσιος 1181 Zeus Ὀσογῶα 1140 Zeus Ὕψιστος 1162
Festival: Taurophonia 570 1110
Myra, coin of $899_{5(2)}$
Myrike 1111
Myrmidones 608_2
Myrmix
Metamorphosed into ant 608_2
Myron 696 f. 850
Myrtilos
Myth: Olympia 522_{11}
Mytilene
Cults: Etephilai 167 Helios 1184 Karissai 167 Theoi Akraioi 6 Zeus 1184
Priestess: Ἐρσόφορος 167 f.
—— mysteries at 167

Naassene hymn $300_{0(1)}$
Nabataioi
Cults: Adad 1097 Atargatis 1097 Dousares 907 ff. sun 912_4 Tyche 1097 Zeus 1097
Rites: daily libations and incense offered to sun on roof 912_4
Nagidos, coin of 763_2 (?)
Nakoleia
Cults: Theoi Katachthonioi 1160 Zeus Βροντῶν 1160 f. Zeus Βροντῶν καὶ Πατὴρ Θεός 1161 (?) Zeus Βροντῶν Νεικήτωρ Πατήρ 1161 (?)
—— monuments of 1160 f.
Namuki 273
Nana 815_0
Nandi 1086
Nannakos 527 f.
Napata
Cult: Amen 882_2
—— omphalós from 882_2 1077
Narkissos
Type: with Eros at his shoulder 1022
Natalia, St 523_4
Naukratis
Cults: Hera 1187 Zeus Ἀποτρόπαιος 1187
Nauplios 868
Navis Salvia
Associated with Mater deum 895_2 896_0
Naxos
Rite: baby boy placed in bride's bed on eve of wedding 1026_4
—— folk-tale from 257_1
Neades or Neïdes 3_0
Neapolis in Makedonia, coins of 856_0
Neike 811_1
Neiloia 344_4
Neilos
Cult: Silsilis 349
Identified with Eridanos 349 Okeanos 349 Osiris 344_1 Zeus 348 f. 524 1077 —— called Aigyptos by Homer 358_5 extinguishes pyre of Habrokomes 524 rays of 1077
Neith 345_1 839_2

Nemea
Cult: Zeus 1083 ff.
—— bronze bull from 1085 Epimenides and the lion of 1085 excavations at 1083 ff.
Nemeseis
Type: in chariot drawn by two griffins 842_2
Nemesis
Cults: Inönü in Phrygia 1146 Rhamnous 955_7
Types: Aphroditesque 955_7 standing on man 1073
In relation to Helios 1073 Nemetona 1073 f.
Nemetona 1073 f.
Nemi, double herms at 1132 f.
Neophytus, St 1112
Neo-Platonists 745 887 f. 913_4 914_0
Neoptolemos, tomb of, at Delphoi 938
Nephelai
Cults: Orphists 70 296 Sokrates (?) 70
Epithets: μεγάλαι θεαὶ ἀνδράσιν ἀργοῖς 69_6 οὐράνιαι 69_6 παμβασίλειαι 70_1
Rite: burnt-offering of myrrh 70
Genealogy: daughters of Aither 70 879 —— costume of 69_3 Orphic hymn to 70
See also Nephele
Nephele
Myths: Athamas 73 f. Prokris 72
See also Nephelai
Nephelokokkygia 44 ff. 63
Nephthys 345_1
Neptunus
Type: in Pompeian painting of Twelve Gods $1062_{2\,(1)}$
Nereids 129 132 ff. 163 237_2
Nereus
Genealogy: s. of Pontos 743_8
Function: earthquakes 4_0
Nero
Personates Zeus 1117
Nescania
Cult: Iupiter Pantheus 1129
New Grange 367_5
New Year's Day 1067
Nikai
Type: dancing 955
See also Nike, Victoria
Nikaia in Bithynia
Cults: Asklepios 1182 Zeus Αιταῖος 1184
—— coins of 948 1182 1184
Nikaia in Liguria
Cult: Hercules Lapidarius 492_1
Nike
Cult: Athens 811 ff.
Epithets: Ἄπτερος 811 καλλίφυρος 811_1
Genealogy: d. of Pallas s. of Lykaon and foster-st. of Athena 811_1 d. of Pallas the Titan by Styx 811_1 st. of Zelos, Kratos, Bia 811_1
Functions: abstraction from Athena Nike 811 abstraction from Zeus (?)
Nike (cont.)
811_1 charioteer 76_1 Eileithyia $85_{0\,(2)}$ handmaid to Athena Nike (?) 819_1
Etymology: 321_0 (?)
Attribute: palm-branch 67 f. 1181
Types: drawing votes from urn 758 flanking Aphrodite 1016 ff. (?) half-draped 1180 hovering 659 691_3 (?) 692 753 755 1040 sandal-binding 706_6 seated with pomegranate in right hand and helmet in left 811 standing before seated Zeus $1051_{(5)}$ standing with oinochóe in right hand and pomegranate in left 819_1 wingless 811
In relation to Athena 811
See also Nikai, Victoria
Nikephoria 794_1
Niketeria 754_1
Nikias, the painter 460 462 637_3 ff.
Nikias, the potter 1012
Nikomedeia, earthquake at 25 f. Elagabalus at 902 martyrs at 523_4
Nikopolis in Moesia
Cult: Zeus Κεραύνιος 1157
Nile See Neilos
Nin-khursag 1155
Ninnion, tablet of 722 723_0 724_0
Niobe 54_2
Niobids 955
Nisyros
Cult: Zeus Μελίχιος 1187
Myth: flung by Poseidon at Polybotes 14_0 18_0
Noah 293 528 f.
Nomos
Epithets: ὁ πάντων βασιλεύς 951_2 ὁ τοῦ Διὸς ἐτεῶς υἱός 951_2
Function: páredros of Zeus 950
Identified with Zeus 951
Nonae Caprotinae 612_0
Nonnos, on the Ambrosiai Petrai 978 f.
Notos, on 'Tower of the Winds' at Athens 130 sieves of 335 f. skin-bottles of 335 f.
See also Notus
Notus
Type: winged figure streaming with water 327_2 329_0 333 —— sent by Iupiter to cause deluge 107
See also Notos
Nuceria, coins of $342_{0\,(3)}$
Numa Pompilius, forbids the quenching of ashes with wine 515_6 founds altar of Iupiter Elicius 433_0 instructed in lightning-lore by Iupiter Elicius 433_0 ep. 738_0 law of, about man struck by lightning 1115 secures Faunus and Martius Picus by ruse 433_0
Numantia 1090 1179
Numidia
Cults: Hercules 1078 Iupiter 1078 Mercurius 1078 Nutrix 1078 Saturnus 1078 Tellus 1078 Testimonius 1078 Venus 1078

Nutrix
Cult: Numidia 1078
Nymphogenes 129
Nymphs
Cults: Athens 308 f. Gygaia Limne 988 f. Vari 261_7 262_0 263_0
Myth: teach Aristaios 266
Function: whirlwinds 164
Associated with Pan 308 f.
—— Danaïdes 357 Hyades 512 518 Okeaninai 743_8 Oreiades 164_1 Archedamos of Thera ὁ νυμφόληπτος 262_0 as nurses of Dionysos $85_{0\,(2)}$ (?)
Nysa in Lydia, coins of 1114
Nysa Skythopolis, coin of 88_0
Nyx
Genealogy: m. of Moirai 718_1
—— advice of 950_5 in Orphic theogony 1177 ff.

Oasis of Siwah
Cult: Zeus Ἄμμων 882_2
—— additions to bibliography of 1078 coin found in 1078 earliest reference to Ammoneion in 1076 omphaloid fetish of Ammoneion in 882_2
Oceanus
Type: recumbent with water flowing from urn 41
Oche, Mt
Myth: union of Zeus with Hera 1041 —— early corbelled building on 1041_4
Odessos in Thrace
Cult: Theos Megas 1129
—— coins of 1129 stêlai of νέος ἥρως and κοῦρος ἥρως from 1160 Odhin
Attribute: broad hat 1132
See also Wodan
Odomantoi 522
Odysseus
Myths: Aiolos Hippotades 106 Kirke 1073
Function: sun-god (?) 1075
Oiagros 99_3
Oichalia 509_2
Oidipous
Etymology: 1187
Oinanthe 183
Okeaninai See Nymphs
Okeanos
Genealogy: f. of Metis by Tethys 743
Types: large head 129 recumbent with oar in band and crab's claws on head 980 cp. 1127 f.
Identified with Neilos 349
—— garden of 1064_4 in Orphic theogony 1177 ff.
Oknos
Rite: myth of rope represented at Akanthos in Egypt 338_2
Myths: ass and bundle of sticks 401_1 ass and rope 338_3
Function: 'Behinderungstraum' 401_1
Oknos (cont.)
Compared with dream of king of Kosala 401_1
Olba
Cults: Tyche 646_0 Zeus Ὄλβιος 642_1
Priest: ἀρχιερεὺς μέγας 642_1 645_0
Myth: cult founded by Aias s. of Teukros 643_0 —— coins of 642_1 645_0 hierón of, renamed Diokaisareia 643_0 ruled by priestly dynasts, most of them named Teukros or Aias 643_0 temple and témenos of Zeus Ólbios at 642_1 Tychaion at 646_0
Olbia
Cults: Achilles Ποντάρχης 654_0 Apollon 1136 Zeus Ἀταβύριος 655_0 Zeus Βασιλεύς 654_0 Zeus Ἐλευθέριος 654_0 Zeus Ὄλβιος 653_1 1194 1196 Zeus Πολιάρχης 654_0 Zeus Σωτήρ 654_0
—— coins of 655_0 656_0 853_5 1194 1196 temple of Apollon at 1136
Old Slavonic deities 64_0
Olympia
Cults: Artemis Κορδάκα 1009 Athena Ἐργάνη 967 Zeus Ὀλύμπιος 954 ff. Zeus Ὅρκιος 1147
Rite: Φαιδρυνταί sacrifice to Athena Ἐργάνη 967 Myth: Myrtilos 522_{11}
—— coins of 958_4 1156 east pediment of temple of Zeus at 717_2 Philippeion at 442_1 ship-like foundation of stones at 1171
Olympia, the festival at Daphne, near Antiocheia on the Orontes 1191
Olympos
Etymology: 1068
Olympos, Mt, in Lykia, fire springing from ground on 228
Olympos, Mt, in Makedonia
Cults: St Elias 1167 Zeus 236 737_2
Myths: Abbas Ali 1168 ff. Zeus visited by Hera and Athena 34
—— ascents of 1167 chapel of St Elias on 1167 palace of Zeus on 515 cp. 680_0 song from 296 summit of 943 'Throne of Zeus' on 1167
Olympos, the Cretan teacher of Zeus 321_0 1173
Olympos, the Mysian flute-player 321_0 893
Olynthos, 'Villa of Good Fortune' at 1073
Omphale, as a form of Kybele (?) 916_1
Opiconsivia 437
Opis 1172
Orchomenos in Boiotia
Cults: Hera Τελεία 949_0 Zeus Τέλειος 949_0
Orcus, portal of 432 440 portal of, called manalis lapis 432
Oreiades See Nymphs
Orestes
Myths: cured of madness at Gythion 939 founds cult of Scythian Artemis

Orestes (cont.)
in Patmos 985 f. kills Klytaimestra 426_4 —— connected with holy stones 939 941_1
Oros, Mt
Cult: Zeus Ἑλλάνιος 1164
—— bronze hydria from cistern on 1164 summit of 1164
Orpheus
Epithet: χρυσολύρης 1115
Myths: Eurydike 99 slain by Thracian women 488 slain by a thunderbolt 1115 dismemberment 1104 buried by Muses 1115 oracular head 99 ff.
Genealogy: s. of Oiagros 99_3
Types: playing kithāra 419 oracular head 99 ff.
Identified with Engonasin or Ingeniculus 488
In relation to Danaïdes 425_0
—— ádyton of, in Lesbos 100 ascribes obscenity to the gods 1027_5 lyre of, found by Lesbian women 101 on marriage of Earth and Sky 454
Orphic Eros See Eros
Orphic Zeus 745 cp. 746 1177 ff. See Zeus
Orphists
Cults: Aither 879 Nephelai 70 f. 296
Rites: ἔρεφος ἐς γάλ' ἕπετον 1118 symbolic ladder 946 Priests: Ὀρφεοτελέσται 1068
—— gold tablets of 395_5 396 419_3 f. hymn to Zeus 950 pantheistic hymns 947 theogony 727 745 (cp. 746) 942 1177 ff. (the succession of Chaos, Okeanos, Nyx, Ouranos, Zeus) anthropogony 481 (?) Λιθικά 921 περὶ Διὸς καὶ Ἥρας 1027_5 Dike 949_{10} 950_4 Nomos 950_5 call cosmic egg 'the cloud' 727 call moon 'Gorgónion' 805_4 845 call rain 'the tears of Zeus' 322 hold that in Hades sinners are sunk in mud 398_5 Orphic conception of Underworld possibly illustrated in sixth-century fresco and thence copied on black-figured vases 399 f. Orphic traits in Underworld as depicted on 'Apulian' vases of s. iv B.C. 402_1 led by Orpheus to the Queen of the Underworld 419 influence of, traceable at Athens in s. vi B.C. 400_1 in Crete 1103
Orthanes 1083
Orthros or Orthos
Myth: Geryones 410_0
Genealogy: offspring of Echidna 410_0
Function: doublet of Kerberos 410_0 412_0
Types: one-headed, two-headed, three-headed 410_0
Oschophoria 241_0
Osiris
Cult: Alexandreia 346 ff.
Festival: finding of Osiris 345_0
Osiris (cont.)
Rites: dirge called Μανερῶς 305_0 Osiris-beds 305_0
Functions: god of the Nile 344 grains of corn $302_{0(6)}$
Types: 'Canopus' 346 ff. 1193 dead body with corn springing from it $305_{0(7)}$ figure made of Nile-mud and filled with corn-grains 305_0 hollow form filled with Nile-silt, planted with corn, and wrapped up like a mummy 305_0 mummy with corn springing from it $305_{0(7)}$ profile contour filled in with earth, barley-grains, etc. 305_0
Identified with Aion 914_0 dead man 344 395 Kanobos, the helmsman of Menelaos 349 the Nile 344_1
Assimilated to wheat or barley germinating $302_{0(5)}$ —— children of 345_1 king becomes 1131 Nile-water as seed of 344
Ossa, Mt
Cult: St Elias 1167
—— views of 1167
Ostanes 1147
Ostia
Cult: Marnas (?) 556
—— tomb-painting of Kronos and Rhea found near 934 f. winged Minerva from 823 ff.
Othreïs 246
Oulomos 914_0
Oupis
Cult: Sparta 189_1
Identified with Artemis 189_1
Ouranos
Epithet: ἀστερόεις 928
Myths: birth of Aphrodite 274 276_2 invents baitýlia 887 mutilated by Kronos 481 928_5
Genealogy: s. of Akmon 927 f. by his st. Ge of four sons—Elos called Kronos, Baitylos, Dagon that is Siton, and Atlas 887
Identified with Akmon 927_4
Associated with Gaia 419_3 420_0 422_0 477_3 744 745 928
——blood of, produces Phaeacians 481 blood-drops of, received by Gaia 481 in Orphic theogony 1177 ff.
Ousoös 983
Oxyrhynchite nome
Cult: Athena 190_6
Oxyrhynchos
Cult: Zeus Ἄμμων 1076

Pa as equivalent of Πατήρ 1131
Palaimon 129 135
Palaiopolis in Korkyra
Cult: Artemis 844_{10}
Palamaon
Myth: cleaves head of Zeus 661
Function: form of Hephaistos 191_0
Compared with Palamedes 191_0

Palamedes 191_{6}
Pales (masc.)
Epithet: Secundanus 156_{4}
Palestine, belief about snakes current in 772_{7}
Palladion 573_{4} 609 1006
Pallas
Etymology: 746 ?)
Pallas the Giant
Myths: attempts to violate Athena 842 flayed by Athena, who wears his skin and wings 842
Genealogy: f. of Athena by Titanis d. of Okeanos 842
Pallas the Titan
Genealogy: f. by Styx of Zelos, Nike (Neike?), Kratos, Bia 811_{1}
Pallas, s. of Lykaon
Genealogy: f. of Nike and foster-f. of Athena 811_{1}
Pallas, king of Athens 186
Pallene 239_{0}
Pallene, d. of Sithon 522 f.
Palmyra
Cults: Adad 1093 Aglibol 1158 f. Atargatis 1093 Bel 1158 f. Beltis (?) 1159 Iaribol 1158 f. Malachbelos 1159 Sol 1112 Zeus Βῆλος 1112 —— excavations at 1158 f.
Pamphylia, Hittite occupation of 112_{0}
Pan
Cults: Athens 308 f. Mt Parnes 253_{0} Thebes in Boiotia 893 Vari 261_{7} 265_{0}
Epithets: Ἄγραυλος 237_{2} Ζεὺς ὁ κεράστης 652_{0} Μέγας 1131 ὀρειώτης 94_{2}
Myths: Olympos the flute-player 893 Syrinx 1012
Etymology: 1131
Attribute: pipes 640_{0}
Types: assaulting Aphrodite 1020 glorified goat 1131 recumbent 714
Associated with Men 308 f. Mother of the gods 893 Nymphs 253_{0} 308 f.
In relation to Aigipan 620_{0} (?) Zan 1131 —— death of 1131 (bibliography)
Panagia
Epithets: ἡ Ἀθηναία 189_{1} 588_{1} ἡ Ἀθηνιώτισσα 588_{1} Γοργοεπήκοος 189_{1} 588 Μήτηρ Θεοῦ 189_{1} 588_{1}
Panainos, paintings at Olympia by 956
Panakeia 1083
Panamara
Cult: Zeus Πανάμαρος 1066
Panamareia 568
Panathenaia 720
Pandareos
Myth: golden hound 1110
Pandia 320_{4}
Pandion
Etymology: 320_{4} (?)
Pandion ii, s. of Kekrops ii
Cult: Megara 783_{1}
Pandora
Function: earth 109
Confused with Pandrosos 240 244_{8} 245_{1}
Pandosia, coins of 714_{10}
Pandrose 603 See Pandrosos
Pandrosos
Cult: Athens 243 f.
Rite: ἐπίβοιον or sacrifice of sheep for Pandrosos in addition to cow for Athena 244
Priestess: wears ποδώνυχον or ποδώνυχος, the garment of Pandrosos herself 245 wears small himátion called προτόνιον and passes the same to man slaying the victim 245
Genealogy: m. of Keryx by Hermes 603
Function: dew 237 603 944
Type: birth of Erichthonios 186
Confused with Pandora 240 244_{8} 245_{1}
In relation to Zeus 260 f.
Paneas See Kaisareia Paneas
Panopeia 129
Pantarkes 955_{7}
Pantheon See Rome
Papas
Etymology: 952
In relation to Kybele 952
Paphos
Cult: Aphrodite 238_{1} 1112 Aphrodite Παφία 1134 Venus 646_{0}
Papremis
Cult: Ares 344_{3}
Parabiago, silver patera from 1128
Parion, coins of 856_{0}
Paris
Myth: judgment 66 67 f. 517_{0} 770
Type: with Eros at his shoulder 1022
Paris, the city, statuette of pantheistic Zeus at 1129
Parjanya
Genealogy: f. of soma 335_{3}
Function: rain 335_{3}
Parmenides 50_{1}
Parnassos, Mt
Cult: baitylos (?) 889_{2}
—— ascent of 1165 f.
Parnes, Mt
Cults: Pan and the Nymphs 253_{0} Zeus Ἀπήμιος 526 Zeus Ὄμβριος 526
—— gold cicala from 253_{0}
Paros
Cult: Zeus Ἐνδένδρος 1173
Parthenia, name of Samos 1027
Parthenia, w. of Samos 1027_{1}
Parthenion, Mt 823
Parthenios, river in Samos 1027_{1}
Parthenon, Aphrodite from east pediment of 698 ff. central slab from east frieze of 1184 1186 early apsidal form of 768 f. (?) east pediment of 657 ff. east pediment of, as climax of pre-existing types 688 east pediment of, as reconstructed by successive critics 689 ff. épheboi in the west frieze of 706 f. 'Ilissos' or 'Kephisos' from west pediment of 698 on Etruscan mirror 680_{0} (?) small copies of figures from the pediments of 698 698_4 west pediment of 751 ff.

Parthenon (cont.)
Parthenos, personification of Mt Parthenion 823
Parthenos = Virgo, the constellation 823
Pasikrateia
Cult: Selinous 1188
Compared with Persephone 1188
Pasiphae
Myths: wooden cow 1092 Zeus 615_3
Pataikeia 593_2
Pataikos
Epithets: Αἰγύπτιος Ἡρακλῆς 158_7 Γιγγρών or Γιγῶν 158_7 ἐπιτραπέζιος 158_7 Εὐφράδης 158_7
Function: apotrópaion on land or sea 158_7
Etymology: 158_7
Types: negrillo 158_7 single or double 158_7
Patmos
Cults: Artemis Παρθένος 986 Artemis Πατμία 986
—— as a floating island 985 f.
Paul, St and St Thekla 523 f. quotes dedication Ἀγνώστῳ Θεῷ 1162 quotes from Aratos 954 quotes from Epimenides (?) 954
Pautalia
Cults: Asklepios 1182 Glykon (?) 1182
—— coins of 1182
Pedachthoë
Rite: sacrifice of fawn 1134
Pedasa
Cult: Zeus 569
Rite: procession of goat leading priest 569
Pegasos
Function: bearer of thunder and lightning for Zeus (?) 1177
Peion, Mt 323 1174
Peiraieus
Cults: Agdistis 1192 Akeso 1083 Apollon 1083 Athena Σώτειρα 659_0 1196 Attis 1192 Hermes 1083 Iaso 1083 Kynegetai 1083 Kynes 1083 1156 Maleates 1083 Panakeia 1083 Zeus Σωτήρ 659_0 1196
Peirithoös
Myth: Theseus 956
Type: guarded by Dike 402
Peitho
Type: crowning Aphrodite 957 f.
Pelagia, St, of Tarsos 1102
Pelasgians
Cults: Athena 226 Demeter (?) 191_0 Eileithyia 679_0 Geraistos (?) 191_0 Hephaistos 191_0 226 ff. Hermes 191_0 phallós (?) 191_0
—— in Lemnos slay their Athenian concubines 360_1
See also Tyrrhenians, Tyrsenians
Pelasgos, tomb of 566_2
Peleiades 1082
Peleus
Myth: seizes Thetis 1019
—— spear of 209_2 sword of 209_1
Peliades 1122
Pelias
Myth: boiled by his daughters 1104
Pelion, Mt
Cults: Zeus Ἀκραῖος 1043_2 Zeus Ἀκταῖος 31 f. 317 1043_2 1161
Rite: procession of men clad in fleeces to sanctuary of Zeus Ἀκταῖος 31 f.
—— cave of Cheiron on 1043 discoveries of A. S. Arvanitopoullos on (?) 1161
Pella
Cult: Athena Ἀλκίδημος 869
—— coins of 869 f.
Pellana in Achaia
Cult: (Zeus) Μελλίχιος 1187
—— bronze snakes from 1187
Pellene
Cult: Athena 238_3
Pelops
Myth: ivory shoulder 1124
Genealogy: s. of Tantalos 417_0
—— perhaps a Hittite vassal 417_0
Pelousion
Cult: Zeus Κάσιος 817_0
Penelope, marriage-test of 1147
Penia
Genealogy: m. of Eros by Poros s. of Metis 746 f.
Compared with ὕλη 747_2
Penteskuphia, votive pínakes from 672_0
Penthesileia
Myth: Achilles 956
Pentheus
Myth: recalled to life (?) 1124
Perchta 447_0
Perdoytus
Function: wind 108
Etymology: 108_2
Perennius, M. 1006
Pergamon
Cults: Athena Νικηφόρος 794 Augustus 1125 1191 Roma 1191 Zeus and Athena 872 Zeus Ἀσκληπιός 1182 Zeus Πατρῷος (= Augustus) 1125 1191 Zeus Φίλιος (= Trajan ?) 1191
Festival: Nikephoria 794_1 —— bronze bull of 1102 coins of 794 899_5 great altar at 56_0 534 small inner frieze of great altar at 823_3
Perikles
Personates Zeus 32_5 66_4
Periklymenos
Myth: slain as a fly by Herakles 744_4
Perillos 1102
Perinthos, coins of 948
Periphas 236
Perperiá, in the rain-magic of the Balkans 285 variations of her name 285 ff. etymology of her name 287 f.
Perpetua, St 1119
Persephone
Cults: Agra 722 Eleusis 967_1

Persephone (cont.)
Epithets: Κλυμένη (?) 593$_6$ Χειρογονία 98$_{0(8)}$ 663$_2$
Priests: δαδοῦχος 724$_0$ ἱεροφάντης 395$_5$ μυσταγωγός 395$_5$ Φαιδυντής 967$_1$
Priestess: κερνοφόρος 724$_0$
Myth: eats one or more pomegranate-pips of Hades 815$_0$
Genealogy: d. of Zeus by Demeter 744$_{1(4)}$ m. by Zeus of the first three Dioskouroi (Tritopatreus, Eubouleus, Dionysos) 120
Etymology: 1127
Types: borne off in chariot by Hades 991 holding pomegranate 815$_0$ 816$_0$ seated with corn-ears in right hand and sceptre in left 713 seated with Hades 425 standing with cross-topped torch 402
Associated with Demeter 712
Superseded by St Agatha 447$_6$
—— marriage with 395
See also Proserpina
Perseus
Myths: expelled in infancy by Akrisios 1187 Gorgon 843 846$_6$ founds Mykenai 363 478$_2$
Genealogy: s. of Zeus by Danaë 455
Attribute: hárpe 843
Types: dangling Gorgon's head 849 f. 996 with winged cap or helmet 706$_2$
Persia
Cults: Anahita 916$_1$ rivers 907$_6$ sky (?) 1114 Zervan 914$_0$
Pessinous
Cult: Mother of the gods 893 ff.
Petelia, gold tablet from 419$_2$ f. 422$_0$
Petra
Cults: Chaaboû (?) 914$_1$ Chaamoû 914 Dousares 914 ff.
Rite: birth of Chaamoû's s. Dousares 914 ff.
—— coin of 909
Petrachos, Mt
Myth: stone swallowed by Kronos 929
Peuketios 364$_7$
Pfol 163$_3$
Phaethon 247 1136
Phaiakia
Myths: called Δρεπάνη after the δρέπανον of Kronos 481 Phaeacians sprung from blood of Ouranos 481
Phaidros, stage of, at Athens 1107 Phaistos
Cults: Leto Φυτίη 1042$_9$ Meter Theon 422$_0$ Zeus Fελχάνος 1043$_0$
Etymology: 200$_1$ (?)
—— coins of 617$_{1(2)}$
Phalanthon, Mt 321$_0$ (?)
Phaleron
Cult: Androgeos 158
Phanes
Myths: sprung from cosmic egg 745 f. swallowed by Zeus 745 942
Genealogy: parent and h. of Nyx 745 Phanes (cont.)
f. by Nyx of Gaia and Ouranos, Rhea and Kronos, Hera and Zeus 745
Type: androgynous 745
Identified with Metis (masc.) 745
Phanuel 97$_{0(5)}$
Phaon 136$_3$ 137$_4$
Pharsalos
Cult: Zeus Θαύλιος 281 f.
Phaselis, coins of 871
Pheidias 47$_0$ 169$_0$ 190 216$_1$ 216$_7$ 225$_1$ 238$_3$ 535$_0$(?) 646$_0$(?) 662 688 698 698$_6$ 773 773$_6$ 827 858 (?) 862 933 954 ff. 1153 career of 954 958 959$_0$ 1155 (?) 1155 (bibliography)
Phemios, slays Hyperochos 1105
Phemonoe 592$_3$
Pherai
Cults: Enhodia 279 f. Hekate 272$_3$ Hypereia 272$_5$ Zeus Ἄφριος 271 ff. Zeus Θαύλιος 277 ff.
—— bronze amulet from 1075 (?) coin of 280
Pherekydes of Athens (or Leros) 72 508 1064
Pherekydes of Syros 974
Phersephoneia 321$_0$
Phikion, Mt 506
Philadelpheia in Lydia
Cult: Zeus Ταργυηνὸς Ἐπήκοος 652$_0$
Philetaireia 593$_2$
Philip of Macedon, dreams about birth of Alexander 957$_0$
Philippoi
Cult: Bendis 1134
Philistines
In relation to Crete 551$_0$
Philoktetes
Myths: fetched by Greeks from Lemnos at advice of Helenos 921 healed by Lemnian earth 231
In relation to Hephaistos 190$_7$
Philomela 1147
Philon 728
Phineus, warns Argonauts of Kyaneai 976
Phix 506$_5$ See also Sphinx
Phlious
Cult: (Hebe) Δία 184$_2$
Phlyeis
Cults: Demeter Ἀνησιδώρα 202$_0$ (Ge) Μεγάλη Θεός 202$_0$ Kore Πρωτογόνη 202$_0$
Phoibos
Etymology: 1137 (?)
Phoinike
Cults: Elioun 762$_3$ Kabeiroi 1001 Oulomos 914$_0$ Pataikoi 158
Myth: Aion s. of Baaut and Kolpias 914$_0$
Phoinix
Genealogy: f. of Europe 627$_1$
Phokis
Cults: Hera Βασίλεια 61$_1$ Zeus Βασιλεύς 61$_1$

Phorbas 177_0
Phrasios 653_0
Phrixos
Myths: builds sanctuary on Bosporos 148 dedicates altar to Twelve Gods 148 golden ram 1080
Genealogy: s. of Nephele by Athamas s. of Aiolos 148
Phronia 77_4
Phrygia
Cults: Diounsis 1125 f. Zeus 1125 Zeus Βέννιος or Βεννεύς 1162 Zeus Λίος 1125 Zeus Μαξεύς 1112 Zeus Φάτνιος 1126
Myths: Agdistis 1174 flood 527 ff. Nannakos 527 f. Priasos 531
Phryne, bathes at Eleusis 297
Phrynos 669 733
Phthia 281_7(?)
Physadeia 357
Pidzu Pennu, rain-god of Khonds 446
Pi-lo-sho-lo, Mt 545
Pindar, on Delos as a floating island 984 on Rhodes as a floating island 986 sees stone image fall from heaven 893
Pi-Ramses
Cult: Ḥurun 1076
Pisces 324
Pisidia
Cults: Hera Βασιλίς 61_1 Zeus Καλακάγάθιος 1162
Pisthetairos 44 ff.
Personates Zeus 21 59 f.
—— as bridegroom of Basileia 57 ff.
Pitane, coins of $342_{0(2)}$
Planktai 975 f. 983 987
Plataiai
Cults: Athena Ἀρεία 773_6 Hera Νυμφευομένη 1042_6 Hera Τελεία 932 1042_6
Platon 746 f. 960 f. 974 bees settle on lips of infant 265_0
Plav, floating fen in Delta of Danube 1015
Plegades 976 See Kyaneai
Pleiades 437
Pleuron, eponym
Cult: Sparta 161
Etymology: 161_5
Pleuron in Aitolia 161
Ploades 987 f.
Plotai, name of Islands of Aiolos 987 name of Strophades 987
Plouton
Etymology: 746 (?)
Attribute: cornu copiae 1053_1 (1 f.)
See also Pluto
Ploutos
Genealogy: s. of Iasion by Demeter 75 f.
—— birth of 188_1 springs of 500
Plutarch, repeatedly quotes Pindar's description of Zeus 964_2
Pluto, jaws of 432_1 440
See also Plouton
Plynteria 224_3 240 f. 749
Pneuma 983
Poeni
Cult: Abaddir 937_0
Pogla, coins of 899_5
Polion in Lesbos 417_0
Polos at Tanagra 417_0
Polyarches 77_4
Polybotes 14_0
Polydeukes and Kastor (bibliography) 1134
Polydora 357
Polygnotos, the painter 397 f. 712_4 1067
Polykleitos 65 816_0 964 965_3
Polyktor 498_0
Polymele 110
Polyneikes 563 815_0
Polyphemos
Type: driven by infant Eros 1020 1023
Pompeii
Cults: Isis 641_4 Iupiter 29_4 Zeus Μειλίχιος 1189
—— fresco from 'House of the Tragic Poet' at 1033 f. gold armlets from 765_4 lararia of 773_2 paintings of Twelve Gods on outer walls of houses at 1062_2 (1 f.) supposed representation of earthquake at 29_4 Villa Item at 1118
Pontos, f. of Nereus 743_8
Populonia, coins of 856_0
Poros
Genealogy: s. of Metis and f. of Eros by Penia 746
Identified with Chaos 747_1
Associated with Aisa 747_1
Porphyrion 55_5
Myths: founds sanctuary of (Aphrodite) Οὐρανία at Athmonia or Athmonon 55_5 Gigantomachy 55_5 534 1148 makes love to Hera 55_5 slain by thunderbolt of Zeus and bow of Herakles 55_5
Genealogy: s. or b. of Athamas 55_5
Etymology: 55_5
Porphyrios, St 551 ff.
Porphyris 14_0
Poseidon
Cults: Apameia in Phrygia 22 Athens 9_1 11_3 758 Atlantis 283_4 1184 Boiotia 736_3 Ephesos $599_{(2)}$ Erechtheion 11_3 758 Gythion 11_2 Karpathos 18_0 Lesbos 1042_1 Mykonos 179_0 Mytilene 6 Cape Tainaros 21 23_2 Thera 13_1 Therapne 11_1 Tralleis 22
Epithets: Αἰολος 107_3(?) Γαιήιος(?) 11_0 γαιήοχος 10_4 ἐλασίχθων 9_1 Ἐλάτης 9_1 ἐλελίχθων 9_2 Ἑλικώνιος 283_4 Ἐλύμνιος 1042_1 Ἐλύτιος 1042_1 Ἐννοσίγαιος 531 ἐννοσίγαιος 7_2 Ἐννοσίδας 8_1 ἐνοσίχθων 7_2 Ἐρεχθεύς 12_3 758 f. Ἐρεχθεὺς Γαιήοχος 12_3 Εὐρυμέδων(?) 675_1 Ἵμψιος 9_1 Ἱππηγέτης 9_1 Ἵππιος 9_1 107_3 217_0(?) κωνσίχθων 10_1 Λυταῖος 10_1 ὁ ποντομέδων 1064 Πόρθμιος 18_0 σεισίχθων 10_1 Τεμενίτης

Poseidon (cont.)
179$_0$ τυράκτωρ γαίας 10$_2$ Φράτριος 585$_4$ Φύκιος 179$_0$ Φυτάλμιος 527 562
Rites: sacrifice of bull 'to Poseidon and to Erechtheus' 759 sacrifice of ἔνορχα μῆλα 396$_3$ sacrifice of white male lamb 179$_0$ sacrifice of white ram 179$_0$
Priest: ἱερεύς 12$_3$
Myths: contest with Athena about Athens 750 ff. contest with Athena about Trozen 751$_1$ contest with Hera 751$_1$ contest with Zeus 751$_1$ Ephialtes 18$_0$ floods Thriasian plain 751 gives cup to Teleboes 507$_5$ Koronis 782$_4$ Minos 628$_1$ Polybotes 14$_0$ produces sea at Athens 750 f. produces springs at Lerna 361 punishes Inachos with drought 355 f. saves Amymone from Satyr 356 shows Amymone the Lernaean springs 361 369 Tempe 10$_1$ woos Thetis 741 f.
Genealogy: f. of Aloeus by Kanake 4$_0$ f. of Athena by lake Tritonis 128$_1$ f. of Eryx by Aphrodite 176$_0$ f. of Sinis 10$_1$
Functions: originally a specialised form of Zeus 20$_1$ 736$_3$ 1140 1153 originally a lightning-god with lightning-fork, later a sea-god with fishing-spear 736 agriculture 527 earthquakes 5 ff. 943 sea 726$_6$ wind astern 162
Etymology: 736$_3$ 1140
Attributes: chlamys 1153 dolphin 1060 two dolphins 753 lightning-fork 20 867 trident 10 tunny 671$_0$
Types: bearing the island Nisyros or Porphyris 14$_0$ bronze statue from Artemision (?) 1151 ff. energetic 697 exhibiting wave 755 (?) 755$_2$ (?) holding aphlaston 755$_2$ hurling trident 1153 in archaistic reliefs of the Twelve Gods 1055 ff. in the guise of Zeus 1153 leaning on trident 1153 riding on dolphin 627$_{(3)}$ 831 seated on rock 581$_0$ standing with dolphin and trident 12$_0$ striking with trident 1153 terra-cotta relief at Munich 1152 with eyes in garnet 217$_0$ with glaucous eyes 216 with horse's head in hand 217$_0$
Identified with Erechtheus 12$_3$ 737 758 f.
Associated with Amphitrite 681 958 Aphrodite 675$_2$ 699 f. Erechtheus 758 Zeus and Hades 6 1157 (?)
In relation to duck 52$_2$
Superseded by Zeus 21
—— brass pillar of, inscribed with laws 1184 Ionian by descent 736$_3$ 751 provenance of 736 1140
Poseidonia, coins of 1153
Poseidonia, the festival 297
Poseidoniastai 155
Poseidonios 482 f.
Potidaia, founded where meteorite fell 886
Praeneste, mosaic from 626$_{(2)}$
Praisos
Cult: pig 1103
—— terra-cotta plaques from 1011
Praxiergidai 241$_0$
Praxiteles 659$_0$ (?) 932 f. (?) 970 1009 (?)
Praxiteles 'the elder' (?) 933$_2$
Preale 679$_{(3)}$
Premnousia 515$_2$
Priansos
Cult: Zeus Σκύλλιος 413$_0$
Priapos
Type: on column 1096
Priasos 531
Prinia, archaic goddess from 957$_0$
Prinophoros 1134
Prochyte 3$_0$
Prodikos 839
Prokne
Myth: 1147
Genealogy: w. of Tereus 53
Prokris
Myth: Kephalos 72
Genealogy: d. of Erechtheus 72
Promacheia 1008
Prometheus
Myths: theft of fire 228 refuses to reveal secret to Zeus 740 f. consents at last to reveal secret to Zeus 741 Herakles 956 at Ikonion makes images of clay 528 birth of Athena 125$_3$ cleaves head of Zeus 661 first to kill ox 661
Attributes: double axe 125$_3$ ring 1029$_{10}$ umbrella 57 willow (?)-wreath 1029$_{10}$
Identified with Engonasin or Ingeniculus 483
In relation to fire-drill 1075 (?) Zeus 1075 —— pillar of 1115
Pron, Mt
Cult: Hera 65
Proserpina
Attributes: modius 1062$_{2(2)}$ sceptre 1062$_{2(2)}$
Type: in Pompeian painting of Twelve Gods 1062$_{2(2)}$
Associated with Dis 432$_1$
See also Persephone
Proteus
Myth: Helene 78
Genealogy: f. of Theonoe 349$_3$
Function: seer 349$_8$ 743$_8$
Protokles 121
Protokreon 121
Prousias See Kios
Psychro Cave on Mt Lasithi 1143
Ptah-Seker See Pataikos
Ptereleos 507$_5$
Ptolemaios Chennos 1043$_1$
Ptolemaïs in Egyptian Thebaïd
Cults: Harbaktes 1073 Hierax Theos 1073
Ptolemies, marriage-custom of 110 f.

Punt, serpent-king of 984
Pushkalāvatī
Cult: Nandi 1086
—— coin of 1086
Pygmalion
Myths: bids Bousiris cure eight years' drought by sacrificing a stranger 653_0 slays Acerbas h. of Elissa 646_0
—— golden olive of 983
Pyr 983
Pyrenees, bear-festivals in 1080
Pyrgoi
Cult: Eileithyia 679_0
Pyrrhakos 118
Pythagoras, bids abstain from eating plough-ox or ram 591_1 conceives soul of dead friend as hound 413_0 controls wind 106 explains earthquakes 2_5
Pythagoras of Rhegion 850
Pythagoreans, cosmic ship 18_2 fire at centre and circumference of universe 19_0 Klotho, Atropos, Lachesis 717_4 Milky Way 946 pentagram 341_3 πίδος τετρημένος 398_5 Sappho and Phaon 136_3 subterranean basilica at Rome 139
Pythia, the festival 901_1
Pythion
Cults: ἥρως Ἐπικράτης 1114 f. Zeus Καταβάτης 1114 f. Zeus Κεραύνιος 1157
Pytho 929 See Delphoi
Python, the vase-painter 510 512 518

ʿQaçiu 884_0
Qebhsennuf 345_1
Quadi
Cult: sword 1139
—— miracle of 324 ff.
Quinquatrus Minusculae 856_0
Quinquennalia 1141
Quintilian describes the effect produced by Pheidias' statue of Zeus at Olympia 960

Ramman
Type: standing on bull 831
Identified with Zeus 945
Compared with Adad, Tešub, and the god of Mt Tabor 1173
Raria, sacred ploughing in 178_0 606 cp. 610
Rarian Plain 610 cp. 178_0 606
Ras Shamra
Cults: Baʿal 1156 the dead 1193
Rite: use of libation-funnels 1193
—— stēle from 1156
Remus and Romulus (bibliography) 1134 f.
Rhadamanthys
Genealogy: s. of Zeus by Europe 627_1 628_0
Function: judge of dead 402
—— oath of 47_5
Rhamnous
Cult: Nemesis 955_7
—— sanctuary of Nemesis at 1073
Rhapso
Function: birth-goddess 89 94
Etymology: 1121
Rhea
Cults: Athens 169_0 Mt Ide in Crete 1033_1 Mt Ide in Phrygia 1033_1 Mt Kynthos (?) 1172
Myths: consorts with Kronos 111_1 entrusts infant Zeus to the Kouretes and to the nymphs Adrasteia and Ide 931_3 entrusts infant Zeus to Themis 839_6
Genealogy: m. by Kronos of Hestia, Demeter, Hera, Hades, Ennosigaios, Zeus 928 Functions: 'Minoan' earth-goddess 200 953 mountain-mother 931
Attribute: lions 1172
Types: ara Capitolina 933 f. in chariot drawn by two griffins 842_2(?) offering stone to Kronos 929 ff. veiled 935
Associated with Kronos 169_0 745 —— Korybantes followers of 323_2
Rheitoi 297
Rhizenia (?), law-kýrbis from 1183 f.
Rhodanos 366
Rhodes
Cults: Athena Λινδία 355 Damateres 1124 f. Isis 986 Zeus Ἀταβύριος 525
Myths: Helios claims it as his portion 986 Helios weds Rhodos 986 Telchines 296 881_1 Zeus consorts with Himalia by means of rain 477 Zeus rains golden snow at birth of Athena 477 670 719
—— as a floating island 986 f. coins of 856_0 1072 tubular stand from 197_0 Zeus and Hera in reliefs from 1034 ff.
Rhodos, w. of Helios 986
Rhoiai 818_0
Rhoio 818_0
Rhytion
Cult: Zeus Σκύλιος 1148
Roma, the personification of Rome
Cult: Pergamon 1191
Epithet: Victrix 825_0
Rome
Cults: Apollo 436_0 Bellona Pulvinensis 1142 Dis 1115 Dis Pater 904_2 Elagabalos 902 ff. Iuno Moneta 23 Iupiter Dolichenus 1097 f. Magna Mater 896 f. 896_1 Malachbelos 1159 Mars 432 442 f. Mars Ultor 1021 Minerva 856_0 Minerva Medica 859 Saturnus 967_3 Sol 906 f. Tellus 24_3 Terminus 441 Venus 443 Venus Genetrix (Genitrix) 1022 Victoria 896 Festivals: Agon Capitolinus 1141 Consualia 437 Ludi Capitolini 1141 Nonae Caprotinae 612_0 Opiconsivia 437 Quinquatrus Minusculae 856_0 Quinquennalia 1141 —— altar of Dis in Tarento at 1115 Catacomb of St Balbina at 1119

Rome (cont.)
Catacomb of St Domitilla at 972_0 coins of 801 f. 821 856_0 872 901_2 902 904_5 906 1020 1092 1095 Golden House of Nero at 37 ff. 948 'House of Livia' at 638_0 manalis lapis at 429 ff. mundus at 429 ff. Palládion of 896 (?) 903_2 Pantheon at 353_1 441 ff. pediment of temple of Iupiter Capitolinus at 707 1066 Porta Capena at 432 Roma quadrata at 429_1 $430_0 431_0 436_0 436_2$ 438 Scalae Caci at 896 f. subterranean basilica at 135 ff. Syrian sanctuary on Ianiculum at 1114 temple of Apollo at 436_0 temple of Augustus at 460 temple of Elagabalos on the Palatine at 903 f. temple of Elagabalos in suburb of 903 f. temple of Iupiter Capitolinus at 246_0 707 1066 temple of Magna Mater on Palatine at 896 f. 896_1 temple of Mars Ultor at 1021 Tullianum at 366 Viale Manzoni hypogaeum at 972_0
Romulus
Myth: hurls spear at Palatine 754_2
—— and Remus (bibliography) 1134 f.
Rosalia 293_1

Sabaoth 1086
Sabazios
Cult: Thraco-Phrygians 874
Epithet: "Τψις ("Τψῆς?) 874
Function: rain 874
Identified with Zeus 945
—— boar dedicated to 875_0 regarded as boar (?) 875_0
Sabines
Cult: Vacuna 1012
Saepinum, burial within house at 1181
Sagaris, river in Phrygia 918_3 See also Sangarios
Sagittarius 324
Saittai, coins of 408_0
Salamis
Cult: Zeus 650_0 (?)
Myth: Teukros 650_0
Salamis personified 956
Salamis in Kypros
Cults: Athena 653_0 Iupiter Salaminius 646_0 Thea ἡ Ὄμβριος 561 (?) Zeus 646_0 ff. Zeus Ὀλύμπιος 648_0 649_0
Rite: human sacrifice to Agraulos or Diomedes 653_0
Myth: Teukros 646_0 650_0
—— coins of 833_0 temple called Διὸς ἀσφάλεια at 646_0 f.
Salbad
Cult: Zeus Μέγας ὁ Κύριος 1098
Saliares, dancing islands in Lydia 989
Salii, hymn of 1130
Salmoneus
Myth: Zeus 966
Personates Zeus 141
Salus 1092
Šamaš
Functions: sun, wisdom, law 1135 law and righteousness 836
Samemroumos 983
Samos
Cults: Aphrodite ἐν Καλάμοις or ἐν Ἔλει 66_2 Dionysos Ἐλιγενής 1030_3 Hera 645_0 969 1027 ff. 1045 Zeus 1027 ff. Zeus Μιλίχιος 1187
Festival: Tonea 1028 ff.
Rites: ἱερὸς γάμος 1027 ff. image of Hera annually carried off to the shore 1029 1031
Myths: Admete 1029 birth of Hera beneath willow beside Imbrasos 1029 Neades or Neïdes 3_0 —— called Dryousa 1027_1 called Parthenia 1027 coins of 211 645_0 899_5 1029 Heraion at 1027 once occupied by Carians 1027_1 1029 willow-tree of Hera at 1028 ff.
Samos, h. of Parthenia 1027_1
Samothrace
Myth: Dardanos and Iasion (Iason) 77_6 77_7
—— mysteries in 133 135
Sanchouniathon 887 891 892 1179
Sandanos 366
Sandas
Type: standing on lion 831
Sangarios, river of Asia Minor 531 See also Sagaris
Sappho 136_3 137_4
Saqqâra, mummies of horses at 1187
Saracens
Cults: Aphrodite Χαβάρ (Χαμάρ) 915_2 915_3 917_7 Heosphoros 915_2 917_7
Sarapis
Cults: Athens 588_1 Delos 154 f. Sarmizegetusa 1162
Attributes: eagle 37_6 kálathos 1148 wreath 1148
Identified with Zeus 945
Associated with Zeus 1148
Sardeis
Cult: Artemis 1082
Rites: ταυροκαθάψια καὶ κυνήγια (?) 1091
—— coins of 899_5 $899_{5(1)}$
Sardus Pater 1119
Sarmizegetusa
Cults: Fortuna Daciarum 1162 Invictus Deus Serapis 1162 Sol Invictus 1162 Theos Hypsistos Ἐπήκοος 1162
Saros 18_0
Sardinia
Cults: bull-god 1110 pillar 1110 spring or well 1110
Myth: Aristaios 270
Sarpedon the Lycian
Myth: slain by Patroklos 478
Genealogy: s. of Zeus 478 s. of Zeus by Europe 628_0
Saturnalia 432_1

Saturnus
Cults: Ghardimaou 1095 Numidia 1078 Rome 967_3
Festival: Saturnalia 432_1
Rite: human sacrifice commuted 433_0
Types: cult-image filled with oil 967_3 968 three-eyed (?) 933_7
Satyroi
Attributes: ivy-wreath 1133 lagobólon 382_0 nebris 1133 pine-wreath 1133 vine-wreath 1132 dancing 380_4 382_5 $386_{0\,(e)}$ double bust (bearded and beardless) 1132 f.
Schiblé 1114
Seasons See Horai
Sebastopolis, coin of 408_0
Securitas 946_{16}
Sedasa
Cults: Hermes Μέγιστος 1071 Zeus Helios 1071
Segesta 177_0
Seimia (Semea, Sima)
Cult: Syria 889
Seimios
Cult: Heliopolis in Syria 1095 Syria 889
Seir, Mt 1076
Seiren See Siren
Seirios
Cult: Keos 266
Types: dog's head 271_1 forepart of dog 270_6 271_2 star 271_3 —— oath by (?) 48_0 sun so called 1074
Sekhet
Type: with leonine head, disk, and ankh 1095
Selene
Myth: consorts with Zeus 1111
Genealogy: m. of fifty daughters by Endymion 357 m. of Herse by Zeus 179 f.
Types: riding horse or mule 958 driving quadriga down behind hills 718 facing bust with moon on head, seven stars ranged round, and zodiac as framework 1085 f.
—— meadows of 1064_4
Seleukeia on the Kalykadnos
Cult: Zeus Βόρειος 161
—— coins of 843_3
Seleukeia Pieria
Cults: Zeus Κάσιος 884_0 Zeus Κεραύνιος 884_0
— coins of 884_0
Selge, coins of 645_0
Selinos, the river-god 614_5
Selinous
Cults: Apollon 614_5 Demeter Μαλοφόρος 1136 1188 Hekate Προπυλαία 1188 Pasikrateia 1188 f. Zeus Μειλίχιος 1188 f.
coins of 614_5 metope from temple 'E or R' at 1036 1038 f. metope from temple 'F or S' at $615_{5\,(1)}$
Selket or Serqet 345_1
Semea See Seimia
Semele
Cult: Thraco-Phrygians 874
Epithets: Ἐγχώ 1114 Τη (Τή) 874
Myth: Zeus 82_3
Function: earth 874
Serapis See Sarapis
Seriphos
Myth: Diktys s. of Peristhenes draws chest of Danaë to land 455
Sestos
Cults: Theos Olbios 656_2 Zeus Ὄλβιος 656_2 (?)
Set 1135
Sethlans
Attribute: double axe $678_{(1)}$
Sichna 295
Side, coins of 813_5
Sidon
Cult: Astarte 1023
—— coins of 158_8
Sigurd 1174
Sikinos
Cult: Hera Βασίλεια (?) 61_1
Sikyon
Cult: (Hebe) Δία 184_2
Silenos
Etymology: 1106
Types: dancing 512 with pig's ears 92_0
Silsilis
Cult: Neilos Zeus Νεφώτης ὁ Μέγιστος 349
Sima See Seimia
Simeon Stylites 779_0
Sinis 10_1
Sinope, coins of 1137 silver bracelets from 765_4
Sinties 228
Sipylos, Mt
Myths: Priasos 531 Tantalos 418_0
—— grave of Tantalos on 417_0
Siren
Types: beating head and breast $385_{0\,(d)}$ flanked by loutrophóros and Sphinx 393_0 flanking nude Aphrodite 1016 on column 587_3 on sepulchral stéle 132
—— helps Herakles in rape of Delphic tripod 799_1
Sisyphos
Types: rolling stone up hill 399 416 lashed by Erinys 416
Sithon
Myth: gives his d. Pallene to winner of single combat 522 f.
Skedasos, sacrifice to daughters of 565_1
Skepsis, coin of 517_0
Skira 115
Skiron, the suburb of Athens, sacred ploughing at 606
Skiron, the brigand 1186
Skiron, the wind 130
Skirophoria 166_0 602
Skopas 135 471 704_9 (?)
Skopas, the Silenos 513

Skylakeus 413_0
Skylla
Etymology: 414_0 416_0
Types: dog 414_0 (?) semi-human 414_0 ff.
Connected with Sicily 976
In relation to Zeus Skýllios 1148
Skyllies 414_0 1148
Skyllion, Mt 413_0
Skythia
Cult: scimitar 907_6
Slavonic deities (?): Dzewana 64_0 Dzydzilelya 64_0 Jesza 64_0 Lado 289_2 Lel 64_0 Lyada 64_0 Marzyana 64_0 Nya 64_0 Perdoytus 108 Pogoda 64_0 Polel 64_0 Żywye 64_0
Smilis 1027
Smyrna
Cults: Atys 22 Boubrostis 1156 Zeus Σωτήρ 22
Rites: sacrifice of black bull to Boubrostis 1156 ταυροκαθάψια 1091 —— marble relief at 757 f.
Sol
Cults: Aquae Sulis 863_{11} Palmyra 1112 Rome 906 f.
Function: a fusion of Elagabalos and other oriental Ba'alim (?) 907
Etymology: 858
Attribute: radiate crown 41
Types: in quadriga pursues Luna in biga 41 radiate 863_{11}
Identified with Elagabalos 901_1 902_3
Solomon, throne of 957_0
Solon, kýrbeis and áxones of 949
Solon, the gem-engraver 853_1
Soma 128
Sopatreia 593_2
Sopatros 590 ff. 604 661_3
Sophia
Epithet: γενέτις 745_6
Sophokles, controls wind 106
Sosipolis
Cult: Elis 239_1
Sounion
Cult: Zeus Μειλίχιος 1184
Sparta
Cults: Aphrodite Ἐνόπλιος 722_3 Artemis Λυγοδέσμα 1030 Artemis Ὀρθία 1009 1030 Asklepios Ἀγνίτας 1030_4 Athena Χαλκίοικος 11_1 661 Moirai Λαχέσεις 722_3 Oupis 189_1 Pleuron 161 Zeus Εὐάνεμος 160 Zeus Ὕψιστος 1162
Festivals: Gymnopaidiai 997 1008 Promacheia 1008
Rites: διαμαστίγωσις 1134 Λυδῶν πομπή 1009
Myth: Helene 78
—— stêle from 507_3
Sphinx
Myth: Mt Phikion 506
Sphinxes
Type: grasping Theban children 955
Stara Zagora, bronze statuette of Zeus Olýmpios at 1196
Statoniensis, Lake, floating island in 1013
Sterope 956
Stesichoros, palinode of 77 f.
Stoics 234 ff. 726 f. 878 f. 947 961 (?) 1046_5
Stonehenge, genetically posterior to Woodhenge 910_5
Stratonikeia
Cults: Hekate 1066 Hekate Ἀσδοφόρος 544_3 Theos Agathos 1162 Zeus Πανάμαρος 544_3 1066 Zeus Ὕψιστος 1162
—— coins of 568 cp. 589 ox precedes priest to 568
Stratos in Akarnania
Cult: Zeus 1166 f.
Strophades, as floating islands 987 called Plotai 987
Stymphalos
Cult: Hera Χήρα 1070
—— tomb of Zeus at 1070 (?)
Sucaelus
Compared with Cornish 'Jack of the Hammer' 1142
Sul 858 See Sulis
Sulien, St $859_{2(1)}$
Sulis
Cult: Aquae Sulis 858 ff.
Epithet: Minerva $859_{2(1-3)}$ 859_4
Functions: hot curative springs 858 sun-goddess 859 863
Compared with Minerva Medica 859
Sumerians
Cults: Domouzi (later Tamouz) 1125 Im-dugud 1155 Lilith (?) 832 ff. Nin-khursag 1155 —— balag in relation to pêlekys (?) 1141 bull's head from harp of 1102
Summanus 1115
Symbetylos
Cult: Syria 889
Sympheropolis
Cult: Zeus Ἀταβύριος 1173
Symplegades 975 f. 983 987
Synnada
Cults: Zeus 1070 Zeus Πάνδημος 212_2
—— coins of 212_3
Syra See Syros
Syracuse
Cults: Athena 850_6 Zeus Οὔριος (Iupiter Imperator) 148
—— coins of 784 f. 819 870_4
Syria
Cults: Seimia (Semea, Sima) 889 Seimios 889 Symbetylos 889 Zeus Βέτυλος 890 f.
—— coins of 820 f. 856_0 idols with two or more heads from 1135
Syrianos 745
Syrinx
Myth: Pan 1012
Syros, folk-tales from 818_0 977

Tabor, Mt
Etymology: 1102
—— divine light round summit of 1068 name and cult of, spread to

Tabor, Mt (cont.)
Crete, Rhodes, Agrigentum, and Crimea 1172 f.
Tages
Myth: 203_0
—— lore of 434
Tainaros, Cape
Cult: Poseidon 21 23_2
Tainaros in Lakonike 257_1
Taitle 1111
Tala (?) 989 See Gygaia Limne
Talaimenes 989
Taliesin 1174
Talos
Epithet: Perdix 1111
Myth: 1110
Genealogy: nephew of Daidalos 1110 f.
Attribute: saw 1110
Identified with Engonasin or Ingeniculus 491
Compared with Daidalos and Ikaros 1111
Tamise (Temsche) 338_1
Tanagra
Cults: Athena Ζωστειρία 567_0 Zeus Μαχανεύς 567_0
—— tomb of Orion at 417_0
Tanaïs 366
Tantalos
Epithet: ἠροφοίτης 418_0 ἠερόφοιτος 418_0
Myths: buried beneath Mt Sipylos 418_0 overhanging rock 416 417_0 f.
Genealogy: s. of Zeus 417_0 f. of Pelops 417_0
Functions: doublet of Atlas 417_0 Giant or Titan 418_0 supporter of sky 418_0
Etymology: 417_0
Identified with Engonasin or Ingeniculus 491
—— bones of 566_2 grave of, at Polion in Lesbos 417_0 grave of, on Mt Sipylos 417_0 perhaps a Hittite king 416_1
Tantalos, Mt, in Lesbos 417_0
Taos 491
Taranis
Cult: Celts 1191 (?)
Attribute: wheel 1191
Type: holding wheel 1074 (?)
Tarentum
Cults: Anemoi 105 f. Hera 636_0 Zeus Ἐλευθέριος 1097
Rite: sacrifice of ass to the Winds 105 f.
—— antefixes with head of Io from 635_0 f. coins of 636_0 714_0 794 frieze from tomb at 425 loom-weights from 795 relief of Twelve Gods from 1055 ff. terra-cotta disks from 1119 1136
Tarentum in the Campus Martius 1115
Tark See Tarku
Tarku
Cults: Hittites (?) 651_0 652_0 Leleges (?) 651_0
Tarku (cont.)
Identified with Zeus 651_0
Tarquiniensis, Lake See Volsiniensis, Lake Tartaros
Etymology: 411_0(?)
Tarvos Trigaranus 1100
Tarxien, seated goddesses and other discoid figures from 1101
Tat 332_3
Tauion
Etymology: 1155
Taurophonia 570 1110
Tauros, Mt
Cults: Elagabalos 902 Faustina the younger 902
Tav-, pre-Phrygian form of Zeus 1155
Tavium See Tauion
Taygeton, Mt, ascent of 1164
Tegea
Cult: Athena Ἀλέα 1141
—— temple of Athena Aléa at 1141
Teiresias
Etymology: 1115
Telchines
Function: produce clouds, rain, hail, snow 296 881_1
Teleboes 507_5 508
Telephos 823_3
Telesphoros
Type: hooded 1182 f.
In relation to Genius Cucullatus 1183
Tellus
Cults: Numidia 1078 Rome 24_3
Rite: sacrifice of pregnant sow 23
Type: with cornu copiae and child 904
Temenothyrai
Cult: Zeus Γαλάκτιος 1104
—— rock-cut throne of Geryones at 1070
Tempe 10_1
Temsche (Tamise) 338_1
Tenedos
Cults: Apollon 1146 Dionysos Ἀνθρωποῤῥαίστης $599_{(2)}$ Dionysos Ὠμάδιος $599_{(2)}$
—— coins of 789_2
Tenes 1146 See also Tennes (Tenes)
Tennes (Tenes) and Hemithea 458_2(?)
Tenos, 'Tower of the Winds' at 129_6
Tereus
Myth: pursues Prokne and Philomela 1147
Genealogy: h. of Prokne 53
Attribute: double axe 1147
—— in the Birds of Aristophanes 44 ff.
Termessos (Termessus Maior)
Cults: Zeus Ἐλευθέριος 1176 Zeus Σολυμεύς 1176 Festival: Eleutheria (?) 1176
—— coins of 1177
Terminus
Cult: Rome 441
Rite: blood of burnt sacrifice, incense,

Terminus (cont.)
corn, honeycombs, wine etc. placed in hole 441 —— altar of (?) 430_0 stone of 441 1067
Terra
Epithet: mater 453_2
Terra Mater
Rite: sacrifice of pregnant sow 23
Tesana 259_0
Testimonius
Cult: Numidia 1078
Tešub
Compared with Adad, Ramman, and the god of Mt Tabor 1173
Tethys
Genealogy: m. of Metis by Okeanos 743
Tettix the Cretan 257_1
Teukroi 651_0
Teukros
Myth: founds temple of Zeus at Salamis in Kypros 646_0 650_0
Function: faded god (?) 650_0
Etymology: 651_0
—— as name of priestly dynasts at Olba 643_0 645_0 prehistory of 650_0 ff.
Teutamidas 1187
Teuthras 823_8
Thales 19_4 19_5
Thaletas 592_2
Thalna $678_{(1)}$ 679_0 $679_{(3)}$ $680_{(4)}$
Function: birth-goddess 88_0 $679_{(3)}$
Thamyris
Myth: blinded by Muses 488
Identified with Engonasin or Ingeniculus 488
Thanr 665_0 $678_{(1)}$ $678_{(2)}$
Thasos
Cults: Hestia Βουλαία 1125 Zeus Ἀγοραῖος Θάσιος 1181 Zeus Βουλαῖος 1125 Zeus Καταιβάτης 1115 Zeus Κτήσιος Πατρῷος 1181
—— archaistic relief from town-gates of 1155 f.
Thaulia 282_7
Thaulon 282 596 ff. ancestor of Boutypoi 597 etymology of 603 first to sacrifice ox 597 661_3
Thaulonidai 282 identified with Boutypoi 597 603
Thaumasion, Mt
Myth: stone swallowed by Kronos 929
Thea $302_{0(3)}$ 309 $312_{0(4)}$
Thea ἡ Ὀμβριος
Cult: Salamis in Kypros 561 (?)
Theandrius
Cult: Carnuntum (?) 1163
Thebai Phthiotides
Cult: Zeus Μειλίχιος 1187
Thebe, early name of Thebes in Boiotia 224
Thebes in Boiotia
Cults: Apollon Ἰσμήνιος 507_5 880 Apollon Χαλάζιος 880 Athena Ὁμολωΐς 608_3 Dionysos 1103 Hektor 1174 Mother of the gods 893 Pan 893 Zeus Ἐλευθέριος 762_3
Thebes in Boiotia (cont.)
Festival: Daphnephoria 880
Rite: bridal bath from Ismenos 372
Myths: birth of Dionysos 477 1118 Laïos 426 Menoikeus 815_0 Semele 82_3 Zeus consorts with Alkmene w. of Amphitryon 477
—— Ἠλεκτρίδες πύλαι at 77_4 Νῆσται πύλαι at 815_0
Thebes in Egypt
Cults: Amen 882_2 Zeus 1131 Zeus Θηβαιεύς 837
Theira
Cults: Demeter 992 Men 992
Rite: κάλαθος 992
Thekla, St 475_1 523 f.
Thelpousa, coins of 1012
Themis
Cult: Delphoi 1121
Myths: advises Zeus to flay Amaltheia 839 consorts with Zeus $744_{1(2)}$ 1064 f. entrusts infant Zeus to the nymph Amaltheia 839_6
Genealogy: m. of Dike by Zeus 823 m. of Horai and Moirai by Zeus $744_{1(2)}$
Function: 'an emanation from Ge' 1064_7
Identified with Ge 1064 Zeus 951
Associated with Ge 1121
Theodosios i, abolishes Olympic festival 969 suppresses paganism 969
Theogamia 1047
Theoi Agreis 1176
Theoi Agrioi 1174 1176
Theoi Agroteroi 1174 1176
Theoi Akraioi
Cult: Mytilene 6
Theoi Hosioi kai Dikaioi
Cult: Inönü in Phrygia 1146
Theoi Katachthonioi
Cult: Nakoleia 1160
Theonoe 349 1193
Theopista, St 1102
Theopistus, St 1102
Theopropoi 593 f. 595
Theos $302_{0(6)}$ 309 $312_{0(4)}$
Theos Agathos
Cult: Stratonikeia 1162
Theos Agnostos See Agnostos Theos
Theos Aniketos
Cult: Amastris 1140
Epithet: Ἀσβαμεύς 1140
Theos Hypsistos
Cults: Amastris 1163 Thessalonike 1162
Epithet: Ἐπήκοος 1163
Identified with Helios 1163 Jehovah 1162
Theos Megas
Cult: Odessos in Thrace 1129
Theos Olbios
Cults: Kavak 630_0 Lampsakos 1196 Sestos 656_2
Theos Tauros
Cult: Thespiai 1086

Thera
Cults: (Poseidon) Γαιάοχος 13_1 (Zeus) Βορεαῖος 161 (?)
—— rain-magic in 284
Therapne
Cult: Poseidon Γαιάοχος 11_1
Theren 1032
Thermos in Aitolia
Cults: Ge 1184 Helios 1184 Zeus 1184
Thesan 259_0
'Theseion' at Athens 223_6
Theseus
Myths: finds sword of Aigeus 484_{11} Peirithoös 956 purified at altar of Zeus Meilichios 1184 Skiron 1186
Genealogy: s. of Aigeus by Aithra 484_{11}
Types: bidding farewell to Peirithoös 402 Euphranor 1186 fighting Amazons 955 hurling Skiron into sea 1186 raising the rock at Troizen 484 ff. with Minotaur as centre of Labyrinth in mosaic 1087
Identified with Engonasin or Ingeniculus 484
Thesmophoria 166_0 168 815_0 1030 f. 1083
Thespiai
Cults: Apollon 1070 Athena 1066 Milichie 1187 Mnemosyne 1070 Theos Tauros 1086 Zeus 1070 Zeus Αἴθριος 1066 Zeus Καραιός 1148 1162 1165 Zeus Μιλίχιος 1187
Thesprotis, floating islands in 987
Thessalonike
Cults: Jehovah 1162 Kabeiros 902_7 Theos Hypsistos 1162
—— coins of 902_7
Thessaly
Cults: Aphrodite 271 (?) Athena Βούδεια 608 Athena Ἰτωνία 871_1 Thetis 743_1 Zeus Λαφύστιος 525 1080 1167
Festivals: Katabasia 1115 Sichna 295
Rite: Kledona 290
—— coins of 870 f.
Thestios 161_1
Thetis
Cult: Thessaly 743_1
Myths: hides Hephaistos in cave for nine years 228 seized by Peleus 1019 wooed by Zeus, Poseidon, and Apollon 741 f.
Type: borne by Triton 129
Associated with Zeus 742 f.
Compared with Metis 745
Theudaisia 570_2
Thevrumineś 1090
Thisbe, gold ring from 681_2
Thomas, St, as 'twin' brother of Jesus 1128
Thor
Epithet: Thorrkarl 1078
Attribute: hammer 926 1139 (Mjölnir) 1142
Thorikos
Cult: Hera Εἰλείθυια 725_4
Thoth
Identified with Hermes 332_3
In relation to the letter Θ 343_1
Thrace
Cults: Bendis 189_1 Derzelas 1129 Erikepaios 64_0 Liber Pater 1118 —— three meteorites fall in 886
Thraco-Phrygians
Cults: Dionysos Ὕης 874 Dios 952 Dios Νῦσος 952 Erikepaios 64_0 Sabazios 874 Semele Τιώη (Τιόη) 874 Zemela 952 Zeus Ὕης (Ὑῆς?) 873 f.
—— Dios, Zemela, and Dios Nysos naturalised in central Greece as Zeus, Semele, and Dionysos 952 prepared to accept Christianity 952
Thrakia Kome
Cult: Zeus Χαλάζιος Σώζων 880 f.
Thrasius See Phrasios
Thronax, Mt 65
Thyateira, coins of 211
Thyestes
Myth: the first victim sacrificed by Busiris 653_0 —— story of, as dance-theme 935_3
Thyestes, a storm-god (?) 899_4
Tiâmat 1135
Tieion See Tios (Tion)
Tina (Tinia)
Etymology: 1113
Attributes: lily-wreath 88_0 lotiform thunderbolt 92_0
Types: bearded 92_0 beardless $680_{(5)}$ birth of Athena $678_{(1)}$ $678_{(2)}$ $679_{(3)}$ $680_{(4)}$ $680_{(5)}$ birth of Dionysos 88_0 seated with eagle-sceptre in right hand and winged thunderbolt in left 88_0
Confused with Tinthun 259_0 (?)
—— on Orvieto cone 1067
Tindaridai 1113 See Tyndaridai
Tingis, grave of Antaios at 372_8
Tinia 1067 See also Tina (Tinia)
Tinthun or Tinthn 259_0
Tion See Tios (Tion)
Tios (Tion)
Etymology: 1155
—— visit to, and views of 1112
Tiryns
Cult: Hera 1085
—— small snakes at 764
Tisyroi 1092
Titane
Cult: Euamerion 1183
Titanes
Myth: Zeus 478_0 839 966
Etymology: 1103
Tithonos
Myth: tended by Heos (Eos) in old age 247
Metamorphosed into cicala 247
Genealogy: s. of Kephalos and f. of Phaethon 246 f. s. of Laomedon by Strymo or Trymo or Rhoio 247_1 f. of Memnon by Heos (Eos) 260

Tithonos (cont.)
Function: personification of cicala 257
Etymology: 257 259_0
Compared with Erichthonios 248
Tituno 259_0
Tiv, Etruscan moon-goddess 1130
Tiv-, Phrygian form of Zeus 1155
Tmarion, Mt, in Arkadia 1168
Tmaros, Mt See Tomaros, Mt, near Dodona
Tmolos, Mt
Cults: Zeus Δεύσιος (?) 320_4 Zeus Τέτιος 562
Myth: birth of Zeus 562 —— place called Γοναὶ Διὸς Τετίου, later Δεύσιον on 320_4
Tmor, Mt, near Ragusa 1167
Tomaros or Tmaros, Mt, near Dodona
Cult: Zeus Τμάριος 1168
Etymology: 1168
Tomori, Mt, near Berat
Cults: Abbas Ali 1168 ff. Zeus (?) 1168 ff.
Festival: Bektashi celebration on Aug. 25 (15) 1168 ff.
Etymology: 1168
—— ascents of 1168 ff. gold plant on 1171 oath by 1169 ruin called Dodona on 1171
Trajan
Cult: Pergamon 1191
Personates Zeus Φίλιος (?) 1191
Tralleis
Cults: Poseidon 22 Zeus 22
—— relief from 630_2
Tranquillina as Tyche of Kaisareia in Kappadokia 1177
Triballos
Myth: his gd. Polyphonte transformed into owl, her sons Agrios and Oreios into vulture and swallow (?), and their maid into woodpecker 57_2
Etymology: 57_2
—— in the Birds of Aristophanes 57 f.
Triptolemos
Functions: king of Eleusis 596 judge of dead 402
Attribute: plough 607
Trita 128 545 cp. 546_1
Tritoi Pateres 120_6
Tritomenis 719_4
Triton, river 124 f.
Triton
Function: wind 129
Etymology: 124 f.
Attributes: conch 129 fish-skin 129
Tritones
Function: protectors of the dead 132
Attributes: conch 132 paddle 132 wreath of reeds (?) 132
Type: sportive 39
Associated with Nereids 132
Tritonis, spring or lake 124
Tritopateres
Cult: Kyrene 115
See also Tritopatores, Tritopatreis
Tritopator
Cult: Delos 116 ff.
Epithet: Ιλυρρακιδῶν Αἰγιλιῶν 118
Tritopatores 112 ff.
Cult: Athens 113 ff.
Genealogy: sons of Ouranos and Ge 120
Functions: ancestral spirits 119 controllers of the wind 139 guardians of the soul 139 procreation 113 122 winds 121
Identified with Amalkeides, Protokles, Protokreon 121 Kottos, Briareos, Gyges 120
Compared with Lares Compitales 119
See also Tritopateres, Tritopatreis
Tritopatreis
Cult: Marathon 115
Epithet: Ζακναδῶν 114 f.
Rite: τράπεζα 115_4
Genealogy: sons of Ge and Helios 120_6 sons of Ge and Ouranos 120 sons of Selene and Helios 120_6
Function: procreation 120
Superseded by Hagia Trias 114 (?) cp. 119 (?)
—— ábaton of 114 Τριτοπατρεῖς originally a verse-form of Τριτοπάτορες 112_3
See also Tritopateres, Tritopatores
Tritopatreus 120
Troizen
Festival: Lithobolia 612_0
Myths: contest of Poseidon with Athena 751_1 Damia and Auxesia 612_0 Theseus finds sword of Aigeus 484_{11}
—— coins of 485_{12}
Trophonios
Associated with Agamedes 507_5
Troy
Cult: Athena 193_0
Myth: Zeus drops ákmones on the Trojan plain 924 —— axe-hammers from 1142 f. face-urns from 193_0
Trozen 751_1 See Troizen
Trysa, reliefs from heróion at 485_{12} 1000 ff. 1008
Tuamãutef 345_1
Tuatha Dé Danann 367
Tuccia the Vestal 428
Tullus Hostilius, hears voice from Alban Mount 492 sees stones fall from sky 492 slain by thunderbolt 433_0
Turan 92_0 839
Tusculum, well-chamber at 366
Tut-ankh-Amen, throne of 957_0
Twelve Gods
Cults: Bosporos 147 f. Kos 566_2
Functions: a divine 'Synoikismos' on Ionian soil (s. vii B.C.) 1055 'Monats- oder Zodiakusgötter' (s. iv B.C.) 1055 team of beneficent deities 1062
Types: in archaistic reliefs 1055 ff. relief from Tarentum 1055 ff.

Twelve Gods (cont.)
Euphranor 1186 ara Borghese 1057 f. puteal Albani 1057 1059 ara Albani 1060 f. in Pompeian paintings 1062 f.
Tyche
Cults: Gaza 553 Nabataioi 1097 Olba 646_0
Personated by Tranquillina 1177
Attributes: cornu copiae 1095 rudder 1095 turreted crown 1095
Type: standing with kálathos, rudder, and cornu copiae 646_0 655_0
Tydeus $60_{3(3)}$
Tyndaridai
Etymology: 1113 1134
Typhaonion, Mt 506
Typhion, Mt 506_4
Typhoeus
Myths: Mt Aitne 3_0 Zeus 615_3
Type: with snaky legs 842_2
See also Typhon
Typhon
Myths: fight with Zeus 191_0 laid low by thunderbolt (of Zeus) and bow of Apollon 55_5 searches for s. of Osiris 983
Functions: enemy of Osiris 345_0 heat $302_{0(6)}$
Types: three-bodied 140 with snaky legs 842_2
—— Mt Typhaonion named after 506
See also Typhoeus
Typhos See Typhoeus, Typhon
Tyr 1134
Tyre
Cults: Astarte 892 f. Herakles Ἀστροχίτων 892 f. 978 Melqarth 893 stêlai of Pyr and Pneuma 983
—— coins of 892 979 f. 982
Tyrimnos 1140
Tyris 1140 See Tyrimnos
Tyrrhenians, attempt to capture Dionysos 1031_4 attempt to carry off image of Samian Hera 1029
See also Pelasgians
Tyrsenians See Pelasgians, Tyrrhenians
Tyrsenos, s. of Herakles by the Lydian woman (Omphale) 729_3
Tyssilio, St $859_{2(1)}$
Tyssul, St $859_{2(1)}$

Ukko 1101
Ullin 1134
Ullr 1134
Underworld See Index II
Uni
Function: birth-goddess $679_{(3)}$ $680_{(4)}$
Attribute: drinking-horn 92_0
Type: suckling Hercle 92_0
Ur-Nammu, stêle of 832_5 1196
Ursa Maior 484 953
Ursa Minor 953
Uther 509_2
'Uzza 914_1

Vacuna
Cult: Sabines 1012
—— Aquae Cutiliae sacred to 1012
Vadimonis, Lake, floating islands in 1014
Valeria Luperca, story of 802_5
Vari
Cults: Apollon Ἔρσος 261 Apollon Νόμιος 265_0 Charis 261_7 Ge 265_0 Nymphs 261_7 262_0 263_0 265_0 Pan 261_7 265_0
Varro, M. Terentius, on the Islands of the Nymphs in Lydia 988 f.
Vartevar 293
Varuna 1134
Vediovis 314_0 further bibliography of 1109
Vena $95_{3(2)}$
Venti
Types: blowing conch-shells 41 head with puffed cheeks 160 Tritonian 129 with winged head 706_2
See also Anemoi
Venus
Cults: Eleusa 915_2 Mt Eryx 175_2 Numidia 1078 Paphos 646_0 Rome 1022
Epithets: Amathusia 646_0 Erycina 175_2 Genetrix (Genitrix) 1021 f. Paphia 646_0 Pompeiana $1062_{2(1)}$
Personated by Faustina Iunior 173_0 Livia 1021 Lucilla 173_0
Myth: transforms Cerastae into bulls 653_0
Attributes: modius $1062_{2(1)}$ rudder (?) $1062_{2(1)}$
Types: Arkesilaos 1022 half-draped, holding tree, with Cupids playing about her 173_0 with Cupid on her shoulder 1020 ff. in Pompeian paintings of Twelve Gods $1062_{2(1f.)}$
Associated with Mars 442 f.
Venus, the planet 173_0 180
Vesta
Attributes: ass $1062_{2(1)}$ sceptre $1062_{2(1)}$
Type: in Pompeian painting of Twelve Gods $1062_{2(1)}$
—— fire of 905_5
Vesuvius, Mt
Myth: Alkyoneus and other Giants 3_0
Vetulonia, 'Tomb of the Lictor' at 1192
Victoria
Cult: Rome 896
Type: sacrificing bull 904
See also Nikai, Nike
Vikare 1111
Vikrama, lion-seat of 957_0
Virbius 177_0
Virgin, the Type: baring her breast in last appeal 974_0
Compared with Danaë 467_0
Virgo 71_1
Identified with Dike 823
Virgo Caelestis 1045_5
Vocontii, meteorite falls in territory of 886
Volcanalia 431_4

Volcanus
Festival: Volcanalia 421_4
Etymology: 235_2(?) 1173
Types: beardless $1062_{2(1\,f.)}$ in Pompeian paintings of Twelve Gods $1062_{2(1\,f.)}$
Identified with Donar 210 (?)
Associated with Minerva and Mercurius 209 f.
Volsci
Cult: Iupiter Anxurus 1155
Volsiniensis (or Tarquiniensis), Lake, floating islands in 1013
Vṛtra 273_3 362_3 531 1134

Wejopatis
Cult: Lithuanians 158
Function: wind 158
Type: bifrontal 158
Wettingen, silver simpulum from 938
Willingham Fen, bronze mace from 1099 f.
Wind-gods See Anemoi, Venti
Wodan
Function: regnator omnium deus (?) 1117
Identified with Mercurius (?) 210
See also Odhin
Wolfgang, St 1147
Woodhenge, genetically prior to Stonehenge 910_5

Xanthios, f. of Leukippos 590_5
Xanthos (or Xanthios), slain by Melanthos 1105
Xanthos, the logographer 519
Xenoi Tekmoreioi 1125
Xouthos 109_7

Yahweh 884 See Jehovah
Yama, the two hell-hounds of 410_0 ff.
Yggdrasil 404_0 498_3
Yima 1184
Ymir
Myth: hears female-child and male-child from his arm-pit, and six-headed son from his feet $98_{0(7)}$

Zagreus
Rite: annual death and resurrection 953
Function: the Cretan Zeus 953
Etymology: 953_3 1103
Zagron See Zagros, Mt
Zagros, Mt 953_3 1103
Zan
In relation to Pan 1131
Zanes, plural of Zan 1130
Zankle
Cult: Zeus Ἰθωμάτας (?) 1153 f.
—— coin of 1153 f.
Zedekiah 1090
Zefs 1171 See Zeus
Zenes, plural of Zen 1130
Zephyros 130
Zervan 914_9
Zethos
Etymology: 1135 (?)
—— and Amphion (bibliography) 1135
Zeus
Cults: Achaeans 650_9 1164 Agrigentum 525 1171 f. Aigeira 1107 f. Aigina 650_9 1164 f. Ak Kilisse 1140 (?) Akmoneia 794 Akraiphia 1162 Alexandreia 1191 Aliphera 99_0 127_0 Amastris 148 Amathous in Kypros 653_0 1187 Anthedon 1187 Antimacheia 562 Antiocheia on the Orontes 22 Mt Apesas 1165 Aphrodisias in Karia 1191 Argos 142_8 455 563 631 Arkadia 525 Mt Atahyrion in Rhodes 1172 Athens 212_2 243 317 569_5 570 ff. 575_9 604_2 721_4 749 939_4 1047 1185 f. 1189 Attike 318 f. 563 1196 Bithynia 1160 Boiotia 61_1 Bosporos 142 ff. Bostra 912 912_4 Bulgaria 1126 Byblos 1163 Chalke 544_3 Chersonesos Thraikike 1183 Corinth 526 Corycian Cave 651_0 Crete 953 Delos 152 ff. 1162 Didyma near Miletos 563 Dion in Makedonia 1068 Dios Chorion 22 Dorylaeion 1191 Dura-Europos 890 f. 1095 1163 Elaioussa Sebaste 643_0 645_0 Eleusis 598 (?) 605_0 (?) Ephesos 422_0 1174 Euboia 912_2 1042 (?) Galatia 1140 Gaza 556 ff. Gortyna 413_0 Gümbet in Phrygia 1160 Gythion 884_0 939 ff. Halikarnassos 569 Halos 1167 Ḥaurân 1163 Heliopolis in Syria 888 Hierapytna 413_0 Mt Hymettos 526 Mt Hynnarion 1177 Iasos 1162 Inönü in Phrygia 1160 Kaisareia in Kappadokia 1177 Kanatha 555 Kapisa 545 Kara Adili 1071 Karousa 951 Karystos 126_4 127 Mt Kasion in Egypt 1177 Mt Kasion in Syria 1177 Kassandreia 882_2 Kavak 628 ff. Mt Kenaion 1166 Keos 266 f. Kephallenia 1171 Mt Kithairon 1042 Kiazomenai 1117 Mt Kokkygion 63 65 Mt Koressos 323 Korkyra 271_3 1184 Kos 564 ff. Kranioi (?) 1171 Mt Kynthos 1172 Kypros 652_0 762_3 Kyrene 1188 Kyrrhos 794 Kyzikos 1071 Mt Laphystion in Boiotia 525 Larissa in Thessaly 279 Lebadeia 61_1 562 f. 1182 Lindos 1124 Lokroi Epizephyrioi 1097 Mt Lykaion 267 Lyttos 525 Magnesia ad Maeandrum 239_1 $599_{(3)}$ 604_7 Megara 569_5 1165 Messene 525 1130 Metapontum 1097 Miletos 7_2 912 1111 1192 Mylasa 1140 1162 1181 Mytilene 6 1184 Nabataioi 1097 Nakoleia 1160 f. Naukratis 1187 Nemea 1083 ff. Nikaia in Bithynia 1184 Nikopolis in Moesia 1157 Nisyros 1187 Oasis of Siwah 882_2 Olba 642_1 Olbia 653_1 654_0 655_0 656_0 Olympia 954 ff. 1147 Mt Olympos in Makedonia 236 737_2 Orchomenos in Boiotia 949_0 Mt Oros 1164 Oxyrhynchos 1076 Palmyra 1112 Panamara 1066 Mt Parnes 526 Paros 1173 Pedasa 569 Peiraieus 659_0

Zeus (cont.)
1196 Mt Pelion 31 f. 317 1161 Pellana in Achaia 1187 Pelousion 817_0 Pergamon 872 1125 1182 1191 Phaistos 1043_0 Pharsalos 281 f. Pherai 271 ff. 277 ff. Philadelpheia in Lydia 652_0 Phokis 61_1 Phrygia 1112 1125 f. 1162 Pisidia 1162 Pompeii 1189 Priansos 413_0 Pythion 1114 f. 1157 Rhodes 525 Rhytion 1148 Salamis 650_0(?) Salamis in Kypros 646_0 ff. Salhad 1098 Samos 1027 ff. 1187 Sedasa 1071 Seleukeia on the Kalykadnos 161 Seleukeia Pieria 884_0 Selinous 1188 f. Sestos 656_2(?) Silsilis 349 Mt Skyllion 413_0 Smyrna 22 Sounion 184 Sparta 160 1162 Stratonikeia 544_3 568 1066 1162 Stratos in Akarnania 1166 f. Sympheropolis 1173 Synnada 212_2 1070 Syracuse 148 Syria 890 f. Tanagra 567_0 Tarentum 1097 Temenothyrai 1104 Termessos (Termessus Maior) 1176 Thasos 1115 1125 1181 Thebai Phthiotides 1187 Thebes in Boiotia 762_3 Thebes in Egypt 837 1131 Thera 161(?) Thermos in Aitolia 1184 Thespiai 1066 1070 1148 1162 1165 1187 Thessaly 525 Thraco-Phrygians 874 Thrakia Kome 880 f. Mt Tmolos 562 Mt Tomaros or Tmaros near Dodona 1168 Mt Tomori near Berat (?) 1168 ff. Tralleis 22 Zankle 1153 f.

Epithets: ἀγαθέ 961_1 Ἀγαμέμνων 269_7 1181 Ἅγιος 945 ἁγλαός 1126 Ἀγνός 1071 Ἀγοραῖος Θάσιος 1181 ἀθάνατος 508_3 ἀθανάτων βασιλεύς 35_6 αἰγίοχος 314 844_9 866 866_8 866_7 867 1156 αἰθέρι ναίων 743_9 αἰθέριος 1066 Αἰθριος 1066 Αἰνήσιος 1171 αἰολοβρόντας 107_3 αἰολόμορφος 107_3 Αἴολος 107_3(?) 141 (?) Ἀκραῖος 1043_2 Ἀκταῖος 68 260 317 1043_2 1161 ἀλάστωρ 952 Ἀλδήμιος or Ἄλδος 556 Ἀλεξίκακος 879_3 Ἀμάριος 1114 Ἀμάριος(?) = Ὁμάριος 1114 Ἄμμων 882_2 884_0 912_4 1076 1078 Ἀμφιάραος 269_7 1181 ἀμφιθαλής 1181 f. ἄναξ 560_6 1066 1085 1113 ἄναξ μακάρων 1183 Ἀπεσάντιος 1165 Ἀπήμιος 526 Ἀποτρόπαιος 1187 ἀργικέραυνος 34_2 Ἀριστοῖος 267 ff. ἀριστοτέχνης 567_0 964_2 ἄρρην 726_6 Ἀσβαμαῖος 1140 Ἀσείς 1106 f. Ἀσκληπιός 269_7 973_0 1182 Ἀσκραῖος 569 Ἀστέριος 953 954 Ἀστράπιος 70 ἀστράπιος 21_8 Ἀταβύριος in Rhodes 525 1172 Ἀταβύριος in Sicily 525 Ἀταβύριος in Sympheropolis 655_0 1173 αὐξητής 21_6 Ἀφέσιος 1165 Ἄφριος 271 ff. βαρύκτυπος 811_1 Βασιλεύς 52_4 61_1 654_0 Βεννεύς 1162 Βέννιος 1162 Βέτυλος 890 f. 944 Βῆλος 1112 Βορεαῖος(?) 161 Βόρειος 161 944 Βουλαῖος 1125 Βουλεύς 1124 Βουσ-

Zeus (cont.)
σουρίγιος 1140 Βρόμβιος(?) 531 βροντᾶιος 21_6 Βροντῶν 1160 f. Βροντῶν καὶ Πατὴρ Θεός(?) 1161 Βροντῶν Νεικήτωρ Πατήρ(?) 1161 γαιάοχος 10_4 Δαμάτριος 1124 Δικαιόσυνος 951 Δικαιόσυνος Μέγας 951 Δίκας δαμιοεργὲ καὶ εὐνομίας(?) 964_2 Διομεύς 59_{50} Διόνυσος 1126 Δῖος 1125 Δολιχαῖος 1097 f. (bibliography) Δουσάρης 944 Δουσάρης Σωτήρ(?) 912 Δωδωναῖος 560_6 567_0 964_2 1056 1113 Εἰλαπιναστής 652_0 762_3 Εἰλήτι(?) 762_3 εἰρηνικὸς καὶ πανταχοῦ πρᾶος, οἷος ἀστασιάστου καὶ ὁμονοούσης τῆς Ἑλλάδος ἐπίσκοπος 963_2 ἐκ Πείσης 967_1 Ἐλαίους(?) 762_3 Ἐλευθέριος 212_2 581_0 654_0 1097 1130 1176 1184 1186 Ἐλιεύς 762_3 Ἐλλάνιος 1164 f. Ἐλύμνιος 1042(?) Ἔνδενδρος 1173 ἐν Ὀλυνπίᾳ 967_1 ἐν Παλλαδίῳ 609_5 ἐξ Αὐλῆς 1160 * Ἔπαφος 99_0(?) Ἐπήκοος 652_0 1160 Ἐπήκοος Θεός 1160 Ἐπιδώτας 1130 Ἐπικάρπιος 912 912_2 964 ἐπὶ Παλλαδίου 609_5 Ἐπιτέλειος Φίλιος $309_{4(2)}$ ἐρίγδουπος 61_1 Ἑρκεῖος 248 455 749 Ἔρρος 261 944 Ἐρσαῖος 265(?) 944 Ἐρυμός 261_3 Ἑταιρεῖος 963 Εὐάνεμος 160 f. 944 εὐάντητος 147_1 147_2 Εὐβουλεύς 312 1124 Εὐελίδης 762_3 εὐήνεμος 160_2 εὐώδη 99^0 Ἐφέστιος 1189 Ἐφόριος 1183 Ζελχάνος 1043_0 1173 f. Ζβελθιοῦρδος 1159 Ζβελσοῦρδος 1159 Ἠλιος (See Identifications) Ἡραῖος 1047 Θάσιος (See Ἀγοραῖος) Θαύλιος 277 ff. 603 Θεμίστιος 949_1 964_2 Θεός 1095 θεόταυρε (v.l. ὦ ταῦρε) 1086 Θηβαιεύς 837 θῆλυς 726_6 Ἰδαῖος in Crete 953 Ἰθωμάτας 525 1153 f. Ἰκέσιος 951 f. 963 Ἱκέτας 952 Ἰκμαῖος 157_7(?) 266 f. 320_4 944 Ἴκμιος 157 944 Ἶκμιος 268 καθάρσιος 21_6 Καλακάγάθιος 1162 Καππάτας 884_0 939 ff. 944 Καραιός 32_5 1148 1162 1165 Κάριος 569_5 Κάσιος in Egypt 817_0 1177 Κάσιος in Korkyra 271_3 Κάσιος in Syria 334_1 884_0 1140 1177 Κάσι(ο)ς Σώζ[ων] 1177 Καταιβάτης 942_7 1114 f. 1115 κελαινεφής 33 f. Κεραιός 1162 1165 Κεράστης(?) 652_0 Κεραύνιος 70 884_0 1157 κεραύνιος 21_6 Κεραυνός 743_9 942_7 1114 Κήναιος (Κηναῖος) 1166 κοινὸν ἀνθρώπων καὶ πατέρα καὶ σωτῆρα καὶ φύλακα 963_2 Κόνιος (not Κρόνιος, nor Κώνιος, nor Σκοτίτης, nor Χθόνιος) 569_5 1165 Κρηταγενής 551 553_1 555 556 1092 Κρονίδης 34 633_0 743_9 866_8 1183 Κρονίων 33 f. 107_1 265_1 1085 Κτήσιος 964 1180 1181 Κτήσιος Πατρῷος 1181 κύδιστος 34_2 Κύνθιος 1172 Κύριος 1095 1098 (See also Μάρναι) Λαφύστιος in Boiotia and Thessaly 321_0 Λαφύστιος in Thessaly 525 1080 1167 Λεχεάτης 99_0 127_0 Λιταῖος 1184 Λύκαιος

Zeus (cont.)
267 525 580_0 1068 Μαζεύς 1112 Μαιμάκτης 321_0 Μάναφος 1163 Μάρνας ὁ Κύριος 555 μέγα θαῦμα, μέγ' ἀνθρώποισιν ὄνειαρ 947 Μέγας 531_1 1098 (See also Δικαιόσυνος) μέγας 928 949_2 μεγασθενής 567_0 964_2 Μέγιστος 1160 1163 1172 (See also Νεφώτης) μέγιστος 34_2 μέγιστος θεός 1112 Μειλίχιος 951 1184 1187 ff. Μελίχιος (= Μειλίχιος) 1188 Μελλίχιος (= Μειλίχιος) 1187 Μεσέρκειος 243_5 Μήλιος 1172 Μηλώσιος 32_3 μητίετα 567_0 743 745 μητιέτης 727_3 μητιόεις 743 928 Μηχανεύς 142_8 321_0 566_2 567_0 Μιλίχιος (= Μειλίχιος) 1187 1188 Μοιραγέτης 721_4 Μόριος 762 Νάιος 320_4 1078 Νέμειος 1191 νεφεληγερέτα 30 ff. 296 314 321_0 Νεφώτης ὁ Μέγιστος 349 Νόσιος 7_2 1111 Ξένιος 32_5 653_0 964 1184 1189 ὀδηγητήρ 147_1 Ὄλβιος 628 ff. 1194 1196 Ὀλύμπιος 188 236 320_4 604_2 648_0 649_0 737_2 954 967_1 1068 1107 1155 1165 1196 Ὄμάριος 1114 Ὄμβριος 320_4 324_5 (?) 525 ff. 562 873_4 f. 874 944 Ὀμόγνιος 968 Ὄριος 1183 Ὄρκιος 946 1147 Ὀρσίλοχος 99_0 (?) ὀρσινεφής 35_8 Ὀσογῶα 1140 οὐρανοῦ...κρέοντι 33_3 Οὔριος 142 ff. 944 οὔριος 567_0 παγκρατής 10_4 Πάλαξος (?) 1140 Πανάμαρος 544_3 1066 Πάνδημος 212_2 Πάνδροσος 260 (?) Πανελλήνιος (? Hadrian) 422_0 Πανομφαῖος 320_4 1076 Πανόπτης 1086 πάνταρχος θεῶν 53_4 Παντεπόπτης 1086 παντόπτας 53_4 παντοτινάκτης 21_6 Πάσιος 1181 πάτερ (voc.) $471\,567_0\,737_8$ 947 949_2 964_2 Πατήρ 949_0 1060_7 (See also Βροντῶν) Πατρῷος 585_4 964_2 1125 1174 Πατρῷος (= Augustus) 1191 (See also Κτήσιος) Πειώλης 1111 Πελασγικός 560_6 1113 περίγειος 1066 Πολειαῖος (?) 575_8 Πολιαῖος (?) 575_8 Πολιάρχης 654_0 Πολιεύς 317 565 570 ff. 720 755 757 963 1194 πολυνεφέλας 35_8 Πόλωξος (?) 1140 Πορφυρίων (?) 55_5 Προμηθεύς (?) 1075 Σαβάζιος 874_{12} Σαλαμίνιος (?) 648_0 649_0 Σάραπις 973_0 σεισίχθων 21 Σημαλέος 267_6 Σκύλιος 413_0 1148 Σκύλλιος 413_0 414_0 416_0 1148 Σολιμεύς 1176 Σπάλαξος 1140 Σπλαγχνοτόμος 652_0 Στρατηγός 148 Συκάσιος 1184 σχινοκέφαλος 32_5 Σωσίπολις 239_1 $593_{(3)}$ 604_7 Σωτήρ 563 575_9 654_0 659_0 1163 1177 1181 1184 1196 (See also Δουσάρης) σωτήρ 35_7 Ταργυηνός 651_0 652_0 Τέλειος 609 948_{16} 949_0 1060_7 Τελεσιουργός 1192 Τεράστιος 939 Τμάριος 1168 τὸν βίου καὶ ζωῆς καὶ συμπάντων δοτῆρα τῶν ἀγαθῶν 963_2 τοῦ κατ' ἄστρα Ζηνός 1112 Τρεφώνιος or Τροφώνιος 269_7 1182 Τροπαιοφόρος 1117 Τροφώνιος 1182 (See also Τρεφώνιος) τύραννος 1102 Τέτιος 319_1

Zeus (cont.)
320_4 531 561 ff. 561_5 873 944 ὑέτιος 473_2 Ὕης (Ὑῆς?) 873 f. 944 Ὑναρεύς 1177 Ὕπατος 531 945 964_2 ὑψίζυγος 743_9 ὑψιμέδων 1115 ὑψινεφής 35_7 Ὕψιστος 939_4 945 1162 ff. Φαλακρός (Φάλακρος) 321_0 Φάτνιος 1126 Φειδιακός 966 Φίλιος 951 963 1189 1191 (See also Ἐπιτέλειος) φίλος 317_4 319_2 Φύξιος 963 φυτάλιος 21_6 Φύτιος 1071 Χαλάζιος 944 Χαλάζιος Σώζων 880 f. *Χειρογόνος 99_0 (?) χρυσόμορφος 456_0 Ὡρομάσδης 951

Festivals: Bouphonia (See Rites: βουφόνια) Dia 320_4 Diisoteria 575_9 Διὸς βοῦς (See Rites) Dipolieia 317 574 ff.

Rites: βοηγία 563 βουφόνια 570 576 ff. 873 Διὸς βοῦς 564 Διὸς κώδιον 602_7 1081 ὁ διὰ κόλπου θεός 775_6 human sacrifice to Iupiter Hospes (Zeus Xénios) at Amathous in Kypros 653_0 human sacrifice to Zeus at Lyttos 525 human sacrifice to Zeus in Kypros 652_0 human sacrifice to Zeus Atabýrios in Rhodes and Sicily 525 human sacrifice to Zeus Ithomátas in Messene 525 human sacrifice to Zeus Kretagenés (Marnas) at Gaza 554 f. human sacrifice to Zeus Laphýstios in Thessaly and Boiotia 525 human sacrifice to Zeus Lýkaios in Arkadia 267 525 1068 human sacrifice to Zeus Ómbrios at Elis 267 525 f. libation of honey to Zeus Éndendros in Paros 1173 monthly banquet in sanctuary of Zeus Hýpsistos 1163 procession of goat leading priest 569 procession of rainmakers clad in sheep-skins 31 f. 68 f. rain-magic 314 ff. sacrifice of bull to Zeus Ólbios 630 sacrifice of bull, ram, he-goat, boar etc. to Zeus Hyétios, according to wealth of donor 318 563 sacrifice of ox representing Zeus Polieús 606 sacrifice of ox to Zeus Sotér 22 sacrifice of pig to Zeus Heraíos 1047 sacrifice of sixty rams to (Zeus) Machaneús 566_2 sacrifice of sheep to Zeus Hórios 1183 sacrifice of she-goat to Zeus in Crete 1110 sacrifice of self-chosen goat 569 sacrifice of self-chosen ox 581 ff. sacrifice of white bull by Bektashi monks on Mt Tomori near Berat 1171 ὑδροφόροι pour water over axe and knife at Dipolieia 317 583 604

Priests: P. Aelius Aristeides 872 ἀρχιερεὺς καὶ συμποσιάρχης τῶν ἱερέων 1112 ἀρχιερεὺς μέγας 642_1 645_0 βούτης 589 f. (?) βουτύπος 585 ff. at Corycian Cave 651_0 βουφόνος 583 586 ζακόρος 155_1 155_2 ἱερεύς 155_1 155_2 ἱερεὺς διὰ βίου 1176 κλειδοῦχος 155_1 of Zeus ἐν Ἁλλαδίῳ drawn from Bouzygai 609

Zeus (cont.)
of Zeus Téleios drawn from Bouzygai 609 τομοῦροι (τόμουροι) 1168 ὑποφῆται 1168 Φαιδρυνταί 967 Priestesses: ὑδροφόροι 583 603
Worshippers: Ἔρμαισταί, Ἀπολλωνιασταί, Ποσειδωνιασταί 155 ἱερόδουλοι 648_0
Personated by Aeolian kings 141 Alexander the Great 540_0 alytarch of Olympian games at Antiocheia on the Orontes 562_3 Antiochos i of Kommagene 951 (?) Antoninus Pius 1130 Augustus 1125 1191 Caligula 969_1 Caracalla 37_6 Commodus 37_6 dead man $309_{1\,(2)}$ Demetrios Poliorketes 1115 Domitian 37_6 early Greek kings 733 Epopeus (?) 1112 Geta 37_6 hierophant $301_{0\,(3)}$ Ixion 141 Keyx 141 Nero 1117 Perikles 32_5 66_4 Pisthetairos 21 59 f. priestly king at Stratonikeia 568 (?) Roman emperors 537_0 537_1 Salmoneus 141 Trajan (?) 1191
Myths: adoption of Dionysos by simulated birth from himself 89_1 adoption of Herakles by simulated birth from Hera 89_1 Aiolos 106 f. Aix 839_6 840_0 Amphion 54_2 as infant entrusted by Rhea to Themis, by Themis to Amaltheia, by Amaltheia to her goat 839_6 as infant guarded by sword-dance of Kouretes and Korybantes 1070 Asterie 984 f. at first tries in vain to learn Prometheus' secret 740 f. at last succeeds in learning Prometheus' secret 741 bestows his intended bride Thetis upon Peleus 741 f. birth of Dionysos 79 ff. blinds Lykourgos, s. of Dryas 228_3 born on Mt Tmolos 562 carries off Hera from Euboia to Boiotia 1042 cleaves cloud in Crete and so produces Athena 727 comes to 'anchorage' at Hermione 1043 consorts with a succession of seven wives listed by Hesiod as —— Metis, Themis, Eurynome, Demeter, Mnemosyne, Leto, Hera 744_1 Aigina d. of Asopos 1121 f. Alkmene 506 ff. 518 Antiope 467 469 615_3 Danaë 455 ff. 518 944 Demeter $301_{0\,(3)}$ $744_{1\,(4)}$ Deo or Demeter 615_3 Europe 469 615_3 Eurynome $744_{1\,(3)}$ Ge Thémis 949 Hera 35 58 65 111 111_1 180 $744_{1\,(7)}$ 1025 ff. Himalia 477 518 Io 615_3 Leda 462_1 467 469 Leto $744_{1\,(6)}$ 1042 Metis $744_{1\,(1)}$ Mnemosyne $744_{1\,(5)}$ Myrike 1111 Othreïs 246 Pasiphae 615_3 Selene 179 f. 1111 Themis $744_{1\,(2)}$ 1064 f. contends with Poseidon for Aigina 751_1 courts Hera for three hundred years 1025 creates the world anew inside himself 745 deposes Kronos 966 Dionysos sewn up in thigh of Zeus 79 Διὸς ἀπάτη 35 180 924 1065 Διὸς θᾶκοι καὶ πεσσοί (ψῆφοι) $600_{(4)}$ 757_1 division of the world between the sons of Kronos 34 drinks of Nile and begets Ares 344_3 Endymion 74 expelled in infancy by Kronos 1187 extinguishes pyre by timely rain 506 ff. fights with Typhon 191_0 flays the goat Amaltheia and wears its skin 839 flings Hephaistos down to Lemnos 235 Ganymedes 469 955_7 981 f. gets aigis from Hephaistos 866 f. Gigantes 792_2 966 gives cup to Alkmene 507_5 hangs up Hera with ákmones fastened to her feet 924 head cleft by Hephaistos 660 f. head cleft by Hermes 661 head cleft by Palamaon 661 head cleft by Prometheus 661 hidden from Kronos in Crete 953 Iasion 75 f. Io 631 ff. 1082 Ixion 74 f. leaps upon Phanes and swallows him 745 lends aigis to Apollon 314_3 lends thunderbolt to Athena 868 Leucadian rock 941_1 Metis 567_0 nursed by Hyades (?) 1082 Meteres in Crete 225_1 Peleiades (?) 1082 nurtured by bears 953 doves 975 prince slain by wild boar and buried in Crete 1070 rains ambrosia at birth of Dionysos 477 500 rains blood before battle between Achaeans and Trojans 478 rains blood before death of Sarpedon the Lycian 323 478 rains blood before single fight between Herakles and Kyknos 478 f. rains golden snow at birth of Athena 477 670 719 rains golden snow at wooing of Alkmene 477 507 rains stones to help Herakles fighting Ligurians 483 492 rains wine etc. in Utopia 500 Salmoneus 141 966 Semele 82_3 swallows Metis 727_3 728 743 f. 942 swallows Phanes 745 942 taught by Cretan Olympos 321_0 threatens to flog Hera 924 Titanes 478_0 839 966 Typhoeus 615_3 Typhon 1135 visits Hera clandestinely 1025 f. woos Thetis 741 f.
Metamorphosed into Amphitryon 507 f. bull 469 615 ff. 628 cash 466 f. coins, chains, rings, trinkets 467 cuckoo 63_6 1043 dew 180 261 eagle 981 1122 (?) Eros 974 1129 golden rain 455 golden snow 477 518 rain 477 Satyr 467 469 1111 swan 63_6 467 469
Genealogy: s. of Kronos 34 ancestor of Danaïdes 142 reputed f. of Aëthlios the s. of Aiolos 107 f. of Apollon and Artemis by Leto $744_{1\,(6)}$ f. of Ares after drinking of Nile 344_3

Zeus (cont.)
f. of Athena by Metis $744_{1(1)}$ adopts Athena, d. of Poseidon by lake Tritonis 128_1 f. of Basileia (?) $60_{5(2)}$ f. of Britomartis by Hekate (?) 544_4 f. of Charites 955 f. of the Charites (Aglaïa, Euphrosyne, Thalia) by Eurynome $744_{1(3)}$ f. of Dike by Themis 823 f. of the first three Dioskouroi (Tritopatreus, Eubouleus, Dionysos) by Persephone 120 f. of Erichthonios by Ge 236 f. of Hebe, Ares, Eileithyia by Hera $744_{1(7)}$ f. of Hebe 724 f. f. of Herakles by Alkmene w. of Amphitryon 506 f. of Herakles by Hera 92_0 (?) f. of Herse 261 f. of Herse by Selene 179 f. f. of the Horai (Eunomia, Dike, Eirene) and the Moirai (Klotho, Lachesis, Atropos) by Themis $744_{1(2)}$ f. of Iasion by Elektra 77_4 f. of Megaros (Megareus) 1165 f. of Meilichos by Myrike 1111 f. of Meliteus by nymph Othreïs 246 f. of Minos and Rhadamanthys by Europe 627_1 f. of Minos, Sarpedon, and Rhadamanthys by Europe 628_0 f. of the Muses by Mnemosyne $744_{1(5)}$ f. of Persephone by Demeter $744_{1(4)}$ f. of Perseus by Danaë 455 f. of Sarpedon the Lycian 478 f. of Spartaios, Kronios, Kytos by Himalia 478_0 f. of Tantalos 417_0
Functions: agriculture 526 f. air 180 322_2 aithêr 1046_5 ancient king 120 chthonian $309_{4(2)}$ 1160 (?) clouds 30 ff. 943 1171 common Father and Saviour and Keeper of mankind 963 974 contriver 567_0 cosmic lord 948 creator of the universe 964 974 1179 dew 165 ff. 236 261 ff. 261_1 265 944 earthquakes 1 ff. 20 ff. 943 1163 etesian winds 142 266 favouring wind 141 ff. fertility 656 fire 234 fire in heaven 234 foam 272 ff. giver of himself to men 961 giver of livelihood and life and all good things 963 guardian of thémistes 949 hail 868 875 ff. head of Hellenic pantheon 943 honey-dew 500 law of nature 950 magician 31 567_0 743 marriage-god 609 948_{16} 1060_7 meteorites 881 ff. 944 mills 1125 mind of man 950 moon 943 north wind 161 not ab initio the husband of Hera 744_1 1025 1065 oaths (See witness of oaths) orders the constellations 1112 pantheistic 745 947 1129 patron of arts 567_0 patron of law and order 949 peace and harmony 963 protector of the bloodguilty 951 protector of boundaries 1183 protector of suppliants and strangers 951 f. providence 946 1197 rain 31 284 ff. 314 ff. 319 ff.
Zeus (cont.)
451 ff. 525 601 f. 868 873 f. 944 sky 942 943 sky-god 943 1092 stars 943 953 storm 65 storm-winds 868 sun 943 945 953 1071 the supreme spirit 728 (?) transition from sky to sky-god 943 tyrant 1102 universe or universal soul 727 weather 519 943 welfare 630 west wind 162 whirlwinds 162 f. wind 103 ff. 157 944 (See also etesian winds, favouring wind, north wind, storm-winds, west wind, whirlwinds) witness of oaths 245_{10} 946 1140 1148
Etymology: 320 (?) 322_0 (?) 746 (?) 947 f. (?)
Attributes: aigis 314 533 ff. Athena 548 chitón 628 chlamýs 517_0 cock 1043_0 corn-ears 1126 double axe 604 f. eagle 571 573 elephant 545 ff. globe 1112 golden bay (?)-wreath 464 grapes 1125 f. long sceptre 36 464 543 548 Nike 321_0 nimbus 36 oak-tree 522_{10} (?) 568 569 881 (?) oak-wreath 36 537 f. 871_1 1033 (?) 1191 olive-wreath 685_2 (?) owl 794 palm 545 f. panther 569_5 phiále 676_0 plough 1125 pomegranate 817_0 radiate nimbus 1112 reddish violet himátion 464 sceptre tipped with eagle 1040 1048_4 1057 1060 sceptre tipped with forepart of winged horse 665_3 sceptre tipped with Janiform head 686 sceptre tipped with ram's head 665_1 short sceptre 649_0 snake 1159 spear 21_4 1147 sword 1142 throne with back ending in swan's head 667_2 throne with seat resting on small carved figure or group 667_2 thunderbolt 36 926 945 f. thýrsos 685_2 two snakes 1184 two thunderbolts 946 veil 88_0 1033 wedding-ring 1033 winged thunderbolt 465
Types: argòs líthos 939_1 941 as a bull bearing off Europe 615 ff. as a bull emerging from sea 980 as conceived by Alexander the Great 933_8 beardless 638_0 (?) 1155 birth of Dionysos on bullae 88_0 birth of Dionysos on coin 88_0 birth of Dionysos on mirrors 86_5 birth of Dionysos in reliefs $83_{4(1\,f.)}$ birth of Dionysos on vases $80_{2(3-6)}$ Borghese head 1154 f. bovine 656 bronze statue from Artemision (?) 1151 ff. bust holding grapes and corn-ears 1125 f. bust shouldering thunderbolt or sceptre 542 bust with eagle on right shoulder 1160 bust with large garland round head 1160 carrying infant Dionysos 1107 colour of hair 1066 Dionysiac (See Assimilated to Dionysos) driving chariot 1076 enthroned en face $676_{(3)}$ enthroned with globe as footstool 948 Eukleides of Athens 1107 f.

Zeus (cont.)
fair-haired 36 Falerio 535 537 fighting Centaur 1142 fighting Giant 844_{10} 845_0 fighting Porphyrion 534 1148 fighting Typhon (?) 191_0 1142 head in Hermitage 964_4 head from Mylasa 964 head at Vienna 964_4 Hellenistic cameos 537 f. holding lots (?) 1181 horned head with long rough hair 655_0 656_0 Hybristas 1150 in archaistic relief from Thasos 1155 f. in archaistic reliefs of the Twelve Gods 1055 ff. in chariot drawn by two eagles 324 830 1136 in labour 82_3 in labour, helped by Eileithyiai 662 ff. infant 556_6 infant seated on globe surrounded by stars 948 Jacobsen head 964_4 Kyrene 534 f. Leochares 570 573 like Alexander the Great 540_0 marble statuette at Lyons 1155 obscene (?) 1027_5 on horseback 568 Otricoli 538_0 964_4 pantheistic 1129 Pheidias 954 ff. 1155 1196 Pheidias' masterpiece, as described by Dion Chrysostomos 961 ff. Pompeii 538_0 pot 1114 pre-Pheidiac cult-image at Olympia (?) 958_4 959_0 pre-Pheidiac figure of Zeus Lýkaios 1155 f. progressive senescence 739_3 pursuit of Aigina d. of Asopos 1121 f. reclining amid clouds 36 recumbent with globe and sceptre on eagle's back 1112 riding in bridal procession with Hera 389_1 seated beside Hera as bridegroom and bride 1027 f. seated between Ganymedes and eagle 469 seated between two bulls with thunderbolt 1097 seated on cloud 37 f. 39 seated on rocky throne 1033 seated on throne with Sphinx as arm-rest 1034 1035 1036_1 seated towards left (unusual) 667 670_3 686 seated towards right (usual) 663 ff. seated with Athena seated beside him 1049_1 seated with Athena in his right hand and long sceptre and palm in his left 548 seated with Athena standing on his knees 663 681 ff. seated with Dionysos standing on his knees 685_2 seated with eagle in hand 694_1 seated with gesture of prophylaxis and long sceptre 548 f. seated with Hekate in his right hand and spear or long sceptre in his left 544 seated with Hera seated behind him 1048 seated with Hera seated beside him 1048 f. seated with Hera seated en échelon 1053 seated with Hera seated facing him 1049 ff. seated with Hestia seated facing him 1050_0 1065 seated with phiále in right hand, sceptre in left, and owl before or beside him 794 seated with sceptre in easy attitude 1053 seated with sceptre in right hand and eagle on left 695_4

Zeus (cont.)
seated with thunderbolt in lowered right hand and sceptre in raised left 657 ff. seated yet hurling thunderbolt 1136 semi-bovine 656 standing beside cone of Aphrodite Paphía 650_0 standing in attitude of oriental slackness 542 standing in front of standing Athena 1057 standing to front with brandished thunderbolt and sceptre 542 standing to right, nude, with lowered bolt 571 f. standing to right, nude, with lowered bolt and phiále (?) held over altar 572 f. standing with gesture of prophylaxis and long sceptre 543 standing with Hekate in his right hand and spear or long sceptre in his left 544 standing with kálathos on head and Mt Argaios in left hand 1177 standing with phiále in right hand, short sceptre in left, and eagle on wrist 649_0 standing with thunderbolt and sceptre 540 ff. striding to left with thunderbolt and aigís 532 f. striding to right, nude, with brandished bolt 570 f. striding to right with bolt and bird 1150 1157 Stroganoff bust 1174 surrounded by zodiac 948 1112 tauromorphic 630 wears aigís in Homer and once on an Ionian vase, but not again till Hellenic gives place to Hellenistic art 867 winged 1129 with bovine horns 630 with brow furrowed by thought 946 with dark hair but grey beard 669 733 with eagle on head 46 with head radiate 541_1 542 546 548 with oak-wreath and aigís on Alexandrine and later cameos 537 f. 1191 1194 with rain falling from his hand 323 f. with ram's horns and kálathos on head 912_4 with ram's horns and solar disk on head 912_4 with the features of Augustus 1191 with white hair 733_5 734_0 1078 wreathed with oak 871_1 youthful 464 466 (?) 550 556 youthful figure holding pomegranate 817_0
Identified with Adad 945 Amen-Rā 882_2 945 Ammon 945 Aramaean god 'Qaçiu 884_0 Aristaios 267 f. 270 Ba'al-hammân 945 Ba'al-šamin 945 Ba'al Zaphon 1177 the Devil 655_0 (?) Dike 951 Dionysos 1126 Dousares 912 Helios 1071 Indra 531 540 545 Jehovah 945 Marnas 551 553_1 555 Mithras 945 Neilos 348 f. 524 1077 Nomos 951 Mt Olympos 321_0 rain 451 f. Ramman 945 Roman emperors (See Personated by) Sabazios 945 Sarapis 945 Tarku 651_0 Themis 951
Assimilated to Dionysos 685_2
Associated with Aphrodite 1086 Apollon

Zeus (cont.)
1160 f. 1174 Astarte Παλαιστίνη and Aphrodite Οὐρανία 152_6 153 f. Athena 872 f. Athena Ζωστειρία 567_0 Athena Μαχανίς 566_2 Demeter 1124 Demeter and Kore 1124 Demos 654_6 Enhodia 279 f. Gaia 526_8 (?) Ge and Helios 1184 Hekate 544_3 544_4 1066 Helios 1184 Hera 745 958 Hermes 1071 Hestia 1050_0 1052_1 1125 Kybele and Attis 1174 Livia 1078 (?) Milichie 1187 Moirai 721_4 Muses 1165 Poseidon and Hades 6 1157 (?) Sarapis 1148 Thetis 742 f.
Compared with Christ 954 Hades 1189 νοῦς 747_2 Uther 509_2 Ziu 165
Contrasted with Pheidias and Polykleitos 964
In relation to boar 1148 Charites 1057 Dike 949 ff. Diomos 595_0 Eros 1129 Hera 633_0 Horai 1057 Jehovah 1177 Moirai 1057 oaths 1148 Pandrosos 260 f. Poseidon 20 the problem of evil 974 Prometheus 1075 rain 319 ff. Skylla 1148 wren 52_4
Supersedes a proto-Hellenic mountain divinity 730_8 Poseidon 21 Superseded by Abbas Ali (?) 1168 ff. St Athanasios (?) 1187 St Constantine 1166 St Elias 1167 Gordios 1162 Hephaistos 188 St Michael 277_2 (?)
—— accouchement of 662 ff. amours of 467 469 948 baityloi dedicated to 889 belt of 1167 (?) birth of, as dance-theme 935_3 blue-black eyebrows of 1066 chronique scandaleuse of 948 clouds of 35 cups inscribed ΔΙΟΣ ΣΩΤΗΡΟΣ 1184 decline in worship of 966 earliest representation of 1192 (?) eye of 1071 finger of, inscribed Παντάρκης καλός 955_7 (?) fleece of 1081 garden of 746 1062 gold tresses stolen from head of Zeus Olympios 969 cp. 966 goodness of 961 guild of Zeus Hypsistos in Egypt 1163 f. horses of 1064_4 in Orphic theogony 1177 ff. in the plural (Ζᾶνες) 1130 in the plural (Ζῆνες) 1130 jar of 108 jars of 1181 largest extant statue of 558 list of Zeus-cults in or near Athens 1196 love towards 1189 love-gifts of 638_0 miracle of Zeus Panámaros 1066 moral stability of 948 ff. name of, misspelt by Megarian (?) vase-painter 671_3 nuptial bed of $59\ 60_3$ nurturing dews of 265_1 603 on the theologeion 518_3 rain the child of 322 rain the seed of 451 ff. rain the tears of 322 f. rain the urine of, passed through sieve 333 rain as 'Zeus-drops' (Δία ψακάς) 451 rain as 'Zeus-water' (Ζήνιον ὕδωρ) 322_0 451_6 rays of 1066 1077 road of 51_0 946 cp. 974 scale of Pheidias' statue at Olympia criticised 965 scales of 1150 sceptre of 45 58 1184 sickle of 1135 sneeze of 662_1 (?) 732 (?) spear of 21_4 59_3 statue of Zeus Olympios struck by lightning 968 statue of Zeus Olympios removed to Byzantion 969 f. statue of Zeus Olympios finally burnt in the Lauseion 970 surviving influence of the statue of Zeus Olympios 970 superannuation of 739 ff. tablets of 950_1 teachers of 321_0 (Olympos) 323_2 (Korybantes) tears of 322 323 323_2 temple of, at Salamis in Kypros, called Διὸς ἀσφάλεια 646_0 f. thémistes of 949_2 throne of, at Olympia 956_1 tomb of, at Anogeia 1070 tomb of, on Mt Juktas 1173 tomb of, near Mt Tmolos (?) 562_3 touch of, restores Io 633_0 trumpet of 729_4 ubiquity and helpfulness of 947 974 vicissitudes experienced by statue of Zeus Olympios 967 ff. waggon of 1162 (?) whip of 1160 will of 947 world-significance of 973 f.
Zeus, the planet 34_2
Zeusis, a Lydianised form of Zeus 1128
Zio See Ziu
Ziu
Personated by Commodus 1100
Function: whirlwind 163_3 164 f. (?)
Compared with Zeus 165
Zizyma, dedication to ΙΥΩ ΔΙΟΝΥCΩ at 1126
Zoroastres 1115
Zywye, the Old Slavonic cuckoo-god 64_0

Fig. 932.

Zeus Olýmpios
on a bronze coin of Athens (Brit. Mus. Cat. Coins Attica p. 104 no. 754 pl. 18, 4, E. Beulé Les monnaies d'Athènes Paris 1858 p. 396 fig., Imhoof-Blumer and P. Gardner Num. Comm. Paus. iii. 137 f. pl. BB, 4, J. N. Svoronos Les monnaies d'Athènes Munich 1923—1926 pl. 92, 1 Athens, 2 London) representing the chryselephantine copy of Pheidias' statue set up by Hadrian in the Olympieion (Paus. 1. 18. 6).

INDEX II

SUBJECTS AUTHORITIES

The larger numerals refer to pages, the smaller numerals to foot-notes.

Abaddir as name of Kronos' stone 936 as name of Mauretanian god 937_0 etymology of 937_6
Ábata of Tritopatreis 114 of Zeus Kataibátes 1115
Abbott, G. F. 257_1 289 292
Abercromby, Hon. J. 446_4
Accouchement 663
Adcock, F. E. 188_3 1140
Addison, J. 466_8
Adler, Frau 569_5 871_1
Adoption, primitive, by pretended birth from father 89_1
Ádyta of Athena at Pellene 238_3 of Bel at Palmyra 1159 of Marnas at Gaza 553 of Orpheus at Lesbos 100 of Zeus at Nemea 1083 ff.
Aér 68 161 726_6
Aetites, the eagle's stone 792_2
Agnus castus as antiaphrodisiac 1031 as aphrodisiac 1031 flogging of slave at Chaironeia with rods of 1031_5 flogging of Spartan youths with rods of 1031_5 statue of Artemis at Ephesos made of 968_1 (?) statue of Asklepios Agnítas at Sparta made of 1030_4 the willow of Hera at Samos 1028 f. young married couples in Greece wear wreath of 1032_1 (?)
Agrenón 1121
Agriculture as an evocatio of earth-powers to help farmer 202_0 f. deities of 526 f. 561 f.
Agyieús-pillars 1120
Aigís of primitive pre-warlike Athena 189_1 (?) of Athena 837 ff. of Athena a skin-cape either scaly or feathered as being the exuviae of her former animal self, either Snake or Owl 837 ff. 842 844 866 of Athena as shield 843_3 of Athena decorated with sun (?), moon, and stars 805 of Athena derived from fringed goat-skins of Libyan women 838 f. (?) 841_3 (?) of Athena transferred to Zeus 866 f. of rustic a cloak of goat-skin 837_{10} 841_1 shaken by Zeus causes storm 314 taken by priestess of Athena to home of newly married couple 225_2 841_3 worn and used by Apollon 866
Aithér in relation to aér 68 943 equated with Athena 727 728 Hera suspended by Zeus in 924 wraith made of 78
Aíthyia as form of Athena 782 f. as lightning-bird 792 f.
Ákmon 924 ff.
Akrotéria, disks in terra cotta as 1074 groups in terra cotta as 1186
Alföldi, A. 973_0
Alford, Miss V. 1080 1090 1130
Alíbantes 369_3
Allcroft, A. H. 1120
Allegory 227_3 235 f. 418_0 452 726 ff. 747
Allen, T. W. 141_3
Allinson, F. G. 1047_7
Altar and base in earliest Artemision at Ephesos 1138 approached by two snakes $1062_{2(1)}$ as object of cult 1091 f. at Delos called εὐσεβῶν βωμός 593_2 octagonal, at Fîkî or Fâkyé 1095 of Aphrodite Ἐρυκίνη 'covered with dew and fresh grass' 174 of Apollon at Delos 1087 1172 of Apollon Delphínios at Dreros 1087 of Dis in Tarento 1115 of Elagabalos at Emesa 902_0 of Liber Pater in Thrace 1118 of Mater deum on Tiber-side 895 f. of Venus 518 of Zeus Herkeîos at Athens 749 759 of Zeus Litaíos at Nikaia 1184 of Zeus Meilíchios at Hiera Syke 1184 of Zeus Polieús at Athens 573 755 757 1194 taurobolic 66_2 with remains of last offering on it $1062_{2(2)}$
Altars, combination of trápeza with bomós 580_0 horned in Delos etc. 1091 of Dionysos 580_0 of Zeus Lýkaios 580_0 of Zeus Polieús 580_0 in Erechtheion 213_3 758 f. on bastion of Athena Níke 1196
Altheim, F. 1112 f. 1147
Alviella, Count Goblet d' $302_{0(5)}$
Aly, W. 414_0 1092
Amann, J. 1179
Amazonomachy 955 956 f.
Amber, double axes of 1143
Amber routes 1136 f.
Ambrosía, etymology of 497 identified with honey 496 f. brought by doves to Zeus 975 given by Ganymedes to eagle 981 f. rained by Zeus at birth of Dionysos 477 500
Amelung, W. 537_1 689_3 1036_1 1060
Amethyst cameo 851_3 in hail-charm 876
Amphisbaina 765_4
Amphithalés 1181
Amulets 538_0 765 f. 1142

Ancey, G. 732 1179
Anchor, leaden, inscribed Zeus Κάσι(ο)ς Σώζ[ων] 1177
Ancilia 903_5
Anderson, J. G. C. 1140
Androgynous deities, Egyptian, Greek, Semitic, etc. 1146 Phanes 745 Zeus (Ζεὺς ἄρρην, Ζεὺς θῆλυς) 726_6
Anemos, a synonym of the Devil 164
Angelini, C. 351
Animal names given to priests and priestesses 1082 f.
Animals dreaded and appeased after death $600_{(3)}$ formerly neither sacrificed nor eaten 590
Animal-skin as cloak in peace and shield in war 841_1 cp. 983 retained by anthropomorphic deity as covering charged with animal-virtues 837 worn by worshippers 1104 wrapped round effigy of Athena 841 (?)
Animism 227_9 942 943
Ankh as man's girdle-tie 833_0 as sandal-straps 833_0 as sign of procreation 833_0
Ankylométes 928_7
Antefixes with head of Io 635_0 with head of Zeus Ammon 1076 with horned head surmounted by wheel 1074 (?)
Anthropogony of Hesiod 481 of Orphists 481 (?)
Anthropomorphic and theriomorphic representations of deity simply juxtaposed 831
Anthropomorphic conception of Athena emerges gradually from ornithomorphic conception 794 deity retains old animal-skin as covering charged with animal-virtues 837
Anthropomorphic superior to theriomorphic representations of deity 962
Antithetic grouping of animal figures in Mesopotamian, Cretan, and later art 1122
Ants transformed into men (Myrmidones) 608_2
-aos, -aus, as suffix in Illyrian names 364_8
Aparché of young potter 787
Aparchai due to Demeter Chlóe at Athens 178_0 stored in underground granaries at Eleusis $301_{0(4)}$ See also First-fruits
Aphlaston 159_0 1177
Aplestos pithos, the holed jar in Hades into which the souls of the uninitiated must empty their broken pitchers 399_6
Apotheosis by caldron 1080 1104 by eagle 1097 by lightning 1080 1114 by water 137_0 298 1076
Apotrópaia 158_7 158_8 255_0 f. 538_0 765 f. 802 ff. 822 835 846 921 1119
Apple as love-gift 269_1 as 'orb of dominion' 1067
Apples, bough of golden, given by Ge to Hera 1064 of Hesperides 1019 (See also Apple-tree) of immortality 1170 f.
Apple-juice impregnates Phanuel's thigh $97_{0(5)}$
Apple-tree as conventional background 617_0 in south-European folk-tales 420_0 of Hesperides 1064 (See also Apples) of silver in Celtic mythology 420_0 421_0 on Mt Tomori near Berat 1170 f.
Aquaelicium 432_9
Aquae manale, aquimanile, aquiminarium 435 1194
-ar- as suffix in pre-Greek names 1111 1113
Ara Albani 1060 f. Borghese 1057 f. Capitolina 933 f.
Arbois de Jubainville, H. d' 367_0
Arch, triumphal, its original character and purpose 1131 (bibliography)
Argeïphóntes 1132
Ark inscribed NOË on coins of Apameia in Phrygia 528 f.
Arndt, P. 689_3
Arrhephóroi 165 ff. route taken by, at Athens 168_3
Art-type of combat modified to express litigation 754 presupposes definite belief and often definite cult 668 presupposes some warrant in earlier literature or art and may ultimately be traced back to remote religious conception (e.g. Hellenistic deity in chariot drawn by sacred animals, Hellenic deity riding on sacred animal, Anatolian deity standing on sacred animal) 831
Arvanitopoullos, A. S. 277 279 f. 1080 1114 1157 1161
Ashby, T. 435 444_0 444_2 444_4 1172
'Ashērim in relation to Maṣṣebhoth 910 cp. 1092
Ashmole, B. 968_3
Ash-tree of Odhin's steed, Yggdrasil 404_0
Ash-trees, men of Bronze Age sprung from 481
Asphodel 416
Ass, of Vesta $1062_{2(1)}$ sacrificed to the Winds at Tarentum 105 f.
Asses sacrificed to Apollon among the Hyperboreoi 106_1 skins of, made into bags to catch wind 105
Astragalomanteïa 1157
Astrology at Alexandreia 346_0 cp. 913_4 914_0 in early Greece 1112
Athanulus, clay vessel, perhaps fetish of Athena 191_8
Atkinson, B. F. C. 7_2 8_0 164_5 364_8 748_5 1173
Aubrey, J. 738_0
Audin, A. 896 896_3
Aust, E. 1155
'Autocastration' 1174
Autran, C. 1141
Avezou, C. 1134 1162
Axe, double, Mesopotamian prototype of 1138 of flint 926_2 of bronze 926_3 in relation to Labyrinth 1141 (bibliography) in post-Cretan times 1138 from

Axe, double (cont.)
Athens with Hallstatt decoration 605 1076 1145 f. in mosaic at Olynthos 1073 on coins of Tenedos 789_2 of Daidalos 1111 of Epeios 1141 f. of Hephaistos 125_3 200 235 477 670 729 738 of Ikaros 1111 of Kronos 200 of Prometheus 125_3 729 of Sethlans $678_{(1)}$ of Tereus 1147 of Zeus 604 f. as lineal ancestor of double lance (λάβρυς > Georgian laḫvari) 1141
Axes, double, of amber 1143 of bronze 1143 of bronze with incised designs 1143 ff. of gold 1143 carried by priest of Bellona 1142 imbedded in columns 1138 on capital of Iberian column 1138
Axe, holy 661
—— of the Bouphónos at Athens tried and acquitted 583 ff. of Hermes 661 of Sopatros 590 of Thaulon 596
—— small, from Caister-by-Norwich 1147 of Essene neophytes 1141
Axes of copper 1143 of silver 1143
Axe of stone ending in forepart of panther 1192
Axes backed by a bull 1142 blood-stained, in hail-charm 878 with animal heads 1142
Axe-hammer of blue or green stone 1142 f. with Sumerian inscription 926_3 Axe-shaped pendants from Benin etc. 1146
Axe-worship 1070
Axis of universe 946 974
Áxones 1183 f.
Aymard, A. 1114

Babelon, E. 802 1092
Bachelors after death bring sand from the Rhone in holed baskets 426_6
Bachofen, J. J. 89_1 99_0
Bachtin, N. 1161 1167
Bachtin, Mrs N. 1167
Bacon, Miss J. R. 360_3 978 1117
Bächtold-Stäubli, H. 503_0
Baethgen, E. 132_2
Bagnani, G. 535_1
Bahrfeldt, M. 802
Bailey, H. W. 916_1 925_3
Baityloi or Baitýlia as described by Damaskios 887 ff. 898 not sacred stones in general 887 holy stones endowed with the power of self-motion 887 either smallish meteorites or neolithic implements believed to have fallen from heaven 892 identified with meteorites 892_1 invented by Ouranos 887 dedicated to Kronos, Zeus, Helios, etc. 889 connected with baíte (?) 898_1 in relation to Bēthēl (?) 891
Bákchoi 723_0 724_0
Baker-Penoyre, J. ff. 1155
Balanos, N. 813_3 814_0 1196
Baldwin, Miss A. 261_7
Balfour, H. 1137
Bancroft, H. H. 475
Baptism, Christian, compared with Eleusinian bathe 297 f.
Barbazan, É. 501_3
Barbedette, L. 1117
Baring-Gould, S. $98_{6(6)}$ 338_1 472_3 523_4 1013 1102
Barley, gold ears of, from grave near Syracuse 307_0
Barnes, J. 420_0
Barnett, L. D. 1110
Barnett, R. D. 1068
Base, the Chigi 1122
Bases, distyle, at Delphoi 1131
Basket as cradle of Erichthonios 248 as cradle of Tithonos 248 Cabiric 993 of Europe 619_1 1092 Baskets, ritual, containing sexual emblems 993 (?) ritual, of Arrhephóroi 166_0 (?) See also Kálathos
Bassett, S. E. 261_7
Bates, Oric 1077
Bates, W. N. 1112 1121
Bath, bridal 224_3 (?) 370 ff. 388 f. 392_0 396 chthonian 393
Bathing in the sea as a rain-charm 1193
Baudrillart, A. 811_1
Bay-branch 99
Bay-tree of Apollon 269_1
Bay-wreath 99 with three medallions 1142
Bayfield, M. A. 1065
Beads, Mesopotamian, in shape of double axe 1138
Beans represent testicles 1032_0
Bean-field, idol thrown into, at Malta 1031_7
Beanstalk, Jack and the 1117
Bear as substitute for Iphigeneia 233_1 boy killed by 1124 Candlemas 1130 Megisto (=Kalliste) metamorphosed into 484 in myth of Polyphonte 57_3 Springtime 1130
'Bears,' human 1080
Bears' fat in hail-charm 878
Bear-mask 1068
Beazley, J. D. 184_4 202_0 668_4 669 684 f. 686 f. 702 ff. 710 797_4 807_3 931_6 1053 1111 1118 1132
Bechtel, F. 95_0 283 289_2
Beck, L. 919_4 923_1 924_1
Becker, W. A. 49_0
Bee guides hero in folk-tale from Syra 977
Bees as souls 1183 feed Meliteus 246 procreation of, from buried ox 1901 settle on lips of infant Platon 265_0
'Bees,' human 1083
Belemnites regarded as thunderbolts 884_0
Belger, C. 169_0 1183
Bell, A. W. 475_3
Bellucci, G. 875_1
Belon du Mans, P. 232_1
Belt of Zeus (?) 1167
Bendinelli, G. 136_0 136_2 688_1
Benndorf, O. 18_0 686_1 813_5
Bent, J. T. 642_1
Benton, Miss S. 1192
Béquignon, Y. 189_1 277
Berchmans, J. 1141

Berger, R. 971_0
Bergk, T. 78_2 614_5 729 f.
Bernays, J. 578_1 590_4
Bernhard 358
Bethe, E. 488 1135
Betwixt-and-between, e.g. a daimon neither mortal nor immortal 746
Beulé, E. 897 f.
Bevan, E. 1077
Beyen, H. G. 1151 f.
Bickel, E. 1115
Bicknell, C. D. 102_0 248_1 375_1 587_2 774 f. 797_1 849_2 1150
Bidental 1157
Bidez, J. 1115
Bieber, M. 734_0 738_1 1078 1108
Bieler, L. 1187
Biffen, Sir R. H. 307_0
Birch-broom a symbol of Donar 1072
Bird of Truth 844 speaking 844 understanding all languages (Dikjeretto) 844 977
Birds of fiery colouring appropriate as lightning-carriers 792 ff. of prey held to be full of celestial fire 791 ff. on the sceptres of early kings 67_2
Birt, T. 1155
Birth from arm $95_{3(2)}$ from arm-pit $98_{0(7)}$ from feet $98_{0(7)}$ from forehead $97_{0(4)}$ from hand $97_{0(4)}$ cp. 1101 from knee 1101 from leg $98_{0(6)}$ from side $96_{0(3)}$ $97_{0(4)}$ from thigh 79 ff. $95_{3(1\,f.)}$ $97_{0(5)}$ from top of head $97_{0(4)}$ 662_1 731 f. from ground 220 from rock 236_3 from stone 236_3 from father simulated as primitive rite of adoption 89_1 on harvest-field 77_3 of Aphrodite 274 of Athena (See Index I Athena Types) of Athena from head of Zeus exemplifies early requirements of royal succession 733 f. of Dionysos 79 ff. 1105 of Erichthonios 220 ff. 236 of iron 1100 f. of Mithras 236_3
Birthday of Artemis 178_0 of Athena 719 f. of Helios 915_3 of martyr on day of martyrdom 1105
Bissing, F. W. von 1193
Bitch suckles infant Zeus 414_0(?) suckles Kydon s. of Apollon 414_0(?)
Black bull sacrificed to Boubrostis 1156 mask with sheep's horns 1156 mediaeval Madonnas 897 pavement at Olympia, aesthetic effect of 958 pavement at Olympia, practical purpose of 967_2 stone of Dousares 907 917 stone of Emesa 900 ff. stone of Pessinous brought to Rome 893 ff. trident 1156
Blanchet, A. 441_6
Blegen, C. W. 526_3 1083
Blegen, E. P. 813_3 818_0
Bleicbsteiner, R. 1179
Blindness of Homer 77 of Stesichoros 77
Blinkenberg, C. 189_1 355_3
Bloch, L. 896_0
Blochet, E. 916_1
Blood, of Ouranos 481 rain of 478 ff.
Bloomfield, M. 273_3 274_0 410_0 ff.
Blue globe 441
Blümel, C. 1003
Blümel, R. 652_0
Blümner, H. 922_3 967 f.
Blum, G. 1183
Blumenthal, A. von 106_4
Boar as form of Sabazios (?) 875_0 in relation to Zeus 1148
Boat with stag's head as prow 1119
Boccaccio, G. 501_4
Bochart, S. 835_2 937_6
Boeckh, A. 1127
Bömer, F. 1194
Boisacq, E. 497_3 792_4
Boll, F. 401_1 491_2 492_6 914_0
Bolling, G. M. 69_2 596_6
Bolte, J. 449 977
Bones, fossil 3_0
Boni, G. 435 438
Bonner, C. 356_3 357_3 358 ff. 398_2 1120
Bosanquet, R. C. 248_1 1091
Bosch, C. 1172
Bosom-band of Danaë 463 of Nereid 134 fig. 53
Bossert, H. T. 1146
Bottles of Notos 335 f.
Bottle-shaped goddesses on coins of Asia Minor 899
Bottrell, W. 1142
Boundary-stones 114 177_1 441 725_4 1120 1181
Bouphônos 586 589 656
Boupléx 589 f. 606_3 661_9
Bourguet, É. 1131
Bourke, J. G. 476_1
Boutýpos 585 ff. 669
Bové, N. 760_0
Bowra, C. M. 1083
Boyancé, P. 137_0 1115
Brakman, C. 1112 f.
Brandenstein, W. 1105
Branding of galley on Samian slaves 791_0 of owl on Athenian slaves 790
Brandis, C. G. 366_4
Brauchitsch, G. von 574_0
Braun, E. 183 815_0
Breast of Hera sucked by Herakles 89_1 92_0 94_0 of maiden replaced by one of gold 1124 of Siren beaten in mourning $385_{0(d)}$ of Virgin Mary bared in last appeal 974_0
Breasts beaten before first corn-ears reaped $302_{0(6}$ cakes shaped like 580_0(?) held by mother-goddess $193_{(b)}$ of Anahita 'aux seins arrondis' (?) 916_1 of Aphrodite (Astarte?) pressed 1016 of Athena full and prominent 225_1 807 of St Barbara cut off 472_3 of Chaaboû 'Mädchen mit reifer, voller Brust' (?) 914_1 of St Christina cut off by order of Iulianus 1013 of Europe lit up by mysterious glow 625_0 of female figures bared in fifth-century Attic sculpture 698_6 of Helene bared in last appeal

Breasts (cont.)
1179 of Hera Parthénos displayed 1044_4 (?) of Hera Teleta covered 1044_4 (?) of Hestia virginal but prominent (πρόμαστος) 1107 of Hittite Mother of the gods 916_1 of Iphigeneia bared for sacrifice 699_0 of Manzan Görmö overflow and form Milky Way 1098 of Ukko's daughters overflow and form iron 1101 on model of Mt Argaios 1177 (?) outstanding on vases 193_0
Brendel, O. 1127 f. 1180
Bride or bridegroom ceremonially married to men and maidens who have died unwed 394
Brøndsted, P. O. 712
Broneer, O. 167_5 169_0 170 f. 1124
Bronze bull and acrobat from Crete 1091 cast by cire perdue method 1110 decorations of Argive thóloi 364 displaced by iron in late versions of the myth of Danaë 473_2 double axe of Hephaistos 200 477 670 'Ellopian' 485_0 (?) horse found by Gyges 1114 mace from Willingham Fen 1099 f. snakes from Pellana in Achaia 1187 statue fished up from sea off Artemision 1151 ff. table as altar 579_5 tree-trunk (bay?) at Delphoi 1121 underground chamber made by Akrisios for Danaë 364 455 wings of marble Minerva at Bulla Regia 825_5 with archaic figures of Artemis, Zeus, Athena 566_2
Browning, R. 868_5 952_7 974 1067
Bruce, J. D. 509_2
Brückner, A. 64_0 113 132 373
Brugmann, K. 95_0 792_4 976 f.
Brunn, H. $718_{0(5)}$
Bucher, P. 1076
Buckler, W. H. 1071 1125 1126 1191
Bucranium in pediment of temple 645_0 on altar, filleted 759_4 on coins of Athens 1194 on stêle, filleted 1148
Bucrania, two, with frontlets, above plough 1160 with festoon on Arretine mould 1003
Budge, Sir E. A. Wallis 345_1 832_5
Budimir, M. 112_3 121_1 123_5 128 140
Büchler, J. C. H. 164_5
Bugge, S. 259_0 f.
Bulas, K. 1081
Bull and acrobat in bronze from Crete 1091 as animal form of Zeus 615 ff. 628 as animal form of Zeus Olbios 631 as procreative power 945 as substitute for Iphigeneia 233_1 hung in tree for Athena at Ilion 283_4 monstrous, supports earth and causes earthquakes 3_0 of bronze dedicated on the Akropolis at Athens by council of Areiopagos 612 614 of bronze in bowl surrounded by millet 1101 of copper in Castle of Copper 1102 f. on coins of Selinous 614_5 ridden by earth-goddess 1125 sacrificed to Poseidon on pillar in Atlantis 283_4
Bull (cont.)
sent up from sea by Poseidon 628_1 solar 1032 1065 white, carries Europe 620_0 627_0 white, plays with Europe 622_0 $622_{(3)}$ white, sacrificed to Zeus by Bektashi monks on Mt Tomori near Berat 1171 with crescent moon on side 1101 with gilded horns 280 with rosette on forehead 1098 with six-rayed star on side 1101 with three horns 1099 1100 with trefoil marks on body and round spots (stars of the Great Wain) on shoulder and leg 1101
Bulls enclosing human victims 1114 sacrificed to Zeus 1110 wooden, in hail-charm 877
'Bulls,' cup-bearers of Poseidon called $599_{(3)}$
Bull-carrying 1091 1114
Bull-cult in Celtic lands 1102 in Iberia 1090 in Sardinia 1110 in Egypt, Mesopotamia, Asia Minor, Syria, Palestine, Phoinike, Crete, etc. 1101
Bull-fights of Basques 1090 of Cretans 601_0 1090 f. of Spaniards 1090
Bull-headed furnace at Byzantion 1102
Bull-headed gods from the Ḥaurân 1098
Bull-mask worn by votary or priest in Kypros 1068 1090
Bull's-hide, black, worn by 'Jack of the Hammer' 1142 of Argos, watcher of Io 837 See also Ox-hide
Bull-sports, 'Minoan' 569
Bull-standards of Egyptian nomes 884_0
Bullae of gold foil 88_0 1110 f. worn by Dionysos 88_0 worn by Eros 92_0
Bulle, H. 640_0 710 811_1 813_3 819_1 955_4 1196 f.
Bunbury, E. H. 493_2 1012 f.
Buonarroti, F. 133
Burckhardt, J. L. 919
Burgon, T. 788
Burial alive by Daunioi 365 palaeolithic 515_8 within the house in Greece 1181 within the house in Italy 1181
Burial-mounds (sîd) as underground palaces 367_3
Burkitt, M. C. 1147
Burney, S. 832
Burton, Sir R. F. 917_5 918 f. 920_1
Bury, J. B. 181_1
Buschor, E. 768 1027_5 1029_3 1029_8 1049_0 1142 1179
Buttmann, P. 528 727
Buzzard 58_0 (?)

Caclamanos, D. 767_2
Caduceus of unusual form 675
Cahen, E. 1087
Cahier, C. 338_1
Caillemer, E. $790_{1\,f.}$
Cakes, anástatoi 167 breast-shaped 580_0 pêlanos and pópanon 578_4 579_0 phallic (?) 167_5

Calder, W. M. 1071 1104 f. 1106 f. 1125 1126
Calderini, G. 330_0
Caldron of apotheosis 1080 1104
Caldrons with forty handles 315_2
Calendar, Babylonian 1135 from Koukounari 115 179_0 1183 from Mykonos 179_0
Calendar-frieze of Panagia Gorgoepékoos 588 602 604
Calf, wooden, of Druses 1092
Calza, G. 823
Cameron, A. 1160
Campana, G. P. 456_6
Caugue (xýlon, kýphon) 560
'Canopi' arranged in rows 346_0 carried by griffin 348_2 confronted 348 in shrine 348 of Isis 346 348_2 350 of Osiris 346 ff. of other Egyptian deities 346_0 set on cushions 346 upborne by eagle 348
'Canopic jars' at first with human heads 345_1 later with heads of the four children of Horos 345_1
Cantineau, J. 1112
Canting badge 1002
Capelle, P. 1115
Capelle, W. 2 1112
Capello, A. 341
Caramia, G. 950_4
Carcopino, J. 135_8 136_2 136_3
Carmina Burana 501_4
Carnoy, A. 1127 1140
Carolidis, P. 291_0
Carp with bitter stone in mouth 988 cp. 989
Carpenter, Rhys 689_3 689_6 690_0 690_1 705 705_1 717_2 $718_{0(9)}$
Carpenter, W. B. 140_7
Carrington, R. C. 1189
Carter, H. 305_0
Cary, M. 1132 1137 1184
Caryatids, 172_0 1008 (?)
Casson, S. 779 f. 1009 1044_1 1110 1118
Castle of Copper 1102 f.
Catalogue of the gods 120 843_0
Cauer, P. 227_0
Cave, C. J. P. 1133
Cave-sanctuaries at Arkalochori near Lyktos 1143 of Aglauros at Athens 169 f. 242 of Apollon Érsos at Vari 261_7 of Charis at Vari 261_7 of Eros and Aphrodite at Athens 169 ff. of Ge at Vari 265_0 (?) of Pan and the Nymphs on Mt Parnes 253_0 of Pan and the Nymphs at Vari 261_7 of Zeus Brontôn at Inönü in Phrygia 1160 (?) on Mt Pelion 1161 (?)
Ceiling of Babylonian palaces, Egyptian tombs, Mycenaean thóloi, Greek temples and porticos, Roman arches, temples, and palaces, etc. imitates sky 445_3 of temple-tomb at Knossos imitates sky 1187 of temple of Zeus at Olympia imitates sky (supra i. 751) 965 of Pantheon imitates sky 353_1 443 f.
Cerauniae 887
Cesnola, A. P. di 560
Chabas, F. 364
Chalazophýlakes 878 f.
Chalcedony 255_0 853_1
Chambers, E. K. 1104
Chandler, R. 238_1 586
Chanot, E. de 931_4
Chapouthier, F. 1121 1196
Charbonneaux, J. 1192
Chariot from Trundholm 1076 of Athena drawn by two snakes 769 f. of Dionysos drawn by two panthers or lynxes $306_{0(8)}$ of Kybele and Attis drawn by four lions 1128 of Zeus drawn by four horses 56_0 $306_{0(8)}$ of Zeus drawn by two eagles 1136 solar 1075 f.
Charlesworth, M. P. 1100
Charpentier, J. 1115
Chedanne, G. 443_3
Chiflet, J. 341
Childe, V. Gordon 367_6 368_1
Christ, W. 78_2
Christianisation of pagan cave-sanctuary 261_7 of pagan statuary 1195 1196 f. of pagan temples 553_2 643_0
Christianity and Dionysiac worship, common features of 953 and the cult of Zeus Astérios 954
Christus Patiens 953
Chronique scandaleuse of Zeus, its real significance 948
Chrysalis-beads and chrysalis-pendants $252_{0(3)}$
Chryselephantine doors of Athena's temple at Syracuse 850_6 throne of Solomon 957_0
Chryselephantine statues of Hera at Argos 65 816_0 of Nike on hand of Zeus Olýmpios 954 of Zeus at Olympia 954 ff.
Chrysoprase 1194
Chthonian thunder 21 1143
Chthonian pair of Hades and Persephone 402 425 of Zeus Meilíchios and Pasikrateia (?) 1188 f.
Chthonian triad of Zeus Bouleús or Eubouleús grouped with Demeter and Kore 1124 f.
Ciaceri, E. 175_2
Cicala badge of an autochthonous Ionian people 250 believed to subsist on dew 250 onomatopoeic names for 257_2 personified 257 regarded as earth-born 250 Tithonos in extreme old age transformed into 247
Cicalas as rattles 255_0 f. gold, from Bosporos Kimmerios 253_0 gold, from Ephesos 253_0 gold, from Hungary 253_0 f. gold, from Mt Parnes 253_0 on coins 254_0 f. on gems 255_0 prophylactic 255_0 f.
Cire perdue See Bronze
Cisterns, bottle-shaped, of Melite at Athens 363 early, on Palatine at Rome 366_1 See also Mundus, Wells
City, celestial, partly based on cloudland 51_0

Clandestine intercourse, a custom of extreme antiquity 1026_5 still practised by Slavs and Swiss 1026_6 the recognised beginning of married life in Samos, Sparta, etc. 1026 of Zeus and Hera 1025 f.
Clarke, E. D. 143 145 598_3
Clemen, C. 189_1 1122
Clement, P. 1083
Clemmensen, M. 1083 1141
Cleromancy 716
Clinton, H. Fynes 331_0
Clothing, interchange of 1186
Cloud containing Athena is cleft by Zeus in Crete 727 729 containing Metis (masc.) in Orphic theogony 727
Clouds gathered by Danube 368 imitated by sheep-skins 31 f. 296 personified in cult and myth 68 ff.
Cloud-charm 288 290 878 f.
Cloudland, folk-names for 51_0 52_0
Cloud-stratum stylised into nebuly 43
Coal, first mention of, as used in Britain 859_4
Cock and rain in Palestine 1097 of Leto 1042_9 of Zeus Velchános 1043_0 on Egyptian sherd 1174 on helmet of Athena 46_4 once king of Persia 45 prophylactic 132_2 symbol of Himera 614_5 (?)
Cocks in magic and religion 45_2 1174 with hen on vase from Rhodes 664_1
Cock's head as rhytón (?) of Keftiu 1173 on Cretan intaglio 1174
'Cock,' priest at Hierapolis in Syria called 1097
Cohen, H. 902_7
Cokaygne See Land of Cokaygne
Collart, P. 277
Collignon, M. 393 $718_{0(7)}$ 771_1
Collingwood, R. G. 846 863 1126
Colossal statue of Nero 965_3 of Zeus Olímpios called 'the blundered colossus' 965 of Zeus Ómbrios 557 f.
'Colts,' human 1083
Columba, G. M. 400_2
Column of Marcus Aurelius 324 332 f. of Trajan 333 spiral 1117 supporting sky 946 1116 f.
Coman, J. 1073 f.
Comedy, origin of 1103
Comet seen in 405 B.C. at Aigos Potamos 886 seen in 373 B.C. at Helike and Boura 1118
Communion of worshippers devouring sacred flesh 606 610
Comparetti, D. 419_3 420_0
Conception by pomegranates placed in bosom 815_0
Conington, J. 453
Constans, L. A. 435 436_{11}
Contact with sacred object by means of cord or the like 896_2
Contenau, G. 1112 1135
Conybeare, E. 1141
Conybeare, F. C. 887_6
Conze, A. 149_2 149_3 375_6 380_1 ff. 830_2
Cook, R. M. 1196
Cook, S. A. 195_0 369_1 416_1 549_3 551_0 889 f. 1072
Cooke, Miss P. B. Mudie See Tillyard, Mrs E. M. W.
Coot 52_1
Coppersmiths 212 f.
Corn-baby 77_3
Corn-daughter $301_{0(3)}$ (?)
Corn-ear reaped in silence and exhibited to mystics at Eleusis 299
Corn-ears, symbolic, at Ba'albek 1095
Corn-maiden 306_0 438_1
Corn-mother 77_3 $300_{0(2)}$ a differentiated form of earth-mother 289
Corn-spirit as ox $599_{(3)}$
Corn-totem $300_{0(2)}$ (?)
Corn-wreath of Ceres $1062_{2(1\,f.)}$ of Triptolemos 402
Cornford, F. M. 299_0 $301_{0(4)}$ 357_7 438 454_3
Cornu copiae of Agreus 271_3 of Eros 466 fig. 301 of Iupiter Pantheus 1129 f. of Plouton $1050_{0(3)}$ fig. 844 $1053_{1(1\,f.)}$ double, on coin of Gaza 557 fig. 378
Cosmogonies, Babylonia 18_1 Egypt 18_1 (?) India 18_1 Japan 18_1 Mandaean 1179 Norse $98_{0(7)}$ Orphic 745 cp. 746 Palestine 18_1 Phoinike 983
Coste-Messelière, P. de la 1121
Couch of Diana 1044_4 of Hera 1044 1044_4 of Iuno Lucina 1044_4
Couissin, P. 404_0 1140 1142 1192
Coulon, V. 1196
Courby, F. 1166 1191 f.
Cowade 89_1 (?)
Couve, L. 248_1
Cow gilded and draped in black to represent Isis or earth 345_0 Lemnian, touched by shadow of Mt Athos 1102 lunar 1032 1065 totem of the Basita 1193 wooden, of Pasiphae 1092
Cox, C. W. M. 1160
Cozzo, G. 444_0
Crab as divine attribute or emblem 1146 attacks Herakles 797
Crayfish (kárabos) 1146
Crickets in China viewed as incarnations of great warriors 257_1
Crocodile-skin in hail-charm 877
Crooke, W. 1090 f.
Cross at Gosforth 1128 immersed as rain-charm at Epiphany 294 incised on forehead of bearded herm at Karlsruhe 1196 f.
Cross-roads, family-ghosts at 119 Lares Compitales at 119 Tritopatores at 119
Crow in folklore 1138 as informer 238_1 lame, helps hero in folk-tale from Epeiros 977 on altar of Athena 782_4 held by Athena at Korone 782 Koronis transformed into, by Athena 782_4
Crows avoid the Akropolis at Athens 238
'Crows,' human 1083 (?)

Crowfoot, J. W. 1197
Crown of palm-leaves 996 f. 1008 of reeds 1008 with three peaks worn by Kronos 1140 with three peaks worn by stone of Elagabalos 906
Cuckoo an ominous bird throughout Europe 64_6 65_0 as form of Donar or Frô (?) 65_0 as form of Zeus 1043 as form of Żywye 64_0 as king of Egypt and Phoinike 46 67_2 of St Gertrude 65_0 on sceptre of Hera at Argos 65 67 venerated in the Old Slavonic area 64_0
Cuckoo-spit 277_0
Cumont, F. 136_2 136_3 900_4 902 911 912_2 914_0 914_1 982 1115 1117 1134 1163 1194
Cup of Amphitryon an heirloom of divine origin 507 507_5
Cupids of modern sentimentalism 1025
Curtis, C. D. 136_3 137_4
Curtius, E. 576_0
Curtius, G. 181_1
Curtius, L. 640_0 1164 1179
Cycladic statuette of mother and daughter 730 f.
Cylinders, neo-Babylonian 891
Cypress marks sanctuary at Palmyra 1159 white, beside water of Lethe 420_0 421_0

Dactylic metre changes Tritopátores to Tritopatreis 112_3
Daebritz 773_1
Dagger-god of Hittites 1140 (bibliography)
Daicoviciu, C. 1162
Dalberg, F. v. 917 937_6
Dalman, G. 1072
Dance called καλαθίσκος 990 of goat-like dancers on Greek vases 1106 of horned dancers at Abbots Bromley 1087 of Kouretes and Korybantes 1070 of masked performers on 'island-stones' 1068 of men wearing bulls' horns and hoofs (?) in Iberia 1090 of reeds called οἱ κάλαθοι (? κάλαμοι) 989 f. of reeds in Gygaia Limne 989 f. representing birth of Zeus 935_3 representing Kronos devouring his children 935_3 representing Labyrinth 1086 1087 representing reeds and grasses bent by wind 993 representing story of Thyestes 935_3
Dances, lists of various 990 996
Dance, Miss E. M. 236_3
Danoff, C. M. 1157
Daressy, G. 1077
Daubeny, C. 493_2
Davenport, C. 853_0
Davis, F. 832 832_4
Davison, C. 1
Dawkins, R. M. 248_1 286_1 294 1067 1111
Dawson, W. R. 345_1
Dead associated in cult with Eumenides and with Zeus Meilichios 1188 called Δημήτρειοι $302_{9\,(5)}$ divinity of, in Egyptian belief 395 divinity of, in Greek belief 395 identified with Osiris
Dead (cont.)
$302_{9\,(5)}$ 344 395 judges of the 402_4 represented as chthonian Zeus $309_{4\,(2)}$ watch over growth of crops 437
Deas, H. T. 1077
Decapitation 273_3 846_6
Dedications combined with epitaphs 1160
Deedes, C. N. 1087 1130
Deer as substitute for Iphigeneia 233_1 the running of the 1068
Deer-worship 1068
Deikelíktai, ritual origin of 560
Deissmann, A. 1134 1174
Delatte, A. 1127
Della Seta, A. 1148
Delta as womb of mother-goddess 1097
Demangel, R. 1121
De Minicis, G. 537_1
Dennis, G. 1013 f.
Deonna, W. 402_5 441_0 488_5 580_0 730 827 1091 1108 1119 1141 f.
Desrousseaux, A. M. 1189
Detscev, D. 1126 1182
Detschew, D. See Detscev, D.
Deubner, L. 430_0 578_2 583_1 584_0 589_3 589_4 590_4 590_5 592 597 598_0 599 $_{(2)}$ 600_6 601_0 605_0 982 1047 1105
Devil conceived as wind 164
Dew a gentler form of rain 180 at Athens, modern meteorological records of 241 carried for Erse 166 caught on fleece 500_1 gathered on May Day or Midsummer Day 165 of Hephaistos 237 of Ouranos 274 of Zeus 236 265_1 the means by which sky-father impregnates earth-mother 180 944 thickest at full moon 179 upon Grass totem of the Basita 1193
Dexter, T. F. G. 941_1 1194
Dhorme, F. P. 1136
Diamonds 217_0
Diana-pillars 1119 f.
Dibbelt, H. 593_6
Dickins, G. 699_2 712 712_6 768 f.
Dickins, Mrs G. 290 292 294
Diels, H. 1121
Dieterich, A. 425 f.
Diipetés 893_9 901_1 See also Diopetés
Dike 949
Dikjeretto See Bird
Dilthey, C. 846
Dimitrov, D. P. 1072
Diôbletos 946
Diopetés 1174 See also Diipetés
Diosemia 23 943
Dirlmeier, F. 1189
Dirr, A. 236_3
Discovery of baitýlia 887 of clothing made from animal-skins 983 of crops 608_2 of fire 983 of fire and forging of arms 235_2 of huts made from reeds, grasses, and papyrus 983 of iron 922 of marriage 1060_7 of plough 608_2 608_3 of ploughing with yoked oxen 606 608 of thrice-ploughed field 607 f. of religion 315_0

Discovery (cont.)
of sea-faring 983 of shield 650_0 of ship 355_2 of star fallen from sky 892 917 of trumpet 729_3
Disk, solar, in pediment 863 in relation to Kronos (?) 936 on head of Apis 1082
Disks, magic, from Corinth 1074 magic, from Vulci 1074 of terra cotta from Tarentum 1119 1136
Dithyramb, origin and etymology of 1104 f.
Dittenberger, W. 212_2
Divination by barley 1115 by Delphic tripod 1120 by divining-glass 1122 by finger-nails 1122 by flour 1115 by knuckle-bones 1157 by lamp 1122 by lots 716_6 717 by meal 1115 by mirror 1122 by sieve 336 ff.
Divining-glass See Lekanomanteia
Dobschütz, E. von 971_0 972_0
Dobson, Mrs D. P. 862_2 863_8
Döhring, A. 1134
Dölger, F. J. 972_0 1118 1193
Doer of a deed best able to undo the same 592
Dörpfeld, W. 370_5 1171
Dog in myth of Hyperochos and Phemios 1105 leads Diomos to Kynosarges 594 See also Hound
Dogs entering market-place at Argos during days called ἀρυηίδες are killed 243_5 in war 683_1 not allowed on the Akropolis at Athens 243_5 749 f. must not be touched nor mentioned by flamen Dialis 243_5 tear to pieces Linos 243_5 will not enter the island Sygaros 243_5 will not enter the temple of Hercules at Rome 243_5
'Dogs,' human 1083 (?)
Dog-mask 1068 (?)
'Dog-skin' cap (κυνέη) made of bull's-hide (ταυρείη) or weasel-skin (κτιδέη) or goat-skin (αἰγείη) 838_1
Dohan, Mrs E. H. 197_0 681 681_4
Dolls from Myrina 1009
Dolphin as attribute of Poseidon 1060 on rock carried by Poseidon 18_0 bears Aphrodite to Kypros 274 on mace from Willingham Fen 1100
Dolphins in classical literature and art 1122 in Poseidon's sea at Athens 753
Dolphin-skin 107
Domaszewski, A. von 119_5 328_0 329_0 330_0 904_2 1131
Doorway to Otherworld formed by clashing mountain-walls 976 987
Dornseiff, F. 1121 1135
Dottin, G. 1116
Double axe See Axe, double
Douglas, Miss E. M. See Van Buren, Mrs A. W.
Dove on head of Cnossian goddess 827 as embodiment of Aphrodite 175_2 as attribute of Aphrodite 175_2 1057 on finger of Aphrodite 638_0 in relation to Dove (cont.)
Aphrodite $275_{0(1)}$ (?) sacrifice to 1103 as soul of Ktesylla 269_1 fiery, ignites the Carro at Florence 791_6 sent out by Noah 529
Doves bring ambrosia to Zeus 975 flying about Aphrodite (Astarte?) 1016 of Aphrodite in Kypros 1112
'Doves,' human 1082 (?)
Dowsers 1074
Dragendorff, H. 1003
Dream, 'Behinderungstraum' 401_1 occasioned by paralysing fear 403_0 of Klytaimestra 239_1 of Kroisos 522 See also Nightmare Dreams, divinatory, at the Marneion in Gaza 552
Dressler, F. R. 132_3
Drew, C. D. 1098
Drexler, W. 183
Drinking-horn 1091
Droop, J. P. 871_1
Ducati, P. 710
Duchesne, L. 328_6
Duck 52_2 1075
Dümmler, F. 559 729
Dugas, C. 1141
Duhn, F. von 103_2 1181
Du Jardin, L. 430_0
Dumézil, G. 1141
Dumont, A. 788
Dunham, M. E. 261_7
Duplication and triplication as early efforts at multiplication 410_0
Dussaud, R. 912_4 1095 f. 1163
Dutilh, E. D. J. 1078
Dýnamis as equivalent of mana 873_2 of Zeus 873_2 of Zeus Keraúnios 873_2
Dyson, G. W. 1085

E at Delphoi 1121
Eagle as attribute of Hermes 1071 as attribute of Iupiter 41 as symbol of sun (See solar) beneath throne of Zeus 694 charged with intense heat 792 expectant 37_6 funerary, in Syria 1097 helps hero in folk-tale from Epeiros 977 in pediment 694 of apotheosis 1097 of Im-dugud 1155 of Zeus 1155 on altar of Zeus 782_4 on column 1163 on globe 1100 on head of Zeus 46 on pyramidal structures 1097 on sacred stone 982 on sceptre of Zeus 954 saves life of Valeria Luperca by dropping sword on heifer and leaving mallet for intended victim to use 802_5 solar 901 ff. 982
Eagles, six species of 802_5 two, draw chariot of Zeus 324 830 1136 two, in pediment 1070
Earth as a ship 18 believed to rest upon water 18 19_4 fructified by sun 120 'the body of Isis' 351
Earth-goddess has many names 948 rides bull 1125 sometimes fades into heroine 948

Earth-mother, contact with 1174 in relation to sky-father 289 represented by little girl in bridal veil 292
Earthquakes 1 ff. as viewed by modern Greek peasants 29 attributed to Christians by pagans 26_2 attributed to pagans by Christians 26_3 cp. 27_2 attributed to Zeus or to Poseidon, a specialised form of Zeus 943 called brasmatiae or brastae 985 called brástai 483 due to a concourse of the dead 2_5 due to God nodding his head and shaking his hair 20_6 due to movements of a subterranean monster or giant or god 2_5 due to nether thunders 21 due to unknown god or goddess 24 ff. due to Zeus nodding his head and shaking his hair 20_3 due to waves of nether sea 18 19_5 personified by Chrysostom 27_3 personified by Goethe 29 personified by Raphael 27 ff. votive inscriptions for escape from 1163
Ebony 955 955_5 (?)
Eckels, R. P. 1135
Eckhel, J. 981
Eckstein 1193
Edhem Bey 628_3 630_1 ff. 880_3
Edmonds, J. M. 831_2
Egg, cosmic, in Orphic and quasi-Orphic theogonies 745 f. 1179 in Easter Island rite 1137 in folk-usage and folk-belief 1179 of Leda cracked by Hephaistos 738 f. (Osterei) packed in first or last sheaf 1137
Eggeling, J. 544_5
Egger, R. 1183
Ehrenberg, C. G. 480_1
Ehrlich, H. 94_2
Eichler, F. 955_5
Eight Bes-like musicians 1001 Phoenician Kabeiroi 1001
Eight years, interval of 987
Eilmann, R. 1087
Eiraphiótes 94_2
Eisler, R. 50_1 51_9 334_1 445_3 914_1 915_2 916_1 983 1121 1139 1141
Eissfeldt, O. 889 1076 1172 f. 1177
Eitrem, S. 124 413_0 515_6 634_1 634_2 1092 1130
Elderkin, G. W. 562_2 562_3 607_5
Electrum statér of Ionian revolt 820_2
Elephant as attribute of Zeus 545 f. as theriomorphic storm-god 547 of Indra (Airâvata, Airâvana) 546 f.
Elworthy, F. T. 549_2 846
Elysion 946 1115
Emerald of Herakles 892 on golden olive of Pygmalion 983
-ene as suffix in pre-Greek place-names 224
Enelýsios 946
Engelbrecht, A. 1112
Engelmann, R. 510 518 631_3 631_4 634_1 795_3 f.
Enmann, A. 1042_5
Enthronement, ritual 1161
Ephésia grámmata 1134
Epinetron or ónos $389_{0(1)}$
Epiphany of Dionysos 1118 of Ge 203_0 205_0 of Pandora 205_0 of Tages 203_0 of Zeus 476 f. 507
Epitaphs combined with dedications 1160
Era, Arabian 907_3 911_3 of Bosra 1080 Seleucid 905_3 1159
Erman, A. 345_1
Ernout, A. 434_0
Errephóroi 944 See Arrhephóroi
Escher, J. See Escher-Bürkli, J.
Escher-Bürkli, J. 128_4 315_0
Essen, C. C. van 1074 f.
Eunuchs, Greek 1174 Hittite 1174 Phrygian 1174
Euphemistic titles of the dead 116 (?) of the Devil 164 of Hades 850_5
Evans, Sir A. J. 200_0 $252_{0(3)}$ 317 403_1 404_0 405_0 569_4 664_0 737_9 738_0 790_1 887 937_3 937_4 1090 1120 1187
Evans, Miss Joan 920_6 ff. 921_1
Evil eye See Eye, evil
Evocation of earth-goddess 203_0 205_0 350 of earth-powers 202_0
Ewen, C. L'Estrange 1192
Expurgation in Homer 627_1 (?) 975
Eye, evil 933_7 of Dike 950_4 of God 473 of Zeus 1071
Eyes of archaistic kóre in diamond 216_7 of Athena glaucous 216 of Athena Parthénos in precious stone 216_7 of marble lion in smaragdus 217_0 of Poseidon glaucous 216 of Poseidon in garnet 217_0

Face-urns 193_0
Fäh, A. 164_5
Fairbanks, A. 774
Falcon 1076
Falconnet 918
Farnell, L. R. 89_1 179_0 223_1 225_1 227 268 299 $306_{0(8)}$ 650_0 708 710 f. 729 841_3 1064_7
Farrington, O. C. 881_3 885_7 924_1
Fates still invoked at Athens 721_5
Father manifesting himself anew in his own son 952
Fawn of Artemis 640_9 of Diana $1062_{2(1)}$ sacrificed at Pedachthoë 1134
Fawns of Artemis 1064_4
Fear that sky may fall 1116
Feathered head-dress 1074 1119
Fehrle, E. 124_0 223_0 224_3 875 876_3 ff. 877_3 877_5 1140
Ferri, S. 115 1160 1188
Fertility-charm by water-carrying 396 1193 f.
Festoons 1003 1006
Fetish of Athena 191_8 of natural stones 937_4
Fick, A. 94_2 191_0 227 233_1 237_2 275_0 1131 1196
Fiesel, Eva 1090
Fifty Aigyptiadai 355 Danaïdes 355 357 daughters of Endymion and Selene 357 daughters of Thestios 357 moons of Olympic cycle 357 (?) sons of Priam 360_1 weeks of the year 357 (?)

Fig-leaf, original significance of 1184
Figure-heads 159_0
Finger of Attis 1174 of Harpokrates 1174
Fire and forging of arms discovered in Lemnos 235_2 at centre and circumference of universe 19_0 conceived as stolen or fallen from heaven 228 crackling called Hephaistos or Hestia laughing (or threatening) 228 sacred, struck from flints 791_0 springing from ground and worshipped in Lykia 228 terrestrial derived from fire celestial 235
Fire-auger as father of Moon and Sun 1075
Fire-boards of Chuckchees 1075
Fire-drill in relation to Prometheus(?) 1075
First-fruits dedicated to Zeus Meilichios 1188 See also Aparché, Aparchai
Firth, C. M. 1187
Fish attracted by flute-player in Lydia 988 ff. dug out of ground at Aquae Salsulae (?) 1015 sacred to Artemis in Boiotia 990 sacred to Artemis (?) in Lydia 989 f.
Fish-skin worn by Triton named Boreios 129
Fishermen catch Epeios' statue of Hermes Perpheraios in net 1137
Five as Babylonian number of planets 341_3 as Babylonian symbol of divine and royal supremacy 341_3 as Pythagorean cosmic number 341_3 'Lebenssterne' of the Egyptians 914_0
Flacelière, R. 1121
Fleece of Zeus 1081
Fleeces spread to catch dew 500_1 602_7
Flickinger, R. C. 1106
Flight, ritual, of the Bouphónos at Athens 583 ff.
Floating fen in Delta of Danube 1015
Floating islands 106 140 975 ff. (Append. P) bibliography of 975 975_1 1015 not drifting clouds 1015 viewed by Greeks and Romans with peculiar veneration 1015
Flogging of boy at Gaza 554_1 of Hera threatened by Zeus 924 of schoolboy on gem 1179 of slave at Chaironeia 1031_5 of those who ran round the altar at Delos 1087 of young men at altar of Artemis Orthia 1031_5 1134 Flood drained off at Athens 169_0 seeds found with Iasion after 77_4 commemorated by Hydrophoria 603 f.
—— legends of, at Argos 1165 at Megara 1165 in Phrygia 527 ff.
Flute-player 988 f. 996 f. 1096
Fly, Periklymenos transformed into 744_4
Flies avoid temple of Aphrodite in Paphos 238_1
Foam as clan-totem 274 as seed of the sky-god 274 personified 276_1 used as thunderbolt 273
Förster, R. 601_2 1028 1034_1
Folk-tales, types of: 'Brüderchen und Schwesterchen' 74 the clashing rocks Folk-tales (cont.)
975 ff. 'La Dame au fuseau' 1116 'the Death of Pan' 1131 'Einäuglein, Zweiäuglein und Dreiäuglein' 74 'Expulsion' 420_0 1187 the floating coffer 456 471 the golden rain 456 'Hop o' my Thumb' 359 the immobilised hero 402_5 Jack and the Beanstalk 1117 'Meister Pfriem' 448 f. 'Melusine' 73 74 'No-man' stratagem 1075 'Ram with golden fleece' 1080 'Rotkäppchen' 936_1 'Schwester- oder Mutter-Verrath oder Skyllaformel' 977 shape-shifting 745 'Sonnenmotiv' 1124 the unnatural parent who eats his children 936 f. 'weibliche Käuflichkeit' 73 'The Well of the World's End' 450
Foot, motif of supported 187_3 622_0 638_0 640_0 706 f. 931_7
Feet unshod 993
Fore-finger of Indra sucked by Mândhâtṛ 97_0
Formulae at chthonian bath ὑμῖν ἀπόνιμμα οἷς χρὴ καὶ οἷς θέμις 393_4 before marriage 123 divinatory 336_5 337_0 εἷς θεός 346_0 ἐνήστευσα, ἔπιον τὸν κυκεῶνα, ἔλαβον ἐκ κίστης, ἐργασάμενος ἀπεθέμην εἰς κάλαθον καὶ ἐκ καλάθου εἰς κίστην 990 Gnostic 1137 f. ἡ παρθένος ἔτεκεν· αὖξει φῶς 915_3 ἱερὸν ἔτεκε πότνια κοῦρον Βριμὼ Βριμόν $300_{9(1)}$ 913_4 Hittite 'the gods and the dead' 1125 κόγξ, ὄμπαξ 298 1193 liturgical on Christian lamps 145_2 magical 4_0 5_0 106 298 f. μόξ, πάξ, ῥίπξ 1193 Orphic ἔριφος ἐς γάλ' ἔπεσον 1118 Orphic θεὸς ἐγένου ἐξ ἀνθρώπου 395_5 Orphic ὄλβιε καὶ μακαριστέ, θεὸς δ' ἔσηι ἀντὶ βροτοῖο 395_5 Phrygian, of execration 1125 pueri ingenui patrimi et matrimi 1182 Saracenic 'Αλλὰ οὐὰ Κουβάρ 918_0 si deus, si dea 25_1 ταύτῃ τῇ ὥρᾳ σήμερον ἡ Κόρη ἐγέννησε τὸν Αἰῶνα 912_5 ὔε, κύε 299 307 454 ὔε, κύε, ὑπέρχυε 308
Fornari, F. 136
Forrer, E. 111_4
Forrer, R. 345_1
Forsdyke, Sir E. J. 807_1 830_2 1191
Forster, E. S. 939 1011
Fossils regarded as thunderbolts 884_0
Foucart, G. 944_{21}
Foucart, P. $302_{0(6)}$
Fountain of Life 421_0
Fountains of Death (Forgetfulness) and Life (Memory) 421_0
Fowler, W. Warde 437
Fox 14_0 977
Fränkel, Miss C. 560_6
Frankfort, H. 832_2 1102 1110 1196
Fraser, A. D. 112_2
Frazer, Sir J. G. 73 77_3 103_3 106_2 108 111_1 122_6 177_0 274 237 289 $305_{0(7)}$, 368_3 369_7 371_0 393 420_0 433_0 473 583_4 591_1 $599_{(3)}$ 651_0 733 837_1 874 938 945_0 978 988 1092 1116
Fredrich, C. 231 ff.

Freshfield, D. W. 1164 1165 f.
Frickenhaus, A. 574_0 725_5
Friedländer, L. 556
Friedländer, P. 417_0
Fries, C. 1121
Fritze, H. von 248_1 794_1
Frobenius, L. 956_1 957_0
Froehde, F. 94_2
Fröhner, W. 1150 f.
Frog, helpful 450
Frothingham, A. L. 435 438_7
Furious Host See Wild Hunt
Furlani, G. 1140 1141 1156 f.
Furtwängler, A. 102_0 139 f. 149_3 205_3 372_6 $375_{1(c)}$ 400_2 401_1 422 581_0 601_2 636_3 675_1 675_3 689_7 690_1 696 696_5 705 707 709 719_1 720_3 722 781_1 $813_{5(2)}$ 850 933_2 972 f. 1003 1008 1157

Gàbrici, E. 400_2 1136 1188
Gadfly personified 1156
Gaedechens, G. R. 845
Gaerte, W. 1091
Gaiéochos 13_2
Galley branded on Samian slaves 791_0
Galling, K. 580_0
Gallop, R. 1130
Gállos 1174
Galt, J. $721_{5(1)}$
Gaming board inscribed with name of Zeus Bouleús etc. 1124
Ganszyuiec, R. 1114 1141
Garden of the gods 1064_4 of Hera 1064 of Hesperides 404_0 1064 of Okeanos 1064_4 of Zeus 746 1062
Gardiner, E. N. 1155
Gardner, E. A. 169_0 216_1 694 695_3 705 771_1 1187
Gardner, P. 68_2 202_0 375_6 705_0 770_1
'Garland' 1133 See also May-garland
Garment of Athena worn by basileús (?) 1186 of Pandrosos worn by her priestess 245 of Pandrosos' priestess transferred to man slaying victim 245
Garnets 217_0 765_4
Garrucci, R. 971_1
Garstang, J. 1197
Gaster, M. 977
Gateways in Indo-Europaean cult 1114
Gecko 665_3
Geffcken, J. 330_0 f.
Gell, Sir W. 493_2
Geoponika 876_1
Gerard, E. 286
Gerhard, E. 456_2 456_6 515 515_8 612 614 713 762 763_1 805_2 f. 839 845
Gerogiannes, K. 846
Gesichtsurnen See Face-urns
Gestures aiding childbirth 663_2 669 673 ff. $676_{(3)}$ delaying childbirth 663_2 of affection 1033 of alarm 931 of amazement 931 of ἀποσκοπεύων 602_{10} 1019 of appeal 974_0 of benediction or command 543_1 (?) 549 (?) of bride 1039 1053 of conversation 1039 of Eileithyia copied Gestures (cont.)
by Zeus 663_2 $676_{(3)}$ of gratitude 529 of greeting 687 of Hebe 704 of ὑπερέχειν χεῖρα or χεῖρας 1074 of invocation 630 of longing desire 152 963 of love $1053_{1(2)}$ of prayer 151 1078 of prophylaxis 549 of respect 181 of salutation 546 of serene meditation 946 of supplication 1121 unexplained (hands raised, one palm outwards, the other in profile) 1138
Ghislauzoni, E. 535_1
Giannopoulos, N. I. 271 f. 282 1161 1167
Gigantomachy in art 14_0 55_5 56_0 57_0 $306_{0(8)}$ 534 in literature 792_2 842 966
Gilbert, O. 433_0 1194
Gilded bronze statues 862 862_4
Giles, P. 141_3 797
Gilles, P. 143
Girard, P. 650_0
Glass plaques from Dendra represent Europe (?) 623_1 1194 tesserae in mosaic from Aquileia represent blue water $627_{(3)}$
Globe as footstool of Christ enthroned 948 as footstool of Zeus enthroned 948 1067 (?) as seat of God the Father 948 as seat of God the Son 948 as seat of infant Zeus 948 blue 1067 the Farnese 488 in hand of Zeus 1112 origin and usage of, in antiquity 1066
Glotz, G. 137_0 298 850
Glueck, N. 1097
Goat as attribute of Hermes 1060 first killed at Ikaria 594 image of, stamped on Lemnian earth 229 on rock carried by Poseidon 14_0 (?) 18_0 ridden by infant Dionysos 1109 sacrifice of she-goat to Zeus in Crete 1110 taboo on the Akropolis at Athens, yet once a year driven up there for solemn sacrifice 841
Goats must not be touched nor mentioned by flamen Dialis 243_5 substituted for girl-victims to Artemis Mounychía and probably also to Lemnos 233_1
'Goats,' human 1082 f. (?)
Goatish dancers assimilated in s. iv B.C. to Pan 1106
Goat-men on 'Minoan' gems and sealings from Kato Zakro 840_0 1106
Goat-skin of Dionysos Melánaigis 837 of Iuno Sospita 837
Goebel, A. 8_0
Gold apples 1064 basket of Europe 1092 breast 1124 bullae 88_0 1110 f. cicalas from Bosporos Kimmerios 253_0 cicala from Ephesos 253_0 cicalas from Hungary 253_0 f. cicala from Mt Parnes 253_0 cicalas worn by Ionians 250_2 251_0 cow used in Hindu rite of rebirth 1092 double axes from Arkalochori Cave 1143 eagle on stone of Elagabalos 901 f. earring of s. iv–iii B.C. with bull's head 1098 earring of s. iv B.C. with kalathiskos-dancer 1009 ears of barley from grave near Syracuse

Gold (cont.)
307_0 foil of Etruscan work with relief of Tithonos tended by Heos (Eos) 247 glasses 948 hair of the Beauty of the Earth 412_0 harvest sent by Metapontines to Delphoi 307_0 hound of Crete 1110 idol thrown into bean-field at Malta 1031_7 iynges 1073 jewellery of s. VI and s. V B.C. scarce 766 f. lioness-head from Mykenai 1174 medallions from Abukir 779_0 model of mountain (?) from Arkalochori Cave 1143 olive of Pygmalion 983 pendant representing Aphrodite with two Erotes 1020 plant on Mt Tomori near Berat 1171 plaques from Mykenai representing Aphrodite (Astarte?) 1016 rain 455 ff. 473 ff. rings from Knossos 650_0 rings from Mykenai 650_0 ring from 'Mycenaean' tomb at Athens 1090 ring from Thisbe 681_2 ring of c. 400 B.C. 782_4 seat in south-European folk-tales 420_0 showered down on Rhodes by Zeus 477_3 snow 477 507 670 statues 862_4 strap-buckle of La Tène period with bull's head 1098 tablets of Orphists 395_5 396 419_3 f. thunderbolt of Adad 1095 tresses stolen from head of Zeus Olýmpios 969 cp. 966 wings of Athena Nike (?) 811_3 wings of Nike on hand of Athena Parthénos 811_3 See also Gilded
Goldby, F. 772_5
Goldmann 433_0
Goldziher, I. 334_1
Gomme, A. W. 866_8
Gorgóneion as Orphic name for moon (Gorgónion) 805_4 as sun 863 assimilated to Phobos (?) 863 assimilated to Sol 863 bearded in early Greek and late Roman art 865 evolution of, from lower to higher forms 848 ff. illustrated by sequence of Greek and Roman coin-types 853 ff. in pediment 769 862 ff. of Athena 837 ff. of Sulis Minerva at Bath 862 ff. on aigis of Athena gradually converted from demon to angel 857 f. on gems $803_{0(4,\ 7,\ 8)}$ on handle of thunderbolt 1156 on Hellenistic relief-ware $200_{0(2)}$ on shield of Athena 830 on shield of winged Athena 820 on shield of winged Minerva 823 on steatite seal-stones from Crete 845 1196 on tickets of Athenian dikasts 789_3 owl tantamount to 776_6 perhaps came from north Africa 847
Gow, A. S. F. 1071 1073 1103
Grabphalli 1067 1183 (?)
Gräber, F. 371_0
Graef, B. 672_0
Graefe, C. F. 531
Graindor, P. 129_6
Granger, F. 444_0 965_3
Grassmann, H. 925_7
Greasy Bowsprit 505_6 Pole 505 f.
'Green Man' 1133
Green quartz or 'plasma' as rain-charm 313
Grégoire, H. 879 1141
Gressmann, H. 1103 1132 1180
Griffin carries 'Canopus' of Isis 348_2
Griffins draw chariot of Dionysos 842_2 draw chariot of Nemeseis 842_2 draw chariot of Rhea (?) 842_2
Griffin's head on shield of Athena 839
Griffith, F. Ll. 346_0 882_2 1187
Grimm, J. 64_0 164 164_5 277_0 446_5 505_5 1026_6
Grimm, W. 505_5 1026_6
Grimme 887_5
Grisar, P. H. 328_0
Grose, S. W. 695_5
Growth, praeternatural rapidity of, characteristic of gods, heroes, etc. 929_2
Grünwedel, A. 401_1
Gruppe, O. $605_{(6)}$ 108 f. 179 260 260_8 267_7 $275_{0(4)}$ 369 401_2 411_0 421_0 567_0 608_3 610 729 762_2 763_4 782_1 791 811_1 938_3 941_4 984 987 1031_4 1070 1082
Guarducci, M. 1183 f.
Gubernatis, A. de 257_1 846 1032_1
Güntert, H. 308_1 497_4 1078 1114 1141 1174
Guild of Zeus Hýpsistos in Egypt, regulations for 1163 f.
Guillon, P. 1181
Gull as bird form of Athena 782 f. as bird form of Leukothea 783_1 as bird form of sea-nymphs 783_1
Gundel, W. 76_1 76_2 475_1 882_0
Guthrie, W. K. C. 402_1 1068 1070 1103 1104 1179

Hackl, R. 351_4
Haematite $313_{0(5)}$
Hahn, J. G. von 977
Haigh, A. E. 574_3
Hail in ancient folk-lore 875 ff. in modern folk-lore 875_1
Hail-charm by amethyst 876 by anointing iron tools with bears' fat 878 by covering meal with russet cloth 878 by crocodile-skin 877 by dedicating picture of grapes in vineyard 877 by hippopotamus-hide 877 by hyaena-skin 877 by keys 877 by mirror 876 by owl nailed up 793 878 by seal-skin 876 f. by surrounding garden with white vines 878 by threatening sky with blood-stained axes 878 by tortoise 877 by woman in her courses 876 by wooden bulls 877
Hail-clouds chased away by magicians 33
Hair, dedicated at puberty 1066 golden, of the Beauty of the Earth 412_0 in lightning-spell 433_0
Hair-offering, bibliography of 1066
Haley, J. B. 76_1
Hall, Miss E. H. See Dohan, Mrs E. H.
Hall, H. R. 926_3 1106 1122
Halley des Fontaines, J. 1146
Halliday, W. R. 1067 1105 1146 1160 1186
Hamilton, Miss M. See Dickins, Mrs G.

Hamman 1092
Hammer of Charon 927_3 of Thor 926 1142 thrown to ratify acquisition of property 1147
Hammond, N. G. L. 1173
Hanauer, J. E. 772_7
Hands uplifted 1162
Hanell, K. 1136
Hansen, C. 581_0
Harcum, Miss C. G. 172_0
Hardie, Miss M. See Hasluck, Mrs F. W.
Hare 977
Harland, J. P. 1164
Harmonism, scholiastic 125_3
Harnack, A. 327_2
Harp, Sumerian 1102
Harpe 843
Harrie, I. 1181
Harris, J. Rendel 71_4 293 f. 345_1 368, 369_3 506_7 1103 1116 1128 1134 1135 1136 f.
Harrison, E. 1141
Harrison, Miss J. E. 108 166_0 202_0 240 241_4 244_3 248_1 313 400_2 402_1 417_0 576_0 614 f. 630_1 724_0 763 770 811_1 846
Hart, H. St J. 891
Hartland, E. S. 506_7 1194
Hartmann, A. 1106
Hartwig, P. $889_{0(3)}$
Hasluck, F. W. 231 628_4 880_3 886_5 1071 1171
Hasluck, Mrs F. W. 630_1
Hatzfeld, J. 1066
Hauser, F. $252_{0(2)}$ 515_3 659_0 716 1118
Haussoullier, B. 563 f.
Hauvette-Besnault, A. 154_7
Haverfield, F. 863
Hawes, H. Boyd 197_0
Hawk as attribute of Apollon 1073 as bird form of Athena 781 of Jehovah (?) 558 on head of Apollon 46
Hawk-headed deity 5_0
Head as seat of the soul 737_9 1126 f. of Aulus dug up on Capitol 441 of St Christina swims about Lake Volsiniensis 1013 of Orpheus oracular 99 ff. 441_6
Heads hanging on palace-wall 1066
Head, B. V. 529_0 529_5 898
Head-dress elaborate, of dolls from Myrina 1009 of bovine horns worn by Mesopotamian deities 832 832_4 of rushes or basket-work worn by kalathiskos-dancers 996 ff. of two fishes worn by Atargatis 1097
Heberdey, R. 161_9 $309_{4(3)}$ 312_0 642_1 768 f.
Hedgehog 14_0
Hédna 507
Heichelheim, F. M. 859_3 1074 1083 1099 f. 1183
Hekler, A. 1108
Helbig, W. $251_{9(1)}$ 627_0
Helmbold, J. 1115
Helmet of cock's skin 804 with crest like animal's head 862 with features of Sokrates, Silenos, etc. 804_1 with head and wing of Medousa 541 with horn Helmet (cont.)
and ear of bull 541 with wheel 1072 with wings 820_2
Hemlock 913_4
Henning, R. 164_5
Henry, N. E. 1074
Henry, V. 358 362_3
Henzen, G. $375_{1(9)}$
Heraldic arrangement See Antithetic grouping
Herbst, R. 1187
Herkenrath, E. 1068
Herm, early and later types of 725_5 of Aphrodite 722 of Hermes 830
Herms, Janiform 1132 used to separate scenes in relief $85_{0(2)}$
Hermann, G. 728
Hermann, K. F. $600_{(5)}$
Heroes as faded gods (?) 650_0 (Aias, Teukros)
Hero-feast $309_{4(2)}$
Hérôion containing acanthus-plant 307_0 containing bay-branch 307_0 containing wheat $306_{0(8)}$ of Pandion ii at Megara 783_1
Héros on sepulchral stêlai from Odessos 1160
Herrmann, P. 463_1 641_4 1033_2 1033_5 1033_6
Herter, H. 1073 1183
Herzfeld, E. 642_1 651_0
Herzog, A. 372_6
Herzog, R. 364_1
Hexameters, buried 100_5 (?) 263_0 dropped for prose in later oracles of Apollon 100_5 endings 322_0 restored 122_1 237_2 would-be 395_5 628_4
Heydemann, H. 400_2 601_2 1181
Hicks, E. L. 586_4 642_1
Hierádouloi 176_0 177_0 648_0
Hierophántes at Eleusis rendered sterile by use of hemlock $300_{0(1)}$ 913_4 of Persephone pronounces Orphic verse 395_5
Hierôs gámos at Argos 1043 ff. at Athens 1047 ff. at Elymnion (Elymnia) 1041 at Hermione 1043 at Knossos 1032 1092 at Samos 1027 ff. in the cave of Achilleus 1043 in the far west 1062 1064 of Athena 224_3 of Zeus and Europe (Hellotis) 1092 of Zeus and Hera 948_{16} 949_0 1025 ff. on Mt Ide in Phrygia 1032 ff. on Mt Kithairon 1042 on Mt Oche 1041 of comparatively late introduction 1065 bibliography of 1026, Highbarger, E. L. 1165
Hildebrandt, R. 781_3 783_1
Hill like a recumbent man (Antaios) 372_8 cp. 1173
Hill, Mrs B. H. 261_7
Hill, Sir G. F. 88_0 216_1 550 550_{13} 557 698_6 892 893_3 982 f.
Hiller von Gaertringen, F. 167_8 266_4 267_7 283 1070 1173
Hippopotamus-hide in hail-charm 877
Hirschfeld, G. 530

Hirst, Miss G. M. 653_1 655_0
Hirt, H. 651_0
Hirzel, R. 49_0 78_2
Höfer, O. 102_1 1111
Hoffmann, C. G. 450_4
Hoffmann, E. 746_6
Hoffmann, O. 289_2
Hogarth, D. G. 253_0 840_0
Holed bucket in German folk-tale 448 f.
'Dipylon' vases 200_0 373 loutrophóroi of black-figured or red-figured style 373 vase of fluted red ware from Kypros 375_5 vessels in Italy 427 ff. vessels elsewhere 445 ff.
Holland, L. B. 195_0 354_6 360 363 1074 1120 1184
Holleaux, M. 118
Holmberg, U. 405_0 1116 f. 1192
Holtzmann, H. 971_0 972_2 973_0
Holweck, F. G. 472_3
'Holy-mawle' used by son to knock his father on the head 738_0
Homeric poems originate in Aeolian Thessaly 141 (?) put together at Chios 141 (?)
Hommel, E. 1086
Hommel, F. $275_{0(2)}$ 276_0 334_1 341_3 984 1103
Homolle, T. 1009 1122
Honey as celestial diet 496 as dew from the sky 246 250 496 as libation to Zeus Endendros 1173 as libation to Zeus Ikmaios 267 as rain-charm 335_3 as water of life 981 from ash-trees 498_3 from lime-trees 499_1 from oak-trees 498_2 from reeds 499_2 identified with ambrosía and néktar 496 f.
Honey-cake 772
Honey-dew 246 261_1 498 ff. caught on skins 500_1
Hooke, S. H. 1121
Hoopoe 44 45_0
Hopfner, T. 887_8
Hopkins, C. 1163
Hopkins, E. W. 546_1
Hoplolatry 313_3 (?)
Hoppin, J. C. 1142
Horn as drinking-vessel 1091 set behind Elagabalus 902_7 set behind Kabeiros 902_7
Horns, altar of, at Delos 1087 altar of, at Dreros 1087 as ritual furniture 1091 of Io progressively minimised 687_3 prophylactic use of 549_2
'Horns of consecration' as andirons (?) 1091 as conventional representation of bucranium (?) 1091 as merely decorative (?) 1091 as mountain-symbol (?) 1091 on head of 'Minoan' goddess 818_0
Horned altars in Delos etc. 1091 dancers at Abbots Bromley 1087 human figures on early seal-stones 1106 imp on signet from Mochlos 845 king of Spain 1111 tiger 1106
Horse in combination with wheel 1076 in cult of the dead 1179 St Irene bound Horse (cont.)
to wild 472_3 of bronze found by Gyges 1114 of Poseidon painted white 753_2 Trojan 1179
Horses of Zeus 1064_4 tombs of 1187
Horse-sacrifice in antiquity 1070 1179
Horse-shaped deities (chthonian god and goddess with the Erinyes as their twin offspring) 1182
Horse's head on hand of Poseidon 217_0
Horse-worship of 'Indogermanen' 1179 of Greeks 1075 in Germany etc. 1179 in east Kent ('The Hooden Horse') 1179 bibliography of 1179
Horsfield, H. 1197
Hound, chthonian 413_0 golden 1110 of Ares 683 See also Dog
Hounds, baying of supernatural 1066 of Yama 410_0 ff.
Housman, A. E. 268_3 1026_4
Hubaux, J. 136_2
Hubbell, H. M. 1070 1179
Hudson, E. C. 1125
Hülsen, C. 444_4 445_0 904_2
Human sacrifice offered by Elagabalus 526_2 of king or king's son in famine 1080 cp. 267 to Agraulos or Diomedes at Salamis in Kypros commuted to sacrifice of ox 653_0 to Artemis commuted to sacrifice of deer or bear or bull 233_1 to Artemis Mounychia commuted to sacrifice of she-goat in girl's clothing 233_1 to Dis commuted 433_0 to Iupiter Elicius commuted 433_0 to Iupiter Hospes (Zeus Xénios) at Amathous in Kypros 653_0 to Kronos 937 to Lemnos 191_0 to Lemnos probably commuted to sacrifice of goats 233_1 to Mania commuted 433_0 to Saturn commuted 433_0 to Zeus by Bousiris, king of Egypt 653_0 to Zeus in Kypros 652_0 to Zeus at Lyttos 525 to Zeus Atabýrios in Rhodes and Sicily 525 to Zeus Ithomátas in Messene 525 to Zeus Kretagenés (Marnas) at Gaza 554 f. to Zeus Laphýstios in Thessaly and Boiotia 525 to Zeus Lýkaios in Arkadia 267 525 1068 to Zeus Ómbrios at Elis 267 525 f.
Humborg 1141
Humped oxen 991
Hunt, H. 1171
Huth, O. 1130
Hutton, Miss C. A. 841_1 842_1
Hyaena-skin in hail-charm 877
Hyde, W. W. 583_4 591_1
Hydromancy 292
Hylén, J. E. 416_1
Hypothymís $309_{4(2)}$
Hysterolite 918_4

Iambic tags 842_2 (?)
Iambic, would-be 1130
íaspis as rain-charm 313_5
Icebergs 140_7 977 f.
Idolatry, Dion Chrysostomos' plea for 963_1

-ikós an exceptional termination of divine appellatives 560_6
Ilberg, J. 55_5
Iliffe, J. H. 1137
Imhoof-Blumer, F. 530 802 1140
Immisch, O. 369_3
Impregnation by blood of Ouranos 481 by dewdrop 475_3 by the eye of God 473 by falling star 474 f. by golden snow 477 507 by rain 475 f. by the sun 473
Incendiaria avis 791
Index deorum SeeCatalogue of the gods
Ingots in shape of ox-hide 1146
Initiations of Cyprian 775 1046
Iron, birth of 1100 f. discovery of 922 displaces bronze in late versions of myth of Danaë 473_2 early use of meteoric 922 f. in Egypt called ba-n-pet, 'the metal of heaven' 923_0 cp. 923_2 oxide used to paint bones 515_6
Irrigation of Argos by Danaos or the Danaïdes 361 f. practised by Danaoi and Daunioi (?) 366
Isabelle, C. E. 444_1
Island of ghosts 984 of souls 109 112 975
Islands of the Blest 162 turning or floating, haunted by Harpies 987 See also Floating islands
'Island-stones' 1068 1106
Ithyphallic figure (baskánion) protects potter's oven 799
Ivory preserved by damp air of ádyton 238_3 preserved by use of oil made from pitch 967 f. repairing of, now a lost art 968_4 seal from Mesarà 790_0 seals from Pherai (Velestino) 278 shoulder of Pelops 1124 See also Chryselephantine
Ivy-leaves at ends of garlands 1146 on handles of thýrsoi 1007
Ivy-wreath 675 685_2 1133
Ýnx 313 1103
Ýnges of gold 1073

'Jack-in-the-Green' 1133
Jacob, G. 1171
Jacobs, J. 450_2
Jacobsthal, P. 102_0 182_1 1147
Jacoby, F. 519_6 928_1 928_8 1085
Jacopi, G. 664_1 1187
Jade 925_8
Jahn, O. 223_3 570 573 573_4 590_4 602 614_5 $627_{(3)}$ 846
Jameson, R. 820_2
Jamot, P. 218
Janiewitsch, O. 369_3
Janiform deities, conspectus of 1130 head on coins of Tenedos 789_2 head on sceptre of Zeus 686 herms 1132 masks in springtime festivals of the Pyrenees 1130
Jar of evils in Hesiod 108 of good things in Babrios 108
Jars of Artemis Kalliste 1181 of rains and winds 107 of Zeus 1181
Jardé, A. 1187
Jenkins, R. J. H. 416_1 f. 1068 1155
Jeremias, A. 341_3 933_7
Jessen, O. 66_2 880_1 976 978
Jet cools eagle's nest 792
Jevons, F. B. 122_6 $300_{0(2)}$
Johansen, K. F. 1142
Jokl, N. 1125 1168 1196
Jolliffe, Miss N. 135_8 136_2 137_0 298
Jones, H. Stuart 262_0 322_0 585_4 781_7 863 925_5 933 f. 939_7 954_7
Jonston, J. 277_0 503_0 1031_5
Jordan, H. 444_4
Judeich, W. 260_6 1155
Judges of the dead 402_4
Judgment of Paris, Athena's toilet before 814_0 Helen v. Athena in 770 Hera successful in 67 f. on coin of Skepsis 517_0 on kratér at Petrograd 702 ff.
Jülg 976
Jüthner, J. 1153
Junker, H. 914_0
'Jupiter-columns' 1100 1117 1191

Kahle, P. 979
Kaibel, G. 673_4 1083
Kaiser Wilhelm ii. 845_9
Kakridis, J. T. 250_4
Kalathiskos, dance called 990
Kalathiskos-dancers on vases 996 ff. in limestone reliefs at Trysa 1000 ff. on coins of Abdera 1002 f. in marble reliefs of later Attic school 1003 in neo-Attic reliefs 1006 ff. of Arretine ware 1003 1006 of Roman mural reliefs in terra cotta 1006 1008 assimilated to Nikai 1008 on gold earring 1009 'in the round' 1009 on terra-cotta plaques of Hellenistic date 1011 on gems of imperial date 1011
Kalathiskos-runners 1012
Kálathos, ritual basket called 990 ff. adorned with rape of Persephone 991 containing corn-ears and poppy-heads 991 drawn by biga of humped oxen 991 drawn by quadriga of horses 991 drawn by two winged snakes 991 flanked by two torches 991 on column between two winged snakes 991 f. of Artemis 992 f. of Sarapis 1148
Kalinka, E. 189_1 1140 1162
Kappótas, etymology of 941 f.
Karo, G. 681 1073 1091 1141
Karouzos, Ch. 1151 f.
Kathédra in cult of the dead 1140
Katsarov, G. I. 1125 1159
Kaufmann, C. M. 145_2 971_0 972_0
Kazarow, G. I. See Katsarov, G. I.
Keil, B. 271 271_9
Keil, J. 642_1 1078 1174
Kekulé von Stradonitz, R. 710 1003
Kelainephés 33 f.
Keller, O. 132_2 324_1 683_1 802
Kennett, Mrs D. K. 845_0
Kennett, R. H. 771_8

Kent, C. F. 167_5
Keramopoullos, A. D. 1187
Kerényi, K. 1119 1183
Kern, O. $60_{5(6)}$ 189_1 422_0 730 914_0 949_{10} 1128
Kérnos 248_1 724_0
Keune 1142
Keyes, C. W. 823_{11} 825_0
Keys in hail-charm 877
Kibotoí of Demeter and Persephone 712 on coins of Apameia in Phrygia 530
'Kid,' Orphic votary as 1118
'Kids,' Dionysos-worshippers as 1104
Kieseritzky, G. 76_1
Kiltgang See Clandestine intercourse
King, essential features of old-world 420_0 put to death at first symptom of physical decline 733 divinity of, quits body in form of bird 733 responsible for crops 74 hence king or king's son sacrificed in time of famine 74 as human Zeus 269 269_7 733 becomes Osiris 1131
Kings, rule of succession for primitive 177_0 733 of Aeolians personate Zeus 141 of early Greeks honoured as embodiments of Zeus 733 of Baganda reborn as lions 957_0 of the Kábul valley emergent from, or seated on, clouds 42 f.
'King of May' 1133
King, J. E. 122_6
King, Miss L. S. 261_7
Kiškanú-tree 1136
Kíste 990
Kite a bird of ill omen in Hellas 45 f. 46_1 or shearwater, as bird form of Athena 781
Kithára of Apollon 683 684 of Orpheus 419
Kjellberg, L. 252_0
Klein, W. 183 706_6
Klinz, A. 1026_7
Kluge, F. 501_5
Kluge, K. 1110 1122
Knaack, G. 954_1
Knees of the gods 717
Knielauf, sub-'Minoan' or sub-'Mycenaean' on gem from Melos 1138 archaic type of, used to represent Engonasin or Ingeniculus in Ionic art of s. vi B.C. 488 archaic type of, used to represent Herakles in early art 488 archaic type of, modified to represent Theseus raising the rock 485_{12}
Knife used in bouphónia at Athens tried, condemned, and cast into sea 583 ff.
Knight, W. F. J. 1087
Knox, A. D. 1114
Köchly, H. 531
Köhler, R. 977
Köhler, U. 114
Körte, A. 318 560_2 560_6
Kolbe, W. 939
Kolf, Miss van der 1110
Koppers, W. 1179
Koskinomanteía 336 ff.
Kóttabos-stand 1000
Koujeas, S. 1147
Kourouniotes, K. 248_1 315_2
Kraeling, C. H. 1179
Krahe, H. 1184 1189
Kranz, W. 746_3
Krappe, A. H. 74 336_5 404_0 447_6 730 933_7 936_1 986 f. 1076 1078 1080 1116 1134 1135 1182 1184 1187
Kretschmer, P. 14_9 76_1 112_3 191_8 226 $275_{0(3)}$ 608_4 1090 1106 1113 1131 1141 1155 1187
Kroll, W. 248_1 371_0 421_0 430_0 993 1081 1174
Krumbacher, K. 953_6
Kruse, gr. 248_1 762_2 1111 1172
Ktéis in ritual basket 993 (?) of Astarte or Astaroth (?) 918_3 of Mother of the gods (?) 918_3 on black stone of Emesa 906 916_1 on black stone of Mecca 918 on black stone of Pessinous (?) 898 916_1 on neolithic celt 1143 votive in marble 1143 votive in terra cotta 1143
Kubitschek, J. W. 271
Kudurru 892_0 1135
Künstle, K. 1147
Küster, E. 239_1 767_2
Kugler, F. X. 341_3
Kuhn, A. $95_{3(1f.)}$ 498_3 793_6
Kuhnert, E. 402_1 601_2 967_1
Kunze, F. 1072
Kýrbeis and áxones of Solon as the voice of Zeus 949 bibliography of 1183 f.

Lab 1072 f.
Labarum derived from lábrys 1141 derived from laureatum (?) 1141 in relation to lábrys 946
Labour, symbols of fruitless 449
Lábrys re-shaped into labarum 946 survives as Georgian lalvari 1141 See Axe, double Labyrinth See Index I
Labýrinthos, etymology of 1141
Lackeit, C. 914_0
Lacoste, H. 1120 f.
Ladder as celestial ascent 946 as Egyptian amulet 946 as soul-path 1118 in gilded wood with two silver snakes twined about it 1119 in Thracian and Orphic beliefs 946 of Jacob 884_0 891 1118 f. of Salvation 946
La Fuye, Allotte de 1193
Laistner, L. 358 f. 1160
Lajard, F. 420_0 f.
Lake, E. F. Coote 1156
Lamb, golden 1080
Lamb, Miss D. 810_3
Lamb, Miss W. 217_0 670_3
Lamps, Christian 145_2 261_7 Roman 41 948 981
Lanciani, R. 136_2
Land of Cokaygne 500 ff. 504_1
Landerer, X. 179_2
Lane, E. W. 916_1
Langdon, S. 550_0 1098 1136

Lange, K. 187_3
Lapis lazuli, Mesopotamian inlay of 1066 1102
Lark 44 45_0
Lárnax from Miletos in Crete 650_0
Last, H. 315_0
Latte, K. 116 992 f. 1127 1192
Lattermann, H. 1070
Lauer, J. F. 729 846
Laufer, B. 257_1
Laughter of divine derision 969_1 of Zeus in late Homeric theomachia 969_1 of Zeus at post-Homeric pranks of Hermes 969_1 of Zeus Olýmpios at Caligula's sacrilege 969
Laum, B. $599_{(2)}$ 606_3 611
Launay, L. de 923_1
Launay, R. de 1086
Laurent, M. 1187
Lawrence, A. W. 353_4 425_3 839
Lawson, H. 900_3
Lawson, J. C. 164_1 284 287 289 369_3 394 f. 412_0 $721_{5(2)}$
Layard, J. 1087
Lead 'figurines d'envoûtement' 1162
Leaf, W. 924 1065
Leake, W. M. 713 939 1027_1
Leap, Leucadian 136_3 1076
Leaven 167_5
Le Bas, P. 939
Lechat, H. $251_{0(1)}$ $718_{0(8)}$ 720_3 768
Leclercq, H. 528_4 529_4
Le Coq, A. von 1020
Legerlotz, G. 94_2
Legrain, L. 883_0
Le Grand, M. A. 501_3
Legs, crossed 1108
Lehmann-Hartleben, K. 225_1 1188
Lehrs, K. 49_0
Leipoldt, J. 1132
Lekanomanteia 1122
Leland, C. G. 259_0
Lemerle, P. 1196
Lemnian earth 229 ff.
Lenormant, C. 300_0 529_4 601_2 734_0 802
Lenormant, F. 884_0 1194
Lenz, H. O. 759_5
Leonard 248_1
Leonardos, B. 1181
Leonine gods 1095 looks of Alexander the Great 957_0
Leopard-skin 57_0
Leopold, R. 136_2
Lerat, L. 937_5
Leroux, G. 116 152_6
Leskien, A. 976 f.
Lesky, A. 1092
Lethaby, W. R. 711 1184 f.
Letter-box for persons consulting Iupiter Heliopolitanus 1095
'Leucadian Leap,' 136_3 1076
Levi, Miss A. 1128
Levy, Miss G. R. 1136
Lewis, C. B. 509_2
Lewy, H. 1115
Libation-funnels in use at Ras Shamra 1193 f.
Libertini, G. 107_3
'Libyans,' black pitchers set upon tombs of the unmarried 372
Licht, H. 1000 1134 1143
Lictor, axe of, as iron model in tomb at Vetulonia 1192
Lictors, axes of, in Roman reliefs 1192
Lidzbarski, M. 889_5
Liebrecht, F. 95_0 99_0
Lietzmann, H. 136_2
Life of Athena manifested by flora and fauna of Akropolis 749 831 837 866
Life-trees at Athens 760 762 at Megara 762 in general 760_4
Light, pillar of 1115 f.
Lightning as a double axe 943 as a fork 943 as a spear 943 as a sword 943 as a triple fork 1150 (?) as a weapon 1137 as a whip 1160 as destructive glance of Zeus 943 as irresistible weapon of Zeus 943 strikes statue of Julian at Kaisareia Paneas 972_0 strikes statue of Zeus Olýmpios 968 strikes temple of Zeus Olýmpios 958 1196
Lightning-lore learnt by Numa from Iupiter Elicius 433_0
Lightning-spell with onions, hair, and sprats 433_0
Líknon as basket-cradle of Tithonos 247 bibliography of 248_1
Lily-flowers 955
Lily-sceptre 92_0
Lily-wreath 88_0
Lindsay, W. M. 1105
Lion as arm-rest of throne $1052_{(6)}$ as mount of Iuno Caelestis 1045 as symbol of royalty 957_0 as totem of Baganda kings 957_0 Hittite mother-goddess standing on 834 horned, as attribute of Aion 1180 with star on shoulder 1112 See also Leonine
Lions as decoration of divine or royal thrones 956_2 957_0 Sumerian Lilith (?) standing on 832 834
Lioness-heads from Knossos, Delphoi, and Mykenai 1174
Lion-footed stool 904 957_0
Lion-god of Hittites 837
Lion-legged throne 957_0
'Lion-seat' of Vikrama 957_0
Lion's head as fountain 272_5 561 as sign of Gennaios 1095
Lion-skin of Porphyrion 57_0
Lion-skins of Hittite lion-god 837
Lippold, G. 121_1 123_3 123_5 123_6 570_5 807_3 1108 1155
Litholatry in myth of Hyperochos and Phemios 1105 of Greeks and Romans 887_1 of Levantines 936 of Saracens 915_2
Lithophóroi 888_4
Lloyd, A. H. 307_0 614_5 982 1122
Lobeck, C. A. 120 166_0 298_9 590_7 1130

Locatival forms give rise to new nominatives 224 748
Lods, A. 910_5
Loeff, A. R. van der 223_9
Loeschcke, G. $60_{5(6)}$ 67_0 413_0 711
Löwy, E. 207_0 1131 1179
Lones, T. E. 1193
Loom-weights from Tarentum 795
Lorimer, Miss H. L. 394
Lots 716_5 717
Loutrophóros, nuptial, boy or girl who carried the bridal bath 371 f. pitcher carried by girl in bridal procession and set beside lébetes for bath 388 f.
Loutrophóros, sepulchral, pitcher placed over tomb of the unmarried 372 ff. 603 carried by girl in funeral procession and set up on grave-mound 387 carved on stéle 392 f.
Loutrophóroi, sepulchral, reducible to nuptial 396 cp. 427 three-handled 375 388_2
Love in relation to Zeus 1189
Lucas, A. 968_4
Lucas, C. W. 781_3
'Ludovisi Throne' and its Boston pendant 1044_4 (?)
Ludwich, A. 531
Lullies, R. 1132
Lycanthropy See Were-wolves
Lychnomanteia 1122
Lycian symbol 1074
Lydekker, R. 499_3

Maas, P. 115
Maass, E. 99_0 209_1 237_2 416_0 567_0 594_6 1067 1128
Macalister, R. A. S. 145_2 1115 f.
MacCulloch, J. A. 119_4 $367_{2\,f.}$ 549_2 1067 f. 1124
Macdonald, Sir G. 789 898_1
Macdonald, Miss L. 4_0
Macdonell, A. A. 273_2 362_3
Mace, bronze, from Willingham Fen 1099 f.
Mach, E. von 706_6
Macler, F. 293_2
Macpherson, S. C. 446
Macurdy, Miss G. H. 1114 1137 1140 1174
Madden, F. W. 529_0 529_4
Maffei, F. S. 896_0
Magic combined with prayer 315 316 distrust of 428 mimetic, in Naxian custom 1026_4 mimetic, in Swedish custom 1026_4 See also Cloud-charm, Hail-charm, Lightning-spell, Rain-charm, Rain-magic Magical circle 1073 herbs used by birds 53_1 horse 1169 1171 marks on amulets 340 ff. papyri 322_0 332_3 texts (late Greek) 332_3 throne made by Hephaistos for Hera 222
Magician, Chaldaean (Iulianus) 332 Egyptian (Arnouphis) 325 f. 332 Zeus as 31
Magnusen, F. 404_0 f.
Magpie 1138
Mair, A. W. 268_3
Maiuri, A. 1034 1036_1
Malachite 538_0 933_7 1194
Mallet used by Valeria Luperca to tap sick folk and recover them of their sickness 802_5
Mallowan, M. E. L. 1138
Malten, L. 181_1 190_7 221 227_8 228 605_0 1101 1176 1179
Manalis lapis as portal of Orcus 432 1194 as rain charm 432 434 1194 at Rome 429 ff. 1194 etymology of 432 1194
Manales lapides or petrae 434 f. 1194
Manna 495 f.
Mannhardt, W. 65_0 235_2 289 334_2 $599_{(3)}$
Man-slayer, attitude of Zeus towards 951 f.
Marcellus, Count de 531
Maresch, G. 1113 1134
Margoliouth, D. S. 919_3
Mariani, L. 535_1
Marinatos, S. 189_1 1066 1087 1143 1150
Marine cortège escorts souls to Islands of the Blest 133
Marionettes by Heron of Alexandreia 868
Mariti, G. 591_1
Marmorstein, A. 446_2
Marót, K. 1103
Marriage and mysteries analogous 425 f. ceremonial, of hierophant (Zeus) and priestess (Demeter) $301_{0(3)}$ endogamic, in family of Aiolos Hippotades 110 endogamic, of Danaïdes and Aigyptiadai 369 endogamic, among Thessalians 110 endogamic, of Ptolemies 111 of brother and sister 110 f. of Danaïdes and Aigyptiadai as fertility-charm 369 426 of Dionysos and Basilinna 1105 of Earth and Sky 289 1092 of Earth and Sky the first of all marriages 454 of Sun and Moon in Crete 1092 of Zeus and Hera 111 (See also Hieròs gámos)
Marriage post mortem 393 ff. traces of in Scandinavia, Germany, Russia, Greece 394 with god or goddess of the Underworld 395 f. 1189
Marriage-preparations on pyxis $388_{3(a)}$
Marriage-procession on vases 388 ff.
Marriage-test of Penelope explained by parallel from the Mundas of Chota Nagpur 1147
Marshall, F. H. 405_0 822
Marshall, Sir J. 1087 1106 1156
Marzell, H. 1105
Masks, black, with sheep's horns 1156 foliate in church architecture 1133 of early La Tène art 863 on Dionysiac pillar 1103 Satyric 559_4 worn by flute-players at Rome 856_0
Massēbhoth 891 910 983 in relation to 'ăshērîm 910 prehistory of 910_5 shaped into quasi-human form 910_5 911_0
Mât de cocagne 505
Matrilinear descent, transition from, to patrilinear descent 89_1
Matthews, R. 1169 ff.
Mattingly, H. 886_2 906_2 946_{16} 1074

Matz, F. 812$_1$ 1154 f.
Mau, A. 444$_2$
Mayer, M. 387$_2$ 797 842$_2$ 897$_3$ 931$_1$ 935$_1$ 941 f.
May-garland 1076 See also 'Garland'
Maylam, P. 1179
McKay, J. G. 1068
Meadow of Hera 1064$_1$
Meadows of Selene and Aphrodite 1064$_4$
Méautis, G. 1131
Megas, G. A. 358
Meier, H. 501$_4$ 502$_6$
Meillet, A. 94$_2$ 434$_6$
Meister, R. 94$_2$ 289$_2$
'Melian' reliefs 181 f. 414$_{0(a)}$
Mêlon on coins of Melos a pomegranate, not an apple 817$_6$
Mendel, G. 557$_7$ 558 630$_1$ ff. 1155 1160 1181
Menhirs-sculptés 910$_5$
Mercklin, L. 1111
Merry, W. W. 140$_7$ 978
Meteoric iron, early use of 922 f.
Meteorite as luck of Kyzikos 886$_5$ as stone of Kronos (?) 938 as Zeus Kappótas (?) 942 figured as star (?) 886$_2$ regarded as a babe 920 922 927 regarded as a mother 920 represented by omphalós (?) 885$_6$
Meteorites a sign of downfall and ill-luck 882 distinguished in popular belief from shooting-stars 882 identified with baityloi or baitýlia 892 892$_1$ 938 identified with Homeric ákmones 924 f. in relation to Kybele 893 ff.
Metonymy 227$_7$
Meyer, E. 360$_4$ 900$_1$ 914$_1$
Meyer, E. H. 51$_0$ 277$_0$ 446$_5$ 793$_6$
Meyer, G. 276$_0$
Meyer, L. 274$_{6(1)}$
Meyer, R. M. 447$_0$
Meyer-Lübke, W. 434$_0$
Michaelis, A. 583$_2$ 702$_0$ 713 718$_{0(3)}$ 718$_2$ 720$_3$
Miers, H. A. 881$_3$
Milchhöfer, A. 373 402$_1$
Milk in Orphic rites 1118
Millingen, J. 144
Milne, H. J. M. 1134 1137
Milne, J. G. 346$_0$
Miltner, F. 145$_2$
Minervini, G. 100
Minns, E. H. 155$_2$ 654$_0$ 655$_0$ 822 978 1173
Miracle of the Quadi 324 ff. of Zeus Panámaros 1066
Mirror in hail-charm 876 of Aphrodite 94$_0$ 622$_{(3)}$ of Eros 622$_{(3)}$
Mirrors, Etruscan 86$_{0(5)}$ 89$_1$ 259 677$_0$ ff. 806 815$_0$ 839 1090 1112 Greek 618$_{(3)}$
Mirror-cases of early imperial date 981 f.
Mirror-stands, Greek 1016 ff.
Mischkowski, H. 177$_1$ 579$_{5(3)}$
Mitford, T. B. 1187
Mjöllnir 1140
Mogk, E. 447$_0$ 1179
Mommsen, A. 104$_0$ 241$_0$ 576$_1$ 584$_0$ 584$_1$ 585 586$_2$ 597 719 1047 1047$_2$ 1140
Mommsen, Th. 329$_0$ 444
Monier-Williams, Sir M. 925$_7$ 957$_0$
Monster in literature and art made more monstrous still 403$_1$
Montelius, O. 1128
Montessus de Ballore, Count de 1
Montet, P. 1076
Months, gods of the 1055 'Ανθεστηριών 179$_0$ 604$_2$ 1105 'Απελλαίος 551$_3$ Αὐδναῖος 552 Ἄφριος 271 'Αφροδίσιος 653$_0$ Athyr 345$_0$ Βατρόμιος 564$_2$ 566$_2$ Βοηδρομιών 598$_3$ Γαμηλιών 95$_0$ 1047 Δῖος 551$_3$ 1163 Ελαφιών 95$_0$ Ἑκατομβαιών 720 Ζμίνθιος 1124 Θαργηλιών 178$_0$ 241 Ianuarius 1067 Κάρνειος 567 Μαιμακτηριών 321$_0$ Maius 321$_0$ Μαχανεύς or Μαχάνειος 567$_0$ Πεδαγείτνιος 567 Περίτιος 1159 Ποσειδεών 179$_0$ Πυανοψιών 166$_0$ 211 Σκιροφοριών 115 165 241 576 598$_3$ 599$_{(3)}$ 602 720$_1$ 1183
Moon called Gorgónion 805$_4$ 845 face in the 805$_4$ 845
Moon, Miss N. See Oakeshott, Mrs W. F.
Moore, G. F. 887 887$_8$ 892 937$_6$
Moral stability of Zeus 948 ff.
Mordtmann, J. H. 1163
Moret, A. 305$_0$ 306$_0$
Morgan, M. H. 315 322$_0$
Moriai offshoots from the ἀστὴ ἐλαία on the Akropolis at Athens 187$_2$
Moritz, B. 914$_1$
Mosaics 129 626$_{(2)}$ 627$_{(3)}$ 948
Mother-and-child motifs 681 681$_2$ 685$_2$ 730 f.
Mother-of-pearl 1102
Mother-right in early Greece 89$_1$ (?)
Mountain identified with rain-god 321$_0$
Mountains, conventional design for 834
Mountain-worship 963 1068
Mouse in folklore and religion 1081 f.
Mouterde, R. 1080 1163
Mowat, R. 779$_0$
Mud, sinners sunk in 398$_5$
Mühlestein, H. 1192
Müller, F. Max 273$_2$
Müller, H. D. 111
Müller, K. O. 436
Müller, S. 367$_5$
Müller, V. 1138
Münter, F. 917 925 937$_6$ 938$_3$
Muir, Sir W. 919$_4$
Muller, F. 439$_2$
Mummy represented on black-figured lékythos 351$_4$
Munch, P. A. 447$_0$
Mundus as gate of Underworld 431 f. as prehistoric tomb 440 f. as reservoir of water 438 ff. as subterranean granary for seed-corn 437 f. at Capua 429$_1$ at Rome 429 ff. etymology of 430$_0$ 431$_2$ 439 f.
Munro, H. A. J. 453
Munro, J. A. R. 648$_0$ 649$_0$
Mural crown of winged Minerva 825$_5$

Mural reliefs in marble, kalathiskos-dancers 1003 1007 f.
Mural reliefs in terra cotta, Athena and Argo 778_1 779_0 Athena (Palladion) between kalathiskos-dancers 820_2 1006 Theseus raising the rock 485_{12}
Murray, A. S. 517_0 633_0 711 718_2 720_3 815_0
Murray, G. 1065 1068
Murray, Miss M. A. 1139 1192 1193
Mushrooms as parents of men 478 as wombs 478_2
Mýdros 924
Mylonas, G. E. 1181 1191
Myres, J. L. 736_3 923_0 1066
Myrrh 70
Myrtle-boughs covering xóanon of Hermes 725_5
Myrtle-wreath of Hekate 272_5 of initiates at Eleusis 418_3 of Orphist 418 f.
Mysteries and marriage analogous 425 f. at Agra 722 724 724_0 in Crete 953 at Eleusis 598 724_0 at Eleusis derived from, or influenced by, Egyptian beliefs $302_{0\,(5\,f.)}$ at Eleusis perhaps alluded to by Christ 307_0 at Mytilene 167 in Samothrace 133 135 of Demeter at Theira 992 of Men at Theira 992 water-carrying in 397 ff.
Mysticism, growth of, in Greece from c. 600 B.C. 395
Myths arising from art-forms misunderstood 732 (?) 732_3 767_2 arising from facts misunderstood 418_0 (?) arising from historical events 893 arising from literary allusions misunderstood 823_7 arising from metaphor 984 giving rise to would-be history 893 of accommodation 735

Nachod, H. 372_6 372_8 373
Nail of the sky 1116
Name of Prousias i crowned by Athena 820 of Thothmes iii as a name of power 848_0
Names, clipped 271 289_2 594_6 diminutive of affection euphemistic 586 723_0 for owl commonly onomatopoeic 797_4 cp. 799_0 of animals borne by priests and priestesses 1082 f. of certain birds derived from their fiery nature 791 f. of Danaïdes and Aigyptiadai 357_2 of dead avoided 157 of most mountains pre-Greek 730_1 of rivers Danube, Dnieper, Dniester, Don, etc. 366 of priests well-omened 61_1 645_0 888_5 1162 of ships well-omened 896_0 of Silenoi significant 513_1 theophoric 269 859_2 two (popular and official), applied to one god (?) 941 well-omened 270 526 535_1 563_4 564_0
Nárthex 88_0
Navarro, J. M. de 1136
Navel-string of king in Uganda regarded as 'twin' and kept in special house 833_0
Nebuly 43
Negro's head as Cretan amulet 848_0
Nehring, A. 1103 1128
Neil, R. A. 875_0
Néktar identified with honey 496 f. etymology of 497 Poros drunk with 746 drawn from fore-finger of Indra 97_0
Nékyia in Polygnotos' fresco at Delphoi 397 f. 712_4 on black-figured amphora at Munich 399 f. on black-figured lékythos at Palermo 400 f. See also Underworld Neo-Attic reliefs 659_0 660_0 689_3 716_4 1006 ff.
Neolithic celts regarded as curative 941_1 celts with incised designs 1143 celts inscribed 1137 celts sliced and inscribed 1138 implements believed to have fallen from heaven 892 899 f. pounder facetted and inlaid with tin to serve as idol (?) 898 ff. 925_6
Nephodiôktai 33 878
Neter 1139
Neuburger, A. 923_0 968_4
Neugebauer, K. A. 1078 1182 1186 f.
Neumann, C. 179_2 760_0
Newberry, P. E. 884_0 1091
Newell, E. T. 869_2
Newton, J. 1074
Nicklin, T. 1103
Night of Herakles' conception more and more protracted 508_3
Nightjar as spinner 795_6
Nightmare personified as Gorgon 846 (?) personified as nude woman with bird's wings and claws (Siren ?) 834_3 personified as Oknos 401_1 (?)
Nile-water as the seed of Osiris has fertilising virtues 344_3 344_6 the equivalent of snow and rain 348 the sanctity of 1193
Nilsson, M. P. 63_6 76_1 141_3 189_1 $312_{0(4)}$ 404_0 578_2 $599_{(3)}$ 603_{12} 650_9 825 866_1 993 1045 1124 f. 1131 1138 1150 1183 1189 1191
Nimbus of Aion, radiate 913_4 of Parthenos = Virgo, blue with golden rays 823 of Zeus, whitish 36 bibliography of 72_1
Nineck, M. 421_0 743_8
Nine days' celebration (novendiale sacrum) 492 days' observance (feriae per novem dies) 492 nights of Herakles' conception 509_0 years' concealment of Hephaistos 228
Nipples of Zeus (?) 1167
Nissen, H. 719
Nock, A. D. 5_0 63_4 225_1 1080 1117 1131 1161 1163 f. 1182 1184
Nöldeke, T. 1163
Norden, E. 25_1 473_4 914_0
Nordström, V. 1122
North star called 'The golden pillar', 'The iron pillar', 'The lone post', 'The golden post' 1116 f.
Norwood, G. 4_0
Nudipedalia 433_0

Nudity of Aphrodite 698_8 834 1016 of Astarte 834 1016 (?) of Athena (?) 868_5 of Charites 1070 of Hittite mother-goddess 834 of Ištar 834 of Lilith (?) 832 ff.
Nurses of Bakchos or Iakchos 225_1 of Dionysos 228_8 of Zeus 225_1

Oak, Great, as Finnish conception of Milky Way 1192
Oak-branch used in rain-magic 267
Oak-leaves springing from eyes, nose, and ears of foliate mask 1133
Oak-tree of Zeus 568 569 880 (?)
Oak-trees produce bees and honey 498_2
Oak-wreath of Zeus 36 537 f. 1033 (?) 1191
Oakeshott, Mrs W. F. 998 f.
Oath by Agraulos 245 by the beast 49_6 by cabbage 47_5 by caper-plant 47_5 by dog 47_5 by goat 47_5 by goose 46 47_5 by oak-tree 47_5 by Pandrosos 245 by plane-tree 47_5 by poppy 49_6 by ram 47_5 by the sap 49_6 by swan 47_5 by Mt Tomori near Berat 1169 1171 by vegetables 47_5 by wine (?) 47_5 liable to euphemistic alteration 49_6 50_0 of épheboi in precinct of Aglauros 242 of Euripides 47_5 of Rhadamanthys 47_5 of Sokrates 47_5
Oaths in relation to Zeus 1148 list of deities witnessing 245_{10} taken under open sky 1148
Obelisk twined about with snake 1127 1128
Oberhummer, E. 970_2
Oeconomus, G. P. 373_8 387_3 See also Oikonomos, G. P.
Oepke, A. 1181
Oesterreich, T. K. 1122
Ohnefalsch-Richter, M. 648_6
Oikonomos, G. P. 113 1184 See also Oeconomus, G. P.
Oikourós óphis 772_4
Oil used as unguent before bath in the Herkyna 1182 used to preserve statues in ivory or wood 967 f.
Okýthoön 1064_4
Olive-branch filleted 823
Olive-leaves on Athena's helmet 181
Olive-sprig held by suppliant 1078
Olive-tree called 'Athena' 763_4 (?) called 'Athena-tree' 763 of Athena called 'the Stunted or Writhen Olive' and 'the Citizen Olive' 187_2 760 of Athena on the Akropolis at Athens 187_2 243 749 ff. 831 of Pygmalion at Gadeira 983 on Ambrosiai Petrai 978 f.
Olive-trees as life-trees at Athens and Megara 760 762 called moríai furnish oil for Panathenaic victors 187_2 760 of immemorial age 759_5 760_0
Olive-wreath of Dionysiac Zeus 685_2 (?) of Zeus Olýmpios 954
Oliverio, G. 116_0
Omophagy, Athenian substitute for dramatic 1105 f. bovine 610 f. human 611 f. (?)
Omphalós at Delphoi 1120 f. 1191 f. amended inscription on Delphic 1120 f. at Knossos (?) 1120 in Egypt (?) 1122 or ovoid stone with snake twined round it on coins of Tyre 982 as navel of earth 1122 as 'rain-gathering' stone (?) 320_4 as tomb of Dionysos (?) 724_0 885_0 1122 representing meteorite (?) 885_0 representing mound of earth 885_0 1121 representing mountain (?) 885_0 1121 representing thunderbolt (?) 885_0
Onians, R. B. 1073
Onions in lightning-spell 433_0
Onyx 39 ff. 851_2 948
Opitz, D. 832_2
Oppermann, H. 1066
Oracles of Apollon 242_6 of Apollon at Branchidai 520_4 of Apollon at Delphoi (Pytho) 455 520 590 593 f. 609 of Apollon at Hybla 1029 of baítylos 888 f. of Leto at Bouto (Boutos, Boutoi) 983 f. of Orpheus' head in Lesbos 99 ff. 441_6 of Sibylline books 895 896_4 of Sun-tree and Moon-tree in Prasiake 420_0 f. of Zeus Ámmon 914_0 of Zeus at Dodona 1012
Ordeal, trial by, among Greeks and Romans 428_1 by carrying water in sieve 428 by immersion in sea 298 by towing ship up the Tiber 895 f.
Orcites See Siderites
Oriental influence in Mediterranean c. 600 B.C. 395
Orlandos, A. C. See Orlandos, A. K.
Orlandos, A. K. 1073 1166
Ornithomorphic conception of Athena passes gradually into anthropomorphic conception 794
Orth, F. 132_2 413_0 683_1
Otherworld, doorway to, formed by clashing mountain-walls 976 987 island 109 135 landscape as described on gold tablets from Eleuthernai 420_0 landscape as described on gold tablet from Petelia 420_0 landscape in Celtic mythology 420_0 landscape in south-European folk-tales 420_0 landscape in The Revelation of St John 420_0 visit 112
Overbeck, J. 469_2 537, 572_3 573 587_2 631_3 634_2 669 711 954_7
Owl as attribute of Athena 558 776 ff. as attribute of Minerva 41 as attribute of Zeus 794 as bird form of Athena 781 784 ff. 831 f. as omen of victory 784 f. 819 as bird of ill-omen 835_2 as lightning-bird 792 ff. as shield-sign 806_5 as spinner 795 795_6 between two sprigs of olive as town-arms of Athens 785 ff. branded on Athenian slaves 790 colossal, of white marble found on Akropolis 776 ff. double-bodied, on Athenian diobols 789_3 double-bodied, on tickets of Athenian dikasts 789_3 folk-lore of the 785_1 hung on crosses and roof-tops to avert bad weather 793 nailed up to avert hail 793 878 nailed up to avert lightning 793 of Athena equivalent to eagle of Zeus 793 on altar of Athena 782_4 on head of Athena 46 825 827 on helmet of Athena 47_0 827 on wing of Athena 809 on column 387_3 778_1 779_0 on sceptre of Zeus 734_1 on wrist of Zeus 734_1 on thunderbolt 794 on tickets and tokens of Athenian dikasts 789 f. Polyphonte transformed into 57_2 with helmeted head of Athena 801 ff.

Owl (cont.)
Owls draw chariot of Athena 830 war on crows 238_1
Ox as embodiment of Zeus Polieûs 606 enters church of St George ready for sacrifice 1194 first killed by Prometheus 661 first sacrificed by Thaulon 597 flayed, stuffed with hay, and yoked to plough in the Dipolieia at Athens 583 605 f. ploughing, must not be eaten 591_1 $600_{(5)}$ treated as sacrosanct 591 591_1 $600_{(5)}$ 605 f.
Ox-head garlanded 628 on shield of Athena 670 670_2
Ox-hide cape of Argos 634_1 See also Bull's-hide
Ox-murder 576_3 605 f.

Pagenstecher, R. 387_3
Palládion 313_3(?) 650_0(?) 770 896 903_5
Palm-tree 1078
Panárion 913
Pankarpia 1180
Panofka, T. 400_2 614_5
Pan-pipes 640_0
Pansa, G. 888_9
Pantheistic types, Iupiter 1129 Zeus 745 1129
Panther of Hera Argeia 67 of Zeus Kários 569_5
Panther-skin of Argos 638_0 of Dionysos 713 721
Papadakes, A. 1070
Papadopoulos, A. A. 1161
Pappadakis, N. G. 1165 1166
Paraskeuaïdes, S. G. 1184
Parasols protecting stone of Elagabalos 902_0 905 f.
Páredros of mother-goddess, at once her husband and her child 952
Parke, H. W. 1124
Partridge 1111
Partsch, J. 1 179_2 760_0
Pascal, C. $60_{5(?)}$
Paternity, a primitive notion of, implied by birth of Athena from head of Zeus 731 f.
Paton, J. M. 213_3 758_3 771_1 772_2
Paton, W. R. 152_3
Patroni, G. 1131
Pauli, C. 260_0 $680_{(4)}$
Payne, E. J. 476_1
Payne, H. G. G. 189_1 560_2 560_6 670_3 671_0 1131 1150
Peacock as attribute of Iuno 41
Pearson, A. C. 79_0 1102
Peck, E. S. 232_2
Peek, W. 1187
Peeters, F. 1182
Pélanos 578_4
Pélekys in relation to balag (?) 1141
Pempôbolon 1156
Pendlebury, J. D. S. 189_1 1070 1122 1143
Pentagram 341_3 1193
Pentalpha See Pentagram
Péplos given by Athena to Herakles 1186 in the Parthenon frieze 1186 of Athena worn by basileús (?) 1186
Perdicium 1111
Perdrizet, P. 132_2 540_1 785_1 795_3 795_5 1036_1
Peridéraia 765
Pernice, E. 248_1 373 798_0
Perrot, G. 1023
Personification of dew (Herse) 245 of cicala (Tithonos) 257 257_1 of clouds (Nephelai) 68 ff. of earthquake 27 ff. of rain-storm on column of Marcus Aurelius 333
Perspective, above = beyond 515 of footstool etc. seen from above 89_1 of throne etc. seen from below 92_0 693_0
Persson, A. W. 623_1 1181
Pestle called ákmon 925 personified as Thyestes the storm-god (?) 899_4 See also Pounder Petersen, E. 133 223_9 $252_{0(2)}$ 327_2 329_0 330_0 713 $718_{0(4)}$ 719_1 720_3 722
Petrikovits, H. 1131
Pettazzoni, R. 190_7 944_{21}
Pézard, M. 911_0
Pfister, F. 401_2 730 873_2 1103
Pfuhl, E. 400_2 689_3 690 691_3
Phaidryntaí 967
Phálara 822
Phallic deities 1083 1183
Phallós as magic instrument 321_0 as Pelasgian god 191_0(?) hooded as Genius Cucullatus in Romano-Celtic area 1182 f. in Herzegovina etc. 1105 in ritual basket 993 (?) of Devil 1078 of Hermes tipped with ram's head 1082 made of island marble 170 set upright in mortar 170
Phantom made of cloud substituted for goddess 74 of Aeneas 102 f. of Aineias 103 of Demeter wooed by Iasion 75 ff. of Dionysos 79 of Eurydike 99 f. 102 of Helene 78 f. of Hera wooed by Endymion 74 of Hera wooed by Ixion 74 f. of Klytaimestra 102
Pharmakoí 321_0
Philadelpheus, A. 1124 1181
Philios, D. 248_1 $309_{4(3)}$ 698_4
Philippart, H. 102_0
Philippson, A. 2
Phillips, F. C. 898_4
Phillpotts, Miss B. S. (Dame Bertha) 1104
Philosophy a refinement upon folk-belief 454

Phlegýas 791
Phléxis 791
Phlýakes 734_0 738 f.
Phoenix 791_6 with radiate nimbus 913_4
Physical foundations of the cult of Zeus 943 f.
'Physical' interpretations of mythology 728 f.
Picard, C. 188_1 598_1 688_4 825 1122 1124 1134 1135 1137 1138 1140 1146 f. 1155 f. 1159 1161 1162 1166 1173 f. 1174 1184 1191 f. 1196
Pick, B. 898_1
Pickard-Cambridge, A. W. 1103 1106 1112
Pig as form of Attis (?) 874_{15} first killed by Klymene 593 sacrifice to 1103 sacrificed to Aphrodite 320_4 sacrificed to Zeus Heraîos 1047
Pigeon as bird form of Athena 781
Pigeons set free in Armenian rite 293
Pillar of Apollon inscribed ΚΑΡΝΕΙΟΣ 996 of fire 1118 of light 1115 f. 1118 of Poseidon inscribed with laws in Atlantis 1184 of Prometheus 1115 of the world 1116 surmounted by oval stone 938 surmounted by owl 778 778_1 779_0 with Dionysiac mask or masks 1103
Pillars bear up Delos 984 of Atlas 1115 of Herakles 978 983
Pillar-cults rife in Mediterranean area 937
Pillet, M. 1163
Pine-wreath 1133
Piper, F. 29_3 466_8
Pirates 152 153
Pisani, V. 79_0
Pistrix 380_4
Pithos of Danaïdes 425 of Eurystheus 408_0 riddled with holes 422
Pithoi of Artemis Kalliste 1181 of Zeus 1181 See also Jar, Jars
Plane-tree in votive relief at Munich 1036_1 of Agamemnon at Delphoi 1122
Planets, Byzantine list of metals, plants, and animals assigned to 1098
Plassart, A. 1162 1172 1184 1187
Plates of Iupiter Dolichenus 1098 of Minerva 1098 f.
Platner, S. B. 444_4
Plough of Bouzyges dedicated on Akropolis at Athens 606 of Triptolemos 607
Ploughings ἐπὶ παίδων τεκνώσει 606_4 three sacred (Skiron, Raria, Athens) 178_0 606 610
Poerner, J. 1070
Pohlenz, M. 933_7
Points of the compass 718_2
Poisson, G. 416_1
Pokorny, J. 367_0 439_2 497_3
Polaschek, E. 1167 f.
Polites, N. G. 257_1 335_1 475_1 $721_{5\,(2)}$ 767_2
Polívka, G. 449 977
Polycephalism 403_1 1135
Polyp 14_0 18_0
Pomegranate as food for the dead 815_0 816_0 as fruit from the Tree of Life 816_0 as Pomegranate (cont.)
head-decoration of 'Minoan' goddess 818_0 held by priest of Attis 815_0 in bosom of Nana makes her conceive 815_0 in hand of Athena Nike 811 ff. in hand of Hera Argeia 68 in spell against sterility of women 814_0 of Persephone 815_0 816_0 on coins of Side 813_5 on tomb of Eteokles and Polyneikes 815_0 planted by Aphrodite in Kypros 817_0 prince transforms himself into 818_0 sprung from blood of Dionysos 815_0 sprung from severed member of Agdistis 815_0 suggests blood by its red fruit 814_0 suggests fertility by its many seeds (?) 814_0 symbolises renewal of life after death 815_0 taboo at Athenian Haloia, at Eleusinian mysteries, and in Arcadian temple of Despoina 815_0
Pomegranate-pips falling on ground must not be eaten by women celebrating Thesmophoria 815_0 of Hades eaten by Persephone 815_0
Pomegranate-twigs held by priest of Attis 815_0 (?)
Pomtow, H. 1009
Pópanon 579_0
Possession of the Pythia etc. 1122
Postgate, J. P. 403_1 410_0
Pottier, E. $375_{1\,(b)}$ 559_4 584_0 739_3 782_0 931_4
Pot-Zeuses 1114
Poulsen, F. 392_1 1135
Pounder, neolithic, facetted and inlaid with tin to serve as idol (?) 898 ff. 925_6
Pouqueville, F. C. H. L. $721_{5\,(2)}$
Powell, B. 240_2 241_4
Powell, F. York 1075
Praetorius, J. 337_0 1174
Prandtl, A. 691
Praschniker, C. 1009
Prawn 18_0 (?)
Prayer, attitudes of, in antiquity 151_4 combined with magic 315 316
Prayers of Christians ('Thundering' Legion) call down deluge of rain 326 331 to Zeus for rain 317 ff.
'Praying boy' on shore of Bosporos 149 ff.
Pre-Homeric tags in dactylic metre 7_2 31_1 781 834 866
Preisendanz, K. 549_3 1127
Preller, L. 357 359 1046
Prellwitz, W. 94_2 497_3 664_1 665_0
Premerstein, A. von 79_0 103_2
Prenuptial custom in Naxos 1026_4 free love in Lydia 1026_4
Preuner, E. 1187
Pridik, A. 266_4
Priests and priestesses with animal names 1082 f.
Priesthoods, sale of, at Erythrai in Ionia 1187
Pringsheim, H. G. 248_1
Prott, H. von 225_1 576_1 578_2 $579_{5\,(2)}$ 584_0 584_1 584_2 585_4 585_7 589_3 593_2 593_4 595_0 597_7 $599_{(2)}$ 600_0 611 1047 1047_{11}

Proverbs: ab Iove principium 947_{10} 947_{12} Ἄθως καλύπτει πλευρὰ Λημνίας βοός 1102 αἰγὶς περὶ πόλιν 841_3 βοῦς ἐν πόλει 612 γλαῦκ' Ἀθήναζε 776_3 γλαῦξ ἐν πόλει 776_5 γλαῦξ 784_5 785_2 Διὸς ψῆφος $600_{(4)}$ ἐκ Διὸς ἀρχώμεσθα 947_7 f. Happy is the bride the sun shines on 474_0 If the sky should fall, we should all catch larks 1116 κὴν τὰ Ναννάκου κλαύσω 527 κοσκίνῳ ὕδωρ ἔντλεῖς 427_{10} πάντα γυναῖκες ἴσαντι, καὶ ὡς Ζεὺς ἠγάγεθ' Ἥρην 1026_1 παρὰ δικτύοις ὕδωρ κομίζεις 427_{10} Wasser schöpfen mit einem Siebe 449 Wenn's Krotten hagelt 503_9
Pryce, F. N. 353 460_1 1184
Psychostasia, bibliography of 1148 f.
Puech, A. 1134
Punishments, religious origin of 1072
Purple gallinule 55_1 sheep 1080
Puteal Albani 1057 1059 at Madrid 657 ff. 689 689_3 716 f. in Palazzo Doria 1008 now lost 694_2
Putti of Renaissance art 1025
Pyramids as tombs for horses at Agrigentum 1187 on tomb of Porsenna at Clusium 956_1
Pyre of SS. Adrian, Natalia, etc. 523_4 of Britannicus 524 of Dryas 523 of Habrokomes 524 of Kroisos 518 ff. of St Thekla 524

Qadesh 1092
Quails 495
Quibell, J. E. 305_9 1187
Quincunx of columns in Sardinian model of sky 956_1 of pillars supporting throne of Zeus Olympios (?) 956_1 of pyramids on tomb of Porsenna at Clusium 956_1

Radermacher, L. 112_3 121_1 123_5 474 f.
Raglan, Lady 1133
Rain as means by which sky-father impregnates earth-mother 180 396 452 ff. 944 as seminal fluid of sky-god 322_9 as child of Zeus 322 333 as seed of Zeus 451 ff. as tears of Aither 323 as tears of Zeus 322 f. 333 as urine of Billutschei 334_1 as urine of Hobal 334_1 as urine of Kuzah 334_1 as urine of St Margaret (of Scotland) 335_0 as urine of St (Mary) Magdalen 335_0 as urine of St Médard 334_2 as urine of God passed through sieve 335_1 as urine of Zeus passed through sieve 333 as water falling from hand of Zeus 323 ff. 333 as water poured through a holed vessel in Egypt 338 ff. as water poured through a holed vessel in Greece 354 ff. as water poured through a holed vessel in Italy 427 ff. as water poured through a holed vessel elsewhere 445 ff. as water strained by God through sieve-like sky 336 as Zeus-drops 451 as Zeus-water 322_9 451 of blood 323 478 ff. of blood as classical Rain (cont.)
portent 479_3 of blood as mediaeval prodigy 479_4 of blood as modern scientific phenomenon $480_{1\,f.}$ of fish 502_2 503_9 of flesh $504_{0\,(1)}$ of food 495 ff. of frogs 502_2 503_0 of iron 924_1 of milk $504_{0\,(2)}$ of oil $504_{0\,(3)}$ of stones 482 ff. of stones, ashes, etc. attributed to divine agency 495_1 ominous, sent by Zeus 478 ff. on Ascension Day sacred and curative 1193 pyre-extinguishing 506 ff.
Rainbow above Alkmene on pyre 512 above Zeus 37 as robe of Billutschei 334_1 as urine of she-fox 334_1 earliest naturalistic representation of 512_1
Rain-charm at Krannon 296 f. 316 by bathing in sea 1193 by burying heads near spring or dropping them into spring 369 by carrying water in holed vessel 396 by dragging manalis lapis into Rome 432 by drawing manales petrae round boundaries 434 f. by means of strainer filled with Nile-water 344 by offering of honey 335_2 by opening grave of buried king 372_3 440 by passing soma through strainer 335_3 by pouring water over axe and knife 604 f. by pouring water over corpses or parts of corpses 345_1 by pouring water through sieve 336 (?) 427 f. (?) by sinking axe at sea 605 by spinning iynx 313 by wearing 'plasma' 313 by wholesale mutual drenching 292 f. See also Rain-magic, Rain-maker, Rain-making
Rain-god identified with mountain 321_0
Rain-magic in Armenia 293 f. in the Balkans 285 ff. cp. 317 in ancient Greece 296 ff. 314 ff. 603 f. in modern Greece 284 ff. in Kypros 292 in Megiste (Kastellorizo) 292 in Syria 293 in Thera (Santorini) 284 in the cult of Zeus 314 ff. 944 See also Rain-charm, Rain-maker, Rain-making Rain-maker, Etruscan aquilex as 433_0 (?) priest of Zeus Lýkaios as 525 f.
Rain-making 31 f. 34_1 267 296 313 (?)
Rain-storm personified on column of Marcus Aurelius 333
Ralston, W. R. S. 289 976 f.
Ram as procreative power 945 golden 1080 must not be eaten 591_1
Rams, sixty, sacrificed to Zeus Machaneús in Kos 566_2
Ram's head on phallós of Hermes 1082 on sceptre of Zeus 665_1
Ram-skin of Zeus Thebaicús 837
Ramsay, J. A. 764_1
Ramsay, Sir W. M. 529_0 529_5 652_0 781_6 1082 1103 1126 1162
Rapp, A. 223_9 931 935_1
Rapson, E. J. 543_1
Rattles 313_3 (?)
Raven, helpful, in tale from Epeiros 977 sent out by Noah 529

Ravens, iron-beaked, in tale from Ukraine 977 on bronze car at Krannon 297 316_1
Raven, E. J. P. 189_1 618_0 1150
Rebirth, Hindu rite of 1092 See also Reincarnatiou
Red colour a surrogate for blood 515_0 in Greek and Roman cult 1138
Reed as phallic symbol (?) 1011 f. saluted as 'king' by Lydians 989 f.
Reeds, Tritones wreathed with 132 (?)
Reed-dance of Beni Hasan 993 of Gygaia Limne 989 f.
Reflection of Gorgóneion in well 843
Regling, K. 1146
Rehm, A. 483_4
Reimwortbildung : mundus and fundus 439 f.
Reinach, A. J. 650_0 1194 1196
Reinach, S. 100_6 188_1 300_0 $301_{0(3)}$ 418_0 512_5 668 671 939_4 1134 1174
Reincarnation of ancestors in descendants 122_6 See also Rebirth
Reisch, E. 207_0 213_7 215 216_2 216_6
Reiss, E. 1073
Reitzenstein, F. von 396_4
Rhomaios, C. A. 1120
Rhómbos 1103 1161
Richard, M. 1130
Richardson, Miss H. 18_3
Richmond, I. A. 1131
Richmond, O. L. 435 436_0
Richter, Miss G. M. A. 217_0 931_6 933_2 933_4 959_0 1155
Ridder, A. de 809_2
Rider-god accompanied by snake 1125 brandishing double axe 1146 three-headed 1125 superseded by St George 1125
Ridgeway, Sir W. 841_1 900_3 923_1 1068
Ring falls from clouds 288 f. 'of Nestor' 403_1 (?) of Prometheus 1029_{10} See also Gold, Wedding-ring
Ritter, E. J. 1176
Rivers of Pleasure and Pain 421_0
River-god as horned head with long rough hair 655_0 (Hypanis? Borysthenes?)
River-gods, sacrifice of ἔνορχα μῆλα to 396_3
River-lead 274_0
River-water held sacred by ancients 396
River-worship of Egyptians (See Nile-water and Index 1 Neilos) of Persians 907_6
Road of Zeus 51_0 946 cp. 974
Robe, starry, worn by Isis 350
Robert, C. 102_0 183 202_0 203_0 221 357_2 358 398 578_2 602 695_3 729 753_2 753_4 757_2 758_1 770_3 782_3 823_3 842_1
Robert, L. 1187
Roberts, C. 1163
Robertson, D. S. 444_0 1073 1194
'Robin Hood' 1133
Robinson, D. M. 607 $607_{3\,ff.}$ 1073 1162 1191
Robinson, E. S. G. 1122 1156
Rochette, R. 351 456_6
Rochholz, C. L. 65_0
Rock at Troizen under which Theseus found sword of Aigeus 484_{11} hanging on gold chains between heaven and earth above Tantalos 417_0
Rock-crystal 1136
Rock-cut altar on Mt Kynthos 1172 carvings in Italian Alps 1147 carvings in Scandinavia 1147 carvings in Yorkshire 1147 carving of Cernunnos in Val Camonica 1147 carving of hafted axe near Loch Lomond 1147 carvings of sword-bearers in south-east Sweden 1139 carvings of the 'Vogelfels' near Amastris 1162 f. carvings of Hittites at Boghaz-Keui 1097 effigy and omphalós at Vari 263_0 ff. inscription of Zeus Terástios at Gythion 939 inscriptions at and near Kyrene 1188 precinct of Zeus Hýpsistos at Athens 939_4 precinct of Zeus Terástios at Gythion 939 f. relief in quarry at Ferzol 1095 steps of Helladic fortress at Athens 721_3 steps through cave of Aglauros 169_0 f. 721 throne, double, on Findos Tepe 1070 throne near Stymphalos 1070 throne of Geryones at Temenothyrai 1070
Rocky ground characteristic of Cretan art 1144
Rods dedicated to Pyr and Pneuma 983
Roes, Miss A. 624_0 1076
Röth, E. $275_{0(1)}$
Rogers, B. B. 58_1 61 f. 69_2 163_2
Rohde, E. 122_5 425 f.
Rojdestvensky, Olga 1070
Rolandsäulen 1117
Rolland, E. 52_4
Ronchaud, L. de $718_{0\,(2)}$
Ronzevalle, S. 982 1074 1095 1098
Roof, in folk-lore 1148
Roscher, W. H. 133 246 496 498_3 729 846 1044 1045_2 1062_0 1121
Roscoe, J. 957_0 1193
Roses burnt on tomb 1134
Rose, H. J. 89_1 181_1 189_1 267_7 315_0 358_4 426_1 430_0 435_8 509_2 735_1 751_3 781_3 846 1111 1114 1116 1122 1141 1143 1180 1189
Ross, L. 364_1 581_0 702_0 778 985 f.
Rostovtzeff, M. 1163
Rostrup, E. 1106
Roth, R. 925
Roulez, J. 515_8 716 806_4
Rouse, W. H. D. 273_3
Roussel, P. 118 119_3 154_2 1066 1124 1181 1192
Rowe, A. 195_0
Rubensohn, O. 248_1 1119 1172
Rückert, E. 728
Ruge, W. 1125
Rush as phallic symbol (?) 1012
Rutherford, W. G. 784_3

Sacrifice by, or with, strangulation 283_1 of animals that indicate their willingness to die 565 565_1 566 568 569 581 ff.

Sacrifice (cont.)
594 605 of asses originally Cretan (?) 1136 of bull to Iupiter contra morem 1110 of bull to Poseidon on pillar in Atlantis 283_4 of bull to Zeus 969_1 of four fine bulls to Zeus 1110 of white bull to Zeus by Bektashi monks on Mt Tomori near Berat 1171 of bullock (not bull) to Iupiter 1110 of ἔνορχα μῆλα to Poseidon and to river-gods 396_3 of fawn at Pedachthoë 1134 of goats to Zeus 1110 of king or king's son in time of famine 74 of ox to Athena 782_4 of ox to Zeus Σωτήρ 22 of pig to Aphrodite 320_4 of pig to Zeus Heraios 1047 of pregnant sheep to Damateres 1124 of pregnant sow to (Demeter) Eleusinia and to Demeter Chlóe 179_0 of pregnant sow to Ceres, Iuno Moneta, Maia, Tellus, Terra Mater 23 of ram to Athena 782_4 of ram to Demeter Chlóe 178_0 of she-goat to Zeus in Crete 1110 of sheep to Zeus Hórios 1183 of surrogate for man 433_0 $599_{(2)}$ to dove 1103 to personified Dogs (?) 1083 1156 to personified Gadfly 1156 to pig 1103 to stone siderites or orettes 922 to stone with which Phemios slew Hyperochos 1105
Saintyves, P. 224_3 814_0 882_0 887_8
Salač, A. 1129
Sampo 1116
Samter, E. 119_5
Sanctis, G. de 116_0
Sandal of Aphrodite 1020
Sandys, Sir J. E. 420_0 953_6 960_6
Sapphire 925_8
Sarcophagi, of child $85_{0(2)}$ 86_0 of Iunius Bassus 1067 of priest of Kybele and Attis 1128 painted, from Hagia Triada 1138 white-figured, from Klazomenai 807 fragmentary 86_0 subjects suitable to 935_2 Erotes ou early Christian 1180 copy of the Kaisareia Paneas bronze on 971_1 Ganymedes feeding eagle on 982 marriage of Peleus and Thetis on 207 myth of Oinomaos on 1066 rape of Kore on 601_2 Tritones on 132
Sardonyx 537_2 538_0 756 $756_{4(2\,f.)}$ 1124
Sartori, P. 1148
Sauer, B. 215 581_6 689 690_1 691 691_3 694 697 697_0 701 755_2
Sauer, J. 971_1 972_0 972_1
Savignoni, L. 807_7
Sayce, A. H. 349 988 1101 1125 1128 1140 1174
Scales held by Zeus 1150
Scaliger, J. C. 1031_5
Scarth, H. M. 859_4
Sceptre, origin of the 1068 of early kings surmounted by birds 67_2 of tragedy-kings surmounted by birds 46 of Hera surmounted by lily 92_0 of Hera surmounted by palmette 1039 of Hera Argeia surmounted by cuckoo 65 67_2 1044 of priestess of Hera Argeia surmounted by poppy 633_0 of Zeus surmounted by eagle 954 1040 1048_4 $1052_{(6)}$ 1057 1060 of Zeus surmounted by forepart of winged horse 665_3 of Zeus surmounted by Janiform head 686 of Zeus surmounted by ram's head 665_1 of Zeus claimed by woodpecker 45 of Zeus held by Minos 1184 of Zeus from s. vi B.C. onwards begins to supersede thunderbolt 946
Sceptre-worship 1184
Schachermeyr, F. 651_0
Schaeffer, C. F. A. 1156 1193 f.
Scharf, G. 863
Schaubert, E. 581_0
Schede, M. 768 1078
Scheftelowitz, I. 549_2 914_0
Scheuer, W. 416_1 417_0
Schlachter, A. 1066
Schlauraffenland 501_5 502_0 504_1
Schliemann, H. 193_0
Schmid, W. 634_2 1137
Schmidt, B. 163_4 287_4 289 335_1 412_0 721_5 1143
Schmidt, C. 472_3
Schmidt, E. 488_{11} 587_2 1055 1057_8
Schmidt, H. 979
Schmidt, J. 593_2 1183
Schmidt, Johanna 1196
Schmidt, J. F. Julius 1 759_5 1115
Schmidt, M. $98_{0(8)}$ 597_7
Schmidt, W. 945_0
Schmitz, O. 873_2
Schnabel, H. 560
Schneider, R. See Schneider, R. von
Schneider, R. von 662_1 689 689_7 695 1072
Schoeffer, V. von 212 213_1
Schoemann, G. F. $600_{(5)}$ 602
Schrader, H. 769 830_3 1155
Schrader, O. 335_3 366 394 f. 411_0 923_2
Schreiber, T. 388_1 834_3
Schröder, B. 710 1019 f.
Schroeder, L. von $274_{6(2)}$
Schubart, H. C. 967 f.
Schuchardt, H. 433_0 434_0
Schuhl, P. M. 1116
Schulten, A. 1090 1179
Schultze, V. 529_6 970_7 971_0 972_3
Schwartz, F. L. W. 164_3 223_9 335_2 729 846 1015
Schwartz, W. 360 362_1
Schweitzer, B. 122_5 140 605_0 606_3 1073 1138
Schwenck, K. 357
Schwenn, F. 525 578_2 $600_{(6)}$ 604_7 615 651_0 653_0 928_1 1068
Schwerzek, K. 689_4 691 693 694 696_5 701 705 707
Schwyzer, E. 1073
Scorpion 14_0 18_0
Scott, J. A. 1075
Scott, K. 1115 1134 f.
Scott, R. D. 1174
'Sea' of Poseidon in the Erechtheion 750 758 758_3

Sea-gull 52_3
Sea-water purificatory 1031 1031_4
Seager, R. B. $193_{(b)}$ 197_0
Seal, bronze, of Marnas (?) 549_3
Sébillot, P. 277_0 1074
Séchan, L. 518_3
Seligmann, S. 132_2
Sellers, Miss E. See Strong, Mrs A.
Seltman, C. T. 102 102_2 132_2 188_3 522 569_5 607_1 617 $_{(3)}$ 789_3 794_7 812_3 833_0 853_5 856_0 868_5 869_2 872_1 1068 1074 1076 1111 1118 1137 1146 1153 1156 1157 1174 1184
Seltman, E. J. 1157
Semper, M. 1087 1090 1119
Sepulchral basins (labella) from Athens 380 pillars (columellae) from Athens 380 stēlai from Athens 373 380 382 386 392 f. stēlai from Selinous 1188 f. 1190 stēlai from Sparta 507_3 815_0 tables (mensae) from Athens 380
Seure, G. 1129 1182
Seven as ritual number 1135 gods of the week 210 444 f. 938 heavens 925_3 1119
Seven-branched candlestick in stylised form on lamps 145_2
Seyrig, H. A. 1158
Shaft-graves at Mykenai 1016 of the Achaioi (?) 362
Shape-shifting of Metis 744 f. of Thetis 745
Shark 297
Shear, Mrs J. P. 754_4 1194
Shear, T. L. 132_3 189_1 1090
Shears used with sieve in divination 336_5 337_0 338_0
Sheep first killed by Episkopos 593 f. with golden fleece 1080 with purple fleece 1080
Sheep-skins worn to imitate clouds 31 f. 68 f. 296 317
Sheppard, J. T. $60_{5\,(8)}$ 61_0 Shew-bread 908 (?)
Shield of Achilles 596 f. of Athena 830 843 868 ff. of Diomedes 224_3 of winged Minerva 823 of Sulis Minerva 862 ff. on altar 313_3 (?)
Shield-worship, evolution of 650_0
Ship, cosmic 18_2 first devised by Athena for Danaos 355_2 first devised by Danaos 355 (Navis Salvia) brings black stone of Pessinous to Rome 895 f. of stone dedicated by Agamemnon 1171
Shooting-stars, superstitions about 475_1 usually a good omen 882 cp. 22
Shorey, P. 949_6
Sickle of Kronos 1135 of Zeus 1135
Siderites or oreites, three varieties of 921 924
Sieve among Finns 446 446_4 among Khonds 446 as attribute of Christian saints 338_1 connected with witch as rain-maker 450 emptying pool with, as impossible task 449 f. in Rabbinic literature and Jewish custom 446_2 of Borras 335 of Eratosthenes 336_2 of God 335 of Pidzu Pennu 446 used in divination 336 ff. 427 used in rain-charm 336 (?) 427 f. (?) 446 451 water carried in, as ordeal 428
Sieves of Notos 335 f.
Sieve-superstitions in general 1193
Sievers, E. 164_5
Significance of the cult of Zeus in the history of religion 973 f.
Sikes, E. E. 811_1
Silence, holy 1114 of Eleusinian mystics 299
Silphion first sprang from shower of pitch at Kyrene 353 f.
Silver a favourite metal of Hittites 1101 axes from Arkalochori Cave 1143 black stone of Mecca set in 920 black stone of Pessinous set in 897 f. bratteae from London and Barkway 1126 bust of Iupiter 1155 1160 effigy of Men 992 kálathos of Demeter 992 Etruscan bronze statuette washed in 1066 patera from Parabiago 1127 f. ring at Boston representing Danaë 470 shrine of Hercules 1155 simpulum from Wettingen 938
Siret, L. 846 1075
Sittl, C. 37_6 40_2 151_4
Sittl, K. See Sittl, C.
Six, J. 689, 845_9 847_1
Sjöqvist, E. 1090
Sjövall, H. 1091 1180 1183 1189
Skambha 1116
Skeat, T. C. 1163 f.
Skias, A. N. 253_3 370_5 722_7
Skiros, a white clay used as manure 241
Skull trepanned 738_6 winged 804
Sky called ákmon 925 composed of stones and liable to collapse 418_6 has a hole in it, according to Libyans 353 has a hole in it, according to Virgil's conundrum 353 imitated by ceiling of palace, temple, tomb, etc. (See Ceiling) made of jade 925_8 made of stone 925 f. 942 needing visible support 418_6 1116 f. resting on column 946 1116 f. resting on goat 1116 resting on tree 1116 sixteen regions of, in Etruscan lore 156
Sky-god conceived as a bull 606 conceived as double-faced 1134 conceived as pair of contrasted deities 1134
Sky-props 1116 f.
Sky-worship always an elevating and widening force 944 f.
Slaves, emancipation of 648_0 1167 1184
Slawik, A. 1179
Sleeman, C. M. 1166 1167 1176
Smith, A. H. 696_5 700_2 701_8 711 721
Smith, Sir C. H. 183 692 753 787
Smith, G. C. Moore 1080
Smith, G. Elliot 345_1
Smith, K. F. 119_4
Smith, W. Robertson 369_1 576_3 $598_{6\,(1)}$ 841_3

Smith, S. 832 834 ff. 1101 1110
Smyly, J. G. 1179
Snake arises from spinal cord of dead man 772 as animal form of Athena 776 (?) 837 (?) as divinised soul of Herakleides Pontikos 773_1 as soul of buried king 773 bearded 773 biting its own tail 1137 born and suckled by Klytaimestra 239_1 burnt by St Hilarion 1182 connected with solar eagle 982 consorts with Atia in temple of Apollo 473_4 guards apple-tree of Hesperides 1064 in tale of Caradoc 1124 instinct with vitality of Athena 775 f. 831 made of sedge by Ainu and used in snake-worship 835_9 nameless, lives in Erechtheion 771 f. of Asklepios recalled by tale of St Hilarion 1182 on rock carried by Poseidon 14_9 18_9 phallic 1078 twined round egg 982 twined round obelisk 1127 1128 twined round olive-tree 753
Snakes akin to infants in ancient and modern belief 767_2 as bracelets 765 as children of Mother Earth 764 as ear-rings 765 as finger-rings 765 f. as prophylactic amulets 765 guard Erichthonios 238 f. 764 f. in painted pôros from pediment at Athens 767 ff. in pediment a decorative feature copied from Egypt 769 in pediment flank solar device (disk, phiâle, Gorgóneion) 769 in wall-paintings of lararia at Pompeii 773_2 male and female, as souls of ancestral couple 773 of Athena 764 ff. strangled by infant Herakles 767_2 two, as attributes of Zeus Meilíchios 1184 winged 991 f.
'Snakes and Ladders' 1119
Snake-heads of Hydra 403_1 of Kerberos 403_1 of Typhoeus 403_1
Sneeze of Zeus 662_1 (?) 732 (?) regarded by Greeks as a deity 732
Snijder, G. A. S. 382_5 1136
Snow of gold 477 507 670
Snyder, G. A. See Snijder, G. A. S.
Sofiano, A. G. 1102
Solmsen, F. 94_2 283 942 1106 1112
Soma as rain-charm 335_3 the source of Indra's strength 273_3
Son conceived as rebirth of his own father 952
Sondergötter 1176 1180 (?)
Sonne, W. 94_2
-sos or -ssos as prehistoric suffix 76_1 191_8
Soul as bird sent forth from hand of goddess 830 as butterfly 1146 as dove 269_1 as Eros on arm of Aphrodite 830 as hound 413_9 as small running figure on arm of god 830 as wind 109_1 of divine king escapes as bird 1184 resides in the head 1126 f.
Souls as bees 1183 as winds 122 as winged water-carriers 399 on the banks of Acheron 152 thirsty 369_3
Soul-bird helps Herakles in rape of Delphic tripod 799_1 of Prokris 73_5 on column 387_3
Soul-birds at birth of Athena 683 734_1
Sow, sacrifice of pregnant 23 179_0
'Sows,' human 1082 (?)
Sparrow-hawk as form of Horos 1073
Spear hurled as symbolic action 754_2(?) of Centumviral court 754_2 of Peleus 209_2 of Zeus 1147 two-pronged 1141
Spears, magic 1132 yoke of 1132
Spielbein, head in fourth-century sculpture looks toward 705_0 See also Standbein
Spindle of Ananke 1116
Spinner, Fate as 716
Spinturnix 792
Spon, J. 145
Sprats in lightning-spell 433_0
Spring, double, near Salamis in Kypros 561
Springs causing death from laughter and restoration to health in Fortunatae Insulae 421_0 hot and curative at Aquae Sulis 858 ff. of Weeping and Laughing near Kelainai in Phrygia 421_0 other miraculous 421_0 sacred, in Sardinia 1110
Squire, C. $367_{2\,f.}$
Stähelin, F. 871_1
Stähelin, O. 720_4
Staes, B. 248_1 712_6
Stags of Artemis (Ma, Anaïtis, etc.) 1134
'Stags,' human 1067
Stag's head as prow of votive bronze boat 1119
Stag-mask worn by votary in Kypros 1068
Stag-mummers in south Gaul 1067
Standbein, head in fifth-century sculpture looks toward 705_0 See also Spielbein
Star, fallen, found by Astarte 892 shooting, a sign of Zeus' approval 22 six-rayed 1078
Stars as decoration of Danaë's coffer 458 as decoration of Danaë's vault 458 as flowers 1098 shooting (See Shooting-stars)
Statue of Zeus Olýmpios, description of 954 ff. of Zeus Olýmpios, vicissitudes experienced by 967 ff.
Statues sweating 344_5 weeping 344_5
Stegemann, V. 480_2 875_1 881_2 882_0 882_1 1115 1160
Steiger, H. 79_0
Stein, Sir Aurel 872_1
Stein, P. 1115
Steinmetz, H. 129 130_1
Steinmeyer, E. 164_5
Stêlai of Pyr and Pneuma 983 See also Sepulchral
Steller, G. W. 334_1
Steller 1179
Stengel, P. 244_0 576_3 578_2 578_4 $579_{5(1)}$ 584_1 592 592_0 593_4 600_0 $600_{(4)}$
Stephánē 67 92_0 1057 1060 $1062_{2(2)}$
Stephani, L. 151 $252_{0(3)}$ 253_0 620_0 756_5 822 1034_1

Sterry, Lady 1092
Steuding, H. 135
Stibádes or Stibádeia 61_1
Stoll, H. W. 1111
Stone at Thyateira inscribed Διὸς Κεραυνίου δύναμις 873_2 autóglyphos found in river Sagaris 918_3 of Dousares 907 ff. of Elagabalos 900 ff. of Jacob at Bethel 891 f. of Kronos 889_2 927 ff. 944 of Kronos called abaddir 936 of Kronos called baitylos 936 of Kronos called diskos 936 of Kybele at Pessinous 893 ff. 903 of Zeus Kappótas at Gythion 939 ff. siderites or oreites 920 ff. 927 941_1 sky made of 925 f. 942
Stones, curative 941_1 holy, assembled at Rome by Elagabalus 903 holy, connected with Orestes 939 941_1 holy, endowed with the power of self-motion, known as baityloi or baitýlia 887 in Homer comparable with Agyieús-blocks 1120 natural, treated as divinities 937 shapeless, worshipped by barbarians 963 triad of, in rock-cut niches 909 f. triad of, on stepped base 909 triad of, surmounted by flat disks (? shew-bread) and set on plinth 908 See also Litholatry
Stone-throwing, ritual 612_0
Storax-trees of Eleuthernai 421_0 of Selge 645_0
Stork 977
Stranger as such can claim divine protection 592 is under protection of divine escort 951 may even himself be a god in disguise 952
Stratification of cults on Akropolis at Athens 736
Strong, Mrs A. 82_3 132_2 135_7 135_8 136_2 137_0 298 825 904_2 971_0 982 1142
Studniczka, F. $251_{9(1)}$ 253_0 712 722 754 904_2
Sturtevant, E. H. 1072
Styliskos inscribed Ζ[ε]ὺς Σωτήρ 1177
Sukenik, E. L. 1072
Sun, ability to stare at 1124 as disk 863 as dotted disk 1118 as eye 858_6 as glowing mass of metal 418_0 as Gorgóneion 845 863 as wheel 1072 legs of 1074
Sundial, Pantheon as 444_0 (?) presented to Zeus Helios at Sedasa 1071
Sun, moon, and stars rightly worshipped as affording a distant view of the gods 962
Sun-worship of Aurelian probably fused several oriental Ba'alim (Elagabalos, etc.) 907 of Nabataioi 912_4
Superannuation of Zeus 739 ff.
Surrogates for human sacrifice 433_0 $599_{(2)}$ 611 653_0
Survival of Zeus-cult on Mt Tomori near Berat 1170 f.
Svoronos, J. N. 207_0 248_1 $309_{4(3)}$ 312_0 413_0 f. 659_0 660_0 693_1 695 695_4 696_4 705 759_4 776_7 778_1 $790_{(1\,f.)}$ 869 1044_4
Swainson, C. 52_4 277_0 793 795_6
Swallow in Thracian myth 57_2 (?) as bird form of Athena 782
Swans draw car of Apollon 830
Swastika in monastery at Eretria 1087 on coins of Knossos 1087 in mosaic at Olynthos 1073
Sweating statues 344_5
Swire, J. 1168 f.
Sword of Aigeus left beneath rock at Troizen 484_{11} of Peleus made by Hephaistos 209_1
Sword-worship of Hittites 1140 of Quadi 1139 of prehistoric Scandinavians 1139 of Scythians 907_6
Sykophántes 1127
Symbolism 307_0 357 393 426_5 729 754 (?) 814_0 832_5 935 946 956_1 1012 (?) 1098 1119 1136 (?) 1163
Symons, G. J. 1015
Syncretism 804 (?) 914_0 1162 1171 1180
Systematisers of mythology, ancient 223_9

Tabeling, E. 1189
Table as altar (Egyptian, Assyrian, Syro-Phoenician, Persian, Hittite) 580_0 as altar for vegetable offerings (τράπεζα) distinguished from solid altar for burnt-sacrifice (βωμός) $579_{5(4)}$ evolution of, as altar 580_0 of Demeter Chlóe 177_1 of Hercules 1044_4 of Tritopatreis 115 sacrificial, in Greek and Roman religion 1139 votive, from Theban Kabeirion 580_0
Taboo on activities of soldiers, ships, and marriages while mundus is open 431 f. on eating plough-ox and ram 591_1 $600_{(5)}$ on seeing sacred tree felled 1146 f. on 'the half-married' 426_1 (?)
Tabula Peutingeriana 142 f.
Täubler, E. 429_1
Talbot, P. Amaury 1146
Tamarisk-droppings 495
Tamaro, B. 584_0 604_7
Tambornino, J. 775_1
Taramelli, A. 1110
Tarn, W. W. 871_4
Tattooing in Ptolemaic cult of Dionysos, in Thracian cult of Dionysos, in Syrian cult of Atargatis, etc. 1118 of Thracian women on vases 1118
Taurokathápsia 1091
Taylor, A. 456_1 793_6 1131
Taylor, A. J. 862 f. 862_1 862_2 863_1
Taylor, Lily Ross 1186
Taylor, Miss M. V. 1126
Technau, W. 1125 1128 1194
Teknophagia of Kronos as pantomime 935
Temples, circular, of Leukathea at Larissa 1080 Romano-Celtic, at Maiden Castle 1098 subterranean, in Sardinia 1110 See also Index I under names of individual deities and places Temple-key 633_0
Téras 1115
Terra Lemnia See Lemnian earth

Terremare villages, quadrangular templa of 430_0 431_0 ritual pits of 429_1 430_0
Terzaghi, N. 1034_1
Testicles of Indra 1078 represented by beans in Maltese custom 1032_0
Téttix See Cicala
Thallon, Miss I. C. See Hill, Mrs B. H.
Thémistes 949
Theogamy of Sun and Moon 1092
Theogonies, Hesiodic 743 f. 928 f. Orphic 745 cp. 746 1177 ff.
Theomachy 969_1
Theta as magical and mystical symbol 343_1
Theuer, M. 1174
Thiele, G. 488_{10} 1112
Thiersch, H. 1091 1133
Thólos-tombs in Greece and Italy regarded as thesauroi 440 440_8 of Danaoi (?) 363 of Daunioi (?) 365 of Palatine king (?) 431_0 440
Thomas, E. J. 957_0
Thompson, D'Arcy W. 238_1 781_6 ff. 783_1 791_5 1146 1174
Thompson, H. A. 1186
Thompson, M. S. 871_1 1128
Thompson, R. Campbell 835
Thomsen, A. 1031_5
Thomsen, P. 910_5
Thomson, G. 1102
Thomson, J. A. K. 506_6 1105
Three as a typical plurality 124 742_3
Three-sided bases with kalathiskos-dancers etc. 1006 with Twelve Gods etc. 1057
Throne in the Magnaura at Constantinople 957_0 of Apollon at Amyklai 220 631_4 1109 f. of Dionysos 1036_1 of Epiktesis 1036_1 of Geryones 1070 of Solomon 957_0 of Tut-ankh-Amen 957_0 of Zeus at Olympia, its construction and decoration 956_1 of Zeus in Rhodian reliefs 1034 ff. of Zeus in vase-paintings characterised by decorative supports 1049_0 of Zeus and Hekate on Chalke, rock-cut 544_3 with back ending in ram's head 681 with back ending in swan's head 667_2 669 670_3 (?) 673 680 with leonine legs or claws 669 673 680 with lion as arm-rest $1052_{(6)}$ with Sphinxes as arm-rests 1034 1035 1036_1 1049_0 1053 with swans as arm-rests 1040 with seat resting on pair of wrestlers 1049_0 with seat resting on small draped male 667_2 684 with seat resting on small Nike 681
Thrones, marble, in theatre at Athens 574_3 Throne-legs 1155
Thrónosis 1161
Thulin, C. O. 156_2
'Thumb of Knowledge' 1174
Thunder as trumpet of Zeus 729_4 chthonian 21 1143
Thunderbolt as spear of Ba'al 1156 as spear of Zeus 1147 as token of divine approval 958 bipartite fork with zig-zags 1156 boiled in saucepan to make 'essence of Thunderbolt (cont.) thunder' 941_1 called ákmon (?) 925 double lotiform 36 erect on throne at Diokaisareia 645_9 lotiform 669 670_3 681 modifications in shape of 1156 of Adad 1095 of Ba'al 1156 of Indra 273_3 of Zeus 945 f. of Zeus from s. vi B.C. onwards begins to be superseded by sceptre 946 of Zeus survives as symbol of omnipotence or continuous divine activity 946 of Zeus transferred to Athena 867 ff. omitted in Pheidias' statue of Zeus at Olympia 965 f. originally a stone missile 926 shaped like fly 1156 'star-flung' 1118 winged 465 1040 wingless before s. v B.C. 942 with Gorgóneion on handle 1156
'Thundering' Legion 325_3
Thurneysen, R. 937_6
Thymiatérion 348 979
Thyreatikoi 996 f. 1008
Thýrsos as sceptre of Zeus 685_2
Thýrsoi with handles ending in ivy-leaves 1007
Tillyard, E. M. W. 1106
Tillyard, Mrs E. M. W. 36_3
Tin used for ánthemon of Athena's shield 215
Tin-inlay of Achilles' shield 899 of Asteropaios' corselet 899 of neolithic pounder 898 of pottery from Swiss pile-dwellings 898
Tip-toe stance of deities, heroes, priestesses, etc. in archaïsing hieratic reliefs 587_2
Titanomachy 478_0 839
Tittel, K. 868_3
Toad buried to safeguard crops 104_7
Toads presage rain 105_0 spring from raindrops 105_0
Todesco, A. 63_4
Töpffer, J. 104_3 240_8 585 585_7 586_2 589_3 592 594 595_1 610
Tolkien, J. R. R. 858_6
Tomaschek, W. 283
Tomb of Eteokles and Polyneikes at Thebes (?) 815_0 of Hyperoche and Laodike in Delos 1172 of Kekrops (Kekropion) at Athens 771_1 of 'the Lictor' at Vetulonia 1192 of Menoikeus at Thebes 815_0 of Neoptolemos at Delphoi 938 of Olympos the teacher of Zeus in Crete 1173 of Opis and Arge in Delos 1172 of Pandion ii at Megara 783_1 of Pelasgos at Argos 566_2 of Zeus in Crete 1173
Tombs of Kadmos and Harmonia near the Ceraunian Mts 978
Torch, cross-topped, of Artemis 638_0 cross-topped, of Persephone 402 of Ceres $1062_{2(1\,f.)}$ of Demeter 712 on coins of Hephaistia in Lemnos 234_0
Torches of Dionysos (Διὸς φώς) 685_2 of Hekate 272_5 403
Torr, C. 986
Tortoise in hail-charm 877
Totemism $598_{6(1)}$ (?) 1193
Totenhochzeit See Marriage post mortem

Tower of St Barbara 472_3 473_0 of St Irene 472_2 473_0 of Kronos 1115
Town-pillars 1116 f.
Tragedy, etymology of 1106 origin of 1103 1105 f.
Transition from Aegean to Achaean worship 866_8
Trautmann, E. 1147
Tree of Life 404_0 405_0 420_0 816_0 1116
Tree 'of life' and 'tree of the gate of heaven' in Babylonian belief c. 2600 B.C. 1136 'of Paradise' described in Cretan poem c. 1500 A.D. 404_0 f. sacred, becomes successively leafless tree, bare trunk, conventional post or pole, permanent stone pillar (?) 910_5 with twelve manner of fruits 421_0
Trees of Sun and Moon in Prasiake 420_0 f. oldest of all existing 1028 f. on Epiphany Eve bow down to Christ 295 on graves as vehicles for souls (?) 1105 with golden leaves and flowers 1080
Tree-trunks worshipped by barbarians 963
Trendall, A. D. $82_{0(5\,f.)}$ 94_0 $618_{(3)}$ 665_2 667_1 673_1 781_1 843_3 843_3 996 ff. 1072
Trepanning of neolitbic skulls 738_0
Trident originally a lightning-fork 20_2 943 1156 as insigne of priesthood 12_3 black, in Carnival at Cattaro 1156 derived from bull's horns and central spike (?) 1156
Trieteric rites 179_0
Trieteris 115
Tripod, Plataean 1122 with snake twined about it 1007
Triskelês 643_0 645_0 1074
Tritogéneia 125 139
Tritogenés 123
Tritokoúre 123
Trito-names confused with Trito-names 124 f. 128
Tritopâtor 121_1 123 125
Trinmph of Attis 1127 f.
Triumpbal arch See Arch, triumphal
Troje, L. 914_0
Trumpet of Zeus (thunder) 729_4 Tyrsenian, venerated as voice of Athena 729_3
Tubbs, H. A. 648_0 649_0
Tucker, T. G. 320_4
Tümpel, K. 109 140_7 271 320_4 938_3
Türk, G. 515_8 770_1
Tunny as attribute of Poseidon 671_0
Twins as rain-makers 368 as sons of divine and human fathers 506 mother of, called Tilo 'Sky' 368_8 Akmon and Doias 1196 Boeotian 506 Egyptian (Set and Horos) compared with Greek (Zethos and Amphion) 1135 further bibliography of 1135
Tylor, E. B. 122_6 923_2 976
Tzitzinaina 844

Ulrichs, H. N. 987 f.
Umbilical cord 1122 (?)
Umbrella of Prometheus 57 68
Unbaptised child called δράκος or the like 239_1
Underworld, hero descends to 412_0 in comic and satyric drama of s. v B.C. 401_2 'Minoan' 403_1 (?) mundus as gate of 431 f. Polygnotos' fresco of 397 f. See also Nékyia, Vases
Unger, E. 1156
Ungnad, A. 1110
Uninitiated in Platon's account of Hades bear water in sieve to holed pîthos 398 427 in Polygnotos' fresco of Underworld bear water in broken pitchers to pîthos 397 f. 427
Urlichs, L. 686_1 f.
Usener, H. 4_0 $60_{5\,(6)}$ 103_5 107 108_2 237_2 241_4 246 362_3 743_9 874_5 942 992 1047
Utopia as described by Pherekrates and Nikophon 500

Vajra 926
Vallois, R. 1118 1138
Valmin, N. 1186
Van Buren, A. W. 1155
Van Buren, Mrs A. W. 782_4 832_2 837_4
Vases: 'Anesidora'-kýlix 201 Apulian (indigenous) 1138 'Apulian' 37 92_0 94_0 $306_{0\,(5)}$ 307_0 370 401 ff. 408_0 423 425 512 $619_{2\,(1)}$ $620_{(2)}$ $622_{(3)}$ 1000 1039 f. 1055 1106 Arretine 1003 'Blacas' kratêr 718_2 black-figured 14_0 $80_{2\,(2)}$ 205_0 351_4 373 389_1 392_0 399 f. 408_0 581_2 612 ff. $615_{5\,(2)}$ $617_{(3)}$ 631_4 661_1 662_1 663 ff. 668 ff. $675_{3\,(1)}$ 681 ff. 686 700_3 715 782_4 784_0 807 ff. 811 f. 836_3 1049_1 $1049_{2\,(1)}$ 1110 1122 Boeotian 782_4 990 1073 'Bottiaean' 1191 bottomless 200_0 373 375_5 448 burnt with animal sacrifice and buried in the ashes 1188 'Cabiric' 160 'Caeretan' hydrîai 408_0 $617_{1\,(1)}$ Campanian (local imitations of Attic ware) 781_1 'Campanian' $415_{0\,(c)}$ 1177 'Canopi' of Osiris, Isis, etc. 346 ff. 'Canopic jars' 345 'Chalcidian' 842_2 1048_3 1090 1148 'Choenkännchen' 1105 Corinthian $80_{2\,(1)}$ 408_0 559 f. 795 ff. 799 801 Cretan (c. 700 B.C.) 1150 Cypriote (of Hellenic age) 193_0 $193_{(5)}$ (of Helienistic age) 375_5 'Dareios'-kratêr 171_0 Cypro-Mycenaean 1150 'Dipylon' 200_0 313 373 375 early Ionic 351 Early Iron Age 193_0 Early 'Minoan' iii $193_{(5)}$ 1119 early south-Italian 996 ff. early yellow-ground lêkythos 387_2 Egyptian $193_{(5)}$ (?) epînetron or ónos $389_{0(5)}$ Etruscan 836_3 853_4 'Eulenskyphoi' 786 f. 'Europe' -kýlix 617 $_{(5)}$ feeding-bottles $193_{(5)}$ figure-oinochóe 1109 fish-plates $617_{(5)}$ fluted red ware from Kypros 375_5 'François'-vase 1048_2 1120 'Geometric' 1164 1177 'Gigantomachy' -amphora 535_0 Graeco-Egyptian relief-ware $200_{(5)}$ grammatikà ekpómata 1184 'Granary Class of Late Helladic iii' 1192 Iberian 1090 1179 Ionian 488_{11}

Vases (cont.)
867 'Italiote' 458_2 1106 Janiform 1132 'Kertch' 1019 'kleinmeister' kýlix 668 ff. 'Laconian' 488_{11} 815_9 late local Italian (? Oscan) 351 Late 'Minoan' i 197_0 'Libyans' 372 loutrophóroi 371 ff. 'Lucanian' 619_1 $63^{+}{}_0$ marble kratér 1007 'Medeia'-kratér 401_3 'Megarian' bowls 1164 Middle 'Minoan' i 1119 'Northampton style' 631_4 Paestum 510 ff. 1000 Panathenaic 778_1 phiále mesómphalos with téttix on boss 256_0 phlýjakes 734_0 738 f. 1078 f. proto-Corinthian 1142 Ptolemaic (blue porcelain) 1120 pyxis $388_{3(a)}$ red-figured 14_0 56_0 57_0 67 f. 73 79_4 $80_{2(3)}$ 99 ff. 173_0 182 ff. 205_0 221 248_6 373 387_3 $388_{1\,\text{ff.}}$ 408_0 456 ff. 512 ff. 606 f. $617_{(4)}$ 633_0 637_3 661_1 $675_{3(2)}$ $676_{(3)}$ f. 684 686 ff. 702 ff. 733_5 762 f. 764 769 f. 799_1 843 849 929 ff. 996_5 ff. 1012 1018 1048_4 $1049_{212\,\text{ff.}}$ 1053_1 1072 1106 1107 1111 1118 1121 f. 1148 1184 reflecting motifs derived from Parthenon 692 704 706 f. 709 f. relation between obverse and reverse designs 763_1 relief-ware (black) 853_3 relief-ware (unglazed) 408_0 relief-ware from Boiotia 663_3 relief-ware (gilded) from Pantikapaion 753 resembling in shape the vases upon which they are painted 387_3 388_2 Rhodian 1130 rhytón $309_{4(2)}$ 1119 1173 (?) Sosias-kýlix 818_0 south-Italian $82_{0(4\,\text{f.})}$ 380_1 638_0 640_0 849 Trojan 193_0 tubular $193_{(c)}$ 195_6 ff. 'Tyrrhenian' 673 ff. 680 f. Under-world 370 'Vivenzio'-vase 349 ff. with tin-inlay from Swiss pile-dwellings 898 with white ground $617_{(5)}$ 774 812 815_0
Vase-handles adorned with snakes or snaky pattern 375
'Vegetationsdämon' in animal form $599_{(3)}$
Veil of Artemis Anaítis $899_{5(3)}$ of Artemis Eleuthéra $899_{5(2)}$ of Hera 636_0 1028 1033 1046 of Kronos 933_7 of Zeus 88_0 1028 1033
Vendryes, J. 49_0 440_1
Venette, N. 1030_7
Venn, J. A. 900_3
Venn, Mrs J. A. 900_3
Verrall, A. W. 4_0 79_0
Vestal Claudia Quinta tows ship up the Tiber 895 f.
Vigani, J. F. 232
Vigfusson, G. 1075
Villinganus, G. Pictorius 336_5
Vines, white, in hail-charm 878
Vine-leaf 57_0
Vine-stem 685_2
Vine-wood (?), statue made of 968_1
Vine-wreath 681 1132
Vinet, E 139_2
Virginity of Athena perhaps recovered yearly by washing in the river Inachos 224_3 749 835 of Hera recovered yearly by bathing in the spring Kanathos 224_3 748 1027_1 1032_3 1044_4 of Hera renewed by bathing in the river Parthenios 1027_1 (?) 1031 (?) 1032_3 (?) of Hera renewed by bathing in the river Theren 1032_3 (?) Visconti, C. L. 934_1 935_1
Visconti, E. Q. 133
Visconti, P. A. 1060
Volcanos, Alban Hills as prehistoric and possibly historic 493 traces of, in Rhodes 986
Volkmann, H. 1073
Vollgraff, C.W. 1118 1125
Vollgraff, W. 566_2 871_1
Vorwahl, H. 1184
Voss, I. $98_{0\,(3)}$
Voting-urn 758
Votive offerings in bóthroi or favissae 278 in cave 1143
Voullième, E. 151_4
Vürtheim, J. J. G. 360_1 650_0 651_0 1173 1184
Vulpe, R. 1189
Vulture as bird form of Athena 781 in Thracian myth 57_2

Wace, A. J. B. $252_{0\,(3)}$ 290 ff. 363 871_1 1105 1128 1192 1197
Wachsmuth, C. 169_0
Wackernagel, J. 575_1 575_9 576_0
Waele, F. J. de 1183
Waggon of Gordios 1162 of Zeus (?) 1162
Wagner, F. 837_7
Wainwright, G. A. 882 882_2 884_0 885_0 891 1077 1140 1142
Waites, Miss M. C. 119_5 1070
Waitz, T. 976
Walde, A. 434_0 439_2 497_3 792_1
Waldhauer, O. 1174
Waldstein, Sir C. See Walston, Sir C.
Waley, A. 1138
Walls, cosmic 50_1
Walston, Sir C. 171_0 698 699_2 $718_{0\,(6)}$ 720_3
Walter, O. 1107 f. 1186
Walters, H. B. 67_4 183 324 324_1 352 408_0 $680_{(4)}$ 774 807_3 839_3 1073 1131
Walton, F. R. 1083
Ward, W. H. 891_{12}
Waser, O. 358 842_2
Water, importance of, in early religion 320_4 apotheosis by 137_0 dancing 420_0 healing and life-giving 976 f. kept in jars by Egyptians 345_1 maiden drenched with, in rain-charm 285 ff. of immortality 977 of life 515_6 977 979 981 f. 'speechless' 290_4
Waters, Blessing of the, in the Greek church at Epiphany 294 of life and death 976 f.
Water-carrying a fertility-charm in general and a rain-charm in particular 396 in connexion with marriage 370 ff. in connexion with mysteries 397 ff. in

Water-carrying (cont.)
myth of Danaïdes 355 ff. 427 in sieve as proof of divine power 450 450_3
Water-powers, supernaturally wise 743
Water-spirits, believed to bestow offspring 396_4
Weber, L. 157 1125 1135
Weber, W. 344_6
Webster, T. B. L. 1150
Wecklein, N. 358 518_3
Wedd, Mrs N. 63_5 111_1
Wedding-ring of Hera 1033 of Zeus 1033 See also Gold, Ring
Weege, F. 993 1008
Week, days of the 210 444 f. 938 1159
Weekley, E. 49_9
Weeping statues 344_5
Wehrli, F. 1042_5
Weicker, G. 801
Weickert, C 663_1
Weinreich, O. 189_1 225_1 730 913_4 1055 1131 1161 1174 f. 1184
Weinstock, S. 429_1 1194
Weiser-Aall, Lily 1068 1116
Weizsäcker, K. 328_6 f.
Weizsäcker, P. 893_6
Welcker, F. G. 135 357 360_1 456_6 713 715 f. $717_{7\,(1)}$ 728 737_8 781_3 1026_6 1034_1 1060
Weller, C. H. 261_7
Wells in Marneion at Gaza 555 of Achaioi (?) rectangular 363 of Danaoi (?) tholoid 363 sacred, in Sardinia 1110 See also Cisterns, Mundus
Well-spring to left of house of Hades 419
Wells, J. E. 501_2
Welter, G. 1164 1189 1196
Wensinck, A. J. 979
Were-wolves 1068
Wernicke, K. 880_1 1052_9 1060
Westermarck, E. 1026_4 1147
Weston, Miss J. L. 791_6 792_9
Wether-sheep as sacrifice to Iupiter 1078
Whatmough, J. 1110
Wheat in herôion in place of effigy of the dead $306_{9\,(3)}$
Wheaten meal kneaded with honey cast into cleft 604_2
Wheel of Celtic god (Taranis ?) 1074 1191 of Fortuna 1073 of Nemesis 1073 six-spoked and radiate 1100 solar 1072 in combination with horse 1076
Wheler, G. 145
Whip of Zeus 1160
Whirlwinds in ancient Greece connected with Zeus 162 f. in modern Greece attributed to Nereids or Nymphs 163 f. elsewhere regarded as demons or witches or wandering souls 163
Whisky as water of life 515_6
White bull sacrificed to Zeus on Mt Tomori near Berat 1171 cypress beside water of Lethe 420_9 421_9 garments worn by mystics of Zeus Idaios 953 horse of Poseidon 753_2 oxen draw priestess of Hera 1044
White, Miss R. E. See Wedd, Mrs N.
Whitehead, R. B. 532_2 540_3 541_4 541_5 542_1 542_2 543_1 543_3 546_2
White-poplar as Borderland tree 421_9
Wide, S. 160 942
Wiegand, T. 768 1041_4 1158
Wieseler, F. $60_{5(4)}$ 183 485_{12} 978
Wilamowitz-Moellendorff, U. von 62_1 116_9 189_1 227_7 576_1 $600_{(5)}$ 624_9 729 f. 743_9 965_3 984 1135 1177 1188
Wild Hunt 1117
Wildridge, T. Tindall 1133
Wilford, F. 411_9
Wilhelm, A. 161_9 642_1
Wilke, G. 515_6 1181
Wilkinson, Sir J. G. 839_2
Williams, Mrs B. E. 197_9
Willow-leaves, priests under their couches strew 1030 women at Thesmophoria lie on 1030
Willow-osiers, monks wear girdles of 1030
Willow-tree of Hera at Samos 1028 ff.
Willow-wreath of Carians 1029 of Hera 1053 (?) of Prometheus 1029_{10} (?) of Samians 1030
Wilpert, J. 971_1
Wilson, H H. 96_9
Wilutzky, P. 1026_5
Wind caught in bags of asses' skins 105 conceived as flatus ventris 108_2 following aft identified with ancestral spirit 157 160
Winds as souls 109 122 as chthonian powers (?) 987 bound in bag of dolphin-skin 107 bound in bag of ox-hide 106 conceived as horses 110 etesian 142 266 345_9 men believed to control 103 ff. Tower of, at Athens 129 f. Tower of, at Tenos 129_6
Wind-rose of Eratosthenes 130
Windows of heaven in Semitic belief 353_1 445
Wine as surrogate for blood 515_6 used to quench ashes 515_6
'Wine-skin' and 'hatchet' 1147
Winged figures of Etruscan art 88_9 259_9 665_9 679_9 $680_{(5)}$ 805 f.
Wings on feet of Athena 842 on feet of flying god at Melos 843_9 on feet of Nike 843_9 on feet of Perseus 850_2 (?) on feet of running goddess at Mallos in Kilikia 843_9
Winnefeld, H. 534_1 842_2
Winter, R. 1086 f.
Wirth, A. 472_3
Wisdom, supernatural, of water-powers 743
Wissowa, G. 434
Witchcraft of middle ages vindictive 881
Witch-cult in western Europe 1192
Witte, J. de 734_9 $931_{2\,f.}$ 938_4
Wochengötterstein 1117
Wolf kills bull (Danaos deposes Gelanor) 355_4 of the Capitol 1135
Wolves suckle Miletos s. of Apollon 414_9

'Wolves,' human 1082 (?)
Wolf-lore, Greek 1135
Wolf-mask 1068 (?)
Wolf-skin 57_0 (?)
Wolters, P. 307_0 $375_{1(d)}$ 388_2
Woman, origin of, in Malagasy tale $98_{9(6)}$
Women, excluded from initiation of Druses 1092 rub themselves on rock to obtain children $721_{5(2)}$ stylised as 'hour-glass' pattern 1138
Woodpecker claims sceptre of Zeus 45 cp. 57 popularly held to be a king (?) 45_1 in Thracian myth 57_2
Woodward, A. M. 1117 1162
Wool, unspun, placed on stone of Kronos 938
Woolley, C. L. 832_5 1101
Wordsworth, C. 265_0 689_1
World-nail of Scandinavians 1116
World-pillars 1116 f.
World-tree of 'Minoans' 404_0 (?) of Scandinavians 404_0 1116
Wous 797 f.
Wrede, W. 1103
Wren 52_4
Wrigbt, A. 353 445
Wright, A. R. 1193
Wright, Miss W. C. 481_2
Wroth, W. 414_0
Wünsch, R. 119_4 1031_7
Wünsche, A. 977
Wüst, E. $60_{5(?)}$ 62_1 63_3
Wuilleumier, P. 850 1119
Wunderlich, Eva 515_6
Wuttke, A. 475_1

Xanthoudides, S. 248_1
Xóanon, acrolithic, of Aphrodite Machanitis at Megalopolis 567_0 acrolithic, of Eileithyia at Aigion 663_2 of Aion at Alexandreia 912_6 of Apollon in Delos 119 of Artemis by Endoios at Ephesos 968 of Asklepios Agnitas at Sparta 1030_4 of Athena Nike at Athens 811 f. of Hera by Smilis at Samos 1027 of Hera Argeía at Argos 1085 of Hermes at Athens 725_5 of Zeus Oúrios at Hieron on the Thracian Bosporos 147_1 of Zeus Pheidiakós at Olympia 966_2

'Y.' 1147
Year, great (= eight years) 72_5
Yoke of spears 1132
Yoni 1092
Yorke, E. C. 1194

Zachariae, T. 1081
Zacher 1104
Zahn, R. 182_1 197_0
Zammit, Sir T. 1121
Zebus 1172 cp. 991
Zell, T. 846
Zénion hýdor 322_0 451_6 1193
Zepf, M. 914_0
Ziegler, K. 1103
Ziehen, L. 575_1 1083 1091
Zielinski, T. 1174
Zippe, F. X. M. 922_9
Zodiac, gods of the 1055 of eleven signs 1119 round Aion 1127 f. round Iupiter 1159 round Selene 1085 f. round Zeus 948 1112 Zodiacal light 1115 f.
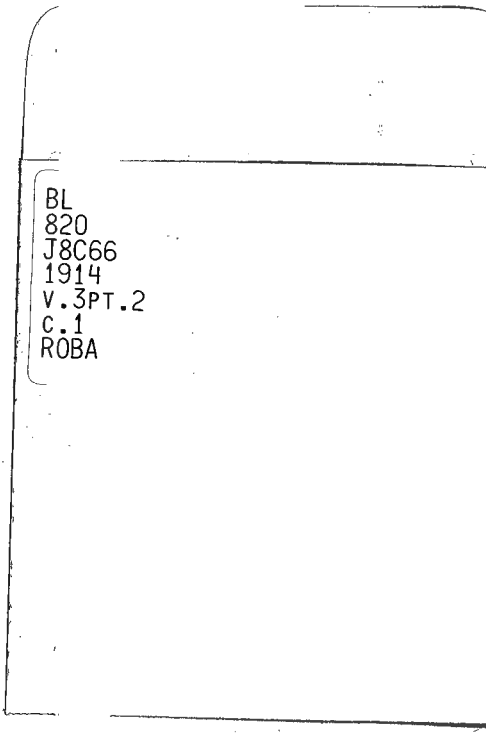
Zoega, J. G. 1060
Zschietzschmann, W. 375_1 1073

CAMBRIDGE: PRINTED BY
W. LEWIS, M.A.
AT THE UNIVERSITY PRESS



BL
820
J8C66 1914
V.3PT.2
C.1
ROBA